This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google™ books

https://books.google.com

Digitized by Google

V.
1
N32++
v. 20

ANNEX LIBRARY
D 005594

Cornell University Library

BOUGHT WITH THE INCOME FROM THE SAGE ENDOWMENT FUND
THE GIFT OF Henry W. Sage
1891

A.201957 3/4/1906

5901

Digitized by Google

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
3 1924 069 276 230

DATE DUE

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| JAN 24 1983 | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
|

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY

VOLUME XX.
APRIL, 1905, to
SEPTEMBER, 1905.

PUBLISHED AT
3-12, Southampton
Street, Strand,
London, W.C.

Digitized by Google

INDEX.

PAGE

Actors v. Jockeys at Lord's . . . 725
Actresses at Home—
  Dare, Misses Zena and Phyllis . . 53
  Brayton, Miss Lily . . . . 87
Admiralty House, Portsmouth House Party . 512
Aldershot, Army Sports at . . . . 602
Aldershot, Memorial at . . . . 279
Aldershot, Royal Review at . . . . 339
Alexander of Teck at Eton, Princess . . 571
Algiers, Admiralty Quay . . . . 127
Amber, Royal Palace at . . . . 709
American Independence Day . . . . 418
Amritsa, Golden Temple at . . . 69
"Antrim," Presentation to Cruiser . . . 815
Archery Club, Ladies' . . . . 66
Archery at Beddington . . . . 455, 572
Archery at Southampton . . . . 602
Architects at Portsmouth, Naval . . . 544
Artistic Photography—
  Bassano Studios . . . . 82
  Cosway Gallery . . . . 143
  Lafayette Studios . . . . 206
Ascot, King at . . . . . 399
Automobile Club Meet . . . . 280
Automobile Club, Ladies' . . . . 401
Automobilists, Royal . . . . 653

Baptist Congress . . . . . 498
Bathers at Southsea . . . . 723
Bathing in France . . . . . 603
Bathing Season . . . . 422, 685, 754
Beckhampton House . . . . 153
Bedford Trophy . . . . . 65
Bisley, King's Prize Winner . . . 542
Bisley Meeting . . . . 485, 513, 541
  Ashburton Shield . . . . 513
Boat Race, University, Oxford and Cambridge Crews . . . . . 5
Boat Race, University . . . . 37
Boom Defence at Portsmouth . . . . 223
Boulter's Lock, Ascot Sunday . . . 403
Boxing Championship, Navy and Army . . 757
Braemar Gathering, The . . . . 753
Brest, Admiral May in . . . . 512
Brest, Fêtes at, . . . . 524, 564
Bridgeman, Rear-Admiral, and Staff . . 391
Brig, H.M., "King Edward VII." . . . 308
British Medical Association . . . 558
Buller, Sir Redvers, Statue of . . . 778
Burton Court, Chelsea, Sports at . . . 543

Cadets' Review . . . . . 451
Carisbrooke, Scotchmen at . . . . 542
Cavalry Manœuvres . . . . 786
Cavalry Manœuvres at Strathfieldsaye . . 757
Chalfont St. Giles, Milton's Cottage . . 506
Chandra Mahal, Maharaja's Palace . . 708
Channel Fleet, Cruise of . . . . 661
Channel Fleet's Visit to Baltic . . . 725
Channel Fleet at Spithead . . . . 309
Chelmsford, Lord, Funeral of . . . 97
China Fleet, With the . . . . 128
Christ's Hospital, Lord Mayor at . . . 401
Christian, Princess, in Wales . . . 157
Church Congress at Weymouth . . . 828
Church Dispute in Scotland . . . 798
Clubs of London—
  Ladies' Automobile . . . . 24
  Ladies' Army and Navy Club . . 56
  Lyceum Club . . . . . 114
Coaching Club Meet . . . . 280
Coaching in Isle of Wight . . . 721
Coaling in Portsmouth Harbour . . . 158
Collector's Note Book, Leaves from . . 432
Connaught, Duke of, at Chester . . 691
  ,, ,, at Malta . . . 3
  ,, ,, at Madrid . . . 35
  ,, ,, at Norwood . . 511
  ,, ,, at Woolwich . . 189
Conway Castle . . . . . 775
Cookham, Ferry Hotel . . . . 481
Cowes Castle . . . . . 591
  ,, Week . . . . . 587
Crabbe Celebrations at Bath . . . 724
Cricket, Australian Team . . . . 687
  ,, England v. Australia . . . 362
  ,, Eton v. Harrow . . . . 513
  ,, Oxford v. Cambridge . . . 507
  ,, Week at Canterbury . . . 624
Cricketers, Famous—
  Armstrong, Mr. W. W. . . . 213
  Bosanquet, Mr. B. J. T. . . . 363
  Bowley, Mr. . . . . 712
  Brearley, Mr. W. . . . . 686
  Buckenham, Mr. . . . . 538
  Carlisle, Mr. K. M. . . . . 478
  Burnup, Mr. C. J. . . . . 395
  Cotter, Mr. A. . . . . 212
  Cox, Mr. . . . . 597
  Cuffe, Mr. . . . . 776
  Darling, Mr. J. . . . . 211, 657
  Davis, Mr. . . . . 538
  Day, Mr. A. P . . . . . 686
  Dennett, Mr. C. E. . . . . 331
  De Trafford, Mr. C. E. . . . . 776
  Douglas, Mr. J. . . . . 568
  Douglas, Mr. J. H. W. . . . . 568
  Duff, Mr. R. A. . . . . 212
  Fry, Mr. C. B. . . . . 275
  Gehrs, Mr. D. R. A. . . . . 212
  Gillingham, Rev. F. H. . . . . 568
  Goldie, Mr. K. O. . . . . 538
  Grace, Dr. W. G. . . . . 440
  Gregory, Mr. S. E. . . . . 213
  Hayward, Mr. T. . . . . 275

PAGE

Cricketers, Famous (continued)—
  Heap, Mr. . . . . 712
  Hearne, Mr. J. T. . . . . 331
  Hill, Mr. C. . . . . 213
  Hobbs, Mr. J. B. . . . . 275
  Hopkins, Mr. A. J. . . . . 213
  Howell, Mr. W. P. . . . . 213, 363
  Huish, Mr. F. H. . . . . 624
  Jackson, Hon. F. S. . . . . 657
  Jessop, Mr. G. L. . . . . 331
  Jones, Mr. A. O. . . . . 440
  Kelly, Mr. J. J. . . . . 213
  Kermode, Mr. . . . . 712
  Kinneir, Mr. S. . . . . 686
  Knox, Mr. N. A. . . . . 777
  Laver, Mr. F. . . . . 212, 363, 657
  Lees, Mr. W. . . . . 395, 777
  Lilley, Mr. A. A. . . . . 363
  Llewellyn, Mr. G. C. B. . . . . 777
  Lucas, Mr. A. P. . . . . 395
  Maclaren, Mr. A. C. . . . . 275
  Marsham, Mr. C. H. B. . . . . 624
  Mason, Mr. J. R. . . . . 776
  McLeod, Mr. M. C. . . . . 212
  Newland, Mr. P. M. . . . . 212
  Noble, Mr. M. A. . . . . 212
  Poidevin, Mr. L. O. S. . . . . 657
  Persse, Mr. H. W. . . . . 597
  Reeves, Mr. W. . . . . 686
  Ringrose, Mr. . . . . 777
  Russell, Mr. T. . . . . 597
  Seymour, Mr. . . . . 776
  Sharp, Mr. . . . . 712
  Tarrant, Mr. F. . . . . 244, 568
  Tremlin, Mr. . . . . 538
  Trumper, Mr. V. . . . . 213
  Warner, Mr. P. F. . . . . 244
  Warren, Mr. A. . . . . 395
  Wells, Mr. C. M. . . . . 597
  Wynyard, Capt. E. G. . . . . 331
Cromer Train Disaster . . . . 722
Croquet at Clifton . . . . . 723
Croquet Tournament at Roehampton . 400, 513
  ,, ,, Winner of Gold Medal 784
Croydon Agricultural Show . . . . 401

Dartmouth Harbour . . . . . 826
Day in the Life of a Mormon . . . . 684
Deauville Race Meeting . . . . 735
Derby, Scene at . . . . . 281
Dinner in a Gondola . . . . 452
Diving in Navy . . . . . 401
Driving in the Park . . . . 603
Dublin Horse Show . . . . 652, 692

Earl's Court Exhibition . . . . 220
  ,, ,, Naval Pictures at . . . 298
Earthquake in Calabria . . . . 787
Earthquake in India . . . . 69
East Berks Horse Show . . . . 663
Eastbourne Regatta . . . . 695
Eton, Fourth of June at . . . . 311

Falmouth Pier . . . . . 250
Fashions of To-day . . . . 442
Fencing at Caxton Hall . . . . 99
Fez, British Mission to . . . . 340
Fire Brigade Review . . . . 541
Football Season, Opening of . . . 723, 784
  ,, New Zealand Team . . . 814
  ,, Final at Palace . . . . 99
  ,, 3rd Dragoon Guards' Team . . 154
Freemasons' Festival . . . . 146
French National Fête . . . . 512
  ,, Fleets in English Waters . . 596, 601
  ,, Fleet, Review of . . . . 604
  ,, Officers at Westminster Hall . 631
  ,, ,, at Windsor . . . 631
  ,, Fleet, Visit of . . . . 632
  ,, ,, at Portsmouth . . . 648
French Military Manœuvres . . . . 755
Frith, Mr. W. P., in Studio . . . . 156

Garden Fête at Kensington Palace Gardens . 340
German Emperor's Cruise . . . 65, 97
Gilpin, John, Evolution of . . . . 304
Goring Regatta . . . . . 572
Goodwood Meeting . . . . . 626
Green Room Gossips—
  Carter, Mr. Hubert . . . . 424
  Collier, Mr. William . . . . 332
  Fairfax, Miss Lettice . . . . 85
  O'Sullivan, Mr. Denis . . . . 177
Gun Drill at Portsmouth . . . . 251
  ,, at Sandhurst . . . . 270
Guns for Royal Artillery . . . . 270

Hamilton, Mr. A., in Asia . . . . 157
Hamlets of Three Centuries . . . . 26
Hampton, from Surrey side . . . . 394
"Hampshire," Presentation to Cruiser . . 785
Henley, Scenes at . . . . . 482
Hockey—
  Newnham v. Surbiton . . . . 4
Horsemanship in Italy . . . . 128
Horse Show at Bath . . . . 754
Hurlingham Driving Competition . . . 281
"Hyacinth," Crew of H.M.S. . . . 241

Independence Day . . . . . 418
India, In Northern . . . . . 708
Irish Guards, Band of . . . . 817

Jaipur, A Street Scene in . . . . 709
Johnson's Brewery, Dr. . . . . 19
Jones, Admiral John Paul . . . . 470

PAGE

Kay & Co., Worcester Enterprise . . . 747
"Kléber," on Board . . . . . 301
Kiel Harbour . . . . . 354
Kildare Hunt Meeting . . . . . 98
King Edward at Aintree . . . . . 35
  ,, ,, Ascot . . . . . 399
  ,, ,, Chatham . . . . 571
  ,, ,, Doncaster . . . . 782
  ,, ,, Paris . . . . . 189
  ,, ,, Visit to Edinburgh . . 815
  ,, ,, Visit to Mediterranean . . 65
  ,, in Marienbad . . . . . 661
  ,, on Continent . . . . . 690
  ,, Inspecting Guns . . . . . 219
  ,, and Queen at Algiers . . . . 127
  ,, ,, Harrow . . . . 451
  ,, ,, Sheffield . . . . 511
  ,, ,, Southwark Cathedral . 452
  ,, ,, Manchester . . . 511
  ,, ,, Wimbledon . . . 510
  ,, and Officers of Prince of Wales' Artillery 334
King of Portugal in the "Amelia" . . . 691

La Paix Perpétuelle . . . . . 120
Lahore, View of . . . . . 69
Launch of H.M.S. "Africa" . . . . 251
  ,, ,, "Hibernia" . . . . 370
Launch of "Kashima" . . . . . 3
Launch of "Napoli" . . . . . 785
Lawn Tennis at Hove . . . . . 754
  ,, ,, Eastbourne . . . . 814
  ,, ,, Wimbledon . . . 455, 542
  ,, ,, Australian Team . . . 330
  ,, ,, Players, Famous—
    Larned, Mr. W. A. . . . . 264
    Ward, Mr. H. . . . . 264
    Wright, Mr. B. C. . . . . 264
Leinster House, Dublin . . . . 654
Leopardstown Races . . . . . 692
Literary Notes . 62, 94, 366, 426, 476, 537, 566
London County Council Steamer . . . 370

Maharaja of Kharpurtala . . . . 691
Maharaja's Palace . . . . . 708
Masonic Institution Festival . . . . 574
March of Events . 2, 34, 64, 96, 126, 156, 188, 218, 248, 278, 308, 338, 368, 398, 450, 480, 510, 540, 570, 600, 630, 660, 690, 720, 752, 782, 812
Memorial to Queen Victoria at Dunedin . 219
Memorial to King's Liverpool Regiment . 757
Merionethshire and Lord Lieutenant . . 533
Methodist Conference . . . . 528
Minstrels and Rondeaux . . . . 182
Molesey Lock . . . . . 357
Molesey Regatta . . . . . 544
Moore Abbey, Group at . . . . 753
Motor Meet, Theatrical . . . . 343
Motoring Notes—
  A Thornycroft Motor . . . . 636
  A Wolseley Car . . . . . 758
  Aix Les Bains Tour . . . . 412
  Ariel Motor Car . . . . . 750
  Auto Cycle Club's Trials . . . 727
  Auto Meeting at Aix Les Bains . . 462
  Blackpool Races . . . . . 576
  Brighton Races . . . . . 546
  Burke, Miss B., in Motor . . . 607
  Burnham Motor Boat Races . . . 412
  Clarke, Miss M., in Motor . . . 321
  Cross Channel Race . . . . . 516
  Dare, Mrs., in Motor . . . . 517
  De Grey, Lady, and her Napier . . 139
  Dicks, Mrs., on Motor . . . . 17
  Duff, Lady J. and Mr., in Motor . . 168
  Godwin, Miss V., in Motor . . . 169
  Gordon-Bennett Course . . . . 350
  Gordon-Bennett Race . . . . 492
  Gordon-Bennett Trials . . . . 380
  Hill Climbing Competition . . . 819
  Houston-French, Mrs., in Motor . . 77
  Hulbert, Mr., on a Triumph . . . 200
  Isle of Man Trials . . . 260, 290, 320
  Isle of Wight Trials . . . . 606, 758
  King Edward and Motor . . . . 463
  King of Italy in Motor . . . . 818
  King and Queen of Italy in Motor . . 201
  Ladies' Auto Gymkhana at Ranelagh . 462
  Lancia, Mr., on Motor . . . . 446
  Leigh, Mrs. Gerald, in Motor . . . 351
  Maidenhead Trials . . . . . 818
  Mason, Miss D., in Motor . . . 231
  Menpes, Mr. Mortimer, in Motor . . 413
  Midland Hill Climb . . . . . 636
  Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Victor, in Motor . 576
  Moss, Mr. and Mrs. H. E., in Motor . 291
  Motor Boats on Lake Geneva . . . 726
  Motor Boats on Lake Lucerne . . . 666
  Motor Boat, Panhard . . . . 99
  ,, ,, La Rapiere . . . . 109
  Motor Cycle Trials . . . . . 666
  Motor Launch . . . . . 138
  Motor Meet . . . . . 250
  Newport, Lord and Lady, in Motor . . 261
  Phaeton Motor Car . . . . . 666
  Postal Service Motor Bus . . . 138
  Prince of Bavaria on Motor . . . 697
  Pyrenees Cup Course . . . . 696
  Racing at Monaco . . . 16, 46, 76, 109
  Randall, Mrs. James, on Motor . . 47
  Scottish Trials . . . . . 230
  Seymour-Hicks, Mr. and Mrs., in Motor . 381
  Skegness Races . . . . . 726
  Tourists' Trophy Race . . . . 788
  Yates, Miss M., in Motor . . . 637
Musical Festival at Worcester . . . 738

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Mussoorie Race Course . . . . . 708
Mutiny at the Nore . . . . . 658

Naples Horse Show . . . . . 373
Naval Colour Plate Books . . . . 840
Naval Review, Spithead . . . . . 596
Naval Pictures at Earl's Court . . . 298
Naval Wedding at Eastbourne . . . 128
Nelson Relics . . . . . 159, 191
Nelson and the Muses . . . . . 536
Newmarket, Scenes at . . . . . 482
Niard Fjord, Gudvangen . . . . . 333
Nore to Dover Yacht Races . . . . 373

Officers of Irish Guards . . . . . 32
,, British and French . . . . 512
,, British . . . . . 512
Ostend, Royalty at . . . . . 661
Otter Hunting in County Wicklow . . 663, 723

Parisians of Paris—
A Bit of Scandal . . . . . 48
Accommodating Families . . . . 494
Acrobats in Jardin de Paris . . . 614
At the Grand Prix . . . . . 382
At Robinson Crusoe Island . . . 414
Belleville Weddings . . . . . 584
Church and Mill at Moret-sur-Loing . 170
Clients and Saleswomen . . . . 796
En Fête . . . . . 352
First Communion . . . . . 232
Immortal Snob on Varnishing Day . 140
Knights of Whip . . . . . 554
Life at Seaside . . . . . 647
Madame Rejane . . . . . 78
Madame Simone Le Bargy . . . 322
Middle Classes at Seaside . . . . 674
Montmartre Up to Date . . . . 292
Prima-Donnas' Husbands . . . . 262
Rise of the Brasserie . . . . . 734
Seaside in September . . . . . 706
Strange Marriages . . . . . 202
The Crime at Neuilly . . . . . 464
The Guardian Angel . . . . . 14
The Holiday Home . . . . . 704
The Merry Midinette . . . . . 836
The Poor and Their Dogs . . . . 110
Park Royal, Prince of Wales at . . . 450
Pausilippe Ladies' Regatta . . . . 755
Pirates, Some Famous . . . . . 716
Political Pen Pictures—
Benn, Mr. Ion Hamilton . . . . 461
Broadhurst, Mr. H. . . . . 553
Brymer, Lieut.-Col. W. E. . . . 825
Dalrymple-White, Major . . . . 75
Davies, Mr. T. . . . . 259
Fremantle, Major Hon. T. F. . . . 643
Greenwood, Mr. H. . . . . 349
Hardy, Mr. G. A. . . . . 379
Hall, Mr. D. Bernard . . . . . 137
Helme, Mr. N. W. . . . . 523
Hocking, Mr. Silas K. . . . . 319
Kincaid-Smith, Capt. M. . . . . 107
Lee, Mr. A. Hamilton . . . . . 703
Lloyd-George, Mr. D. . . . . 491
Long, Right Hon. Walter . . . . 410
Martin, Mr. R. B. . . . . 733
Micholls, Mr. E. E. . . . . 795
Pocock, Mr. Sidney J. . . . . 45
Poynder, Sir J. Dickson . . . . 673
Rasch, Sir Carne, Bart. . . . . 13
Reed, Mr. W. H. . . . . 613
Rickett, Mr. J. C. . . . . 583
Rose-Innes, Mr. P. . . . . 199
Sanders, Mr. R. A. . . . . 289
Seeley, Major J. E. B. . . . . 586
Welby, Col. A. C. E. . . . . 229
Whyte, Mr. Robert . . . . . 167
Williamson, Mr. D. . . . . 765
Playgoer's Letters to a Friend . . 810, 838
Plays and Players—
Alice Sit-by-the-Fire . . . . . 245
A Message from Mars . . . . . 594
As You Like It . . . . . 573
Brooke of Brazenose . . . . . 365
Dr. Wake's Patient . . . . . 810
Pantaloon . . . . . 245
The Prodigal Son . . . . . 770
The Real Hamlet . . . . . 392
The White Chrysanthemum . . . 838
Plymouth Sound . . . . . 50
Pope Sitting for his Portrait . . . 691
Prince Christian at Windsor . . . 571
Prince of Wales at Cardiff . . . . 451
,, ,, at St. Paul's Cathedral . 279
,, ,, on Tram Car . . . . 370
Princess Christian at Richmond . . 36
Punjab Police, Group of . . . . . 240

Queen Alexandra at Gibraltar . . . 36
,, ,, at Malta . . . . . 249

PAGE

Queen Alexandra on Royal Yacht . . . 399
,, ,, in Hyde Park . . . 480
,, ,, at Hurlingham . . . 481
,, ,, in Spain . . . . 279

Race Horses, Famous—
Airlie . . 276
Ambition . . 246
Andover . . 428
Black Cherry . 780
Burgundy . . 839
Chaleureux . 92
Challacombe . 809
Chaucer . . 598
Cherry Lass 214, 336
Chevening . 364
Cicero 276, 336, 567
Count Schomberg 780
Csardas . . 28
Cyllene . . 306
Ella Tweed . 839
Flower of Wit . 809
Fortunio . . 718
Gas . . . 306
Imari . . . 246
Isinglass . . 364
Kirkland . . 61
Moifaa . . . 29
Pharisee . . 184
Red Robe . . 627
Rock Sand . . 93
Roquebrune . 92
Sainfoin . . 93
Seahorse II. . 29
Val d'Or . . 567
Vedas . . 28, 214
Xeny . . . 627
Zinfandel . . 428
Racing Season, 28, 61, 92, 122, 152, 184, 214, 221, 246, 276, 306, 336, 364, 396, 428, 544, 567, 598, 626, 688, 718, 780, 809, 839
Ranelagh, Afternoon at . . . . . 250
,, Gymkhana at . . . . 453
,, Horse Show . . . . . 400
,, Ladies' Gymkhana at . . . 310
,, Lancers at . . . . . 371
Ravensbourne Club Sports . . . . 401
Reigate Horse Show . . . . . 281
Review in Scotland . . . . . 783, 805
Richmond Horse Show . . . . . 371
River Thames from Richmond Hill . . 356
Royal Academy, Pictures at . . . . 173
Royal Party at Windsor . . . . . 397
Royal Wedding at Windsor . . . . 369
Ryde Regatta . . . . . 695
Rufford Abbey House Party . . . . 813

Sailing at Bourne End . . . . . 220
Salmon Fishing in Ireland . . . . 656
Scotland, Royal Review in . . . 783, 805
,, Church Dispute . . . . 798
Seamen's Costume . . . . . 253
Seaside Children . . . . . 620
Services, The . 32, 60, 90, 124, 154, 178, 216, 240, 334, 434, 564, 658, 746, 778
Shakespeare, Bacon Controversy . . . 58
Shanklin Regatta . . . . . 695
Sherborne Pageant . . . . . 358
Smith-Hanbury-Tracey Wedding . . 661
Society of Friends, Yearly Meeting . . 271
Southport Chess Congress . . . . 663
Spain, King of . . . . . 278
,, ,, In Paris . . . . . 309
Sports at Whale Island . . . . . 452
Sports at Woolwich . . . . . 66
Stage Favourites, Letters to—Brand, Miss Tita . . . . . 210
Darragh, Miss . . . . . 54
Irving, Mr. H. B. . . . . 86
Stall Holders at Bazaar . . . . . 242
Steeplechases, Rugby . . . . . 4
,, Bar Point-to-Point Races . 98
,, Stock Exchange . . . 67
Steeplechaser, Education of a . . . 688
Submarine Disaster . . . . . 340
Sunbury Lock . . . . . 565
Swinemünde, with the Fleet at . . . 746
Supplement, July 1st—
Holidays at Home.
A Highland Burn . . . . . 10
Austrian Tyrol . . . . . 8
Blackpool Parade and Tower . . 5
Dawlish Sea Front . . . . 5
Holiday in New Zealand . . . 11
Holiday in Portugal . . . . 6
Holiday in Scotland . . . . 10
Holiday on Continent . . . 8
Ice Fall on Corner Glazier . . 9
Lakeland . . . . . 3
New Forest . . . . . 3
Norfolk Broads . . . . . 3
Ocean Cruises . . . . . 16
Robin Hood's Bay, A Street in . 5
Up the Thames . . . . . 20

Theatrical Garden Party . . . . . 515
Torbay Yacht Club Group . . . . 768
Train Disaster at Witham . . . . 722
Traveller, The—
Ballachulish . . . . . 119
Banks of River Wye . . . . . 268
Bolton . . . . . 208
Bridge at Mostar . . . . . 302
Callander Bridge . . . . . 118
Constable's Country . . . . . 88
Cromer . . . . . 238
Harrogate . . . . . 806

PAGE

Traveller, The (continued)—
Ilfracombe . . . . . 30
Ilkley . . . . . 806
Ireland, Holiday in . . . 328, 360, 388
Isle of Man . . . . . 622
Isle of Wight . . . . . 592
Killarney . . . . . 534
Limerick . . . . . 650
Llangammarch Wells . . . . . 420
Loch Earn . . . . . 119
Lynton . . . . . 30
Maglaj in Bosnia . . . . . 303
Matlock . . . . . 404
New Zealand . . . . . 682
River Allen, Allendale . . . . 469
Sheringham . . . . . 239
South Devon . . . . . 150
Sport in New Zealand . . . . 562
Tintagel . . . . . 180
Valley of Tyne . . . . . 469
Wales . . . . . 710
West Bay, Bridport . . . . . 774
Weymouth . . . . . 834
Woodhall Spa . . . . . 806
Worcester . . . . . 742
Tring Agricultural Show . . . . 663
Trouville Garden Party . . . . . 755

Victoria Memorial at Nottingham . . . 572
Volunteers, 1st Middlesex Royal Engineers . 714

Under the Burgee . 18, 50, 80, 112, 142, 172, 204, 234, 266, 294, 324, 354, 384, 416, 466, 496, 526, 556, 616, 644, 676, 706, 736, 768, 808, 826

Walton Regatta . . . . . 371
Waterloo, Anniversary of . . . . 390
Wargrave Regatta . . . . . 662
War Ships, H.M.—
H.M.S. "Carnarvon" . . . . . 124
,, "Commonwealth" . . . . 60
,, "Dominion" . . . . . 434
,, "Essex" . . . . . 7
,, "Exmouth" . . . . 190, 779
,, "Forward" . . . . . 817
,, "Impregnable" . . . . 120
,, "King Alfred" . . . . 190
,, "President" . . . . . 190
,, "Renown" . . . . . 91
War Ships, Foreign—
"Amiral Aube" . . . . . 628
"Amiral Trehouart" . . . . . 619
"Bouvines" . . . . . 619
"Cassini" . . . . . 618
"Conde" . . . . . 619
"Forbin" . . . . . 619
"Gloire" . . . . . 618
"Henri IV." . . . . . 628
"Jaureguiberry" . . . . . 619
"Leon Gambetta" . . . . . 628
"Massena" . . . . . 618
Waveney Sailing Club . . . . . 373
Wedding of Lieutenant Hope . . . 785
,, Sir P. C. Smyly . . . . 813
Weybridge Regatta . . . . . 663
Weymouth Church Congress . . . . 828
Whale Island Festivities . . . . . 631
Whittingehame House . . . . . 404
Worcester Enterprise, A . . . . . 747
,, Musical Festival . . . . 738
,, Presentation of Freedom of City of 784
Worcester, Prize Day on . . . . . 575

Yachting at Cowes . . . . . 587, 644
,, in Solent . . . . . 542
Yachts, Famous—
"Adela" . . 617
"Ailsa" . . 294
"Albion" . . 51
"Atlantic" . 324
"Betty" . . 769
"Britannia" . 112
"Britomart" . 588
"Brynhild" 355, 737
"Cariad" . 645
"Cicely" . . 204
"Creole" . . 676
"Duet" . . 587
"Eileen" . . 266
"Falcon" . . 466
"Fiona" . . 416
"Gauntlett" . 267
"Hamburg" 234, 324
"Hildegarde" . 526
"Induna" . . 80
"Inyoni" . . 113
"Kommodore" 385
"Lalage" . . 590
"Ma'oona" . . 467
"Maymon" . 18, 736
"Merrymaid" . 646
"Moyana" . . 589
"Norlanda" . 527
"Nyleptha II." 467, 590
"Orion" . . 384
"Rosamond" . 677
"Saionara II." 557
"Seaweed" . . 172
"Senga" . . 204
"Sonya" . . 616
"Sunbeam" . . 235
"Thérèse" . . 707
"Tutty" . . 417
"Valdora" . . 706
"Valhalla" 235, 294
"Viera" . . 51
"Vendetta" . 827
"White Heather" 497
"Zinita" . . 808
Yeomanry, King's Colonials . . . . 678

Zoo at Sydney, New South Wales . . . 772

PORTRAITS.

PAGE

Abercromby, Master R. . . 206
Albani, Madame . . . 741
Alfonso XIII., King . . . 189
Alleyne-Lee, Mr. R. . . . 803
Alverstone, Lord . . . 798
Amherst, Earl . . . . 147
Anstruther, Sir R. W. . . 801
Archbishop of Canterbury . 830
Archdeacon of Dorset . . 829
Ardilaun, Lord . . . . 652
Arisugawa, Prince and Princess 398
Askwith Rev. C. . . . 830
Atkins, Mr. I. . . . . 741
Attenborough, Mr. S. J. . . 147
Avery, Mrs. Leonard . . . 313
Aylesbury, Earl of . . . 798

Balfour, Mr. A. J. . . 404, 408
Bannatyne, Rev. Colin . . 798
Barclay, Mr. Robert . . . 21
Barlow, Mr. J. E. . . . 272
Baroda, Gaekwar of . . . 219
Batty, Mr. T. . . . . 831
Baynes, Mr. A. H. . . . 501
Benn, Mr. Ion H. . . . 449
Benn, Mrs. I. H. . . . 461
Berwicke, Mrs. C. . . . 242
Bishop of Bath and Wells . 829
Bishop of Croydon . . . 829
Bishop of Derby . . . 829
Bishop of Manchester . . 829
Bishop of London . . . 829
Black, Mr. A. . . . . 741

PAGE

Blair, Rev. W. . . . . 799
Blanchard, Colonel A. . . 452
Boothby, Miss . . . . 784
Brewer, Dr. A. H. . . . 741
Bridge, Miss H. . . . 242
Broadhurst, Mr. H. . . . 539
Brooke, Mrs. B. . . . 130
Brown, Lady H. . . . 242
Brown, Miss . . . . 784
Brown, Mr. H. D. . . . 501
Browning, Mrs. L. . . . 242
Bruce, Mr. R. . . . . 653
Bryan, Dr. C. F. . . . 559
Brymer, Lieut.-Colonel W. E. . 811
Bulter, Miss E. F. . . . 160
Bulter, Sir T. . . . . 653

PAGE

Cameron, Rev. J. K. . . . 799
Cameron, Sir C. A. . . . 653
Carpenter, Rev. H. W. . . 830
Carrick, Mrs. T. . . . 638
Cassels, Bishop . . . . 829
Cator, Miss Lumley . . . 6
Cavendish, Miss B. . . . 454
Cecil, Lord Hugh . . . 831
Chamber, Rev. D. . . . 798
Chartran, Madame . . . 353
Choate, Mr. J. . . . . 157
Christian, H.R.H. Princess . 56
Churchill, Lady Edward . . 24
Clifford, Mr. J. . . . . 503
Coates, Mr. J. . . . . 741
Collier, Dr. W. . . . . 585

Digitized by Google

| | PAGE |
|---|---|
| Colley-Burkitt, Dr. J. | 559 |
| Connaught, Princess Margaret of | 341 |
| Constantine, Grand Duke | 65 |
| Cork, Earl of | 147, 475 |
| Coryton, Rev. F. E. | 832 |
| Crandall, Mr. L. A. | 501 |
| Creighton, Mrs. | 831 |
| Cunningham, Professor D. J. | 653 |
| Davey, Lord | 803 |
| Davies, Mr. Timothy, L.C.C. | 247 |
| Davies, Mrs. | 259 |
| Davies, Mr. W. H. | 529 |
| Davis, Miss Muriel | 282 |
| Davis, Miss Ruby | 283 |
| De Grey, Lady | 139 |
| Dods, Rev. Dr. M. | 803 |
| Don, Right Hon. O'Conor | 653 |
| Drexel, Miss Anthony | 3 |
| Dudley, Lord | 652 |
| Duncan, Mr. J. | 728 |
| Dundas, Mrs. G. A. | 56 |
| Dunlop, Mr. A. W. | 330 |
| Durham, Earl of | 379 |
| Dyke, Honble. Mary | 484 |
| Eitel Fritz, Prince | 189 |
| Elgar, Sir E. | 740 |
| Elgin, Earl of | 798 |
| Ellis, Mr. J. E., M.P. | 272 |
| Emery, Archdeacon | 830 |
| Erskine, Mrs. A. | 243 |
| Falmouth, Viscountess | 193 |
| Fanshawe, Miss Lena | 243 |
| Farquhar, Lady E. | 157 |
| Farrar, Lady | 252 |
| Farrar, Rev. H. R. W. | 832 |
| Ferrier-Kerr, Mrs. | 243 |
| Fife, Duchess of | 397 |
| Filleul, Rev. S. E. V. | 832 |
| Forester, Hon. Mrs. C. | 143 |
| Forrest, Dean | 740 |
| Foster, Miss M. | 741 |
| Foster, Sir W. B. | 559 |
| Franklin, Dr. G. C. | 558 |
| Fremantle, Hon. Mrs. T. F. | 643 |
| Fremantle, Major Hon. T. F. | 629 |
| Forest, Baroness de | 574 |
| Fry, Right Hon. Lewis | 272 |
| Fry, Right Hon. Sir E. | 272 |
| Gann, Mr. P. E. | 529 |
| Gardner, Mr. C. E. L. | 529 |
| Gibbs, Mr. Alban | 149 |
| Gibson-Carmichael, Sir T. D. | 801 |
| Glover, Mr. R. | 500 |
| Glyn, Mrs. Elinor | 64 |
| Goldie, Sir G. D. T. | 35 |
| Gould, Rev. G. P. | 501 |
| Green, Miss | 784 |
| Greenwood, Mr. Hamar | 337, 349 |
| Greville, Hon. M. | 206 |
| Grimthorpe, Lord | 157 |
| Grubb, Sir Howard | 652 |
| Guernsey, Lord | 813 |
| Guest, Rev. Dr. | 529 |
| Guthrie, Mr. | 803 |
| Gwynne, Hon. Mrs. R. | 161 |
| Haldane, Mr. R. B. | 801 |
| Halsey, Mr. F. T. | 147 |
| Hall, Mr. D. B. | 125 |
| Hall, Mrs. D. B. | 137 |
| Hamilton, Mrs. Cosmo | 694 |
| Hannay, Mr. D. | 121 |
| Hannen, Miss | 144 |
| Hardy, Mr. G. H. | 367 |
| Helme, Mr. N. W. | 509 |
| Henderson, Rev. A. | 803 |
| Herbert, Lady | 100 |
| Hillyard, Mrs. | 814 |
| Hill, Rev. Canon R. | 832 |
| Hilton, Mr. S. | 559 |
| Hilton, Mrs. | 559 |
| Hocking, Mr. S. K. | 307 |
| Hocking, Mrs. S. K. | 319 |
| Holman, Sir C. | 559 |
| Hosegood, Mr. S. E. | 529 |
| Hughes, Mr. J. C. | 533 |
| Hulton, Mr. E. | 760 |
| Hulton, Mrs. Jessop | 287 |
| Hume, Mr. A. O. | 765 |
| Hutchinson, Mr. Horace | 287 |
| Huxtable, Mr. H. A. | 831 |
| Kapurthala, Maharajah of | 219 |
| Kelly, Rev. C. H. | 529 |
| Kerry, Countess of | 68 |
| Keyser, Mr. C. E. | 147 |
| Kincaid-Smith, Capt. M. | 95 |
| King Alfonso | 338 |
| Kingsburgh, Lord | 801 |
| Kinnear, Lord | 801 |
| Klado, Captain | 476 |
| Lake, Mr. W. | 149 |
| Laking, Sir F. | 559 |
| Lansdowne, Lady | 243 |
| Laurie, Miss | 242 |
| Laws, Mr. C. L. | 501 |
| Lean, Mr. Bevan | 272 |
| Lebreton, Mrs. | 402 |
| Lee, Mr. A. Hamilton | 689 |
| Lee, Mrs. A Hamilton | 703 |
| Lee, Rev. A. | 799 |
| Leicester, Mr. H. | 740 |
| Leicester, Mrs. H. | 740 |
| Leveson-Gower, Miss | 206 |
| Lidgett, Rev. J. S. | 529 |
| Lindley, Lord | 801 |
| Lloyd-George, Mr. D. | 479 |
| Lloyd-George, Mrs. | 491 |
| Londonderry, Marquis of | 653 |
| Long, Colonel | 147, 475 |
| Long, Lady Doreen | 410 |
| Long, Rt. Hon. Walter | 411 |
| Low, Lord | 801 |
| Lowe, Mr. C. J. | 529 |
| Lurgan, Lady | 56 |
| Mabie, Mr. H. C. | 501 |
| Macalpine, Mr. G. W. | 500 |
| Macgregor, Mrs. G. | 192 |
| Maclaren, Mr. H. | 500 |
| Macnaghten, Lord | 803 |
| Malmesbury, Earl of | 147 |
| Malvery, Miss O. C. | 219 |
| Markham, Sir C., K.C.B. | 35 |
| Marnham, Mr. H. | 500 |
| Marshall, Mr. J. T. | 501 |
| Marsh, Miss | 144 |
| Martin, Mr. R. B. | 719 |
| Martin, Mrs. R. B. | 733 |
| Massy, Lord | 653 |
| Mathews, Mr. J. W. | 188 |
| Matier, Mr. C. F. | 147 |
| Maxwell, Lady | 3 |
| McCormick, Hon. R. | 452 |
| McCulloch, Rev. J. D. | 799 |
| McLeod, Mr. J. M. | 147 |
| McNeil, Rev. J. | 501 |
| McQueen, Rev. M. | 799 |
| M'Calmont, Colonel J., M.P. | 287 |
| Mendel, Misses | 665 |
| Metcalfe, Rev. A. S. | 832 |
| Micholls, Mr. E. E. | 781 |
| Micholls, Mrs. E. E. | 795 |
| Milbanke, Lady | 756 |
| Miller, Mr. T. H. | 287 |
| Montagu, Lady Scott | 24 |
| Montgomery, Bishop | 829 |
| Montmorency, Hon. R. de | 243 |
| Montmorency, Hon. K. de | 243 |
| Morris, Mr. T. | 70 |
| Moss, Mr. R. | 653 |
| Mullins, Mr. E. Y. | 501 |
| Mursell, Rev. W. | 500 |
| Mylne, Bishop | 829 |
| Newbolt, Mr. H. J. | 537 |
| Nicholls, Miss A. | 741 |
| Oppenheim, Mrs. A. | 39 |
| Overtoun, Lord | 801 |
| Parkin, Rev. W. H. | 529 |
| Pearson, Miss I. | 287 |
| Pease, Sir A. E. | 272 |
| Peel, Lady | 242 |
| Pembroke, Countess of | 101 |
| Pembroke, Earl of | 831 |
| Pemberton, Mrs. W. | 243 |
| Penney, Mr. Norman | 272 |
| Pentin, Rev. H. | 832 |
| Perry, Mr. H. C. | 529 |
| Phillips, Miss Vera | 207 |
| Pim, Mr. G. | 653 |
| Pocock, Mr. Sydney J. | 33 |
| Porter, General | 452 |
| Poynder, Sir J. Dickson | 659 |
| Poynder, Lady Dickson | 673 |
| Prestridge, Mr. J. N. | 501 |
| Pryce-Jones, Mrs. | 605 |
| Purves, Mr. Laidlaw | 287 |
| Queen Alexandra | 379 |
| Rainy, Rev. R. | 798 |
| Randell, Mrs. | 312 |
| Rasch, Sir Carne, Bart., M.P. | 1 |
| Rathdonnell, Lord | 652 |
| Rawson, Lady Beatrice | 24 |
| Richard, Mr. T. | 500 |
| Richardson, Mr. J. | 272 |
| Rickett, Mr. J. C., M.P. | 569 |
| Rickett, Mrs. and Miss | 583 |
| Ridley, Bishop | 829 |
| Riddell, Mr. G. A. | 760 |
| Rippon, Rev. F. | 529 |
| Rives, Miss H. E. | 342 |
| Rosslyn, Earl and Countess of | 2 |
| Russell, Sir W. H. | 3 |
| Rosas, Lieut. C., C.N. | 65 |
| Rose-Innes, Mr. P. | 187 |
| Russia, Grand Duchess Maria of | 35 |
| Reed, Mr. W. | 553 |
| Reed, Mrs. W. | 619 |
| Roberts, Rev. T. F. | 501 |
| Roberts, Mrs. M. | 545 |
| Robertson, Lord | 801 |
| Robinson, Sir C. and Lady | 570 |
| Robson, Rev. G. | 799 |
| Rose-Innes, Mrs. | 199 |
| Rosse, Earl of | 652 |
| Roumania, Crown Princess of | 664 |
| Sanders, Mr. R. H., M.A. | 278 |
| Sanders, Mrs. R. H. | 289 |
| Salvessen, Mr. E. T. | 803 |
| Saxe-Coburg Gotha, Duke of | 189 |
| Scheyne, Sir J. | 803 |
| Scott, Lord F. | 813 |
| Seeley, Major J. E. B. | 586 |
| Shaftesbury, Earl of | 831 |
| Shaftesbury, Lady | 813 |
| Shakespeare, Rev. J. H. | 499 |
| Shaw, Mr. T. | 801 |
| Shuttleworth, Mrs. F. | 34 |
| Simpson, Mr. R. R. | 803 |
| Sitwell, Lady Ida | 82 |
| Smith, Bishop T. | 829 |
| Smith, Mr. R. B. | 831 |
| Smith, Hon. F. W. D. | 831 |
| Smith, Rev. T. | 799 |
| Smith, Rev. G. A. | 803 |
| Sobrino, Madame L. | 741 |
| Somerset, Duchess of | 56 |
| Southall, Mr. S. | 740 |
| Spottiswoode, Miss C. | 242 |
| Spurgeon, Mr. | 500 |
| Stanley, Lady A. | 372 |
| Strong, Mr. A. H. | 501 |
| Sumner, Mrs. | 831 |
| Sutherland, Duchess of | 24, 38 |
| Taylor, Rev. Dr. R. | 803 |
| Templeman, Miss H. M. | 831 |
| Templeman, Alderman T. J. | 831 |
| Thorburn, Mr. J. H. | 803 |
| Thornhill, Miss E. | 514 |
| Thornton, Miss E. | 741 |
| Togo, Admiral | 335 |
| Townsend, Mr. C. U. | 652 |
| Trayner, Lord | 801 |
| Trefusis, Miss K. | 222 |
| Trefusis, Miss M. | 131 |
| Turner, Miss | 242 |
| Tweeddale, Marchioness of | 56 |
| Wales, Prince John of | 720 |
| Webb, Bishop | 829 |
| Webster, Mrs | 145 |
| Welby, Colonel A. C. E., M.P. | 217 |
| Welby, Mrs. | 229 |
| Weldon, Rev. Canon | 832 |
| Wesley, Mr. J. | 528 |
| Wesley, Dr. R. W. | 559 |
| Willis, Mr., K.C. | 500 |
| Wilson, Mr. J. W., M.P. | 272 |
| Wilson, Miss Ina | 243 |
| Wilson, Rev. J. | 500 |
| Wilson, Miss G. | 540 |
| Williams, Dr. M. W. | 559 |
| Williams, Rev. C. | 500 |
| Williamson, Mr. D. | 751 |
| Whitehead, Rev. S. | 529 |
| White, Major Dalrymple | 63 |
| Whyte, Mr. R. | 155 |
| Whyte, Mrs. Robert | 167 |
| Whyte, Rev. A. | 799 |
| Whiteley, Rev. W. T. | 500 |
| Woodall, Rev. T. J. | 830 |
| Wood, Rev. J. R. | 500 |
| Worcester, Bishop of | 740 |
| Wordsworth, Miss E. | 831 |
| Wordsworth, Right Rev. J. | 830 |
| Wynne, Mr. W. R. M. | 533 |
| Yarborough, Countess of | 475 |
| Yarmouth, Countess of | 242 |
| Young, Lord | 801 |
| Zichy, Countess | 144 |

THEATRICAL PORTRAITS.

| | PAGE |
|---|---|
| Anderson, Miss M. | 236 |
| Ashe, Miss M. | 55 |
| Augarde, Miss A. | 561, 625 |
| Bateman, Miss J. | 84, 296 |
| Brand, Miss T. | 55 |
| Brayton, Miss L. | 87 |
| Bruant, M. A. | 293 |
| Bruck, Mlle. R. | 202 |
| Burke, Miss Billie | 327 |
| Carlix, Mlle. | 14 |
| Carter, Mr. H. | 424 |
| Chase, Miss P. | 84 |
| Chenal, Mlle. | 615 |
| Cherry, Mr. C. | 116 |
| Collier, Mr. W. | 332 |
| Cutler, Miss Kate | 297 |
| Dalti, Mlle. M. | 171 |
| Dare, Misses | 53 |
| Dare, Miss Phyllis | 561 |
| Dare, Miss Zena | 561 |
| Darragh, Miss | 54 |
| D'Alencon, Mlle. E. | 203 |
| Delva, Miss | 84 |
| De Villers, Mlle. Carmen | 555 |
| Doro, Miss M. | 332, 816 |
| Dorziat, Mlle. G. | 383 |
| Elliott, Miss M. | 116 |
| Elsie, Miss Lily | 621 |
| Fairfax, Miss L. | 85, 393 |
| Farrar, Mlle. | 79 |
| Flahaut, Mlle M. | 675 |
| Genée, Miss Adeline | 387 |
| Gordon, Miss L. | 55 |
| Green, Miss Mabel | 265, 561 |
| Held, Mlle. Anna | 464 |
| Irving, Mr. H. B. | 392 |
| Kerr, Miss E. | 409 |
| Lagregrette, Mlle. | 615 |
| Lamare, Mlle. | 615 |
| Lauseline, Mlle. | 585 |
| Lavalliere, Mlle. | 704 |
| Le Bargy, Madame Simone | 322 |
| Legarde, Miss M. | 655 |
| Le Hay, Miss Daisy | 359 |
| Leslie, Miss M. | 326 |
| Leslie, Miss E. | 386 |
| Love, Miss M. | 423 |
| Mabel, Miss S. | 111 |
| Mancini, Mlle. | 615 |
| Megard, Mlle A. | 734 |
| Millar, Miss G. | 595 |
| Millard, Miss E. | 237 |
| Nanon, Mlle. B. | 292 |
| O'Sullivan, Mr. Denis | 177 |
| Parys, Mlle V. | 55 |
| Pounds, Miss L. | 84 |
| Regnier, Mlle M. | 263 |
| Rejane, Madame | 78 |
| René, Miss Ida | 179 |
| Robinne, Mlle. | 323 |
| Robson, Miss E. | 745 |
| Rowlands, Miss G. | 52 |
| Thornton, Miss G. | |
| Vanbrugh, Miss I. | 681 |
| Vining, Miss S. | 477 |
| Wynne-Matthieson, Miss E. | 117 |
| Yreven, Mlle. M. | 48 |

GOLF.

| | PAGE |
|---|---|
| Aberdeen Golf Course | 487 |
| Alnmouth Links | 639 |
| Amateur Championship | 284 |
| Amateur Championship | 318 |
| Bar Tournament at Sandwich | 375 |
| Bar v. Actors at Walton Heath | 135 |
| Beckenham Ladies' Golf Meeting | 518 |
| Bexhill Golf Club | 791 |
| Boulogne Golf Club | 669 |
| Braid Hills Tournament | 226 |
| Bushey Hall Tournament | 254 |
| Cambridge Links | 578 |
| Cambridge v. Oxford at Sunningdale | 162 |
| Cinque Ports Golf Club, Deal | 163 |
| Coombe Wood Golf Club | 317 |
| Cromer, Ladies' Championship at | 346 |
| Eltham Tournament | 486 |
| Farnham Ladies' Meeting | 255 |
| Free Church Minister Golf Competition | 672 |
| Galway Links | 136 |
| Geneva Links | 552 |
| Golf at Aldershot | 579 |
| Golf at Haydon Bridge | 638 |
| Golf at Hyeres | 347 |
| Golf at Llandudno | 195 |
| Golf at Montreux | 581 |
| Golf at Ostend | 822 |
| Golf at Wimereux | 668 |
| Golf in Brazil | 11 |
| Golf in Himalayas | 520 |
| Golf in Ireland | 134 |
| Golf in Rhodesia | 580 |
| Golf Philosophy in Suppers | 340, 375, 488, 579 |
| Golf Players, Styles of— | |
| Barry, Mr. Gordon | 700 |
| Graham, Mr. John, Junr. | 764 |
| Hunter, Mr. Mansfield | 166 |
| Hutchings, Mr. C. | 74 |
| Laidlay, Mr. J. E. | 228 |
| Scott, Hon. Osmond | 824 |
| Hanger Hill Ladies' Competition | 549 |
| Harlech Links | 578 |
| Harrogate Golf Club | 701 |
| Haydon Bridge Links | 288 |
| Hints to Beginners | 642 |
| House of Commons v. Inverallochy Fishermen | 40 |
| Huntercombe Links | 821 |
| Inter Club Tournament at Edinburgh | 132 |
| International Foursome at St. Anne's | 762 |
| International Prestwick Match | 286 |
| Inverallochy Fisher Golf Team | 8, 40 |
| Irish Championship | 608, 640 |
| Irish Ladies' Championship | 256 |
| Jubilee Vase at St. Andrew's | 791 |
| Ladies' Championship at Cromer | 314 |
| Ladies' Golf at Winchester | 71 |
| Ladies' Golf at Barnehurst | 197 |
| Ladies' Golf at Deauville | 820 |
| Ladies Golf at Harrogate | |
| Ladies' Golf at Home Park | 194 |
| Ladies' Golf at Ranelagh | 102 |
| Ladies' Golf Union | 287 |
| Le Touquet Links | 488 |
| Liverpool Golf Club | 671 |
| London Scottish Golf Club Dinner | 9 |
| Lossiemouth Golf Course | 669 |
| Manchester Tournament | 548 |
| Middlesex v. Sussex Ladies at Wimbledon | 611 |
| Midland Counties Ladies' Tournament | 256 |
| Midland Counties Ladies' Tournament | 551 |
| Nazeing Common Golf Club | 43 |
| Open Championship at St. Andrews | 344 |
| Parliamentary Tournament | 224 |
| Portsalon Links | 196 |
| Professional Foursome | 699, 729, 760, 763, 793 |
| Raynes Park v. House of Commons | 490 |
| Royal St. George Links | 257 |
| Scottish Ladies' Championship | 456 |
| Seacroft Golf Club | 165 |
| South of Ireland Championship | 700 |
| St. Andrews, Home Hole at | 728 |
| Stock Exchange Tournament | 519 |
| The Complete Golfer | 348 |
| The Open Championship | 376 |
| Tooting Bec Links | 70 |
| Turnberry Golf Course | 730 |
| Ways of Golfers | 610 |
| Wicklow Links | 702 |
| Wimbledon Ladies' Golf Club | 73 |
| Yorkshire Union Meeting | |

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Sir Carne Rasch, M.P. | 1 |
| The March of Events | 2 |
| On the Links | 8 |
| The London Scottish Golf Club Dinner | 9 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 13 |
| The Parisians of Paris— | |
| The Guardian Angel | 14 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 16 |
| Under the Burgee | 18 |
| Dr. Johnson's Brewery— | |
| The Romance of a Great London Business | 19 |
| The Ladies' Clubs of London— | |
| I.—The Ladies' Automobile Club | 24 |
| Hamlets of Three Centuries | 26 |
| The Racing Season— | |
| Lincoln Handicap and Grand National | 28 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the London and South Western Railway | 30 |
| Ilfracombe and Lynton | 31 |
| The Services | 32 |
| Plays and Players | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| Paris Restaurants | xvi. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xviii. |

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

BOOKS.

"The Skull," a Poem, published about 1783.—136, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Wheble's Ladies' Magazine. £3 3s. given for the issues (about 1777-9) containing poems by George Crabbe.—137, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The second volume of Real Life in London.—139, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Almanach de Gotha. All numbers before 1800 and 1814.—140, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A small collection of "prophetic" Almanacks.—141, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Early works on conjuring and palmistry.—142, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Early copy of Beethoven's Sinfonia Eroica. First issued preferred.—145, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine. The owner of a run of 26 volumes desires to exchange them for a complete set of the Town and Country Magazine.—150, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cricket and Golf. Early books, views, and caricatures regarding.—151, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cookery Books. A good copy of Mrs. Glasse's work.—152, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any old Books or Pamphlets on America, especially re the Indian Tribes or early Settlers.—153, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A pair of genuine Candlesticks in Battersea Enamel.—513, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fine pair old pewter candlesticks.—514, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A genuine specimen of the groups of Staffordshire Ware known as "The Tythe Pig," and "The Vicar and Moses."—515, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware busts of Wesley and Whitfield.—518, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Good Impressions, with good margins, of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn, etc.—220, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.—continued.

Three good specimens of Caricatures by the late Sir Frank Lockwood.—228, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Mr. Justice Yates, from a contemporary Magazine about 1765.—229, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portraits of Sir Lewis Dives (about 1642) and Bishop Conybeare of Bristol (1757).—230, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures of Napoleon, published in France, Spain, Italy, Holland, Germany, or Russia, between 1807 and 1816.—230, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Italian or German Caricatures of Napoleon.—231, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Mrs. Fitzherbert after Stothard, and Mrs. Siddons after T. Beach.—232, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait or Caricatures of Case, the famous Empiric.—233, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Prints relating to Fairs and Shows.—234, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Engravings wanted. Interior views of House of Commons, House of Lords, etc., before about 1840.—238, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Polyalbion, Drayton's. Loose Maps from Vol. I., especially Dorset.—239, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Tea Caddy, very old, antique; rare bargain. View by appointment, or description sent.—Write SMITH, 61, Prittlewell Street, Southend-on-Sea.

Ceylon Precious Stones. Rubies, dark blue sapphires, pale blue sapphires, white sapphires, yellow sapphires, green sapphires, brown sapphires, red spinels, topazes, zircons, pink jacinths, pink, green, and yellow tourmalines, aquamarines, moonstones, opals, peridots, etc. List sent on application.—607A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Navy and Army Illustrated. Complete set, 19 volumes; clean and perfect, except index for volumes 9 and 15; from commencement to present date; unbound; cost £11 7s.; early volumes are out of print and very scarce. Cash offers requested.—G. F. GROVES, Woodlands, Hexham-on-Tyne.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Prints for Sale, all in first-class order, well framed, lately property well-known collector: The Valley Farm, The Cornfield, Brunet-Debaines, Constable, both signed artist's proofs, £20; The Blue Boy, Mrs. Graham, Ch. Waltner, Gainsborough, signed proofs, £7 7s. each; The Flight into Egypt, signed by Holman Hunt, £5; Westminster Abbey (The Dark Corner), one of series of etchings by Axel. Haig, proof signed, £5 5s.; The Evening Hymn, Waltner, Mason, remarque proof, signed, £6 6s.; The Wain (The Team), Macbeth, an etching proof, signed, £6 6s.; The Art of Peace, Appleton, after Lord Leighton, proof signed by both artists, £5 5s.; G. W. Reid, Works of Italian Engravers, 1884, first series only, india proofs, cir., £1 15s.; Turner's Celebrated Landscapes, 1872, quarto, £2; Album de Musée de Boulacq; Cairo, 1871, folio, cloth, photographic plates, £1 10s.; Ruskin's Notes on his Collection of Turner's Drawings, £2 10s.; Art of Peace, Appleton, after Leighton, proof signed by Appleton, £4 4s.; Turner's Picturesque Views England and Wales, by Lloyd, 2 vols., royal folio, 1838, etchings and proofs in duplicate, full calf extra, magnificently bound, collector's monogram, £60; Infanta of Spain, after Velasquez, signed by Waltner, £20.—217A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Baxter Prints, also Le Blond's.—WITHEFORD, 89, Vincent Street, Birmingham.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Derby, Worcester, Whieldon, Bristol, Lustre, Salt Glaze, Sèvres, Staffordshire figures, and other old China. Lists.—BRUCE, Gas Works, Shotley Bridge, Co. Durham.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Two Indian swords, shield and dagger, 21s.; Zulu assegai, 3s. 6d.; Polynesian shield, 5s. 6d.; splendid case flint-lock duelling pistols, 63s.; Malay kris, carved ivory hilt, gold mounted, £5.—739A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Antique Sheraton Sideboard, £15; six oak Chippendale chairs, old china cabinet, £5 10s.; old Sheraton table.—740A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Buffet, massive antique Jacobean, also table, Jacobean Welsh oak dresser with shelves, antique oak settle.—741A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old books, old engravings, old etchings and drawings, caricatures.—R. MCCASKIE, 27, Marylebone Lane, London, W. Book catalogues free.

Ferns, 33 exquisite Irish and Killarney varieties, hardy plants, 1/6, free. 20 Ivies (varieties), 6d., free. 15 Honeysuckle plants, 1s., free.—Miss BENNETT, "Prospect," Rosscarbery, Cork.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE (PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,

17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Also Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guide sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 5d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

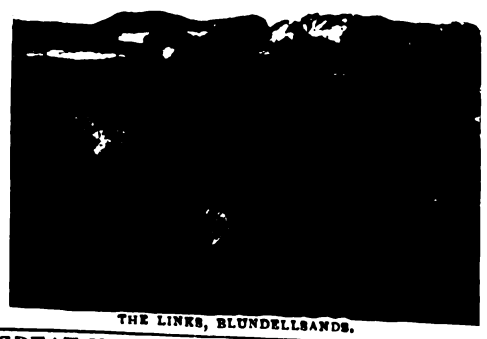
Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.



THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL,

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

GOLF GARTERS, NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to EXTENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Remaining advertisements in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer)

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write* H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL. — Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.

Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE
Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTARFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

MANY of the greatest masterpieces are so difficult that only one or two of the very foremost pianists can play them. The Paganini Etude No. 2 by Liszt, the arrangement by Rosenthal of Chopin's Op. 64, No. 1, and Leschetizky's Intermezzo in Octaves are instances. Yet to the Pianola they are just as easy as the simplest folk song, and wonderful as this may seem, it is by no means the chief of the Pianola's claims on your attention. With the Metrostyle Pianola you can play the rolls that Grieg and Bauer and Chaminade have interpreted, and in the same manner, at the same tempo, and with the same effects as these artistes rendered them. And another point, you are given every facility to interpret every one of the Thirteen Thousand different compositions contained in the Pianola repertoire, according to your own conception of them.

Musical knowledge is not the essential thing in Pianola-playing, but musical taste, and to a greater or less extent this is common to all.

You are invited to investigate the Metrostyle Pianola at Æolian Hall.

When writing for particulars, please specify Catalogue Q.

The Orchestrelle Co.,

ÆOLIAN HALL,

135-6-7, New Bond Street, London, W.

DR. J. M. BARRIE says—"What I call the 'Arcadia' in My Lady Nicotine is the CRAVEN Mixture and no other."

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE

(INCORPORATED A.D. 1720).

FIRE, LIFE, SEA, ACCIDENTS, BURGLARY, EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, FIDELITY GUARANTEES, ANNUITIES.

Governor—SIR NEVILE LUBBOCK, K.C.M.G. Sub-Governor—C. SEYMOUR GRENFELL, ESQ.
Deputy Governor—M. G. MEGAW, ESQ.

DIRECTORS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Rt. Hon. Lord Addington. | Sir William Dunn, Bart, M.P. | W. R. Moberly, Esq. |
| R. Barclay, Esq. | C. E. Green, Esq. | H. Morley, Esq. |
| E. C. Brown, Esq. | C. E. Hambro, Esq., M.P. | S. J. Portal, Esq. |
| W. S. M. Burns, Esq. | Sir Thomas Jackson, Bart. | W. G. Rathbone, Esq. |
| R. F. Cavendish, Esq., M.P. | T. F. Knowles, Esq. | Rt. Hon. C. T. Ritchie, M.P. |
| E. H. Cunard, Esq. | G. F. Malcolmson, Esq. | J. Robarts, Esq. |
| E. J. Daniell, Esq. | D. Meinertzhagen, Esq. | V. H. Smith, Esq. |
| Sir Alfred Dent, K.C.M.G. | | Capt. Sir George Vyvyan, K.C.M.G. |

The Corporation will act as:—

Executor of Wills.

Trustee of Wills and Settlements.

FUNDS IN HAND EXCEED
£5,250,000.

UNIMPEACHABLE SECURITY.

Prospectus and all information may be obtained on application to the Secretary,
Head Office, ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON, E.C.

"TUBS for SHRUBS"

Palms, Valuable Plants, etc

ALSO

TUBS for the FIRESIDE

Quaint and Uncommon.

FOR LOGS, BRIQUETTES, PEAT, Etc.

Awarded the Royal Horticultural . . . Society's Banksian Silver Medal, 1903, Flora Silver Medal, 1903, and the Royal Botanic Society of London Large Silver Medal, March 17th, 1904.

Messrs. CHAMPION & CO.,

115, CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C.,

Will be happy at all times to give quotations for Special Shapes and Sizes

For other shapes see Catalogue Gratis on receipt of Post Card.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD
AND
CURES INDIGESTION,
CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,
June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper, by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

Digitized by Google

DR. JOHNSON'S BREWERY.

THE KING

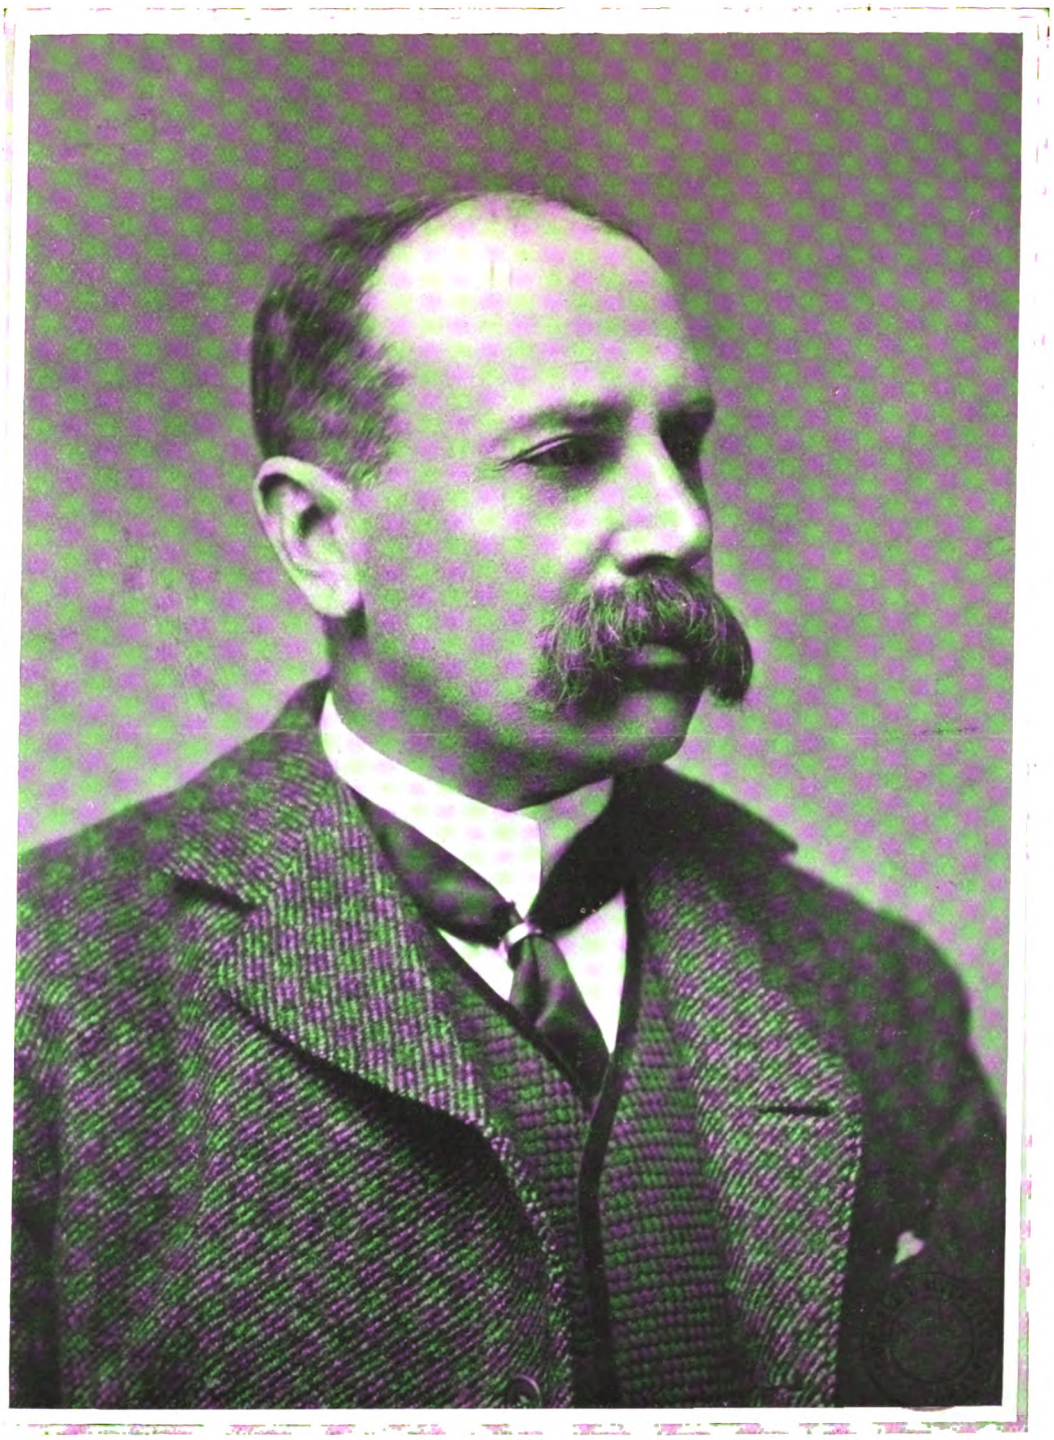
AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 426. SATURDAY, APRIL 1st, 1905. PRICE 6d.



Bassano.

SIR CARNE RASCH, BART., M.P.

Conservative Member for Mid-Essex.

(See page 13.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 426. Saturday, April 1, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING'S HEALTH.—The slight indisposition which kept King Edward indoors last week was probably caused by the mild form of influenza from which so many of his subjects have been suffering this winter. Recovery was, fortunately, only a question of a few days, and he was able to take a little outdoor exercise in the grounds of Buckingham Palace, in which, long years ago, he was first initiated into the mysteries of gardening. All the Royal residences have, naturally, memories of the boyhood of the King, but the grounds of the London home are most intimately connected with the middle period of the late reign. The Prince Consort took great interest in the reordering of the grounds shortly after his marriage, and it was under his direction that the famous Comus panels in the pavilion above the lake were painted. It must be some sixty years since the ten Royal Academicians who executed the panels started their labours, the "ten immortals," as a wit of the day called them; one of them subsequently became President of the Royal Academy, and all the others have indeliby left their mark on the history of painting.

THE EARL AND COUNTESS OF ROSSLYN Bassano.

Who were married recently at St. Mark's, North Audley Street. Both the Earl and Countess are connected with the stage, the former being known professionally as Mr. James Erskine, and the latter as Miss Anna Robinson.

THE QUEEN'S TRIP.—The warmth of the welcome given to Queen Alexandra in Lisbon is doubly gratifying to this country, and all the accounts of her visit contain some reference to the enthusiastic greetings of the crowds. Lisbon is a picturesque city, and the Portuguese nation has the knack of decorating its houses and streets to the best advantage on the occasion of any festa. The ancient and wonderful State barges, seven in number, which were used to row the Royal party from the "Victoria and Albert" to the famous landing steps at Black Horse Square, the decorations of the streets with rich cloths, banners, and shields, historically valuable and of the greatest interest to students of heraldry, the civic and military honours rendered by important personages in uniforms far more picturesque than the garb of our own Lord Mayor and City Sheriffs, combined to make up a pageant which the English Royal visitors will long remember. We cannot be surprised to learn that both Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria, who has greatly benefited by the sea air, despite the somewhat boisterous treatment meted out to her by Neptune, were constantly using their cameras.

THE KING OF SPAIN'S GRAND TOUR.—The end of May has been fixed for the beginning of the European tour of King Alfonso of Spain, and it is now certain that France will be first visited, followed by England, and then probably Amsterdam, Brussels, Vienna, and Berlin will follow. Berlin is last, as it is the wish of both the Kaiser and King Alfonso that they should be present together at the autumn manœuvres of the German Army. The arrangements for the Paris visit are well advanced, and it is expected that one day at least will be devoted to a shooting party. Like the Prince of Wales, King Alfonso is a wonderful shot, and thinks nothing of a right and left at a covey of partridges, with one more for luck. During his minority the Royal preserves have had a very peaceful time, but since he has taken to giving shooting parties, pastures new have had to be sought, and when he gets a day's sport the King nearly always motors to the scene of the shoot. As with our own Royal family, most of the bag is distributed among the hospitals and other charitable institutions of the capital, and when the Royal motor is seen, it is no uncommon thing for the nurses to remark to the patients, "There is the King going out shooting for you again."

Digitized by Google

Thompson and Lee.

THE LAUNCH OF THE JAPANESE BATTLE-SHIP "KASHIMA."

The fine new war-ship for the Japanese Navy, which took the water at Elswick last week, is one of the most powerful battle-ships afloat. She has a displacement of 16,400 tons, and carries a very strong armament, including four 12-in., four 10-in., twelve 6-in., and twenty smaller guns. There is also plenty of protection, the main armour belt extending the whole length of the vessel, and, when completed, she will have accommodation for about 980 officers and men.

Histed.

MRS. ANTHONY DREXEL

A popular Society hostess, whose country home is at Wytham Abbey, Oxford.

Russell.

SIR WILLIAM HOWARD RUSSELL

The veteran war correspondent, who has just celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday.

Lafayette.

LADY MAXWELL

A leading member of Society, and much interested in local charities.

Ellis.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AT SANT' ANTONIO GARDEN, MALTA.

The Inspector-General of the Forces paid a visit to Malta recently in the course of his tour of inspection of our Military dispositions in the Mediterranean, and a number of reviews and inspections were held. From Malta the Duke of Connaught proceeded to Gibraltar, and thence he passed to Madrid on a visit to the King of Spain. The names, reading from left to right, are: Captain J. Buller, A.D.C., Princess Patricia of Connaught, Lady Colville, the Duchess of Connaught, Admiral Domville, Admiral Lampton, the Duke of Connaught, Lady Clarke, the Hon. T. Villa, Lady Domville, Captain Warrender, and Colonel Biancardi, A.D.C.

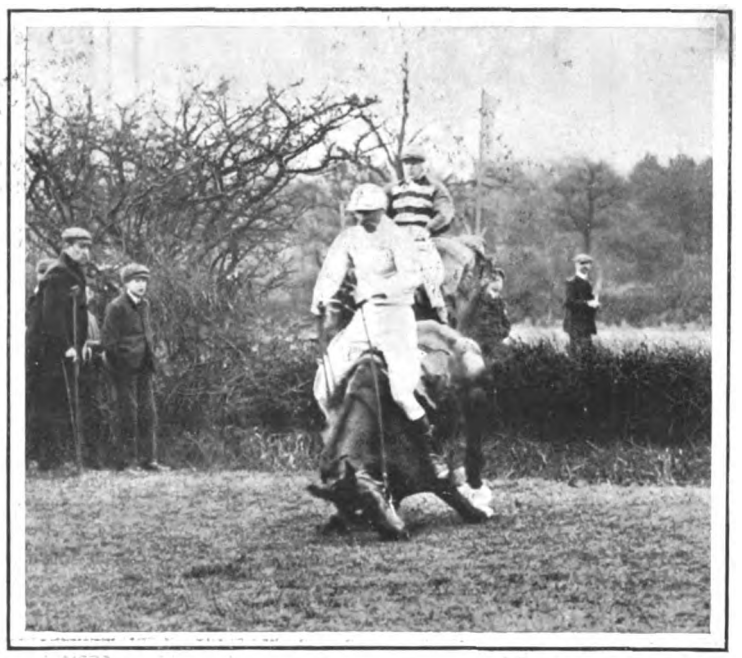
Digitized by Google

Copyright.

INTER-'VARSITY STEEPLECHASES.
Some of the competitors at Elton, near Peterborough.

THE KAISER AND FRANCE.—There has been much stirring of the political broth over the recent movements and utterances of the Kaiser, but some very ludicrous mistakes have been made by journalists unacquainted with the Court etiquette of Berlin. It has been stated, and quite solemnly, that the Kaiser's recent visit to the French Embassy was the first since the Franco-Prussian War, and, further, that the French Ambassador had "invited" the Emperor to dine with him. In point of fact, it is as impossible for the French Ambassador to ask the Kaiser to dine with him as it is for a commoner in England to invite the King to spend a week-end at his country house. The Kaiser may intimate to the Ambassador that he proposes to dine with him on a certain date, and this wish naturally amounts to a command. And, further, since the French Ambassador has been present repeatedly at the Court, it would be the height of discourtesy for the Emperor not to return the visit, and the Kaiser has been most punctilious in his visits to the French Embassy. He dines with each Ambassador in turn, and he has never made any difference between them. So far back as 1873, moreover, the then German Emperor and the whole Court were present at a ball given by the French Ambassador, a fact which emphasises the ridiculous misstatements which were recently circulated.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S ANCESTORS.—If Mr. Chamberlain were in need of advertisement, he would no doubt be grateful to the Rev. Stephen Barrass of St. Lawrence Jewry for the interesting discovery that he is a direct descendant of one of Queen Elizabeth's Lord Mayors of London, and that he and Mrs. Chamberlain are in some remote degree blood relations. The Chamberlain family, it appears, had property in Wiltshire a hundred years before the supposed arrival in the metropolis of the founder of the family fortunes, and the William Chamberlain through whom the family has now been traced was a prosperous cordwainer of Milk Street in 1769. There was an earlier Mr. Chamberlain, one George of that ilk, who married Ann Saltonstall at the Church of St. Lawrence Jewry on March 2, 1651, and Ann Saltonstall was the daughter of the Sir Richard Saltonstall who was a near relative of Governor Endicott, the founder of Massachusetts.



Copyright.

THE RUGBY STEEPLECHASES.
Little David falls at the water jump.

No. 17, FLEET STREET.—The ancient house so long known as the Palace of Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolsey is at present undergoing repair. If it cannot be claimed that it is connected with the bluff, much-married monarch, it has literary associations of some value. It is identical with Nando's Coffee House, where it may be remembered Cowper used to frequent, and next to which Shenstone lived in 1744, with on the other side George's House. In Nando's Coffee House it was, too, that Lord Thurlow in his young days was holding forth vigorously upon the merits of the Douglas suit, then a cause célèbre, and was overheard by two Scotch law agents who had the case in hand, and were so struck with the young man's eloquence that they retained him, and laid the foundations of his fortunes. There are not to-day so many of these old houses left that we can willingly see one of them fall into the house-breaker's hands.

CHEAP POSTAGE TO CANADA.—The movement to cheapen postage between the Mother Country and Canada has now got an able and energetic leader in Sir Gilbert Parker. It is, therefore, likely to receive the public attention it deserves. Like many other people, he is amazed at the figures given by Lord Stanley to the deputation which waited on him last week, and thinks that some permanent official is to blame. The question involves more than financial considerations, however. The high rates of postage on English periodicals enables the Republic to flood Canada with hers, and they are used as a medium for advertising American goods and popularising American ideas. It is actually a fact that English magazines are reprinted in the States, and forwarded to Canada with American advertisements. It is one of the defects of our political system that Ministers act as though their departments' interests precede those of the nation and Empire. Otherwise this postage question would have been settled long ago.

Copyright.

LADIES' HOCKEY.
Play in the match between Newnham and Surbiton, which ended in a draw of 1 goal all.

Digitized by Google

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

Stearn, Cambridge.

THE CAMBRIDGE CREW, 1905.

The names, reading from left to right, are: Back row—E. P. Wedd, F. J. Escombe (coach), W. B. Winthrop-Smith, G. D. Cochrane (reserve), and W. B. Savory. Front row—P. H. Thomas, H. Sanger (President), C. H. S. Taylor, B. C. Johnstone, and R. V. Powell. Seated on ground—R. Allcard (cox.)

Moyse, Putney.

THE OXFORD CREW, 1905.

The names, reading from left to right, are: Back row—H. M. Farrer, C. K. Philipps, L. E. Jones, W. A. L. Fletcher (coach), H. C. Bucknall (stroke), and A. H. Arbuthnot (reserve). Front row—A. H. Hales, E. P. Evans, A. K. Graham (President), A. R. Balfour, and R. W. Somers-Smith. Seated on ground—L. P. Stedall (cox.)

The prospects for this year's race between the rival Blues are all in favour of a close struggle, both crews having done excellent work at practice. The possibilities of a repetition of the result of 1877, when the umpire decided that the race ended in a dead-heat, have been much discussed, and in any case it is expected that a keener fight for victory will be seen than at any time during the past decade.

Digitized by Google

THE YOUNG PRETENDER.—The romance which time has woven round the name of Charles Edward Stuart, the young Pretender, has in it all the makings of a good play, and if Mr. Duncan Tovey did not succeed, in collaboration with Mr. Sidney Sime, in writing a work which will become a classic, his "Prince Charlie," produced by the London Scottish Rifle Volunteers last week, made a very good evening's entertainment. The son of James III., as his adherents fondly called him, or Old Mr. Misfortune, as he was named in his solitary old age, is a romantic figure, with his eyes of rich dark brown, his hair of chestnut hue, his "body built for war," as Lord Elcho calls it, and all the charm of his personality was conveyed by Private J. A. Bentham. His evil genius, James Macgregor, found an admirable exponent in Sergeant G. Kerr Smith, ably seconded in his villainy by Pickle the Spy (Mr. Louis Weirter). Miss Mary Allestree made a winsome Flora Macdonald, albeit the part as written appears to have not enough to do with the play. We wanted more of Flora and less of the impossible Irish Colonel and the impotent Lord George Murray.

SOME INTERESTING NUNS.—The fact that the elder sister of Miss Augusta Bellingham, who, together with her fiancé, the Marquess of Bute, was received in private audience by the Pope last week, is a nun, has aroused considerable interest in these singular sisterhoods, the uniform of many being familiar to frequenters of London streets. But there are some orders that are but little known in this country, the Carmelite Sisters, for instance, into whose sanctuary a photographer has recently for the first time succeeded in penetrating, and the Nuns of the Lake of Love, at Bruges la Morte. This latter sisterhood is in many ways unique. The possession of a certain amount of money is a necessary qualification, and the members live in a community of small separate dwellings, for which they pay themselves. With the exception of the hours devoted to services in the chapel, they occupy their time as they please, and lead lives of peace and gentle abnegation. Every house has a garden, in which the sisters, or rather "demoiselles," as they are called, work diligently, and a large amount of liberty, both of mind and action, is retained. Such a community as this must surely appeal strongly to women of to-day distracted with continual social duties, and with no leisure to think, and no "old age of gracious peace" to look forward to.

WHITECHAPEL AND THE SIMPLE LIFE.—There was something rather incongruous in the fact of Sir William Richmond saying, in opening an exhibition of Victorian art at the Whitechapel Art Gallery last week, that "a return to the cultured and simpler life of old is desirable." One does not usually associate anything but simple and even meagre life with the denizens of that part of the metropolis, into whose drab existences the Whitechapel Art Gallery has done so much to bring a little light and brightness. It is a wonderful sight, that gallery at midday, packed with a slowly moving throng of factory girls and boys, arrayed in the everyday working garb toilers in the East End know them best in, and with none of that finery which bedecks Hampstead Heath on the glorious riot of a Bank Holiday. Whitechapel and the simple life are close acquaintances; that simple life which means sending the children hungry to school that the rent may be paid; that means the eternal ghastly round of toil and moil that life itself may be maintained; that means the dreary monotony of unending pinching and scraping. This is the simple life of old, of to-day, and of the future, that Whitechapel best knows; for culture it has little time to care.

Langfier.

MRS. LUMLEY CATOR

Who is a daughter of the late Sir John Ralph Blois, Bart., of Cockfield Hall, Suffolk, was recently married to Mr. C. G. Lumley Cator, grandson of the late Lady Louise Cator.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS.—The extraordinary interchange of telegrams between the Russian Minister of Finance and The Times last week, goes to show the enormous influence a widely read and generally respected journal can wield. The situation is, however, somewhat Gilbertian. The Times says Russia claims to have a certain amount of gold in store, but that that gold is, like the Humbert millions, somewhat imaginary. M. Kokovtsoff says the money does exist, and if the Editor of The Times will kindly come over and look for himself——? But the Editor of The Times declines to go, much, we are sure, to the regret of everybody, since it deprives the world of the opportunity of an article on "The Russian Treasure Chests; specially investigated by a prominent member of The Times editorial staff." He admits that the treasure exists, but wants to know how far it will go towards covering Russia's unsecured debts, which is encroaching on the regions of the haute finance, and does not appeal very strongly even to readers of The Times, in these days of "snippet journalism." But whatever scruples and sense of dignity The Times may have had in the matter, obviously did not affect the halfpenny papers, for one of them, at least, succeeded in rushing in where the angel had not dared to tread, and there is no evidence to prove that the Carmelite Street authorities were the only ones who fished for invitations to visit the national treasure of Russia.

Digitized by Google

THE TOUR OF THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

Ellis, Malta.

THE "ESSEX" AT MALTA: THE GOVERNOR'S BARGE LEAVING FOR THE SHORE.

The recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught to Malta was part of the comprehensive tour of our Military dispositions in the Mediterranean now being made by the Inspector-General of the Forces. The visit was the occasion of much festivity in the island.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE members of the London Scottish Golf Club had a most interesting gathering at their annual dinner, held on Thursday evening last week at the Trocadero. Mr. D. Stanley Froy, the captain of the club, occupied the chair, being supported by upwards of 100 members of the club, and a fair representation of visitors from a few other golf clubs. The gathering was essentially patriotic, and the proceedings throughout the evening were characterised by all the perfervid enthusiasm of the Scot. After the guests had assembled in the adjoining reception-room, Pipe-Major David Laing of the 1st Scots Guards, attired in the beautiful kilted uniform of his regiment, headed with his bagpipes the procession of guests, leading the members to their seats at the dinner-table, to the strains of "Pibroch o Donald Dhu" and "Highland Laddie." Then when the haggis appeared, Pipe-Major Laing led the procession of giggling Swiss waiters round the room, each carrying a haggis on a platter above his head, with a bottle of "Highland Dew" in his right hand, and the cheers of the golfers mingled with the Pipe-Major's spirited pibroch strains of "Brose and Butter." Indeed, the handsome figure of the Pipe-Major in his kilts, and his skill as a player of the bagpipes, was one of the notably attractive features of a particularly interesting golf dinner. So fervent was the expression of national feeling that many of the members rather complained that the Pipe-Major and his bagpipes were not sandwiched between every song on the long musical programme. At various portions of the evening Pipe-Major Laing played, by request, the famous march, "The Barren Rocks of Aden," the Strathspey "Tullochgorum," "The Reel of Tulloch," "Lady Elspeth Campbell's March,"

Esslemont, Aberdeen.

THE INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.

G. Buchan ("Joe"), the fifth player in the team match against the House of Commons.

the Strathspey "Miss Drummond of Perth," and the reel, "Mrs. McLeod."

* * *

The speeches, which were interspersed throughout the musical entertainment of the evening, were commendably short and to the point. The chairman was much more interested in giving the gathering the benefit of a rich and varied musical programme than in scattering flowers of rhetoric before the members for their amusement. Two admirable speeches were delivered, by Captain Blake, R.N., for the Navy, and by Captain St. John for the Army. The last-named speaker gave it as his opinion that there was no better training for a young Army officer than golf, because it taught discipline, and, above all, the wholesome and useful lesson that a man was never beaten until conclusive proof was forthcoming that he really had been beaten. The radical difference, however, between golf and the Army was, that in the game on the links you are always trying to get into a hole, while in the Army you are always trying to get out of one—and the ripple of laughter which passed round the room showed that the epigrammatic force of the simile had both been realised and appreciated. The smooth working of the evening's arrangements was due in no small degree to the vigilant care with which Sergeant W. Milne, the popular steward of the club at Wimbledon, watched over them. Among the artistes who sang or played in the course of the evening were Herr Meisel and Mr. Roche, Mr. Leo Stormont, Mr. John L. Shine, Messrs. Earle and Earle, Mr. David Brazell, Mr. Bransby Williams, Mr. Arthur Prince, the ventriloquist, Mr. Richard Green, and Mr. Watkin Mills.

Esslemont, Aberdeen

THE INVERALLOCHY FISHER TEAM.

A group of the famous Inverallochy fishermen golfers, showing the captain on the left and the secretary at the end of the row on the right.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Jacks.

THE LONDON SCOTTISH GOLF CLUB DINNER.

The annual dinner was held at the Trocadero on Thursday evening last. Mr. D. Stanley Froy, the captain, presided over a large gathering of the members and their friends

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

The match between Taylor and Braid over the Nazeing Common Course at Broxbourne on Saturday, showed that Taylor is in particularly fine form at the present time. To beat a player like Braid in a thirty-six holes match by 8 up and 6 to play is a feat of no ordinary importance. While Braid never seemed to be able to get into his proper game, Taylor, on the other hand, was quite at ease in playing almost perfect golf. In the first nine holes Taylor led by 6, eventually finishing the first round 5 up. Taylor was round in the record score of 73, which is four strokes lower than the record of the green hitherto established. If Taylor maintains this form during the next few months there ought to be a good many surprises, not only in the important open professional tournaments, but in the Open Championship itself.

* * *

There was an interesting four-ball match at Huntercombe last week, in which Willie Park and Mr. Cecil Hutchison played Taylor and Mr. F. W. Maude, the Middlesex cricketer. The weather was delightfully fine, and a great deal of excellent play was seen. Mr. Maude and Taylor won by 5 up and 4 to play, the play of Taylor being particularly brilliant. In the afternoon an ordinary two-ball foursome was played, and a stubbornly contested match was decided on the last green in favour of Mr. Maude and Taylor by 1 hole.

* * *

It is proposed to open the Isles of Scilly links, which were laid out and finished last year, with an open amateur competition at Easter. The competition will be played on Easter Monday and following days. Gentlemen intending to compete are desired to send in their names ten clear days beforehand. A cup will be presented by the president, Mr. T. A. Dorrien-Smith, Tresco Abbey, and other prizes will be given.

* * *

The Frinton Golf Club have simultaneously taken a new lease of life, and of their excellent course, Mr. Cooper, the proprietor, having granted them a tenancy of forty years, with the option of purchase. Willie Park was down a short time ago and advised upon the extension of the course to championship length, and he speaks most highly of the links. The handsome new club-house recently erected is to be opened at Easter. Messrs. Homer and Sharp of Frinton are the architects.

Esslemont, Aberdeen.

THE INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.

J. Buchan, the leading player in the team match against the House of Commons.

* * *

Mr. George A. Riddell, a member of the Press Golfing Society, has offered £25 for prizes for a Foursome Competition amongst the members. The committee has accepted the generous offer, and adopted Mr. Riddell's suggestions: (1) that the competition should be under handicap; (2) that competitors should choose their own partners (and enter as pairs); and (3) that a draw should be made to decide which couples are to compete against each other in the first round, which can be played over any course the competing pairs may agree between themselves.

* * *

A list of the society's fixtures for the season includes matches against the Bar, the Solicitors' and the Free Church Ministers' Societies; competitions for the Captain's Prize, the Leicester Harmsworth Prize, the Society's Challenge Cup; and a week-end match with Le Touquet Club at Le Touquet, near Boulogne.

GOLF IN BRAZIL.

THE game of golf has only very recently come into vogue in Brazil, and even now is practically confined to the English-speaking races (British and Americans). The first club, founded some five or six years ago, if I am not much mistaken, was in Sao Paulo, and from a small beginning has now developed into a flourishing concern.

The next to follow suit was Para, in the north, but I understand that the game had to be abandoned there for the reason that the Brazilians did not seem to appreciate the fact that a golf ball in flight claimed the "right of way," and objected to being forcibly reminded and convinced of this by a sudden sting in some part of their anatomy. It therefore remains for Sao Paulo and Bahia to "keep the ball rolling." As far as Bahia is concerned, we started from very small beginnings—two members, two clubs, and two holes. The game, however, took hold, and our membership increased to twelve, all provided with the necessary paraphernalia. Our course consists only of four holes, the longest being 287-yds., and the shortest about 250-yds. Four times round, however, with two more holes thrown in, gives a course of over 4,700-yds., with an abnormal number of natural hazards. On this latter point I can speak with some authority.

I learned golf some twenty-five or thirty years ago, on the old Bruntsfield links in Edinburgh, and have played over a great many of the well-known Scottish greens, but seldom, I might say never, in my experience have I encountered such exasperating natural difficulties to contend with as we have on our short course at Bahia.

I send you a set of photographs of the links, particularly of the greens or "browns," as I understand they are called in other parts of the world, where grass is scarce and golfers have to adapt themselves to circumstances.

With regard to the question of greens, I should be very pleased if any of your readers could give me a hint. Ours are of a clayey nature, with a top-dressing of sea sand, but even with this sand we find that there is no "bite," and a well-pitched iron shot will overrun the hole for many yards, although a similar shot on a home green could practically be counted as "laid dead."

THE CAPTAIN.

Esslemont, Aberdeen.

THE INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.

A. Ritchie ("Sang"), who plays second in the team against the House of Commons to-day at Sandwich.

Esslemont, Aberdeen.

THE INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.

A. Ritchie ("Skeel"), who plays third in the team match against the House of Commons.

Esslemont, Aberdeen.

THE INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.

J. Whyte ("Beembie"), the fourth player in the team match at Sandwich.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Copyright.

GOLF IN BRAZIL.

A view of the 1st, 5th, 9th, 13th, and 17th greens, the length of the hole being 265-yds

Copyright.

A GENERAL VIEW OF BAHIA LINKS.

The square in the foreground represents the 3rd, 7th, 11th, and 15th putting greens, the distance from the tee being 287-yds.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE BAHIA LINKS.
One of the "prepared" putting greens, which serves as the hole for the 2nd, 6th, 10th, 14th, and 18th greens; distance from the tee 250-yds.

Correspondence.

WHEN IS A BALL OUT OF BOUNDS?

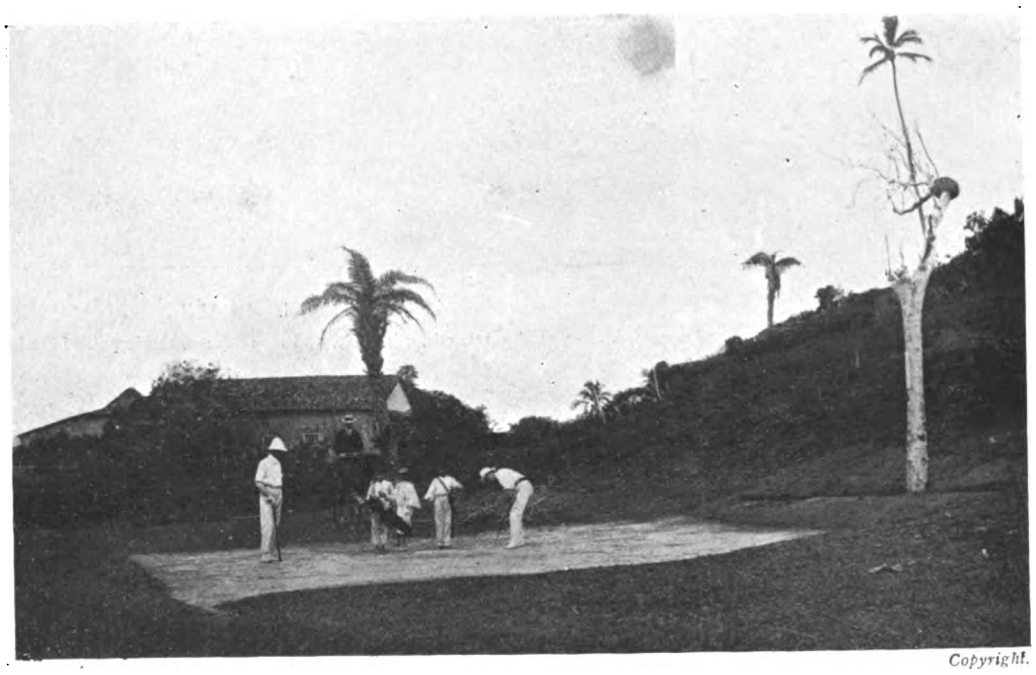
To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—A discussion which I heard the other day at a golf club, as to the conditions under which a ball should be treated as being out of bounds, seems to illustrate the curiously confused notions which prevail in the minds of many golfers in their interpretations of rules. I heard it seriously argued, for example, that a ball driven deliberately over the corner of a boundary fence, with slice or pull, so as to profit by the direction and strength of the wind, should be treated as a ball driven out of bounds. The reason upon which this curious argument is founded, is that it was the deliberate intention of the player to play his ball out of the course, and that, for a certain portion of the flight of the ball, it was travelling over territory which did not belong to the club, though at the end of the flight the ball fulfilled the intention of the striker by coming back on to the course.

The argument arose out of a close match between two players, wherein the ball of one golfer behaved exactly as described above—that is to say, in order to play over a hazard and reach a narrow putting green, the player struck his ball over the boundary fence into the teeth of the wind, which was blowing from that direction, with the result that, when the force of the blow was expended, the wind brought the ball back on to the course and allowed it to roll not far from the hole. The opponent, however, claimed that the ball so played was out of bounds, and his assertive dogmatism compelled the player, with inexcusable weakness on his part, to drop another ball on the course and play the ball, this time within the limits of the boundary fence. Needless to say, the result of this peculiar method of interpreting the rule about a ball being out of bounds was that the player lost the hole, and in the end the match.

The curious point of the controversy is, that many players backed up the contention of the opponent, who asserted that a really scientific shot played so as to take advantage of the wind came within the definition of a ball being out of bounds. In my view no dispute could be waged under more illogical conditions. The rule has nothing to do with a ball in the course of flight, as it is obviously impossible to legislate for what may happen in such a case. Penalties only come into force when the ball drops and lies dead. If, therefore, a semi-circular shot is played across a boundary fence, the rule only becomes operative when the ball drops and is at complete rest. Besides, it has always been the practice of the game among professionals and amateur players to take all kinds of risks of this description, in the hope of profiting by a favourable wind. If the shot comes off, no one can deny that it is a scientifically brilliant one, while, if it fails, the player has to pay the penalty of his boldness. Nothing to my mind seems to be more legitimate than the playing of a ball out of bounds in such circumstances; but the point of interest to me, as I am sure it must be to many other players, is that there should be any doubt about the subject, and that acute and intelligent minds should differ so materially in their reading of one of the most simple and plain-spoken rules regulating the conduct of the game.—I am, etc., London Scottish.



GOLF IN BRAZIL.
A view of the 4th, 8th, 12th, and 16th greens, the length of the hole being 252-yds.

THE LINKS AT BAHIA, BRAZIL.
Mr. Steel driving from the 1st tee.

FIXTURES.

April 1.—Rye, Monthly Medal (score play).
April 1.—Rye, Silver Cleek (Bogey).
April 1.—House of Commons v. Inverallochy Fishermen, at Sandwich.
April 1.—Vardon, Braid, and White, at Farnham.
April 5.—Vardon, Taylor, and Herd, at Broadstone.
April 6.—Biarritz, Monthly Medal v. Bogey.
April 7.—Pau, Ville de Pau, Monthly Medal.
April 8.—Glasgow (Killermont), Final Medal Competition; Stewart Cup (handicap).
April 11.—Barnehurst Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 12-13.—Ranelagh Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 15.—Glasgow, Spring Meeting (Gailes).

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XXXVI.—Sir Carne Rasch, Bart., Conservative M.P. for Mid-Essex.

THE electors of Essex have always evinced a strong predilection for being represented in Parliament by men of their own kith and kin, soldiers and sailors of renown for choice. A century ago the great eastern county (then one undivided constituency), in accordance with its time-honoured traditions, sent to Westminster as Knights of the Shire, John Bullock of Falkbourn Hall, the Father of the House of Commons, whose first commission as Colonel of the East Essex Militia dated as far back as 1780, and Admiral Sir Eliab Harvey of Rolls Park, Chigwell, who greatly distinguished himself on board the "Temeraire" at Trafalgar, and whose wife made excellent political speeches during the enforced absence of her husband at sea.

Essex is now split up into no less than eight separate divisions, all of which "went" Conservative with no uncertain voice in 1900, a majority of the successful candidates being, as of yore, men of Essex, living amongst those who gave them their suffrages and support. Many years have rolled by since Sir Carne Rasch's Danish ancestors migrated from Flensburg (now in Schleswig-Holstein) and settled in England, the present popular head of the house receiving a Baronetcy two years ago at the hands of King Edward VII.

The Carnes came to Essex originally from Cornwall, and married into the Rasch family, and the record of Major Frederic Carne Rasch in, as well as out of, Parliament is eminently worthy of both the ancient races from which his forbears sprung. His father, a successful Chancery barrister, lived in the old house at Woodhill, Danbury, where his son was born in the memorable year which gave England and Europe so many well-known men and the best port wine of the century. At an early age he was sent to Mr. Stone's house at Eton, and during his stay there could number amongst his school-fellows the present Prime Minister, as well as Mr. A. Akers-Douglas, Mr. John Hutton (member for the Richmond Division of Yorkshire), and Mr. James Round, who will shortly retire from the Harwich Division of Essex. From Eton, Frederic Carne Rasch went in due course to Cambridge, where he spent three years at Trinity, in the palmy days of "Billy Whistle." While at Trinity he rowed in the 'Varsity boat, although he did not take part in the historic contest at Putney, and won a goodly number of cups and other trophies by his prowess as a pedestrian, a runner, and an oarsman.

Having taken his degree, he received a commission in the Carabiniers, at the time when the regiment was commanded by Colonel Napier, and the identity of the Tichborne claimant as one of the old subalterns was a burning question. This was in 1867, and for a whole decade the future member for Mid-Essex devoted his attention to the discharge of his military duties in Ireland and elsewhere, tempered with that amount of sport which his previous achievements at school and the 'Varsity would lead one to expect. In the year after he joined the Carabiniers he established a record by walking seven miles in fifty-seven minutes in Phœnix Park, and the victory of his crack mare, Cocotte, in the regimental races at Kingsbury is not yet wholly forgotten. At the end of ten years he exchanged "his sword for a pruning hook," and settled down to the tranquil enjoyment of a country life, tempered by an active interest in one or two great commercial enterprises, in which he has displayed his constitutional energy and ability. In 1879 he married Miss Griffinhoofe, who, like himself, belongs to one of the old Essex families. For many years Major Sir Carne Rasch was identified with the Essex Militia, from which he has now retired. He is the father of two sons, both of whom were Etonians. While the elder is now an officer in the Carabiniers, the younger holds a commission in the Essex Militia.

WOODHILL, DANBURY, ESSEX

The residence of Sir Carne Rasch, Conservative member for the Mid-Essex Division.

In 1885 Sir Carne Rasch led a gallant but unsuccessful attack on that Radical stronghold, the Elland Division of Yorkshire. A few months later, however, he was invited to contest South-East Essex, which seat he wrested from his Liberal opponent by a majority of 842. He was again successful in 1892, and in 1895 he was nearly 2,000 votes ahead of his antagonist, Mr. D. M. Watson. Five years later he was invited to fight the battle of Conservatism in his own Mid-Essex Division, for, unlike most men, Frederic Carne Rasch is a prophet in his own country and neighbourhood. In the result he was returned by a majority of 3,129 over his Liberal competitor, Mr. Solomon Henry, the "Copper King," the victory being by far the most decisive of those won throughout the Eastern Districts.

Sir Carne Rasch is Chairman of the Chelmsford Magisterial Bench and Secretary of the Service Members' Committee of the House of Commons. It is nine years since he left the Essex Militia, and for some time he has been no longer seen in the hunting-field. There are very few private members who command more respectful attention in the House of Commons, where he is regarded as a redoubtable authority on questions relating to Army Reform, Agriculture, and Short Speeches in Parliament. He is heart and soul in accord with Mr. Arnold-Forster in the matter of Army Reform, believing that efficiency is in reality of far greater importance than numerical strength. He voted against the Education Bill on economical grounds, and induced the Government to come to the aid of the sorely-tried ratepayer by an annual Treasury grant of £1,250,000. He is, as far as the Fiscal Policy of the future is concerned, in perfect accord with Mr. Balfour. He would unquestionably vote against any tax on corn or food, though he has no objection to a duty on manufactured goods. Sir Carne Rasch, having resolutely put his hand to the plough in the matter of the limitation of what Lord Beaconsfield would have called "irresponsible eloquence" at Westminster, has no intention whatever of turning back. "One hour for Front Bench members and ten minutes for all others" is the gist of the motion he has once carried by three to one. "Everything comes to him who waits" is his motto, and he applies this to the crusade he is waging, with a dogged determination to succeed, in favour of the enforced curtailment of Parliamentary speeches.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE GUARDIAN ANGEL.

"L'ANGE DU FOYER" is the name MM. Caillaret and de Flers have given to the peculiar type of man, the leading character, in their three-act play just produced at the Nouveautés. The Guardian Angel! A pretty and appropriate title. He is the friend of husband and wife, and, as a natural course of things, should be the wife's lover. But by some extraordinary freak of Nature he fails to convince the charmingly sceptical Marianne Chardin that her infidelity is necessary to her happiness. Chardin has almost as many "little friends" as cravats, and changes them equally unconcernedly. This is the man's rôle—on the stage. But until the bald facts are brought directly under the wife's notice, she ignores them. M. and Mme. Chardin are not particularly interesting to follow in their worldly pleasures. Tea and small talk in Paris, tea and small talk in Nice, surrounded by the noisy set called "smart." But there are sundry scenes of observation, small studies of Paris life, that make the play amusing and instructive.

The Guardian Angel is very Parisian, a character more frequently seen in real life than is generally supposed. The most obliging of men, he will carry your dog, execute your commissions, dine with your mother-in-law, do all the small things that someone must do, that you never expect from your husband. And he does them without any further reward than a smile and an occasional permission to kiss your hand. He takes advantage of the situation in a way, certainly; but it is not of much importance, and, after all, every position has its perquisites. He styles himself l'amant, without either the nerve or the experience to justify the title. But he is called a lucky dog by his friends, and satisfies himself on appearances. This sort of man spends the best years of his life in a woman's shadow, and when, from some cause or other, husband and wife begin to appreciate each other, he passes out of their lives and takes a similar place in another household. Useful things in their way, guardian angels. No home should be without one. This is the pith of the play.

MLLE. CARLIX
Who is playing Chouquette in "L'Ange du Foyer" at the Nouveautés.
(Photographed by Boyer, Paris.)

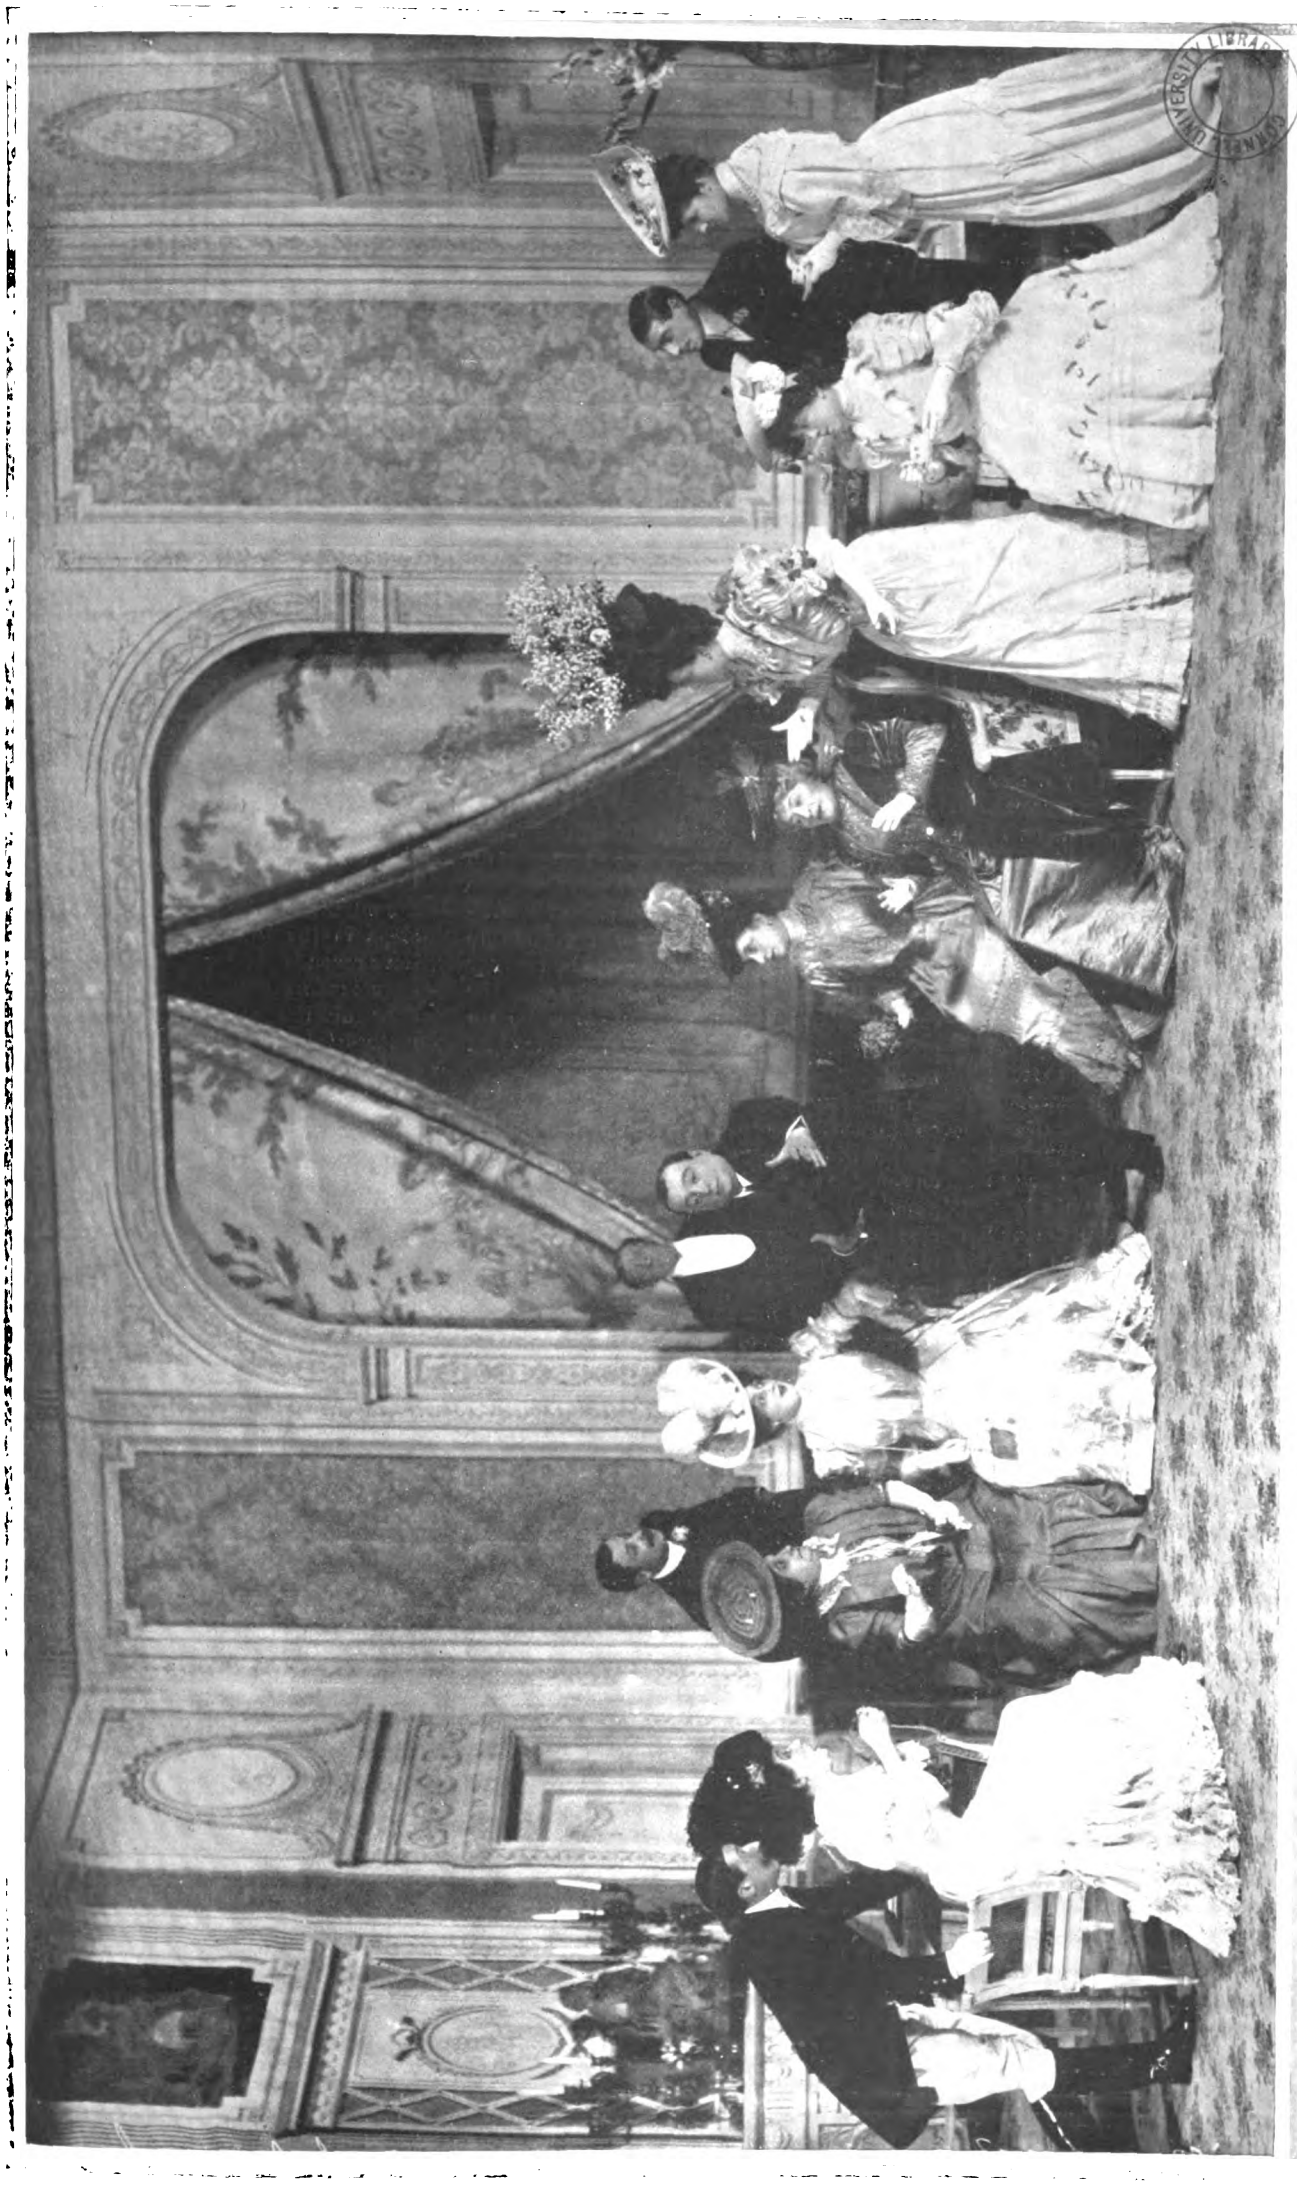
The character of Sigismund is not, however, sufficient to draw an audience as essentially Parisian as the clientèle of the Nouveautés. There is too much subtlety about it for the pleasure-seeking theatre-goer. There must be the touch that makes all the world kin, the something that appeals to women of all degrees; and the clever authors have introduced a couple of scenes between the woman of the world and the woman of the half-world that each will want to see.

Chouquette is an unsophisticated little stage cocotte, who explains to Marianne her inexperience of the hearts of men. And Marianne, the Society woman, gives her a lesson. Tells her of the one or two hackneyed phrases that never fail to capture them. "Comme vous savez parler aux cœurs des femmes!" ("How well you understand women!") In all languages it is the same, and it always works. Look at the stalls. See the women smile, and the men pull their moustaches and seem to remember having heard something of the sort before. Chouquette profits by her newly-acquired wisdom, but, unfortunately, her first victim is Marianne's husband, and Marianne repents having given the secrets of one world into another. Chouquette, however, is not ungrateful, and when the opportunity occurs, as it somehow or other does occur in this wildly-constructed play, she gives Marianne a lesson in her turn. She explains to her how necessary it is to make a man jealous; how she must be exacting, capricious, unbearable; how she must make him miserable. And then he will be her slave, but not otherwise. "You have never made him unhappy?" "Never," says Marianne. "And you expect him to love you. . . . how is it possible?" The scene continues in this strain for some little time, always amusing and new, winding up with a delightful outburst on the part of Chouquette that convulsed the house. "You taught me some very useful things for a good little cocotte. I am teaching you some very necessary things for a good little wife." And Marianne holds out her hand and says, "We are quits." The play is full of smart things, sometimes brought in naturally, sometimes a trifle forced; but nobody criticised the work seriously—there was too much fun in it. The audience was amused from beginning to end. Amused at the incidental introduction of Mass at the Madeleine, and the appointments made during service; amused at the present the husband brings his wife after he has supped en cabinet particulier; amused at the family who make a solid meal at the five o'clock teas. And if some of us had the sensation of a patchwork quilt with irregular joins, we began to believe that patchwork is the style of work that suits a Boulevard audience. They like to imagine themselves at the Capucines, and take their play in scenes; each charming, but with no connection to the other. How they laughed at the allusion to Caruavalet, and the museum that everybody knows of, but that nobody has seen! You might have asked each individual from the stalls to the gallery, on the first night of this play, and each would have laughingly answered, like the couple on the stage, Caruavalet is La femme légi ime. Too near to be appreciated.

MM. Caillaret and de Flers are the authors of many brilliant comedies, and will probably continue to write, jointly, many more. Let us drink to their next success, and make a proposition. They show us admirably how women should fascinate their husbands, how women should fascinate their lovers. Will they now show men how they shall captivate and keep their wives! A subject equally important if less popular. But they will know how to treat it.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google



A SCENE IN "L'ANGE DU FOYER," AT THE NOUVEAUTÉS, PARIS.

Sigismund, the leading part in the piece, is played by M. Torin, who is in the centre of the picture.

(From a photograph by Paul Boyer, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

ONE of the leading trade organs in France has been lamenting the fact that the comfortable medium-powered car still remains beyond the reach of the great middle class, a state of affairs which it ascribes to the waste of money entailed by racing, and to the disturbing effect of exhibitions. As to the former, it points out that the automobile world has apparently lost all conception of the value of money. The manufacturers pay huge sums simply to enter their vehicles for a single race; they build special machines, and upset the whole organisation of their factories for weeks on end, and go to an expense of thousands of pounds without the certainty of any return. "And the three or four hundred thousand francs thus squandered on publicity of doubtful value—who pays for it?" says our contemporary. "The public, of course. If a firm builds 400 cars a year, a fixed charge of 1,000-fr. is thus added to the cost of each vehicle."

The annual exhibition is given an even larger share of blame, though perhaps with less justice. It is argued that every maker feels compelled to change his model every year, with the result that expensive alterations of questionable value are often introduced, while purchasers are left in a state of uncertainty, knowing that every model is rendered officially obsolete in a year's time, and thereby seriously depreciated in its market value. This is doubtless true of the majority of makers, but the journal in question loses sight of the fact that several big firms, both in this country and abroad, are showing a marked tendency to resist the fashion of alteration for mere alteration's sake.

The article, nevertheless, is an important one, as showing that the trade is beginning to feel the strain of sensational methods of advertisement, and to desire a period of calm and steady development. One big French firm, formerly pre-eminent in the racing world, has publicly explained its withdrawal from the Gordon Bennett, on the ground that it wishes to devote its energies purely to the interests of its ordinary customers. In this country racing has never played an important part in the industry. The danger, if danger it be, lies in the ever-increasing multiplicity of exhibitions, with which it is now the fashion to surfeit the public in all parts of the country during the winter months. Happily with the close of the Islington show there will be a respite from these displays for seven or eight months.

Topical.

THE COMING MOTOR-BOAT RACES AT MONACO.
A typical boat of the cruiser class.

The Monaco Motor-boat Meeting, which commences to-morrow (Sunday) with an exhibition of the competing craft, seems arranged on sensible lines. There are competitions for practically every type of motor-vessel at present in existence, which will serve both to teach the makers useful lessons, and to draw the attention of the public to the capabilities of the marine motor. Either from want of enterprise or lack of money, the British makers are poorly represented at Monaco, very few entries having been made from this side of the Channel. What they lack in numbers they may, however, make up in quality. We are admittedly the finest builders of boats and ships in the world, and our motor-makers have recently given ample evidence that they have made up the leeway lost in the early days of the automobile movement. The motor-boat trade should, therefore, be an easy prize for British manufacturers if only they realise its possibilities and have the enterprise to take advantage of them. The arguments against road-racing do not apply in the case of the motor-boat. In the first place, no one denies that racing was of immense service to the motor-car in its early days, before it had reached the limit of practical speed on the road. The motor-boat at the present time is in need of the same advertisement and incentive to development, and, moreover, speed has never been regarded as a vice on the high seas. To this day the great liners race across the Atlantic, and the fastest ships secure their reward in the shape of crowded passenger lists and valuable mail contracts.

Topica

MOTOR-BOAT RACING AT MONACO.
The launch of the "Mercédès-Charley," a new type of racer.

A very large section of the public clings to the notion that the motor-car of the future will be driven by electricity, and I have heard many people say that the petrol vehicle is bound to be supplanted in the near future by the long-distance electromobile. In fact, I believe that quite a large number of persons are hesitating to buy a motor on this account. Their illusions will be rudely dispelled by the paper recently read before the Automobile Club by Mr. T. G. Chambers, who, as the managing director of the largest electric carriage company in London, may be regarded as not unduly prejudiced in favour of the petrol car. Mr. Chambers fairly and frankly states that electricity can never compete with petrol as a motive power for the touring car. No existing element seems capable of supplying the necessary battery, and even if a feather-weight accumulator were produced, there would still be the necessity for charging, and the risk of unexpected exhaustion of current from a hundred different causes. Moreover—and this is perhaps the most important point—he admits that for touring purposes the modern silent and smooth running petrol car equals in comfort the electric carriage itself. For town use the electromobile has its own peculiar advantages, and until the garage system, by which an owner can calculate his expenses almost to a penny, is adopted for the petrol motor, I agree with Mr. Chambers that electricity will more than hold its own.

Digitized by Google

The electric brougham or landaulette is admittedly expensive in first cost and upkeep, but it is hardly fair to compare it in these respects with a single horsed carriage. The electromobile, now that the system of interchangeable batteries is in vogue, can run all day and every day, and its capacity for work is only limited by the endurance of the driver, who is at liberty directly he returns with his carriage to the garage. Mr. Chambers is of opinion that in a few years' time it will be possible to hire an electric brougham for £250 a year without a driver. Assuming that an efficient driver will then be procurable at £75 a year, the total cost will be £325, which would compare favourably with the expenses of a London stable when rent, rates, lighting, the wages of a couple of men, forage for two or more horses, shoeing and veterinary charges, and the upkeep of harness and carriages are taken into consideration.

For ambulance work the electric carriage, with its entire absence of smell, noise, and vibration, is peculiarly fitted, and there is much to be said on behalf of the suggestion that the police and fire brigade organisations should be utilised for the purpose. At present there is no proper ambulance service, even in London, and a person who is injured in the streets often has his chance of recovery seriously jeopardised by being thrust into a jolting cab for conveyance to the hospital. Every police and fire brigade station could have its electric ambulance, and the street fire-alarms could be fitted, in addition, with ambulance calls. The initial expense might be considerable, but the running expenses need not be great, as every constable and fireman could be taught to drive an electric ambulance in three or four lessons, and the instruction could form part of the "first aid" course. The only difficulty would be the recharging and care of the batteries; but this could be overcome by a system of travelling inspectors and special vehicles carrying spare accumulators.

RADIATOR.

Argent Archer.

MRS. DICKS ON HER NAPIER.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

TWO weeks ago, I made a passing reference to the resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the Solent Classes Racing Association, recommending a new handicap class for that district. The matter promises to excite the liveliest interest amongst yachtsmen. The resolution, of course, only applied to the Solent, but many are inclined to view the matter in its broader aspect—the influence of handicap racing on the sport generally.

Whatever may be one's views on the question, one cannot but regard it as a healthy sign that so much interest is being evinced in it, although one fails to detect any signs of an immediate revival in any of the classes that have declined during the past few years. Everyone is agreed that, so far as the racing side of the pastime is concerned, nothing can compare with class racing, in which the first past the post is winner. The point upon which opinion is divided, is whether the best interests of yachting are served by encouraging handicap racing as a substitute for the higher form of sport, in years comparatively barren, so far as the latter is concerned. Many enthusiasts contend that, inasmuch as it is the duty of the Y.R.A. to cultivate class racing, it should not countenance any other form of sport, as by so doing, it would only be postponing further a revival of racing such as we had during the last decade of the past century.

The chief point for consideration, and one difficult to express a very definite opinion upon, is whether handicap racing will help to keep alive an interest in yachting, and so gradually lead to a revival of the pastime generally. One thing is very certain—that the majority of keen racing men soon tire of handicap sailing, and very few take to it after having indulged to any extent in class racing.

For the past five years, the programmes at all our principal regattas have consisted chiefly of handicap races, and with only one class of "thorough-breds" doing the round of the fixtures, the sport would have been very tame but for the inclusion of the cruiser matches in the various programmes, notwithstanding that they may be but poor substitutes for those grand fleets of 90-footers, forty and twenty raters, which we were accustomed to see at all the big regattas during the closing years of last century.

An effort was made some little time back to induce the Y.R.A. to specially provide for the cruisers in the absence of racing craft; but the governing body took no steps in the matter, and early last year a meeting of representatives of clubs was convened to consider what could be done to improve the handicap racing. The result of that meeting was the adoption of a scheme of classification of cruisers, and racing in these classes undoubtedly benefited by it.

The very conditions of yachting, however, are such that it is impossible to make handicap racing interesting where the vessels engaged vary to any considerable extent in size. In other forms of racing, handicaps are framed with the object of bringing the competitors as nearly together as possible at the winning-post. In a yacht handicap, the only time at which the vessels are in sufficiently close company to put a premium upon smart handling, is at the start, and it is difficult in the extreme to work up any enthusiasm or excitement over a close finish—on time allowance—between boats separated by a mile or two.

This, of course, is impossible of improvement, although many years ago some French committees in the Mediterranean advocated the experiment of starting the boats according to their time allowances, the scratch boat being, of course, the last to start. The committees had evidently in view the making of a close and exciting finish. Obviously, such an experiment was doomed to failure, for many reasons; but the fact of it ever having been tried or even contemplated, is evidence that a yacht-race under handicap conditions is lacking in that interest and excitement which one naturally looks for in all contests.

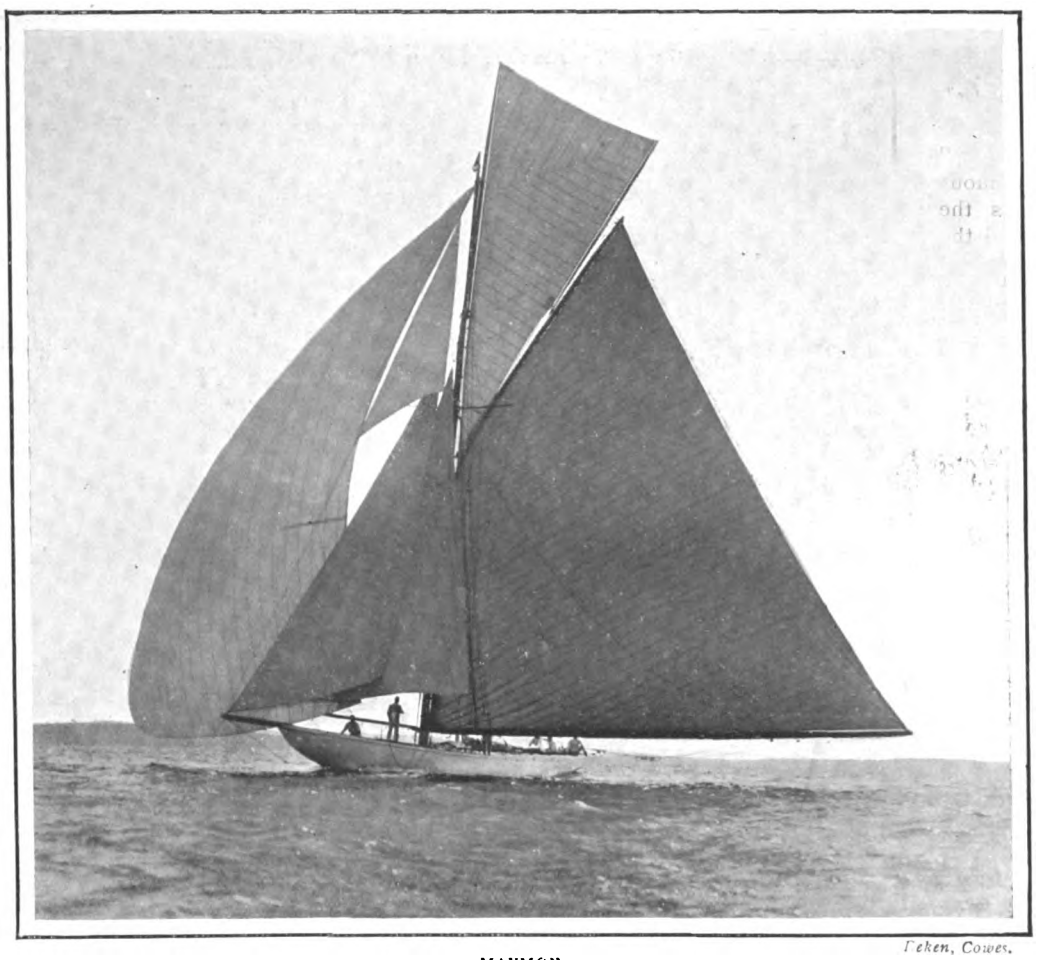
The particular resolution adopted at the Solent Classes R.A. meeting was, however, not aimed at still further fostering cruiser and handicap classes as we at present recognise them, but to provide races for outclassed racers. The inclusion of these craft in ordinary cruiser handicaps is always unsatisfactory; but if a special class be formed, it is hoped, by the promoters of the idea, that some good racing may be obtained amongst craft which, while not being quite fast enough for their original classes, have yet a few seasons' good work left in them. It ought to be possible to achieve this object without affecting prejudicially the interests of the Y.R.A. classes.

When owners are compelled to build almost every year to have a fair chance of success in their classes, the fact of there being a market for the old boats should rather tend to induce men to continue in the sport. The formation of a handicap class of ex-racers of the 52-ft. class two years ago, has not in any way injured the 52-footers, of which there will be stronger fleets in commission this season than at any time during the past five years.

A suggestion has been made that if handicap racing is to be encouraged, it should be in a more classified form, and that boats should sail throughout the season on a recognised allowance, instead of, as at present, being handicapped specially for each contest. The adoption of some such classification could hardly fail to improve the tone of this branch of racing. Then, again, such a scheme is still open to the objection that it would unduly foster the handicap classes, perhaps to the further detriment of the racer classes.

It is of interest to note that this method is already in force in Germany. There are occasional handicaps in German waters; for instance, the race from Eckernforde to Kiel—last year for King Edward's Cup—is usually a handicap. But the German method is to divide their fleets into racers and cruisers, and in whichever class a vessel happens to be placed, she sails on her rating allowances.

CORINTHIAN.



Beken, Cowes.

MAYMON

Champion of the 52-ft. class, 1904. Built at Fairlie, from W. Fife's design, for Mr. S. Butler. She was sailed last year by Charles Bevis, a well-known South Coast skipper. This year she will be in charge of A. Hogarth, who sailed Shamrock I. in the 1899 Cup races.

MEDITERRANEAN INTERNATIONAL REGATTAS.

| | |
|---|---|
| April 8 .. .. .. .. .. .. | Cannes. |
| April 9 to 13 .. .. .. .. .. | Monaco. |
| April 14 to 18 .. .. .. .. | Mentone. |
| April 20 to 30 .. .. .. .. | San Remo. |

Digitized by Google

Dr. Johnson's Brewery.

THE ROMANCE OF A GREAT LONDON BUSINESS.

MALT and hops have played an important part in the annals of Southwark ever since those far-off times when the Canterbury Pilgrims foregathered at the Tabard, and the dramatic glories of the Globe, the Rose, the Hope, and the Swan, and the halcyon days of William Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, and William Alleyne were as yet undreamed of. The Tabard, the Falcon, and the White Hart were in all probability famous long before the Bankside theatres arose one after another, and Southwark became the playground of the metropolis as well as the home of her most noted maltsters, brewers, and hop merchants. When Anthony Van den Wyngerde limned his panoramic view-map of London in 1543, "Southwerke" was little better than a rural village, but in the productions of Agas (1575), Visscher (1616), and Cornelius Danckers (1647), the Globe Theatre and the "Beare Bayting" Ring are almost as conspicuous objects in the landscape as the tower of St. Mary Overy and the architectural splendour of Winchester House. Bankside had become a densely-populated district, and John Stowe names several eminent brewers amongst its inhabitants. The Globe is said to have disappeared before 1666, but in the contemporary view of the Great Fire, now reproduced, its flag is still flying, just as Visscher depicted it in the year that Shakespeare died.

"The nappy strong ale of Southwirke Keeps many a gossip from the Kirke"

is an adage which dates from the epoch when Chaucer's miller "dronken was all pale." The poet himself had evidently a weakness for "the ale of Southwark," of which he often speaks. Doubtless in due course it found favour in the eyes of the light-hearted Bankside player-folk. In all human possibility it was not entirely disdained by Hogarth when he made his sketch of Southwark Fair, or by Oliver Goldsmith when he practised medicine close to the side of the vanished Globe. For two centuries it found ready consumers within "the precints" of the King's Bench and the Marshalsea, but history has omitted to record any partiality for Southwark ale on the part of Richard Baxter and John Bunyan when they held forth in Zoar Street. The Episcopal palaces of Winchester and Rochester have disappeared, although a Bishop of Rochester has within the last few weeks become the first Bishop of Southwark; gone, too, are the four famous theatres, the three great inns, the two debtors' prisons, the bear gardens, the bull-ring, the Hogarthian Fair, and a dozen other memorials of ancient Southwark; but the fame of Southwark ale has survived them all, and Barclay and Perkins's "entire" is as much appreciated at the beginning of the twentieth as it was at the end of the eighteenth century, when the genteel Boswell recorded the fact that "Foreigners are not a little amazed, when they hear of brewers, distillers, and men of similar departments of trade, held forth as persons of considerable importance." Whatever Boswell's foreign friends might think on the subject was evidently matter of complete indifference to the honest payers of "scot and lot" in Southwark, who persistently returned an "eminent" brewer to Westminster, and on one occasion at least were encouraged to do so by an harangue from the great Dr. Johnson in favour of his friend and host Henry Thrale, winner on several occasions of the seat formerly occupied by his father Ralph Thrale, who some time in the reign of George II. had purchased from Mr. Edmund Halsey (whose daughter had married the Lord Cobham of that generation) the Anchor brewhouse, and the business originally founded by the Childs more than a century before, and ever since 1782 known by the familiar names of its present possessors.

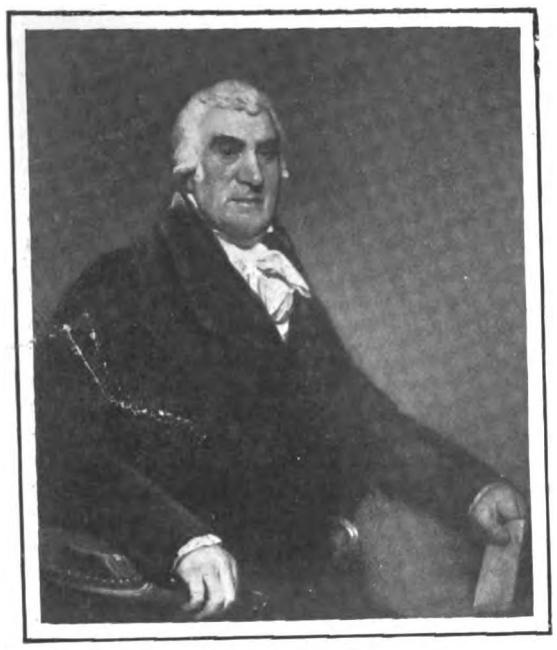
THE LICENCE TO BREW

Granted to the predecessors of the Thrales in the early part of the reign of Charles I.

It was with Henry Thrale that what may be described as the romantic period of the eventful history of the Anchor Brewery may be said to have commenced. Thrale married Hester Lynch Salusbury, the daughter of a Welsh squire, condescendingly described by Boswell as "short, plump, and brisk, of lively habits, improved by education." For a time they inhabited a house adjoining the brewhouse, but subsequently they nearly entirely abandoned it in favour of "Streatham Villa," where they constantly entertained Samuel Johnson, Joshua Reynolds, and all the great literati of the day, down to a certain memorable Saturday at the beginning of April, 1781, when Johnson (who had also been their constant guest at Southwark) dined with his old friend for the last time, "Mr. Perkins, who had the superintendence of Mr. Thrale's brewery, with a salary of £500 a year," being of the company. Only four days later Johnson sent the following brief note in reply to a "call" from the Literary Club: "Mr. Johnson knows that Sir Joshua Reynolds and the other gentlemen will excuse his incompliance with the call, when they are told that Mr. Thrale died this morning." Johnson was by his bedside to the last, and accepted the position of executor under the will, by which, to the surprise of everybody, he only benefited to the extent of £200. Boswell fathers on Lord Lucan the story that Johnson was present at the sale as one of the executors, and that when it was going on he appeared bustling about, with an ink-horn and a pen in his button-hole, like an exciseman, and on being asked what he considered the value of the property which was to be disposed of, answered, "Sir, we are not here to sell a parcel of boilers and vats, but the potentiality of growing rich beyond the dreams of avarice."

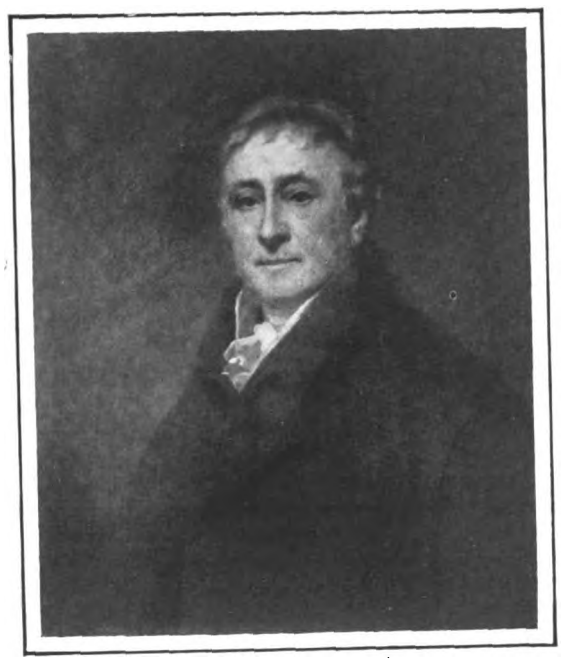
The brewery was bought by Mr. David Barclay, jun., then the head of the banking firm of Barclay and Co., for the sum of £135,000. That gentleman placed at the head of the newly-acquired business his nephew from America, Mr. Robert Barclay, who afterwards settled at Bury Hill, and Mr. John Perkins, who had been for some years the mainstay of Thrale's establishment. From this happily-planned combination originated, 124 years ago, the firm of Barclay and Perkins. The witty and well-dowered Mrs. Thrale was for a brief period the talk of the town. The portrait now reproduced shows her as she was in the days of the romance, not as she appeared in the days of her second widowhood, when a "confirmed Bath cat." Many expected she would marry the learned executor, who never ceased to take an affectionate interest in her welfare and entertain feelings of deep respect for John Perkins, who had now removed from his house at Bush Lane into the old home of the Thrales, bordering Park Street, Southwark. Not a stone of it remains to-day, but a plan of 1774, which still hangs in the waiting-room of the modern building, enables you very easily to conjure up a vision of it, and Johnson's favourite chair as well as some other articles of furniture have been preserved. There was a "parlour" on either side of the central hall, and at one extremity an octagonal "accompting house." It was here that honest John Perkins hung up a fine proof of the mezzotint of Johnson by Doughty, after Reynolds (like that now reproduced from the collection of Mr. George Rimell). Boswell relates that, when Mrs. Thrale asked somewhat flippantly, "Why do you put him up in the counting-house?" he answered, "Because, Madame, I wish to have one wise man there." "Sir," said Johnson, who was present, "I thank you. It is a very handsome compliment, and I believe you speak sincerely." His regard for John Perkins only

Digitized by Google



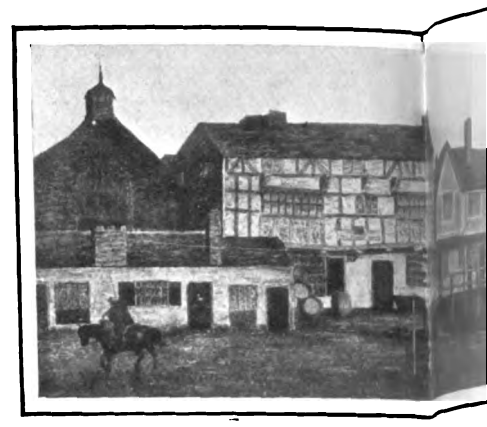
JOHN PERKINS

Having served for some years as the most active assistant of Henry Thrale, he became one of the joint purchasers of the brewery from his executors in 1781.



ROBERT BARCLAY

A great-grandson of the "Apologist for the Quakers," and the purchaser of the Anchor Brewery in conjunction with John Perkins in 1781.



A CORNER OF OLD SOUTHWARK EA

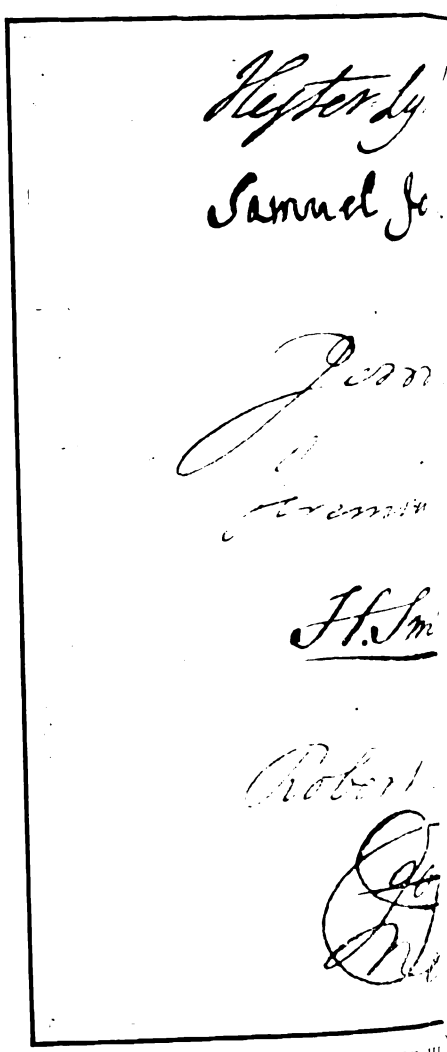
This was near th

THE HAYNAU INCIDENT A

From a contem

A VIEW OF SOUTHWARK IN 1575.

The site of the Anchor Brewery is a little to the left of the Globe Theatre.

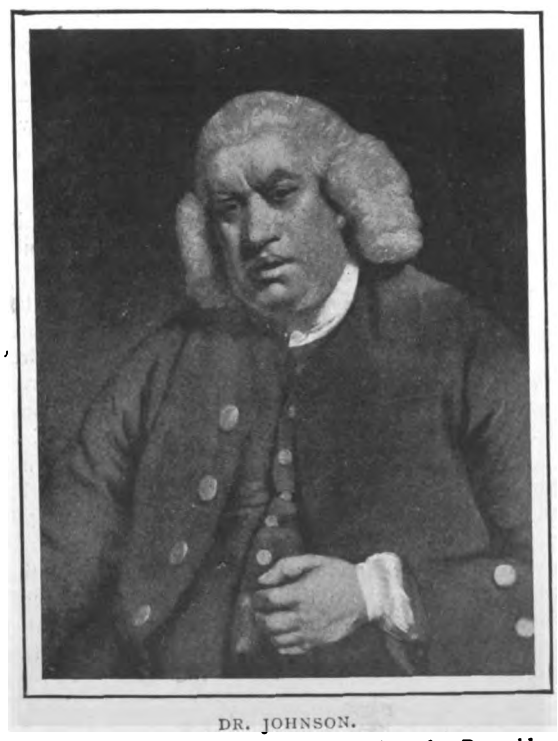


THE SIGNATURES TO THE H

By which document the brewery was s

RALPH THRALE

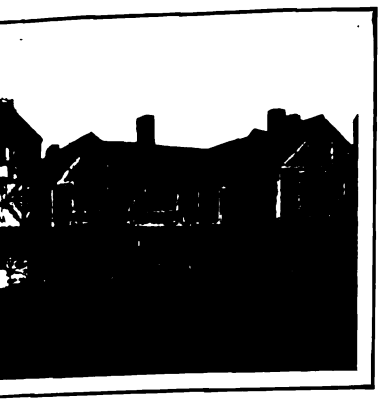
Member for Southwark, and owner of the Anchor Brewery in the middle of the eighteenth century. From a picture by Sir Godfrey Kneller.



DR. JOHNSON.

From a photograph of Doughty's mezzotint, after Reynolds, like that hung by Mr. John Perkins in the "accompting house" at Southwark.

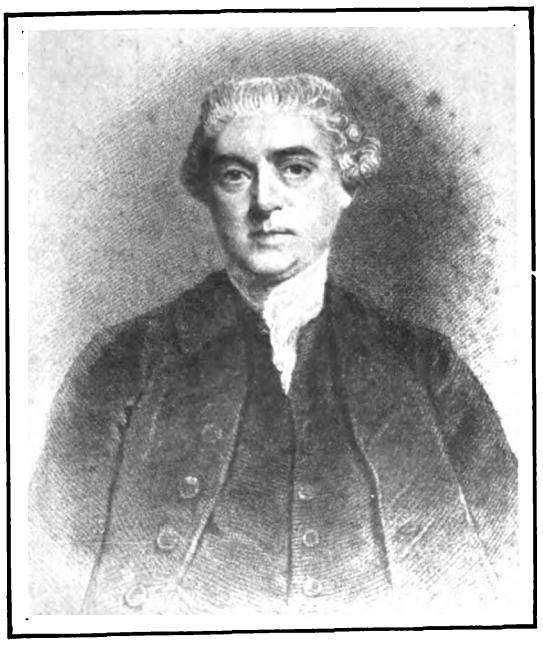
Digitized by Google



LY IN THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY.
site of the brewery.

T THE ANCHOR BREWERY.
porary woodcut.

TORIC DEED OF SALE IN 1781
the ancestors of its present administrators.



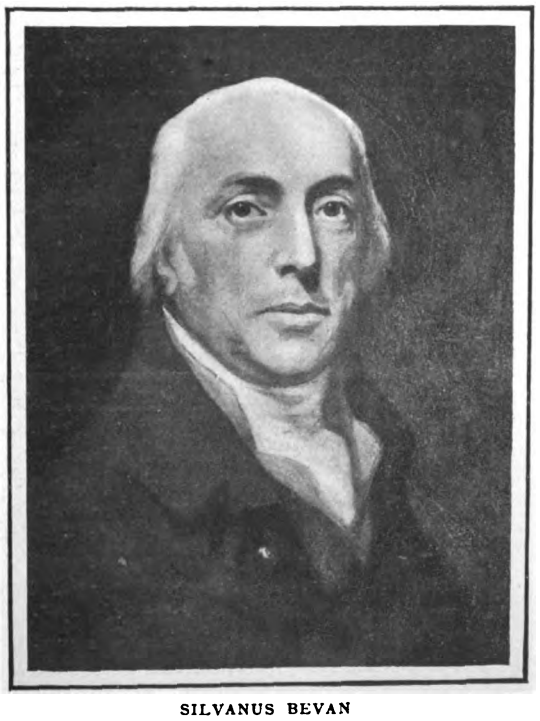
MR. HENRY THRALE

Member for Southwark, friend and host of Dr. Johnson, at whose death the brewery was sold to Messrs. Barclay and Perkins.

MRS. THRALE

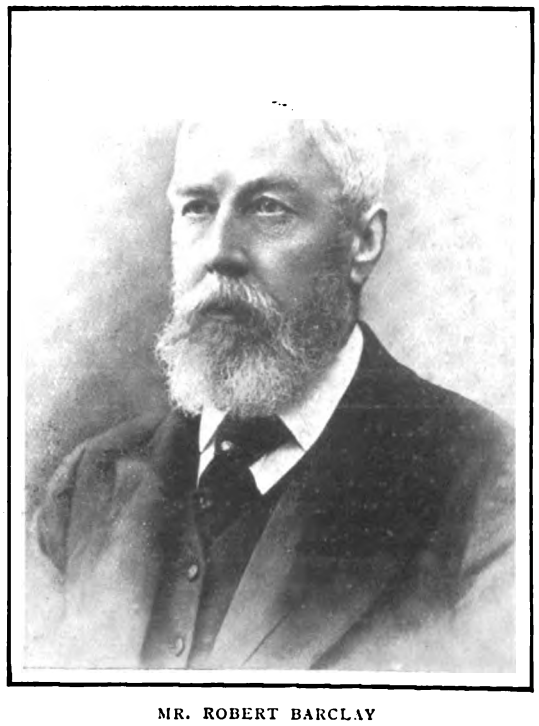
Afterwards Mrs. Piozzi, the famous wit and letter-writer. From an engraving after the portrait by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

A VIEW OF THE GREAT FIRE AS SEEN FROM SOUTHWARK
Showing the Globe Theatre still standing.



SILVANUS BEVAN

Joined 1782, retired 1801. Mr. Bevan joined Messrs. Barclay and Perkins in the year succeeding their purchase from the executors of the Thrales.



MR. ROBERT BARCLAY

Present chairman of the firm of Messrs. Barclay and Perkins, Limited, and a descendant of the Barclays associated in the original purchase of the Anchor Brewery.

Digitized by Google

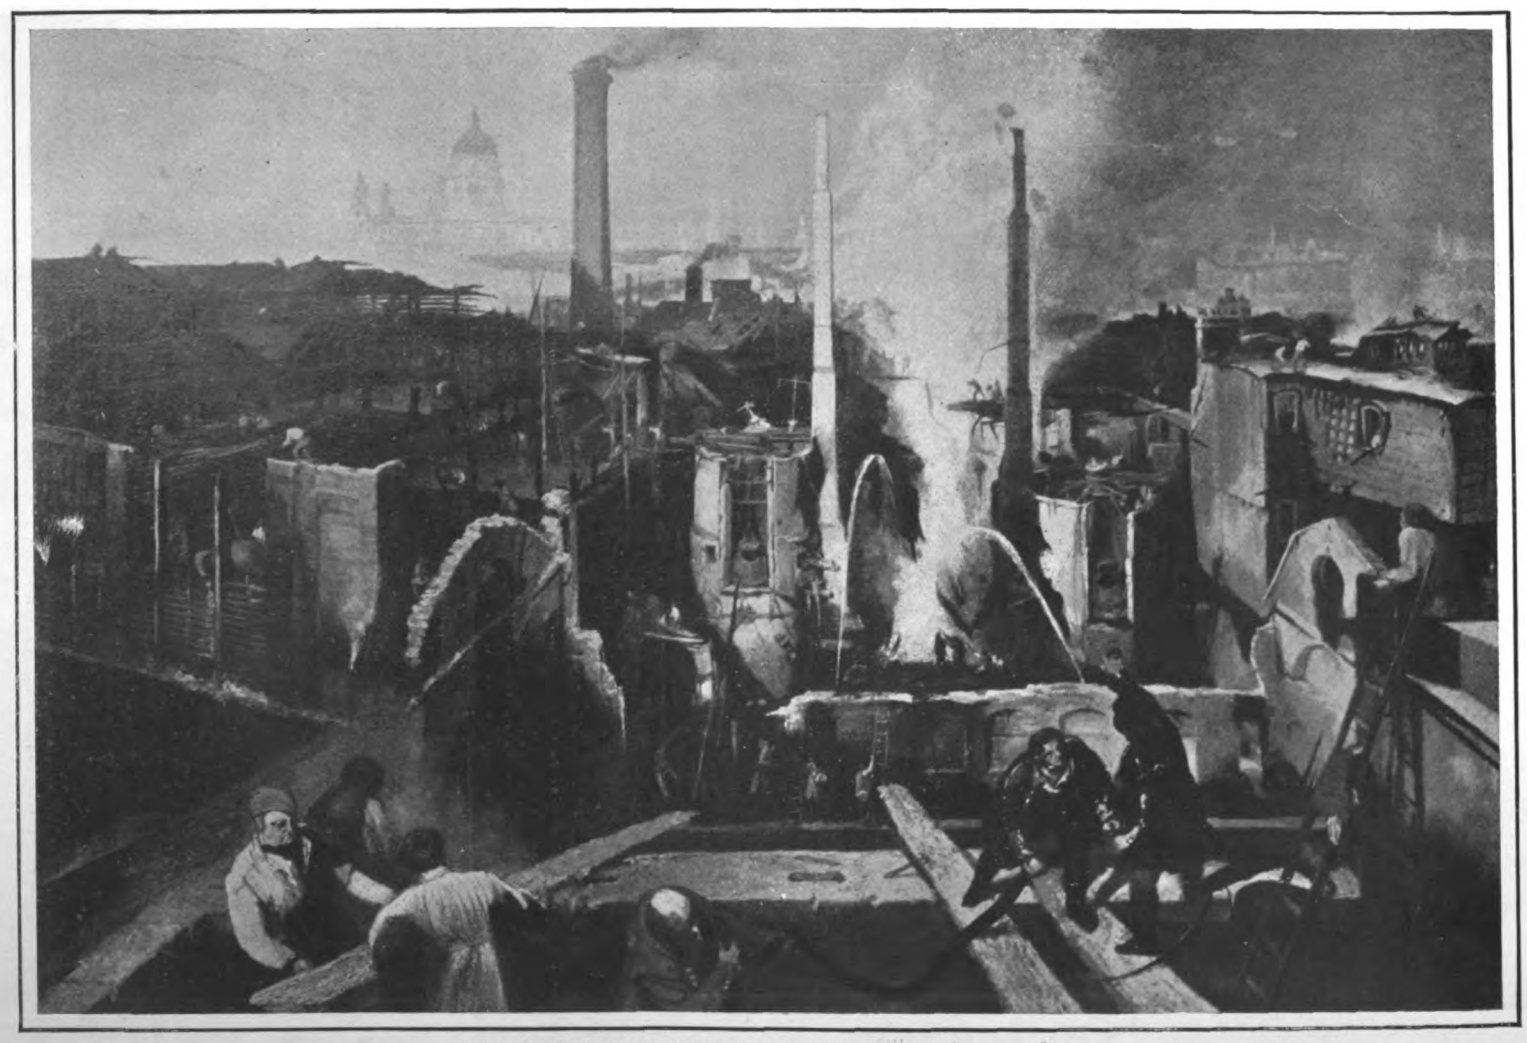
JOHN LEECH'S CARTOON
Of a Barclay and Perkins's drayman, after the Haynau incident. "Mr. Punch" sided frankly with the draymen in their assault on the Marshal.

DR. JOHNSON'S CHAIR
Now at Messrs. Barclay and Perkins's brewery, Southwark, where it is very carefully preserved by its present possessors.

MR. HERRING
Who succeeded his father sixty years ago as chief sign-painter to the firm. He sang in the choir at the Coronations of 1838 and 1902.

ended with his life. On October 4, 1784, he writes thus from Litchfield to John Perkins at the Anchor: "I cannot but flatter myself that your kindness for me will make you glad to know where I am and in what state. . . . Please make my compliments to Mrs. Perkins and to Mr. and Mrs. Barclay." Nine weeks later he died. If this great business has its romance, it can also boast of its comedies. Henry Thrale was still alive when the Gordon rioters laid siege to the brewery in June, 1780. It is recorded that "the mob was pacified at the first invasion with about £50 in meat and drink, while at the second they were driven away by the soldiers."

"I know what Barclay and Perkins mean, I hope," writes the late Mr. George Augustus Sala in "Gaslight and Daylight." "They mean BEER—beer the brown, the foaming, the wholesome, and refreshing. . . . That oblong board, all blue and gold, has no mystery for me. Plainly it says Beer." He goes on to explain why the above-named patronymics are possibly better known than any in the United Kingdom; but curiously enough the precise whereabouts of the Anchor are, as a rule, a mystery to the averageWest End cabman, who is, of course, perfectly familiar with the names, and keenly appreciates "the brown, the foaming, the wholesome," but knows nothing of Gwilt's plans or Howard's map, any more than he does of Johnson, Boswell, or Mrs. Thrale. If on leaving Blackfriars Bridge you turn sharply off to the left, instead of passing through Southwark Street, you find yourself in a maze of narrow lanes, where such inscriptions as Bear Garden or Rose Alley remind you of Southwark's eventful past. At last, after many enquiries, Park Street is reached, and the general aspect of the premises differs little from what it was in 1823 (nine years before the fire which blotted out many an ancient landmark), when the Wolstenholmes devised the large aquatint described as "a correct view of the Anchor Brewery belonging to

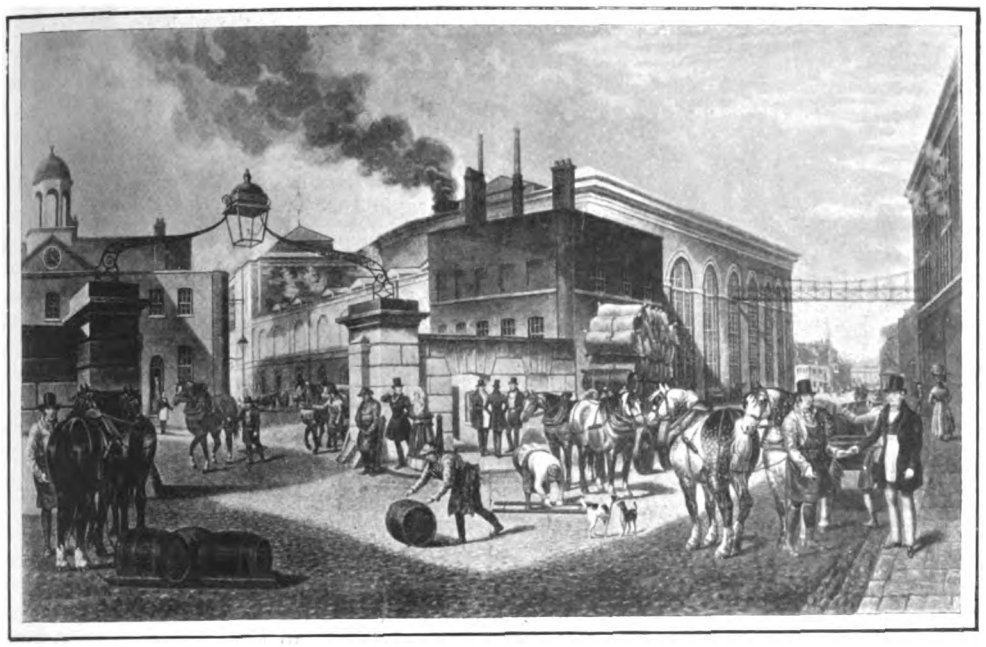


THE GREAT FIRE AT BARCLAY AND PERKINS'S IN 1832.
From a contemporary print in the possession of the firm.

Digitized by Google

Messrs. Barclay and Perkins." The scene is one of phenomenal activity. Horses of massive build are harnessed to drays and waggons. The very atmosphere is such as would have delighted the soul of "G. A. S."

In the panelled luncheon-room beyond are portraits of the founders of the present firm, and the various directors who have succeeded them down to the present day. Over the mantel-piece is a trophy of the arms



MESSRS. BARCLAY AND PERKINS'S BREWERY AS IT WAS IN 1829.

After inspecting the vats and boilers, upon the possibilities of which Johnson lavished his eloquence, you come to the painting-room, where Charles Herring is hard at work on one of the creations in chocolate, black, and gold, which Mr. Sala erroneously describes as blue and purple. He was doing exactly the same in 1850, when the Haynau comedy occurred, for he has been an institution at the Anchor for three score years and four. He is the nephew of J. F. Herring, the renowned animal painter, and his father was in command of the studio in Park Street before him. He was a Westminster School boy seventy years ago, and sang both at the coronations of Queen Victoria and King Edward VII. He took part in Wellington's funeral, and half-a-dozen other public solemnities.

The descendants and representatives of the Barclays and the Perkinses of 1781 are fully alive to the charm of the historical traditions and associations which must ever cling to "Dr. Johnson's brewery." In the waiting-room, Mr. Charles Perkins (the lineal descendant of Johnson's "respected friend") shows you the original plans of the Thrale Brewery, together with a case in which are preserved the relics constantly coming to light, including Roman drinking-cups, as well as the "black jacks" and portly "bellarmines" in vogue when Shakespeare must have trod the very soil upon which you stand, and the cups and flagons of Lambeth pottery which Johnson and Mrs. Thrale may possibly have used. Beside them are placed an entire set of Elizabethan bowls (only just discovered) with which the "Swan of Avon," or Alleyse, or Ben Jonson, may very well have played with in the intervals of business. Here you see also John Leech's famous cartoon of the typical Haynau-flogging draymen of 1850, and the Punch caricatures and other illustrations relating to the same event. The papers of the day ranged themselves frankly on the side of the aggressors. Suspend them? Perish the thought. "Mr. Punch" revelled in the whole business as a prodigious joke—"Here's to your speedy amendment, Baron Haynau, and lest new acquaintance should be forgot, perhaps you will pledge us in Barclay, Perkins and Co.'s Entire."

and accoutrements worn by the Anchor Company of the Southwark Volunteers in the stirring times of 1797 and 1803. It is in the board room, however, that some of the most valued relics of the past are carefully preserved. Here are the Johnson and Thrale chairs; the fine portrait of Ralph Thrale, M.P. for Southwark, attired in blue velvet, by Hudsons; pictures of typical dray-horses by the Herrings, and "licences to brew" granted to the first owners of the Anchor under the great seal of Charles I. Both Mr. Granville Bevan and Mr. Hubert F. Barclay are, like Mr. Charles Perkins, enthusiasts as to the annals of the Anchor. From a strong room is brought out the original deed of sale of 1781, from which the signatures of the principal parties to it are now reproduced. Silvanus Bevan, David Barclay, and Richard Gurney all came into the business at the end of the first quarter. Robert Barclay, who figures in the deed as purchaser along with John Perkins, was the great-grandson of Robert Barclay of Urie, the "Apologist for the Quakers." His father, Alexander Barclay, had gone to America with William Penn. The Anchor Brewery has always ranked as one of the sights of London. Our present King, Napoleon III., Ibrahim Pasha, Garibaldi, Bismarck, and Jenny Lind have all signed the visitors'-book in turn. One signature only has been blotted out. It is that of Marshal Haynau. Not a scrap of paper seems to have been lost since 1781. There is the "hop-book" with entries of the purchases of innumerable "pocketts" from the great hop dealers of the time, Bolland, Golding, Thackrah, Dawson, and Peter Broadley, chairman of the Surrey Magistrates and a warden of St. Saviour's, who delivered in his official capacity a solemn attestation of good behaviour to Richardson the showman. But the archives of the Anchor go back further still, to the reign of Queen Anne, when Thomas Halsey, having succeeded the Childs, was at the helm. He must have been a great gentleman in the days he lived in, for he bought plate to the amount of £145 18s., indulged in frequent purchases of Florence wine, and gave £9 for long wigs and £5 for short ones. One will not probably look in vain much longer in Park Street for one of the Doughty mezzotints of Johnson, the presiding genius of the past, placed in the "accompting house" with pious care and profound veneration by John Perkins. While respecting the ancient landmarks of the Anchor, the present managers are keenly alive to the exigencies of the present, As to the statistics of the business and its gradual development, they are to be found in Hadyn's "Book of Dates." Dr. Johnson spoke of "vast possibilities" in 1781. In 1905 you learn that these "possibilities" have been satisfactorily realised by the representatives and descendants of those to whom he handed over the interests of the "gay widow," who preferred the companionship of the sprightly Italian maestro to the ponderous attentions of the venerable sage of Bolt Court.

THE BREWERY AS IT IS TO-DAY.

Come what may, the romance of Johnson, the Thrales, and the brilliant coterie of Streatham Villa must always be associated with the eventful history of one of London's most prosperous enterprises. A. M. B.

Digitized by Google

The Ladies' Clubs of London.

I.—THE LADIES' AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

IT is strange how readily one grows accustomed to innovations. Fifty years ago the spectacle of a bevy of ladies assembled in a club-room sipping their coffee and scanning the newspapers like mere men—and this in the heart of Clubland, and cheek by jowl to the institutions sacred to the "superior" sex—would have been—well, Utopian, to say the least of it. The prejudices of the early Victorian period are fast disappearing, however. Club life has ceased to be a masculine monopoly, and nowadays nearly every up-to-date woman can claim membership of one or other of the numerous clubs devoted to her sex.

The Ladies' Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland owes its inception to Lady Cecil Scott-Montagu, and its history since April, 1903, when the idea originated, until the present day, if brief, is decidedly interesting.

It began with Lady Scott-Montagu personally writing over 100 letters to her friends. Such a zealous display of enthusiasm and industry could not pass unrewarded, and the idea speedily caught on. The first general meeting of the members took place at Lady Beatrice Rawson's house in Park Street. This was really only a preliminary gathering of those interested to consider the advisability of forming such a club. In May and June of that year two more meetings were held to discuss ways and means. The financial position was not such as to justify the committee in acquiring a club-house, and it was, therefore, decided to rent a room at the Hans Crescent Hotel for six months, and at the end of that period to obtain larger premises should the situation warrant such a course.

Mrs. Gerard Leigh, one of the vice-presidents of the club, offered to act as hon. secretary during the six months of probation, and much of the success of the club is undoubtedly due to her valuable efforts.

In February, 1904, the club was made into a limited liability company, and the directors appointed Miss d'Esterre Hughes secretary to the company and to the club. During the six months that the club headquarters were at Hans Crescent Hotel the membership increased from 130 to 219.

biograph.

THE DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND
President of the Ladies' Automobile Club.

In April, 1904, the club moved into its present quarters at Claridge's, and the membership is now 325, and is rapidly increasing. The progress and importance of the movement was further marked by the appointment of the Duchess of Sutherland as president, and in May the club proudly held their first meet in Waterloo Place, an historic event duly illustrated in THE KING. It will be remembered that the cars, numbering sixty-five, proceeded viâ Pall Mall, the Mall, Buckingham Palace—where the King and Queen watched them pass—to Hyde Park and Ranelagh. The Duchess of Sutherland led the procession, driving her own car.

Emboldened by the success of the scheme, several other runs were planned and carried out, these including a delightful outing to Coombe Farm, Addington, Surrey, the residence of Mrs. Herbert Lloyd. Shortly after this event Mrs. Gerard Leigh organised a trip to Homburg. This was the first official club run of the L.A.C. The party started for the Hague on June 13, and after a three days' journey, by Utrecht, Nijmegen, Bonn, and Frankfort to Homburg, arrived on the evening of the 15th. The club was favoured with lovely weather throughout, and the tour was entirely successful, and hugely enjoyed by all those who took part in it. It will be gathered from these notes that the members of the L.A.C. are not of the fireside stay-at-home type, but keen practical motorists.

During the winter season which has just concluded, a series of lectures, accompanied by practical demonstrations of motor mechanism, were arranged and well attended by the members. The lecturers included Lieutenant Wyndham, on "Good and Bad Points of Motoring," Mr. R. Sedgwick Currie, who delivered a course of six lectures on "The Internal-combustion Engine as Applied to Self-propelled Vehicles," and Captain Deasy, on "Motor Mountaineering in the Alps."

Copyright.

LADY SCOTT-MONTAGU.

Thomson.

LADY BEATRICE RAWSON.

Lafayette.

LADY EDWARD CHURCHILL.

Three of the original members and Vice-presidents of the Ladies' Automobile Club.

Digitized by Google

The club also paid an official visit to the Motor Show at Olympia on the invitation of the promoters, and reciprocated by inviting their hosts to tea at the show.

The social side of the L.A.C. is by no means neglected. The club is quite famous for its biograph teas, and as all the catering is done by Claridge's, one can understand why an appreciative male visitor expressed the characteristically male opinion that it was the only ladies' club he cared to visit.

The circumstance of the club having its headquarters at an hotel was looked upon at first in the light of an experiment, but everything has justified the selection, and the experiment has proved an unqualified success. Situated in a convenient neighbourhood, the club is at once isolated from the hotel proper, and yet so arranged as to afford all the facilities which a luxurious modern hotel can offer.

The club occupies a beautiful suite of rooms. The White Room, a large sitting-room, which is open to members and friends, is a veritable lotus-land. Luxurious couches and easy chairs, and an ocean of soft billowy cushions. Serviceable little green-stained writing-tables with their complement of writing materials, and on each a tiny green vase of fresh-cut flowers. The Red Room is a small sitting-room reserved for the use of members. The scheme of colouring here is delightful. Upholstered in pink water-silk, the walls draped in couleur de rose, and on the floor a splash of bright blue, making a most harmonious blending of colour. The bedrooms are light and roomy, and furnished in the same delicate taste. Dinner is taken in the salle à manger of the hotel, a section being reserved for the club. A special tariff is offered to members and their friends, by which they can dine or book rooms, in the event of the club accommodation running short, at 25 per cent. off the usual prices.

Much of the active management of the club falls on Miss d'Esterre Hughes. She is an indefatigable worker, but laughingly disclaims all hardship in the work of management.

"It is all system," she says, "and we have no fussy rules to irritate the members." This is not the least of the lessons which some of the men's clubs might copy with advantage. Another is imparting some brightness and colour to club-rooms. Many of the West End clubs are dull and sombre to a degree.

Miss Hughes's efforts are ably supported by a hard-working committee, who sit in judgment upon everything connected with the club's welfare.

The vice-presidents of the club are Lady Cecil Scott-Montagu, Lady Beatrice Rawson, Lady Edward Spencer Churchill, and Mrs. Gerard Leigh, and the committee include the names of all the foremost lady motorists in England, amongst them being the Duchess of Beaufort, the Duchess of Marlborough, Consuelo Duchess of Manchester, the Marchioness of Winchester, the Countess of Dudley, and the Viscountess Castlereagh.

The club is essentially a member's club and a social centre, and members have the advantage of being able to get practical advice on matters pertaining to motor-vehicles. In addition to this the club is affiliated to the Automobile Club and to the Motor Union, and members participate in most of the advantages and privileges of both these bodies. This includes legal defence and the benefits of the hotels and repairers appointed by the club, and, what is more important, information and assistance in passing cars through the Custom Houses of foreign countries without the usual formalities.

The club intends holding a gymkhana at Ranelagh in July.

Bassano.

MRS. GERARD LEIGH
A Vice-president of the Ladies' Automobile Club.

Hodsoll.

THE "RED ROOM"
At the Ladies' Automobile Club, Claridge's Hotel.

Hodsoll.

THE "WHITE ROOM"
At the Ladies' Automobile Club, Claridge's Hotel.

Digitized by Google

Hamlets of Three Centuries.

FAMOUS IMPERSONATORS OF THE PRINCE OF DENMARK, FROM RICHARD BURBAGE TO HARRY IRVING. 1603-1905.

"HAMLET is the crowning point of an actor's career," is one of those dicta which, in other words if not these, can be found in the writings of every great Shakespearian critic; and from the day on which Richard Burbage first spoke the famous soliloquies, first handled Yorick's skull, and first leapt into the grave, "suiting the person, which he seemed to have, of a mad lover with so true an eye, that there I would have sworn he meant to die," as a contemporary elegist has it, Hamlet has been the goal and aspiration of every actor of any pretensions to greatness. And now the son of one of the most famous Hamlets of the English Stage has come forward, prepared with a reading of the character for our consideration, and the appearance next week of Mr. Harry Brodribb Irving at the Adelphi is awaited with considerable interest.

Of Burbage's Hamlet we know but little. That it fully embodied Shakespeare's own conception of the character we may be sure, for the two men were fellow-artists, and Burbage was an actor with a genius for assimilating ideas. He was the original exponent of no less than twelve Shakespearian characters, and with Thomas Pope, the successor to Tarleton, who died in 1588, was the leading actor at the Globe and the Blackfriars. This latter was one of the unlicensed theatres, of which it was complained some twelve years later that "there is so great a multitude of coaches, whereof many are hackney coaches bringing people of all sorts, that sometimes all the streets cannot contain them."

Two other actors have been frequently set down as the original impersonators of Hamlet —John Lowin and Joseph Taylor. The former did appear in some Shakespearian characters, but there is nothing to connect him with Hamlet, and Taylor was certainly not the leading tragedian of the Blackfriars company until after the death of Burbage in 1618-19; and unless it were as understudy, he could not have played Hamlet during that actor's life. But since it is distinctly stated that he was "instructed by the Author, Mr. Shakespeare," it is quite conceivable that he may have appeared on occasions in place of Burbage.

Copyright.

MME. SARA BERNHARDT.

One of the very few women who have successfully appeared as Hamlet. Her finest scene is generally accepted to have been that where Hamlet watches the King, during the progress of the play scene.

It was from Taylor that Betterton obtained his instruction in the part, and of his playing in 1662 we have an admirable description by Colley Cibber. Pepys, too, has recorded in his Diary, under two separate dates, that he had been to see "Hamlet," "giving us fresh reason never to think enough of Betterton." "The best part, I believe, that ever man acted," he adds.

Between the decline of Betterton and the rise of Garrick, there was no great Hamlet; but with Roscius as the Prince of Denmark, and Peg Woffington as Ophelia, the tragedy took on a new lease of life in 1742. That his Hamlet was very grand is obvious from the many fervent accounts we have of his appearances in the character, but it does not stand out conspicuously among his many fine impersonations. At the time he and Peg were appearing together in the play, they, with Macklin, were keeping house together at No. 6, Bow Street, but this arrangement did not endure. Peggy, in the words of a contemporary wit, made the tea too strong; she was extravagant, and Garrick, remembering his childhood's days in Lichfield, when every little counted in the needy officer's family, never could endure wastefulness. Not that he was, as Foote and so many others said of him, parsimonious or miserly. On one occasion he was asked to give two guineas to a fund for a poor widow, but said he could not. "Well, then, what you please," said the solicitant, and he gave £30. And even Foote did not scruple to avail himself of the purse of the man he so continually reviled in print.

Some years before the death of Garrick, a new Hamlet appeared, in John Henderson, who played the part in Bath. In 1777 he was engaged by Colman for a round of Shakespearian parts at the Haymarket, and in thirty nights put £4,500 into the pockets of the management. His Hamlet was scholarly, but he had the memory of Garrick to contend against, and it is by his Falstaff that he is best remembered.

John Philip Kemble, the eldest, and most famous Hamlet of the three brothers, made his first appearance in the character at Drury Lane on September 30, 1783. Miss Field was the Ophelia, and the performance aroused fiercer and more contradictory criticism, possibly, than any other production of the play. But, in the words of Hazlitt, he was a sweet, graceful, and gentlemanly Hamlet, and withal a sensible lonely man. It may be noted, also, that he played Hamlet dressed in a modern Court dress of rich black velvet, with a star on the breast, a garter and pendant riband of an Order, deep ruffles, a mourning sword and buckles, and with the hair in powder. His brother Stephen, on the other hand, dressed himself in an old black coat, breeches and vest, with shoes and buckles, and a large flowing auburn wig.

Charles Mayne Young was another famous Hamlet, who first appeared in the part in 1807, and made an instantaneous success. During MASTER BURKE.

Born in Dublin in 1818, Joseph Burke made his first appearance at the age of six. He had considerable dramatic instinct, and played with ease, vivacity, and correctness a number of parts, among them Hamlet, Young Norval, and the Irish Tutor.

JOHN HENDERSON.

Born 1747 died 1785. He made his first appearance as Hamlet at Bath in 1772, and was an immediate success. He subsequently came to London, and played that and other parts at the Haymarket Theatre under Colman's management.

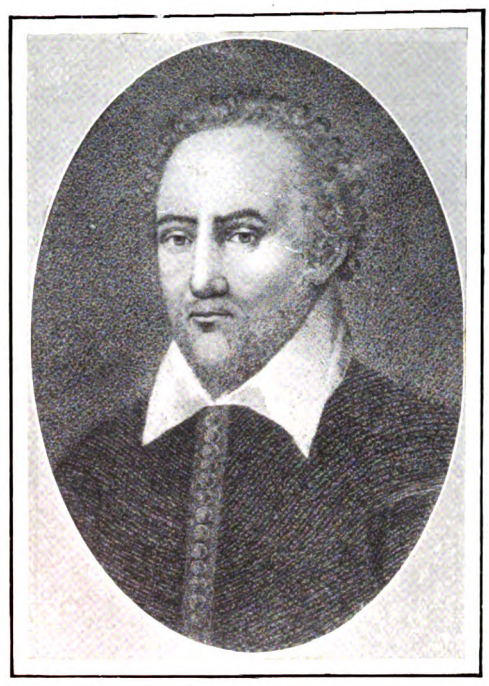
Digitized by Google

THOMAS BETTERTON

Born 1635, died 1710. He was the son of Charles I.'s under-cook, and became early acquainted with Rhodes, the licensee of Drury Lane. He was coached in the part of Hamlet by Joseph Taylor, who in his turn had been taught by Shakespeare.

DAVID GARRICK

Born 1716, died 1779. Like Mr. Martin Harvey, Garrick first played Hamlet in Dublin, making his appearance in the part during his season there in 1742, with Peg Woffington as Ophelia. In London he repeated the performance with equal success.



RICHARD BURBAGE

Born about 1566, died 1618-19. The original Hamlet, and Shakespeare's fellow-worker at the Blackfriars Theatre. He was the original exponent of twelve Shakespearian tragic rôles, and Shakespeare left him 26s. 8d. to buy a memento of their partnership.

his twenty-five years' connection with the stage it remained one of his favourite parts.

Although Edmund Kean always considered Hamlet one of his best impersonations, it was not by any means fitted to rank with his Shylock, his Othello, or his Iago. The prominent motives of his Hamlet, in which he first appeared in March, 1814, were tenderness, affection, and earnestness. Hazlitt considered his Hamlet a magnificent performance, but it was too strong, too pointed; there was not enough of the dreamer, or the "weakness and melancholy" that really characterise Hamlet.

Between Edmund and Charles Kean there comes the Hamlet of Macready, a studied and careful performance, but marred again by monotony, harshness, and severity. Yet Macready himself said more than once, "Hamlet has brought me more money than any play in America."

Charles Kean's Hamlet was first seen in 1838, and was a careful, polished, and efficient performance, but it was probably more melodramatic than Shakespearian.

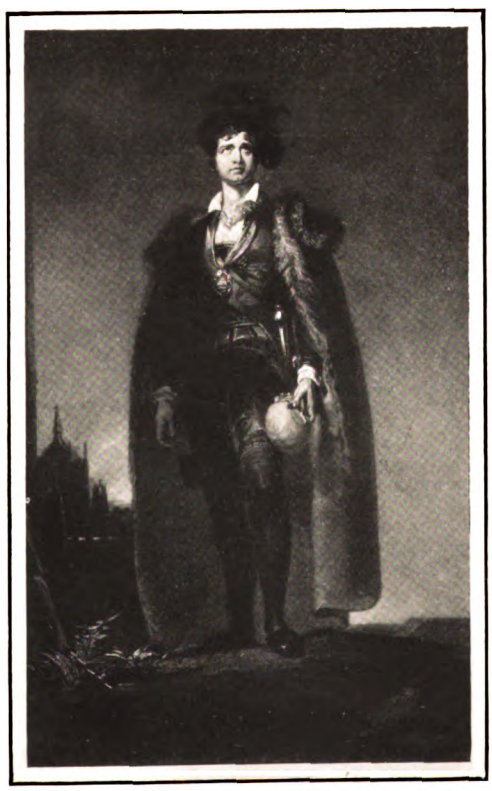
The great Hamlet of that period was, of course, Charles Albert Fechter, than whom, perhaps, no more natural and unaffected Hamlet has ever been seen. Original to a degree, marked by exquisite beauty of thought, high refinement, and excellent taste, was the performance of Hamlet by Fechter, and he triumphed over all difficulties of foreign tongue and weird mispronunciations.

Since Fechter there have been many Hamlets, good, bad, and indifferent, and it is not for this age to judge how far contemporary actors are qualified to rank with Burbage, Garrick, and the others. To give a new reading of Hamlet to-day seems well-nigh impossible, but it may be that a great man has arisen among us, who will revolutionise once more the accepted stage traditions of the greatest poetical character even Shakespeare ever conceived.

F. E. R.

CHARLES JOHN KEAN

Born 1811, died 1868. He first played Hamlet when twenty-seven years of age, but made no very great effect in the part. His scenic representation of the piece was magnificent, but the actor appears to have been too lachrymose and deliberate.



JOHN PHILIP KEMBLE

Born 1757, died 1823. His first appearance in London was in the part of Hamlet, at Drury Lane in 1783. Miss Field was the Ophelia, and his performance gave rise to an enormous amount of discussion, showing that a really original actor had appeared.

CHARLES ALBERT FECHTER

Born 1823, died 1879. He gave a perfectly consistent and natural performance of Hamlet, in which he first appeared in 1861. Being an actor of the French school, he naturally gave more polish to the less important scenes than the earlier English exponents of the part.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

LINCOLN HANDICAP AND GRAND NATIONAL.

THERE is a stir among the followers of racing. The opening of the Lincoln Meeting announces that the dark and dreary days of winter are past and over. From many parts of the world and from far and near the racing clan is gathering together. There will, alas! be gaps in the ranks; some old friends will be absent when the saddling bell rings out. They will not be forgotten. But the ranks will close up, and we shall, perhaps, make more of those who are left.

There are people who do not approve of racing, and who look upon it as the source of all evils. Everyone is entitled to his own opinion, and with the shady side of racing, if there be one, we have nothing to do; but it may perhaps be well to point out that the breed of thorough-bred horses in this country is an asset of national importance, and that without racing there would be absolutely no means of arriving at the survival of the fittest; for the horses which not only win races, but are capable of supporting the stress and strain of training, are clearly those which are possessed of the strongest constitutions and the soundest limbs. Beyond and completely removed from all questions of racing, the thorough-bred horse is of the greatest value. Shire and other breeds of heavy draught horses have their own sphere of importance, but for the very large class of horses employed in hunting, hacking, and for Military purposes, a strong infusion of the thorough-bred is almost a necessity.

As far as one can see, some twenty horses will face the starting barrier this year, and, as far as age is concerned, they include ten four year olds, five five year olds, two six year olds, one three year old, and two aged horses. The Irish-bred Hackler's Pride, who will doubtless be remembered as the brilliant winner of last year's Cambridgeshire, was looked upon by many good judges as the probable winner of the first important handicap of the season. But the pen has gone through her name, to the intense disappointment of a large number of backers. The air is full of rumours of trials, and Vedas, last year's Brocklesby winner, appears to have regained his temper and his speed. If such is the case, there is no need to look further for the winner; but the record of the race is against the three year olds, though such horses as Tomahawk, Sauce Box (the winner of the St. Leger), and Wolf's Crag are brilliant exceptions to the general rule. Among other candidates who are likely to run well are Andria, Csardas, and Grey Green. But the history of the race has been a disastrous one for backers ever since its inauguration, and the best advice that can be given to anyone who may be meditating a bet upon the race is—"Leave it alone."

Following close upon the heels of the Lincoln Handicap comes the Grand National Steeplechase, which has not its like in the world for testing the speed, endurance, and jumping powers of the very best chaser that ever looked through a bridle. So keen is the desire to win this race, that many horses are invariably sent to the post which have no conceivable chance of even getting safely round the course; a good many of them are, moreover, not a little in the way, and would be far better in their stables. But the sight, as some twenty of the best chasers in the world come swinging round the bend and stride on to the jumps, with a gleam of sunshine glinting on the silk jackets of the riders, is one to set the pulses beating, and to linger long in the memory of those who witness it.

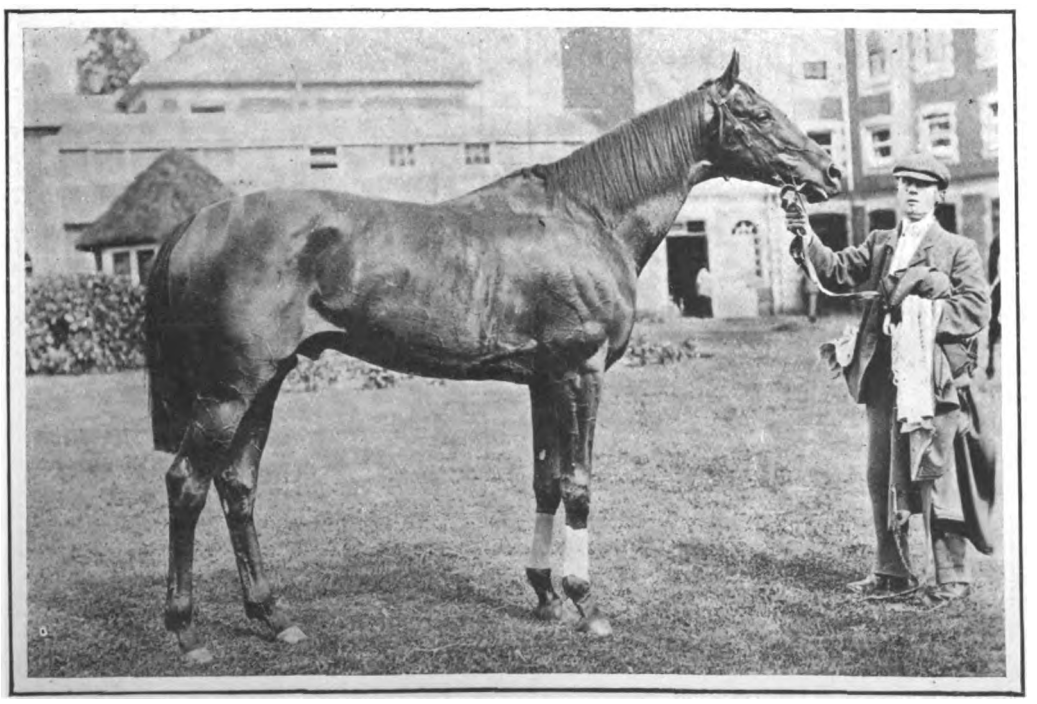
The world is getting very small, and it seems strange that last year the Grand National should have been won by the New Zealand-bred horse Moifaa, and that this year he and Seahorse II., another New Zealander, are both strongly fancied for the big race. The latter of the two has been seen fairly often on English race-courses, but it may, perhaps, have escaped notice that he is absolutely one of the very best-bred animals engaged in the Grand National. He was bred in 1895 by Major George, and is by Nelson (a grandson of King Tom) out of Moonga, by Goldsborough (sire of the dams of Trenton and Abercorn), her dam Kernel, by Angler, a son of Fisherman. In his own country, Seahorse II. showed very brilliant form, and there are many good judges who confidently anticipate that he will win this year's Grand National.

Space will not permit of taking into consideration the claims of all the probable starters; but as far as one can see, Kirkland, Aunt May, and Dearslayer are nearly sure to get safely over the big jump, and if they can beat Moifaa, any of the three may be returned the winner. It is a curious fact, by the way, that Moifaa is not in the Stud Book, but he is a magnificent fencer, and he won in a common canter last year. He will, on this occasion, carry the Royal colours, and if, as I confidently expect will be the case, he should win yet another Grand National for his Majesty, the victory will be most enthusiastically received by all classes of society, and most assuredly so by all readers of THE KING.

CAURIRE.

VEDAS: FLORIZEL II.—AGNOSTIC.

Bred by Lady Meux and leased to Mr. de Wend Fenton, in whose colours he won the Brocklesby and many other important races during the past year.



CSARDAS: LADAS—POLKA.

The winner of the Royal Hunt Cup in 1904, the property of Mr. H. Keswick.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

W. A. Rouch.

SEAHORSE II.: NELSON—MOONGA.

Bred in New Zealand by Major George, and imported to this country by Mr. Spencer Gollan.

W. A. Rouch.

MOIFAA: NELSON—DENBIGH.

The winner of last year's Grand National. Bred in New Zealand, and imported to this country by Mr. Spencer Gollan, and sold by him to his Majesty the King, whose property he now is.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE LONDON AND SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

DEVONSHIRE has always enjoyed a well-merited reputation for picturesque scenery and interesting associations; and if for no other reason than that of being connected so closely with the famous author Charles Kingsley, will ever remain a favourite haunt of the holiday-maker. Who has not read "Westward Ho!" without being seized with a longing desire to visit some of those very spots which Kingsley so graphically pictures to the reader?

A more enjoyable holiday could scarcely be conceived than a ramble round this corner of Devonshire. Ilfracombe, which can be reached in a little less than six hours from London, is the terminus of the South Western Company's line to North Devon; it forms by far the most convenient starting point for no end of interesting excursions, by rail, coach, and steam-boat. An alternative route is by the Great Western Railway, whose system extends as far as Barnstaple. From London, however, one can travel through by either route without change of carriage.

Of late years Ilfracombe has undergone many changes and improvements, especially in the direction of its hotel accommodation. Nevertheless the following description, which was written by Kingsley many years ago, still holds good even to-day: "Be sure if you are sea-sick, or heart-sick, or pocket-sick either, there is no pleasanter place of cure (to indulge in a puff of a species now well-nigh obsolete—the puff honest and true) than the same Ilfracombe, with quiet nature, and its quiet luxury, its rock fairyland, and its sea-walks, its downs and combes, its kind people, and, if possible, its still kinder climate, which combines the soft warmth of South Devon with the bracing freshness of the Welsh mountains."

The famous "combes of the Far West," referred to in "Westward Ho!" can be seen by strolling along the rocky coast, and "its kind people, and, if possible, still kinder climate," have undergone little, if any, change.

The town itself is most picturesquely situated, and well justifies the description of "rock fairyland." The houses are piled up in the form of terraces on the hillsides above the old fishing village, whence the most charming views of the Bristol Channel, and, on clear days, of the Welsh Coast twenty miles away, may be obtained. The finest views of all, however, are probably seen from the Tors, situated at the west end of the town. These hills, six or seven in number, rise to a height of about 600-ft. A series of steep winding paths lead to the summit, from which point magnificent views open in almost every direction. There are numerous other hills in the neighbourhood, notably the Capstone, a tremendous rock, around the base of which a fine promenade has been constructed. Adjoining the Capstone is a pretty little cove called Wildersmouth Beach, which is literally studded with rocks of all shapes and sizes. Near by is the sumptuous Ilfracombe Hotel, standing in five acres of lovely grounds.

The principal charm of Ilfracombe, however, lies in its convenience as an excursion centre. Lynton and Lynmouth, two of the most beautiful spots on the North Coast of Devon, are distant only about seventeen miles, and can be reached either by coach or by steamer. The journey is most delightful by which ever route is selected. The scenery, which includes Watersmeet, the pretty waterfalls at Glen Lyn, and the Valley of the Rocks, is beautiful beyond description. A favourite day's outing is to Combe Martin, which is about five and a-half miles from Ilfracombe. The road takes the traveller through some beautiful scenery typical of Devonshire. Although one may not care for visiting old churches, yet the one at Combe Martin should on no account be missed. Some portions of it are of very great age, the fine old tower being at least 600 years old, while the key has done service for the past 500 years. The oldest portion, however, is the carved screen, which is said to be 800 years old.

Frith.

LANTERN HILL AND HILLBOROUGH HILL, ILFRACOMBE.

The town is practically surrounded by hills, of which Lantern Hill is one of the most interesting, from the fact of its being crowned by a small lighthouse, originally used as a chapel some hundreds of years ago. Hillborough Hill, seen in the distance, stands 459-ft. From this point a splendid view of the town is obtained.

Morthoe and its famous Death Rock, spoken of in Kingsley's "Prose Idylls," is also well worth a visit. A little further on and Woolacombe is reached. Woolacombe is celebrated for its magnificent stretch of sands, nearly three miles in length, an unusual thing for the coast of Devon. Woolacombe is fast becoming a favourite seaside holiday resort, particularly among those with young families. A splendid hotel—the Woolacombe Bay Hotel—stands close to the sea, and is always well filled during the season. There are some first-rate golf links, which afford good sport, all the hazards being natural ones.

An excursion which everyone should endeavour to make is the steamer trip to Lundy Island, which lies about twenty-three miles off Ilfracombe. It can also be reached by steamer from Clovelly, the sea trip being shorter by some seven miles. The trip is one full of interest, and during the tourist season a steamer leaves Ilfracombe twice a week. Lundy is only three and a-half miles long, with an average breadth of half a mile. It is composed of granite, and is the private property of a clergyman.

A delightful coach ride can be taken from Ilfracombe to Barnstaple, the commercial capital of North Devon.

The South Western Company have two stations at Barnstaple, which is the junction for the branch line to Ilfracombe and the Bideford and Torrington branch. The terminus of the Barnstaple and Lynton narrow-guage line also adjoins the town station.

Barnstaple is a town of great historical interest. The markets held every Friday, and the great fair, which usually takes place towards the end of September, are among the principal attractions for visitors. Barnstaple is itself an excellent excursion centre, Bideford, among other spots, being within a comparatively short journey.

Frith.

LYNMOUTH FROM THE SEA.

Lynton and Lynmouth, which are connected by cog-wheel railway, are considered to be two of the most beautiful spots on the coast of North Devon. From Ilfracombe one can go either by coach, steam-boat, or railway. The journey is equally delightful by either means.

Digitized by Google

ILFRACOMBE AND LYNTON.

Frith.

LYNDALE MILL, LYNTON.

One of the old-time water-mills, which, with the wind-mills, are so fast disappearing throughout the country. The building, with its time-stained walls and quaint projecting windows, has been a favourite subject for artists during many generations.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

QUITE one of the most interesting features of the memorandum issued the other day by Mr. Arnold-Forster in connection with the Army Estimates was the allusion to the efforts which are being made to bring about a closer co-operation with the Navy. The writer of these notes had something to say on this matter at the time of the Essex Manœuvres, and he gladly seizes this opportunity to recur to a subject not only of great attractiveness from the personal and social standpoint, but also of peculiar significance in view of the extended acceptance of the only sound and rational doctrine of Home defence. In the past, although decade after decade expeditions went forth in which co-operation between the two Services was essential, and was forthcoming, too, as a rule heartily and to excellent purpose, the distance between the Navy and Army was always preserved, if not widened, by fanciful military operations presupposing a Naval defeat, and representing our soldiers as engaged within this island in opposing an invader who had landed in very considerable force. If Mr. Balfour's Administration had done nothing else it would have been remarkable for its endeavours to explode this doctrine, and to render such steps as Mr. Arnold-Forster in particular has taken to bring the Army into closer intercourse with the Sister Service, both practically important and likely to have permanent results.

FOR with the defence of the United Kingdom reduced to sane proportions, and putting aside the broad questions of co-ordination which the Imperial Defence Committee has to deal with, it now becomes evident that in at least nine out of every ten future wars the Navy and Army will have to work together, not as a matter of chance, as was formerly supposed to be the case, but as a mathematical certainty. Wherever one turns the same prospect presents itself, if only the rotten theory that the British Army exists chiefly to secure these islands from invasion be eliminated. Most clearly is Naval and Military co-operation indicated in that tremendous contingency to which Mr. Balfour has often and so frankly alluded, a possible attack, namely, upon India. At the present moment there is absolutely no Service question of more various interest and more potential gravity than that of the harmonious working of the Navy and Army, assuming a sudden demonstration against our Indian Frontier. On each Service there would be, of course, a distinct and separate strain. But there would also be a broad basis of work and endeavour common to both. It is not the function of the writer of these notes to adopt any lofty tone in regard to such matters. But he may be permitted to emphasise the hope that the personnel of both the Navy and the Army will be prompt and willing to assist the measures adopted in high places to lessen friction, and promote swift and silent running of the combined machinery, in the event of any such trouble as that alluded to.

TALKING of Naval and Military co-operation, a pleasant story is told by the Hon. J. W. Fortescue in his account of the expedition to St. Lucia in 1778, which is happily included in his volume of lectures and essays just published, dealing with the British Army in the period of the younger Pitt's first administration. The British squadron was under Admiral Barrington. The latter had caught a glimpse of the French Fleet outside Cul-de-sac Bay, and having swiftly made the necessary dispositions to protect the transports he was convoying, had "retired to rest in a hammock among his ship's company." General Grant, in command of the troops already landed, had also seen the French ships, and, fearing the Admiral would be caught napping, sent an A.D.C. to him in hot haste. The A.D.C. was taken to the Admiral's hammock, and ventured to rouse him. "Young man," said Barrington, drowsily, "I cannot write to the General at present; but tell him that I hope he is as much at ease on shore as I am on board." And with that "he laid his head on the pillow and went to sleep again." That is one sort of Naval and Military co-operation, but hardly a sort adapted to latterday requirements.

Lafayette.

LORD ROBERTS AND THE OFFICERS OF THE IRISH GUARDS.

THE Royal Engineers, having in the persons of Kitchener, Gerald Graham, Macdonald, Talbot, Swayne, and sundry others, left their mark on the East Coast of Africa, the Soudan, and Egypt, are now busily engaged in making fresh records on the West Coast. Only the other day we recorded the movements of Captain Guggisberg, in connection with the local survey, and now we have to chronicle the appointment of Captain (local Major) Alan Watherston, R.E., C.M.G., to be Chief Commissioner of the Northern Territories of the Gold Coast. Major Watherston was formerly Chief Boundary Commissioner on the Gold Coast, where he has been steadily at work since 1898. For four years previously he had been an Instructor at the Chatham School of Military Engineering. The new Chief Commissioner has been a Royal Engineer for eighteen years, and is still between two and three years on the sunny side of forty. He has the C.M.G., and is pretty certain of future promotion in that great Colonial Order. He is also, in esse, the drawer of the comfortable sum of £1,250 per annum. Truly there are compensations for service, even on the West Coast of Africa.

REAR-ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM DES VŒUX HAMILTON, who is going to China to act as Sir Gerard Noel's Second-in-Command in succession to the Hon. Assheton Gore Curzon-Howe, has a great latterday reputation in connection with the Mediterranean Squadron, but he had previously done admirable work, both at sea and on shore, in several remote quarters. He won his promotion to lieutenant specially for services rendered in the suppression of the slave trade, and, later, took a distinguished part in the Kaffir War of 1877-78, and the Zulu War of 1879. He was shut up with Pearson at Ekowe, and afterwards marched with Crealock to Port Durnford. He was lieutenant again in the "Alexandra" at the bombardment of Alexandria, and was with the Naval Brigade at the occupation of Port Said. Emphatically he is one of those strong all-round men who are always inestimable, but are never more likely to display their real worth than on such a station as the China.

Digitized by Google

THE FOOD ROUTE

Is the safest way to sturdy health.

Many people are kept ill because they do not know how to select food that their own particular bodies will take up and build upon.

What will answer for one will not do for another.

If one is ailing it is safe to change food entirely and go on a plain simple diet, say, for breakfast :—

Cooked fruit,

Dish of GRAPE-NUTS and Cream or hot or cold Milk, Two lightly boiled eggs,

One cup of our Postum Food Coffee, Slice of toast

No more.

Our word ! but a diet like that makes one feel good after a few days' use.

The most perfectly made food for human use is

Grape-Nuts

THERE'S A REASON.

GRAPE-NUTS CO., Ltd., 66 Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

---

Diamond Brooches & Pins.

Catalogue Post Free

Hancocks & Co

Corner of Bruton St & New Bond St London W.

---

JONES' PATENT LEGGINGS.

Best quality, in 3 patterns, 30/-

SIMPLEST SMARTEST
SOUNDEST on the market.
SOLE INVENTOR and Patentee:

F. J. JONES, Sporting Tailor & Breeches Maker, 17, KING ST., ST., JAMES' From E. Tautz.

---

FREEMANS'

ASK FOR F. D. B.

Of Intrinsic Value.

OF ALL PRINCIPAL DEALERS.

TRADE MARK

DARVEL BAY SEGARS

---

PLAYER'S NAVY·MIXTURE

IN TWO STRENGTHS. MILD 1/8 per ½lb. Tin 5d. per oz. MEDIUM 1/6 per ½lb. Tin 4½d. per oz.

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

Ellis and Walery.

MISS QUEENIE LEIGHTON

Who played principal boy so successfully in the recent pantomime at Drury Lane. Miss Leighton, who is a great favourite in musical comedy and on the variety stage, is shortly making her first appearance at the Coliseum.

Digitized by Google

FIELDS' CANDLES.

NIGHT LIGHTS.

TOILET SOAPS.

LIGHT. LIGHTFUL. DELIGHTFUL.

Grand Prize, St. Louis, 1904.

J. C. & J. FIELD, Ltd., LAMBETH, S.E. Established 1642.

THE GRAND MAGAZINE

APRIL ISSUE. NOW READY.

Price 4½d. Nett.

GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., LONDON and NEW YORK.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

NOW READY.

CRICKET.

Price 12/6 Nett.

EDITED BY

Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

WITH OVER 80 ILLUSTRATIONS TAKEN FROM THE MOST INTERESTING OF THE OLD CRICKETING PRINTS.

CONTENTS.

Preface. By the EDITOR.
Some Points in Cricket History. By the EDITOR.
Early Developments of the Cricketing Art. By the EDITOR.
Batting. By P. F. WARNER.
Bowling. By D. L. A. JEPHSON.
Fielding. By G. L. JESSOP.
County Cricket. By W. J. FORD.
Amateurs and Professionals. By the Hon. R. H. LYTTELTON.
Earlier Australian Cricket. By the EARL OF DARNLEY.
English and Australian Cricket from 1894 to 1902. By A. C. MACLAREN.
University Cricket. By HOME GORDON and H. D. G. LEVESON-GOWER.
Country-House Cricket. By H. D. G. LEVESON-GOWER.
Village Cricket. By C. F. WOOD.
Foreign Cricket. By P. F. WARNER.
Cricket in South Africa. By P. F. WARNER.
Cricket in New Zealand. By P. F. WARNER.
Cricket Grounds. By Messrs. SUTTON & SONS, The King's Seedsmen, Reading.

SHOOTING.

(In Two Vols.).

EDITED BY

Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 25/- Nett.

(12/6 Nett per Vol.)

Published at the offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

THE latest volume in Messrs. George Newnes's Library of Applied Arts is "English Embroidery," by A. F. Kendrick. Mr. Kendrick is well known as an authority on this subject, and his book will do a great deal to straighten out a tangled and obscure subject. He starts with the Anglo-Saxon period, and brings his story down to the end of the eighteenth century. Of the nineteenth century he says nothing. His book has an excellent index, a useful list of books of reference, and it is hardly necessary to say that, as with the rest of this series, the illustrations, of which there are some sixty-four, are superb. They include two plates of the famous Ascoli Cope, which Mr. Pierpont Morgan has recently returned to the Italian Government, and others of the Syon Cope, which has recently been elaborately analysed in the Burlington Magazine. The four coloured plates are all exquisite examples both of needlework and of colour printing, and the book is a joy to handle.

English Embroidery.

* * *

THE numbers of people who visit the Zoo and feel that they would enjoy it more if they had some little further knowledge of the creatures they see, had better order of Messrs. Constable a book called "Natural History in the Zoological Gardens," by Mr. Frank E. Beddard. Mr. Beddard describes 117 different kinds of animals, with references to some others, and places them in due relation to each other by a few scientific details, so that a visitor can see the connection between the various houses or cages that he may visit. The book is admirably illustrated with characteristic and often humorous plates by Gambier Bolton and Winifred Austen, and makes most interesting reading; and considering the form of the book, which is at once handy and handsome, we find the price of 6s. net remarkably cheap.

In the Zoo.

* * *

WHEN M. Tissot's work was exhibited at the Doré Gallery some years ago, the crowds that visited the exhibition were enormous, and all who appreciate his wonderful illustrations of the story of the Gospels will be glad to hear that he has completed a series of drawings in illustration of the Old Testament. Reproductions of these, some in colour, some in monochrome, and some in black and white, are to be published by Messrs. Sampson Low during the present season.

M. Tissot.

* * *

THE author of "John Inglesant" was one of the most unusually interesting figures of the nineteenth century. Birmingham seems hardly the place in which to look for a man and an author who belonged by predilection and character to the seventeenth century, and would have been more at home with Nicholas Ferrar and Little Gidding, or at Bemerton with George Herbert, than in a great manufacturing town. About Easter a biography of Mr. Shorthouse, written by his wife, will be published by Messrs. Macmillan, and the volumes will include a number of letters from correspondents like Matthew Arnold, Lady Welby, and Canon Ainger. The second volume contains a selection from a number of essays written in Mr. Shorthouse's early years, besides a collection of contributions to various periodicals.

Mr. Shorthouse.

* * *

ANOTHER interesting book promised by Messrs. Macmillan is "Derbyshire," in the Highways and Byways Series. written by Mr. J. B. Firth, and illustrated by Miss Nellie Erichsen, who is rapidly coming to the front as an artistic illustrator of books. The volume will be valuable not only for its descriptions of the beautiful scenery of Derbyshire, in dealing with which Mr. Firth has paid especial attention to the High and Low Peak of the Valley of the Dove, the Wye and the Derwent, but also for a number of literary associations, including those of Dr. Johnson, Tom Moore, George Eliot, Byron, Ruskin, and and a host of others.

Derbyshire.

* * *

ANYTHING that Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton writes is sure to be well worth reading, and his new book, "Monarch, the Big Bear," which has been issued in a very quaint and attractive form by Messrs. Constable, is sure to find scores of readers old and young. One reader of our intimate acquaintance has already been reduced to tears by it, as well as to almost immoderate laughter, and many others will no doubt experience the same delightful emotions.

The Big Bear.

SNOWY OWL

An illustration in Mr. Frank E. Beddard's "Natural History in the Zoological Gardens," published by Messrs. Constable and Co.

"AUDI ALTERAM PARTEM." It can never do anyone any harm to read the other side of the question, and the other side of the question Mr. A. Maccallum Scott's pamphlet, "The Truth about Tibet," will emphatically be to a great many people. The columns of THE KING are not the proper field for a discussion of the pros and cons of Lord Curzon's and Colonel Younghusband's policy, and we are content, therefore, to mention that the pamphlet, including an introductory note, can be obtained for the modest sum of 6d.

The Truth about Tibet.

* * *

MR. EVELEIGH NASH sends us a new novel by Miss Katharine Tynan, called "A Daughter of Kings," which shows the same excellent qualities that Miss Tynan's fiction always presents. Irish humour and Irish character, money and family, and a quaint idea of an Irish Baronet, who has married a queen of an island in the Pacific, all handled with Miss Tynan's invariably agreeable humour, make a charming book for a tired man or woman to read over the fire in the evening.

A Daughter of Kings.

A CAPITAL new novel from the pen of Mr. Eyre Hussey is published by Messrs. Longmans. Miss Badsworth, M.F.H., was not the sort of lady whom one would expect from the title, but a maiden lady of some years with far greater interest in philanthropy and women's rights than in sport; but thanks to the old device of an eccentric will she finds herself compelled to become manager of a big estate and a Master of Hounds; and in this new capacity, thanks to her niece Miss Lavinia, she shows herself made of sterling stuff. The younger Miss Lavvy is one of the most delightful young ladies we have met in recent fiction, and the whole book is an admirable piece of work.

Novels.

* * *

A NOTICEABLE point about Mr. John Fox is his width of range. There is a very great difference between "Christmas Eve on Lonesome," which we reviewed in these pages some months ago, and his new novel, "Crittenden," which has lately been published by Messrs. Constable. His subject in the new book is the Spanish-American War. He spares us none of its horrors, and has, as readers of his former novels will remember, a power of narrative which gives full force to every scene he describes. But yet if there are some pages which nervous people had better skip, the total effect of the book is one of great charm. It is very American in character, and inspired by intense and genuine national feeling.

Crittenden.

* * *

FOR people with plenty of leisure, and the pathetic interest in historical fiction which seems to linger in spite of all the hard things said by the critics, Mr. Charles Lowe's new novel, "A Lindsay's Love" (Werner Laurie), may prove of some interest, but there are many things against its chances. The first and most important is the cover. Tartan is all very well in its place, but that place is not the binding of a book. Another thing is the length of the story, which occupies 420 large and very closely-printed pages. And yet on the whole it is well worth reading. The story concerns a young Scotchman and his cousin, whom he supposes erroneously to have sacrificed her honour. At one time, also, he supposes her to be dead, and sees what he believes to be her body at the Morgue; but the book is a historical romance, which is as much as to say that all ends happily.

A Lindsay's Love.

BOOKS TO READ.

Biography.

Notes from a Diary, 1896 to January 23, 1901, by the Right Hon. Sir Mountstuart E. Grant Duff, G.C.S.I. F.R.S 2 vols. (Murray.)

John Knox, by the Rev. D. Macmillan, Minister of Kelvinhaugh Parish, Glasgow. (Melrose.)

The Kaiser as he is; or, The Real William II., by H. de Noussanne. Translated by W. Littlefield. (Putnam.)

Fiction.

The White Causeway, by F. Frankfort Moore. (Hutchinson.)

Widdicombe, by M. P. Willcocks. (Lane.)

Duke's Son, by Cosmo Hamilton. (Heinemann.)

Monarch, the Big Bear of Tallac, by Ernest Thompson Seton. (Constable.)

Crittenden, by John Fox. (Constable.)

The Confessions of an Ambitious Mother. (Heinemann.)

Little Citizens: The Humour of School Life, by Myra Kelly. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

Travel.

The Story of an Indian Upland, by F. B. Bradley-Birt. (Smith, Elder.)

Homes of the First Franciscans in Umbria, the Borders of Tuscany, and the Northern Marches, by Beryl de Selincourt. (Dent.)

We very much regret that owing to lack of space the special article on the Shakespeare-Bacon Controversy, which we have secured from Mr. F. St. John Corbett, is unavoidably held over until our issue of April 8.

Digitized by Google

WILLIAMS' SHAVING STICK

EASE AND COMFORT

We all like a good share of both. The greatest ease and comfort and luxury in shaving are only obtainable by using Williams' Shaving Stick. No cup, just the shaving stick and brush. One stick affords 300 shaves

Sold by Chemists, Hairdressers and Perfumers, all over the world, or mailed to any address on receipt of price in stamps.

Williams' Shaving Sticks, 1s. Williams' Luxury Tablets, 1s.
Williams' American Shaving Tablets, 6d.

(Trial Size) of Williams' Shaving Stick, 4d. Trial Tablet Williams' Shaving Soap for 1d. stamp by addressing

THE J. B. WILLIAMS CO., 65 Great Russell St. LONDON, W. C.; 161 Clarence St., SYDNEY. Main Office and Factories, GLASTONBURY, CONN., U. S. A.

With a . .

Kodak Outfit

and but a few minutes' instruction you can secure pleasing and lasting records of your outings, holiday trips, and cycle runs, besides interesting pictures of the home circle and surroundings.

Without a camera you lose more real enjoyment than you can afford. Now that the Spring is coming, call at one of our establishments, or on any dealer, and examine the Kodak cameras.

The FOLDING POCKET SERIES is the most compact, convenient, and perfect type upon the market. A Folding Pocket Kodak can be carried in the pocket or across the shoulder on a strap. Loading, unloading, and development are conducted in broad daylight.

Prices from 26/- to 90/-

May be obtained from all Dealers, or from

Kodak, LTD. 57-61, CLERKENWELL RD. LONDON, E.C.

Branches: 96, Bold Street, LIVERPOOL; 72-74, Buchanan Street, GLASGOW. 59, Brompton Rd., S.W.; 60, Cheapside, E.C.; 115, Oxford St., W.; 171-173, Regent St., W.; and 40, Strand, London, W.C.

ALL TOBACCO LEAF. A DELIGHTFUL WHIFF.

NO PAPER, NO DANGER, NO SMOKERS' THROAT TROUBLE.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGARETTES.

SOLD EVERYWHERE, 1D. EACH. 8/- PER 100, AND BY BEWLAY, 49, STRAND. ESTB. 1760.

The Flor de Dindigul Cigars are as excellent as the Cigarettes. Sold everywhere 2d. each, 5 for 1/-

"Luxury's Necessity."

THRONE

The Royal Toilet Soap.

FRAGRANTLY PERFUMED. DELICIOUSLY EMOLLIENT.

4d. per Tablet, 10½d. per 3-Tab. Box.

Of all Chemists and Stores.

EDWARD COOK & CO., LTD., The Soap Specialists, LONDON, E.

The DIRECT EXPRESS ROUTE FROM LONDON TO ILFRACOMBE & LYNTON & LYNMOUTH

IS BY THE LONDON AND SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY, via Salisbury and Exeter.

CORRIDOR TRAINS ABOUT 5½ HOURS. WATERLOO to ILFRACOMBE.

Ladies' Compartments. Lavatory Carriages.

IDEAL Health AND Pleasure Resorts.

LUNCHEON & DINING CARS to and from Exeter.

Every facility for CHEAP AND COMFORTABLE TRAVEL.

For full particulars see the Company's announcements, or write Mr. HENRY HOLMES, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, S.E.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

ONE of the most marked features in the motor trade during the past year has been the tendency to fit two, three, and even four cylinder engines to low-powered and inexpensive cars. A year or two ago the 8-h.p. car was almost invariably a single cylinder machine, if its price was under £300. To-day there are quite a number of multi-cylinder cars at that price or even less, and a vast improvement in silence and smoothness of running has naturally been effected in the low-priced motor. Messrs. Humber were one of the first firms to place a four-cylinder small car on the market, and quite a sensation was caused at the Stanley show last autumn by their 8—10-h.p. Coventry machine, which was listed at 215 guineas with two-seated body.

* * *

A Beeston-built model of the same power but with many additional refinements, both in the mechanism and in the body, was shown at Olympia, and again at the Agricultural Hall, and though the price is considerably higher, 300 guineas, the car was universally admitted to be one of the best small machines on view. We have not yet had an opportunity of making a personal trial of its capabilities, but we hear that it possesses the qualities of silence and flexibility to a very remarkable degree.

* * *

The mechanism follows the lines of a big car, and in fact the 8—10-h.p. Humber is a miniature of the firm's 16—20-h.p. model. The four cylinders, which are cast separately, are 77-m.m. bore by 108-m.m. stroke, with a normal speed of 900 revolutions per minute. High-tension magneto ignition is fitted, and the lubrication is pressure-fed. The transmission gear, which is carefully designed, gives three forward speeds, with a direct drive on the top to the live rear axle. The brakes and steering gear are of ample strength, and a noticeable refinement in the latter is the provision made for adjusting the joints so as to prevent back lash. The Roi des Belges two-seated body, and the long wheel-base, 6-ft. 9-in., give the car a remarkably striking appearance.

* * *

The British Eliminating Trials for the Gordon Bennett race have been fixed for Tuesday, May 23, by arrangement with the Government of the Isle of Man. The weighing and examination of the competing cars will take place in the island on the morning of the previous day. One of the Wolseley racers is already on the road, and proves to be very similar in design to last year's machines. The motor, which is rated at 90-h.p., has four horizontal cylinders ranged side by side. The inlet valves are of the atmospheric type, and the ignition is on the coil and accumulator system. The wheel-base is 8-ft. 8-in., and the car, which is built very low, has an appearance of great stability. Bianchi, who was Mr. Jarrott's mechanic in the 1903 race in Ireland, will drive the car. The French Eliminating Trials are fixed for June 16, and the Gordon Bennett itself for July 5. The five first cars in the Eliminating Trials will represent France in the Vanderbilt Cup.

* * *

Great Britain, America, France, and Belgium are the countries represented in the list of entries for the Tourist Trophy Race, but it is probable that the event will become of an even more international character before the entries finally close. Practically every British maker will run one or more cars, and the foreign contingent consists of a Renault, a Gladiator, two White Steamers, a Clement, two Orleans, a Spyker, a Cadillac, and two Speedwells. The total number of entries to date is thirty-five.

* * *

The Anglo-American Oil Company, the importers of the well-known Pratt's Motor Spirit, are issuing for the use of their customers one of the handiest road atlases that we have ever seen. The country is divided into convenient sections, to each of which a compact little volume is devoted. Each volume contains general road and railway maps for the whole country, a key map for the volume in question, and a number of fairly large scale maps of the districts into which the section is sub-divided. In addition there are road profiles of all the principal routes. The roads are marked in red, and the distances between the towns are given. A particularly valuable feature is the system of colouring by which the altitude can be approximately judged at a glance. The maps are sent out in red leather cases, which are of a convenient size for the coat pocket.

Copyright.

A NEW HUMBER CAR.

Shown for the first time at the Motor-car Exhibition held recently at the Agricultural Hall. The carriage-work is of new design, and calculated to meet the needs of doctors and professional men generally.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

"The qualities of the New Fiat Car can only be judged by a run. . . . Even with six passengers, minor hills seem non-existent as regards any effect to slow the well-balanced engine, the flexibility of which was shown when negotiating some awkward traffic on top gear. The suspension of the machine is excellent to quite an unusual degree."—MORNING POST, March 3rd, 1905.

Telephone Nos.:
3171 GERRARD.
1849 GERRARD.

F.I.A.T.

Telegrams:
"FIATISM,
LONDON."

THE WORLD'S FINEST TOURING CAR.

Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire:
Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

Agents for Yorkshire: H. JOHNSON & CO., Ltd.,
28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.

Brighton Depot:
Brighton and South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James's Street, Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:

Fiat Motors, Ltd., 37 & 38, Long Acre, London, W.C.

SOLE AGENTS FOR THE NEW PIRELLI (ITALIAN) MOTOR TYRES.

---

A Dainty Woman Likes a Dainty Bicycle

A smart, stylish bicycle that is not only the best but looks the best. One that will last longer than other bicycles, and be always perfect in its running. These are the qualities which have made

HUMBER CYCLES

So popular. Patronised by H.R.H. The Princess of Wales.

H.R.H. Princess Victoria.
H.R.H. The Duchess of Fife.
H.R.H. Princess Charles of Denmark.
H.R.H. Princess Louise.
H.R.H. Princess Patricia.
&c., &c.

Prices: £8 8s. to £18 18s.

TWO-SPEED GEARS & ALL LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

Catalogue, post free, on application to—

HUMBER LIMITED, Beeston (Notts.) and Coventry.

Depots—
LONDON—32 Holborn Viaduct.
LIVERPOOL—73 Bold Street.
MANCHESTER—5 Deansgate.
BIRMINGHAM—4 Victoria Square.
NOTTINGHAM—Grey Friargate.
SOUTHAMPTON—27 London Road

---

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR THE PARENT MAKE OF THE GENUINE

ROCHET-SCHNEIDER CARS,

FOR GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

LA LOCOMOTRICE CARS

(LICENCE ROCHET-SCHNEIDER)

AND BELGRAVE CARS.

DONNE & WILLANS, Ltd.

29a, GILLINGHAM ST., SOUTH BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
(200 yards from Victoria Station.)

---

ARGYLL MOTOR CARS

A MOTOR EXPERT'S OPINION
OF THE

ARGYLL
MOTOR CARS.

HENRY NORMAN, M.P., who has made Motor Cars a special study, and is one of our best authorities on the subject, writing in "The World's Work" for February, says:—

The Argyll does "credit to British Workmanship, being constructed with both knowledge and conscience"; and speaks of its body: "of graceful shape and great strength."

SILENT IN RUNNING.
EASY TO CONTROL.
ELEGANT IN APPEARANCE.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue B for 1905, forwarded post free.

London Agents:
THE FARMAN AUTOMOBILE CO., LD.,
100, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Hozier Engineering Co., Ltd.
Hozier St., Bridgeton, Glasgow.

Built in the Worlds greatest engineering centre.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE sun has once more made his welcome appearance, and with him, London is alive with busy people, eager to be ready with their new garments of all descriptions; for the sun shows up discrepancies in our toilettes all too vividly, and we are anxious to do him honour and don our pretty new hats and costumes to herald in the "spring."

Rarely have the shops shown so many charming novelties, and such a choice selection in all departments. You hear much of the bad times, and how they affect business all round, but I have heard, not from one, but from several of the leading shops, that their annual sales this year were most successful; in fact, beyond their expectations. So that they start now with an entirely new stock, hence the many pleasing varieties to be seen everywhere.

At Kate Reily's I saw some very graceful and delightful gowns, both for evening and day wear—one specially novel idea is here shown. The material is of golden tissue, very simply and gracefully cut. The skirt is trimmed with ruched circlets of soft silk. The hem of the skirt has a handsome embroidered trimming on velvet, and a large spray of corn and field flowers ornaments the front. The full draped bodice has a corresponding spray of these flowers. There were some lovely new effects in evening coats, revivals of olden periods in cashmeres and quaint designs, that were especially enticing. I have been asked by so many people lately where to obtain the dainty underwear that I have mentioned once or twice, that I have made most minute enquiries, and shall be able to give you all particulars in a week or two. The firm that are making a feature of these have been so besieged with orders that they have had to make arrangements to deal with them much more largely, and in the course of two or three weeks will be able to execute all orders promptly; so I have promised to keep quiet for the moment, to give them time to cope with the demand.

AN EVENING GOWN OF GOLDEN TISSUE.
(Kate Reily, Limited, Dover Street, W.)

I saw some of the new samples, which are even daintier than the last, and most beautifully made. Also a very charming new design in the garments generally known as "nighties," so simple yet so pretty that I am sure you will want to wear them by day also. They have one great advantage, viz., no buttons to be torn or dragged off in the present-day laundries, which I am certain will be much appreciated by all of us.

The white richly-embroidered linen dresses that are being shown so much look very fresh and simple, but all will depend on the way in which these are made. White has a tendency to make you look broad and big round the hips, and with the present mode care must be taken to give the correct line to waist and skirt. The importance of cut never has been of such moment as now, when the small waist and natural curves of the human figure must be brought out to the greatest possible advantage. The greatest necessity of the day is a perfectly-fitting corset, and that is a rare thing to find. I was much impressed by this fact a day or so ago, when I paid a flying visit to Paris. Strangely enough, I went to that city also for that express purpose, and met innumerable people on the journey who were enquiring for the same thing, and universal grumblings reigned around. If the shape seemed right, there was so much discomfort attached to the wearing of it that, in spite of the wasp-waist effect, the pain was too great even for vanity to bear. The difficulty is, however, at an end, for I have found a corset that is as near perfection, both in form and for comfort, as it is possible to obtain. I spoke of this clever corsetiere also a little while ago, and can safely say "that corset has no equal." I have recommended it to numbers of people lately, and the result has been such that I am told there is quite an excitement over it at one or two big hotels frequented by Americans. They are the ones to appreciate line, and are so enthusiastic that they impress and influence all around them with their own enthusiasm.

I was shown in Paris some delightful models in cloth, serge, and light tweeds, mostly made with short jackets or boleros. Neutral shades are much used for these, just with a tinge of colour at the throat and wrists, and in some cases introduced into the tiny inner vests of the coatees. These are very much braided in self colours, and some with a mixture of gold and silver. A very smart black camel-hair serge costume, with tiny vest let into the coat of pastel blue, and prettily braided in a tiny black and white soutache, was also most effective; its great charm was the extreme simplicity and perfect line. R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

S. SMITH & SON, LTD.,

Watchmakers to the Admiralty. CLOCK and CHRONOMETER MAKERS.

THE "STRAND" HALF-CHRONOMETER. 9, STRAND, W.C. WATCHES from £1 1 0 to £900.

With our Registered Dust and Damp Proof Cap.

NON-MAGNETIC £1. 1. 0 EXTRA.

All our Watches, Clocks, and Jewellery can be purchased on "The Times" SYSTEM of MONTHLY PAYMENTS at Catalogue prices.

No. 29.—Stout 14-ct. Gold, Lever Movement, Plain Enamel Figures or Opal Zone, £5. 5s.

18-ct. Gold, £7. 7s. to £25.

NON-MAGNETIC £1. 1. 0 EXTRA.

SPECIALITY: With Dial as below, indicating Railway Speed up to 100 miles, 10s. extra.

OUR "STRAND" All English. 18-ct. Gold Full or Half Hunter Cases, £16. 10s.; Silver Full Hunting Cases, £6. 6s., Half Hunting Cases, £6. 15s.
Crystal Glass, Open Face, 18-ct. Gold, £13. 15s., Silver, £5. 5s.

OUR ALL ENGLISH "STRAND" WATCHES ARE THE BEST VALUE EVER PRODUCED.

Our illustrated Catalogue or "Guide to the Purchase of a Watch," Book F., 135 pages, 350 illustrations, free by post. Ditto Clocks, F. Ditto Jewellery, F.

"STRAND" CHRONOGRAPH. Our Own Special Make, Strong 18-ct. Gold Cases £21. Steel or Silver Cases £8.8s. With 30-Minute Recorder, £5. 5s.; 18-ct. Gold £15 15s.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE — FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE — FOR USE UNDER SHADES

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.

Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.

Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

TURKISH The only Genuine Turkish Cigarettes.

REGIE Cigarettes.

Of all tobacconists and Stores, and at 169, Piccadilly, London, W.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à a Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

DINARD.

HOTEL DES BAINS.—Modern comforts; electric light; moderate charges.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

GENOA.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL.—New. Quiet rooms. Apartments with bath. Gardens.

SAN REMO.

BENECKE & HEYWOOD, House and Estate Agents. Bankers. Full particulars of all Villas and Properties.

GRAND HOTEL DE NICE.—First-class Family Hotel.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

Digitized by Google

THE Restaurant Voisin, one of the oldest and most famous in the capital, deserves a place of honour in these chats, and it was with the view of collecting material that I called at the well-known place at the corner of the Rue Cambon and the Rue St. Honoré, and asked for the chief. It was about 11 o'clock in the morning, the tables were laid, the business of the day beginning; but for the moment the lady behind the desk and one or two waiters pensively waiting were the only living things to be seen. Hot-house grapes, monster fruit and asparagus decorate the side window, but the passer-by does not stop; he knows the sign of the house—it varies with the seasons; choice fruit, indeed, but not for him. A waiter conducted me to a small room on the third floor. Here I found M. Braquessac, the proprietor, drinking his café au lait, drawing clouds from a huge meerschaum. In a few words, with a strong Southern accent, he bade me welcome and filled another pipe. I lighted a cigarette and examined him—a tall man of commanding figure, with a thick grey moustache and a curiously tired expression in the eyes, the look of a man who has seen the world. I learnt later that M. Braquessac is a sportsman and owns a fine racing stable.

"Tell me something of the history of Voisin," I said in my blandest manner.

He turned a weary eye on me for an instant, blew out a cloud of smoke, and drawled: "What history?"

"The history of your house, its origin, its career. The old place must be full of reminiscences——"

Another silence before he spoke.

"Yes, no doubt, there is a history; but I am not its chronicler; those who luncheon and dine at Voisin's are its best historians——"

"No doubt. But you must know many quaint anecdotes, amusing stories of the men and women who have come here in the course of years."

Another silence, and another volume of smoke, and then—

"I dare say you are right. I have heard, as you say, many quaint anecdotes and amusing stories, but I have not retained them. Why should I have done so?"

I did not answer, but looked at the questioner with undisguised admiration. And no wonder. For here before me sat a man, a restaurateur, who instead of gladly submitting to a flattering interview, actually shrank from it. I frankly told him how he surprised me.

For the first time there was the trace of a smile. He put out his hand and said, "I am not keen on interviews, I am not an interesting personage, and, as regards Voisin's, it has, as I have told you already, its history, known to all who appreciate good cooking and good wine——"

But I did not give up the fight.

"Good cooking—that is it. The house has its renowned specialities, and I should like to have the recipes."

This time the smile disappeared, and I fancied I heard the word "rubbish!"

"Did you say rubbish?"

"I did."

"Why?"

He looked at me hard. I felt he was beginning to dislike me.

"Why," said he, "because I am sure you must know that no restaurant in the world can claim the monopoly for certain dishes, and keep them secret like a patent medicine. Every chef has what he is stupid enough to call recipes of his own. But these chefs go from one place to another, and their secrets are soon known to their assistants in the kitchen. Don't tell me you were ever caught by specialities!"

And he cast an anxious look at me, like a doctor at a patient whose mind, he thinks, is wandering.

Copyright.

"But there are specialities," I insisted, "since the chef brings them with him," and I think I had him there, for he gave no answer.

Then I made a final effort.

"The names, the very names of the people who have frequented Voisin's would make an interesting list."

"Yes, indeed; an interesting list, but too long. Take the names of all the celebrities, French, English, Russian, etc., who have passed away, and all the best names of the living, from Debrett and the 'Tout Paris,' and you have a complete list of the people who honoured and still honour Voisin."

I gave it up in despair, and rose to go. Suddenly a thought struck me.

"And the cellar! Voisin is celebrated for its cellar. What about that?"

"I can answer that question in a few words. Look up the names of the finest wines and the best vintages, and you will know they are represented in Voisin's cellar. You see, therefore, that it is unnecessary to give you a list. Et voilà!——"

A word beginning with a "c" and ending with an "s" was on my lips; but of what use saying it? He would not have understood, and I did not know the equivalent in French. So I said the next best thing, and went down and ordered lunch.

"Garçon, les specialités de la maison," and in a little while I knew the merits of the Entrecôte Sauce Bordelaise and the Ortolan à la Coquille...

Entrecôte Sauce Bordelaise.—This must not be mistaken for the Entrecôte "à la Bordelaise." The latter is a steak cooked on the grill, and as soon as it is turned, the side that is "cooked" is sprinkled with chopped shallot and parsley; and when the steak is in the dish, butter, salt, pepper, and a dash of lemon are added. The Entrecôte "Sauce Bordelaise" is served with small rounds of marrow and a red wine sauce. The marrow-bone should be left in cold water, changed several times, for twenty-four hours, if possible, as the marrow is whiter and more appetising; otherwise it is always more or less grey. Place the bone in a saucepan full of cold water, without salt. When it boils, remove the saucepan to the edge of the fire, so that the water remains hot without boiling. Cover it, and let the marrow poach for five-and-twenty or thirty minutes. It is taken out and cut in slices, when the entrecôte is ready to be served. For the sauce, put a tumblerful of claret, half the quantity of very good stock, and a pinch of sugar in a small saucepan. Boil, without covering it, until it is reduced by half. Add chopped shallot and a small laurel leaf, boil for five or six minutes, pass the sauce through a fine sieve, and add the juice of a lemon, salt, pepper, a little cayenne, and a lump of butter. The entrecôte is carved, salted and peppered, and the pieces placed one next the other in the original shape, the slices of marrow are cut with a warm knife, and arranged in the centre, the length of the steak, and the sauce is poured lightly over.

Ortolan à la Coquille is stuffed with truffles, moistened with Madeira, and placed in the shell of a turkey's egg, carefully washed and slightly greased with the purest of olive oil. This shell is placed in burning cinders, with nothing but the head of the bird peeping from the top. Here in the shell the ortolan melts, little by little, like a lump of butter; the fat rises to the surface, is removed with a small teaspoon, and replaced with a few drops of Alicante. When the bird is cooked, there is nothing more delicate, more delicious, more original, than the ortolan à la coquille.

The Voisin cellars have been sold over and over again.

Digitized by Google

PLASMON is a Food, not a medicine, and has many advantages over all other Foods:—

(1) PLASMON is 30 times more nutritious than milk.

(2) PLASMON contains 80 per cent. of Proteid and can be retained when all other foods are rejected.

(3) PLASMON makes the most delicious and economical Whipped Cream.

(4) PLASMON makes the most sustaining Sandwiches, and hundreds of other Dainty Dishes.

(5) PLASMON builds up the tissues, and baffles consumption, anæmia, indigestion and other kindred ailments. Infants digest it. Antarctic explorers lived on it. British soldiers fight on it.

Prices 9d., 1/4, and 2/6.

(Each packet contains full directions and recipes.)

THE ESCOFFIER CARLTON DELICACIES

(AS SUPPLIED TO THE ROYAL HOUSEHOLDS OF EUROPE).

Manufactured by the "CHEF-DE-CUISINE" to the CARLTON HOTEL, LONDON.

| | | PER BOTTLE. |
|---|---|---|
| The ESCOFFIER | "Sauce Robert" ... ... | 1/- |
| The Escoffier ... | "Sauce Diable à la Provencale" | 1/6 |
| The Escoffier ... | "Sauce Melba," for Peaches Melba ... ... ... | 1/6 |
| The Escoffier ... | "Poivrons d'Espagne, Hors d'Œuvre" ... ... ... | 1/- |
| The Escoffier ... | "L'Olive Noire (La Mauresque), Confite au Naturel à l'huile d'olive vierge" ... ... | 2/- |

MAY BE OBTAINED FROM ALL HIGH-CLASS GROCERS AND LEADING STORES.

Manufacturers—
ESCOFFIER, Ltd., 6, Ridgmount Street, Tottenham Court Road.

Rheumatism

If you want to get rid of Rheumatism use John Knight's Anti-Rheumatic Soap. It's easy to understand how it cures. Having previously fomented the part with hot water to open the pores, you make a lather with the Soap and rub it in where you feel the pain. When the lather comes into contact with the pores of the skin, the curative virtues, due to its medicinal properties, are absorbed through the glands right down into the tissues. You feel the pain go away. Try John Knight's Anti-Rheumatic Soap and you'll know its just as we say. Good not only for Rheumatism, but for Sciatica, Neuralgia, Sprains, and Bruises.

Prepared only by JOHN KNIGHT & SONS, Makers of the Royal Primrose Soap. Soapmakers to the King.

A GOOD MOTTO "DO IT NOW" Try a tablet for 1/3 post free from the Sole Agents, The Antexema Co. 83, Castle Road, London, N.W. Of all Chemists and Stores at 1/1½

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL. HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS. GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3- & 5- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & 7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-

"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off." Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.

Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

THEY TOUCH THE LIVER

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

FOR HEADACHE
DIZZINESS
BILIOUSNESS
TORPID LIVER
CONSTIPATION
SALLOW SKIN
THE COMPLEXION

SMALL PILL. DOSE. PRICE.

Be sure they are Genuine
Carter's Little Liver Pills, in blue and white wrapper.
Look for signature—

All Chemists, 1/1½. Send for Booklet "Character Reading by Handwriting."
British Depot 46 Holborn Viaduct, London.

Pure JAEGER Wool

Write for PRICE LIST (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations, post free.

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffeta," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SHIRTS ... | ... from | 8s. 9d. |
| PYJAMA SUITS ... | | 15s. 9d. |
| NIGHT SHIRTS ... | | 12s. 9d. |

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria St., S.W.
85 & 86, Cheapside, E.C.

BATH—
10, New Bond Street.

BRIGHTON—
59, East Street.

EDINBURGH—
119a, Princes Street.

EASTBOURNE—
6, Grove Road.

GLASGOW—
16, Buchanan Street.

LEEDS—
23, Commercial Street.

LIVERPOOL—
58, Church Street, and 4, Castle Street.

MANCHESTER—
18, King Street.

NEWCASTLE—
6, Northumberland St.

PLYMOUTH—
9, George Street.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as "JAEGER" on invoice.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

Owing to the great success of their celebrated pictures, "The Relief of Ladysmith," "Lord Kitchener's Home-coming," and "The Leopard Skin," Bovril, Limited, have arranged to present, under the same conditions as formerly, another splendid gravure. It is entitled "Little Lady Bountiful," and has been reproduced by C. W. Faulkner and Co., the well-known art publishers, from the charming original oil painting by Fred Morgan. This beautiful gravure (which measures 28½-in. by 19¾-in., and is printed on fine plate paper 40-in. by 30-in.) forms a magnificent companion to "The Leopard Skin," and is quite free from advertising matter.

---

The Ides of March have come and gone, but the fickleness of April is with us, when chills are prevalent from the constant changes of temperature which characterise this most feminine month of the calendar. One of the best preservatives against this most insidious danger to health is to wear the famous woollen underclothing of Messrs. Jaeger, who are now showing at 126, Regent Street a most beautiful selection of new materials for the spring and summer. The new flannels and wool taffetas for men's shirts are unusually charming in design and colourings; and all golfers and tennis players should make a note of the white woollen collars, which look just like an ordinary linen collar (especially when a celluloid stiffener is slipped inside) without having any of its drawbacks when the wearer is taking strong exercise. The ladies' department is well worth a visit by those of our feminine readers who love dainty undergarments, for the day has long gone by when Jaeger underwear was considered ugly, the latest models in white delaine, lace-trimmed and hand-embroidered, being quite as attractive as French lingerie.

---

In consequence of the return of Sir Charles Wyndham to the New Theatre, and the inability of Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry to secure another suitable theatre, the present run of "The Scarlet Pimpernel" must terminate with the evening performance on Saturday, April 22. However, the company will not be disbanded, as a short tour has been hurriedly booked, commencing on Easter Monday. It is to be hoped that when Miss Neilson and Mr. Terry return for their next London season, they will have found a permanent home which they are now endeavouring to secure.

---

During the dreariest portion of the now expiring winter Cornwall has been blessed by almost continuous sunshine, and thousands have found on her beautiful Riviera, at a minimum of trouble, expense, and fatigue, those comforts until quite lately erroneously supposed to be only attainable in the South of France and Italy, or in Egypt and the North African littoral. The Great Western Railway Company, who have done so much to popularise Cornwall, will gladly send upon application a beautifully illustrated booklet descriptive of the attractions of the Duchy.

---

The Governing Body of the Royal Exchange, Sydney, New South Wales, send us a copy of their last half-yearly report, which is of special interest, as it contains reference to a series of exhibitions which have been held at the Exchange during the past year for the purpose of directing attention to the great potentialities of the resources of New South Wales. A harvest festival was held, a dairy exhibition followed, and a wool exhibition served to demonstrate the enormous resources of the colony, and Sydney has undoubtedly become the great wool market of Australasia.

---

The Hippodrome's new spectacle, "America's Lads in Blue," was produced last week with great success at this popular house. The drilling of the American soldiers is wonderfully precise, and the final repulse of the attack on the fort, and sinking of the enemy's battleship is carried out in the most realistic manner. The rest of the programme at the Hippodrome is as excellent as ever.

The Hatherley originalities are constructed upon common-sense principles, and for lightness, compactness, and rigidity they are unapproached by any of the imitations which have been placed on the market. The ingenuity of the Hatherley Folding Tables, which can be handled without fear of collapse, is noteworthy. The warehouse floor space at the Hatherley works, Gloucester, is very large, and orders, however complicated, can be executed on receipt.

---

Mr. Louis Calvert, in addition to assisting Mr. Beerbohm Tree in his Shakespearian productions, and acting at His Majesty's and Court Theatres, also finds time to direct several of his own touring companies, one of which, playing Miss Julia Neilson's and Mr. Fred Terry's Comedy Theatre success, "Sunday," will be seen shortly at the Brixton Theatre, with Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay, daughter of the late Mme. Antoinette Sterling, in the title rôle.

---

Arrangements have been completed with Mr. Tom B. Davis, whereby Miss Maxine Elliott will appear for a season at the Lyric Theatre, commencing in April, in a new and original play, entitled "Her Own Way," by Mr. Clyde Fitch. Miss Elliott's season will be under the direction of Mr. Charles B. Dillingham, who will send over from America the company of artistes who are appearing with Miss Elliott.

Harris

MISS IRMA DE KUSEL

A portrait painter of great promise, whose work has won praise from many competent judges.

Messrs. P. and J. Haggart, of the far-famed Royal Breadalbane Mills, Aberfeldy, N.B., have just been notified by Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Sir William Carington, K.C.V.O., C.B., Comptroller, that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has been pleased to grant them a Warrant of Appointment as Woollen Manufacturers to His Royal Highness. Messrs. Haggart hold similar appointments to H.M. the King, H.M. Queen Alexandra, as well as to many of the Royal and Imperial Foreign Courts.

---

Van Houten's Cocoa has long been a favourite with connoisseurs, and its purity and perfect flavour have placed it in the forefront for use in public institutions and in private families. It has won high encomiums from the leading scientific authorities, and since in use it is economical, it is cheaper in the end than lower priced cocoas.

---

Messrs. Elliott and Fry write to inform us that the copyright of the photographs of Mr. F. W. Newman and Dr. Maurice, reproduced in our last issue, is theirs. We regret the accidental omission of their name beneath the reproductions.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. Mr. TREE.
Every Evening (except Mondays), at 8.30.
"A MAN'S SHADOW."
(For a limited number of performances.)
Luversan ... ... ... ... } Mr. Tree.
Lucien Laroque ... ... ... }
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
Monday evening, April 3rd, TRILBY.

APOLLO THEATRE.
Henry Lowenfeld, Sole Proprietor.
Tom B. Davis, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Saturday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
Mr. George Edwardes' Season.
Every Evening at 8.15.
A New Musical Play entitled
LADY MADCAP.
By Paul Rubens and N. Newnham-Davis.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

IMPERIAL THEATRE.
Mr. Lewis Waller.
To-night and every Evening at 8.15.
MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE.
Mr. Lewis Waller, Miss Eva Moore.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: Otho Stuart.
Every Evening at 8.20.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
Oscar Asche and Lily Brayton.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.
Telephone 2645 Gerrard.

CRITERION THEATRE.
Lessee: Charles Wyndham.
Under the Management of Frank Curzon.
Every Evening at 9.
Charles Frohman presents Miss Marie Tempest in THE FREEDOM OF SUSANNE, a light Comedy in three acts, by Cosmo Gordon Lennox.
At 8.30 Mr. Frank Lincoln.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 3.

STRAND THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Frank Curzon.
To-night at 8.30, a new farce, in three Acts, by Lawrence Sterner.
OFF THE RANK.
Messrs. Willie Edouin, Farren Soutar. Misses Nora Lancaster, Susie Vaughan, etc., etc.
Preceded at 8 by THE WATER CURE.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Sole Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
To-night at 8.45.
Mr. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. and S. Gatti and Charles Frohman.
Every Evening, at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

SAVOY. DU BARRI.
Sole Lessee: Mr. J. H. Leigh.
Managers: Mr. Gilbert Hare and Mrs. Brown-Potter.
To-night at 8, and Every Evening,
Christopher St. John's Adaptation of
"DU BARRI,"
By Jean Richepin.
Matinee every Thursday at 2.
Box Office now open. 'Phone, 2602 Gerrard.

THE LYCEUM. Twice Nightly, at 6.30 and 9.
Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30.
HIGH-CLASS VARIETIES.
Popular prices 6d. to 1½ guineas. Children half price.
Manager Director, Thomas Barrasford.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Magnificent Varieties.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. Hitchins

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Sidney J. Pocock | 33 |
| The March of Events | 34 |
| On the Links | 40 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 45 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 46 |
| The Parisians of Paris— | |
| A Little Bit of Scandal | 48 |
| Under the Burgee | 50 |
| Yachts of the Year | 51 |
| Plays and Players | 52, 55 |
| Actresses at Home— | |
| XV.—The Misses Zena and Phyllis Dare | 53 |
| Letters to Stage Favourites— | |
| XXI.—To Miss Darragh | 54 |
| The Ladies' Clubs of London— | |
| II.—The Ladies' Army and Navy Club | 56 |
| An Epitome of the Shakespeare-Bacon Controversy | 58 |
| The Services | 60 |
| The Racing Season | 61 |
| Literary Notes | 62 |
| The Traveller: A Holiday on the Belfast and County Down Railway | viii. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book— | |
| Some Famous Dorsetshire Medals | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

BOOKS.

"The Skull," a Poem, published about 1783.—136, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Wheble's Ladies' Magazine. £3 3s. given for the issues (about 1777-9) containing poems by George Crabbe.—137, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

The second volume of Real Life in London.—139, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Almanach de Gotha. All numbers before 1800 and 1814.—140, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A small collection of "prophetic" Almanacks.—141, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Early works on conjuring and palmistry.—142, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Early copy of Beethoven's Sinfonia Eroica. First issued preferred.—145, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Sporting Magazine. The owner of a run of 26 volumes desires to exchange them for a complete set of the Town and Country Magazine.—150, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cricket and Golf. Early books, views, and caricatures regarding.—151, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cookery Books. A good copy of Mrs. Glasse's work.—152, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any old Books or Pamphlets on America, especially re the Indian Tribes or early Settlers.—153, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A pair of genuine Candlesticks in Battersea Enamel.—513, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Fine pair old pewter candlesticks.—514, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A genuine specimen of the groups of Staffordshire Ware known as "The Tythe Pig," and "The Vicar and Moses."—515, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Staffordshire Ware busts of Wesley and Whitfield.—518, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Good Impressions, with good margins, of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn, etc.—220, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.—continued.

Three good specimens of Caricatures by the late Sir Frank Lockwood.—228, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Mr. Justice Yates, from a contemporary Magazine about 1765.—229, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portraits of Sir Lewis Dives (about 1642) and Bishop Conybeare of Bristol (1757).—230, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures of Napoleon, published in France, Spain, Italy, Holland, Germany, or Russia, between 1807 and 1816.—230, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Italian or German Caricatures of Napoleon.—231, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Mrs. Fitzherbert after Stothard, and Mrs. Siddons after T. Beach.—232, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait or Caricatures of Case, the famous Empiric.—233, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old Prints relating to Fairs and Shows.—234, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Engravings wanted. Interior views of House of Commons, House of Lords, etc., before about 1840.—238, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Polyalbion, Drayton's. Loose Maps from Vol. I., especially Dorset.—239, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

GOLD, SILVER, Etc.

Tea Caddy, very old, antique; rare bargain. View by appointment, or description sent.—Write SMITH, 61, Prittlewell Street, Southend-on-Sea.

Ceylon Precious Stones. Rubies, dark blue sapphires, pale blue sapphires, white sapphires, yellow sapphires, green sapphires, brown sapphires, red spinels, topazes, zircons, pink jacinths, pink, green, and yellow tourmalines, aquamarines, moonstones, opals, peridots, etc. List sent on application.—607A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Navy and Army Illustrated. Complete set, 19 volumes; clean and perfect, except index for volumes 9 and 15; from commencement to present date; unbound; cost £11 7s.; early volumes are out of print and very scarce. Cash offers requested.—G. F. GROVES, Woodlands, Hexham-on-Tyne.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Prints for Sale, all in first-class order, well framed, lately property well-known collector: The Valley Farm, The Cornfield, Brunet-Debaines, Constable, both signed artist's proofs, £20; The Blue Boy, Mrs. Graham, Ch. Waltner, Gainsborough, signed proofs, £7 7s. each; The Flight into Egypt, signed by Holman Hunt, £5; Westminster Abbey (The Dark Corner), one of series of etchings by Axel. Haig, proof signed, £5 5s.; The Evening Hymn, Waltner, Mason, remarque proof, signed, £6 6s.; The Wain (The Team), Macbeth, an etching proof, signed, £6 6s.; The Art of Peace, Appleton, after Lord Leighton, proof signed by both artists, £5 5s.; G. W. Reid, Works of Italian Engravers, 1884, first series only, india proofs, cir., £1 15s.; Turner's Celebrated Landscapes, 1872, quarto, £2; Album de Musée de Boulacq; Cairo, 1871, folio, cloth, photographic plates, £1 10s.; Ruskin's Notes on his Collection of Turner's Drawings, £2 10s.; Art of Peace, Appleton, after Leighton, proof signed by Appleton, £4 4s.; Turner's Picturesque Views England and Wales, by Lloyd, 2 vols., royal folio, 1838, etchings and proofs in duplicate, full calf extra, magnificently bound, collector's monogram, £60; Infanta of Spain, after Velasquez, signed by Waltner, £20.—217A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Baxter Prints, also Le Blond's.—WITHEFORD, 85, Vincent Street, Birmingham.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Derby, Worcester, Whieldon, Bristol, Lustre, Salt Glaze, Sèvres, Staffordshire figures, and other old China. Lists.—BRUCE, Gas Works, Shotley Bridge, Co. Durham.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Two Indian swords, shield and dagger, 21s.; Zulu assegai, 3s. 6d.; Polynesian shield, 5s. 6d.; splendid case flint-lock duelling pistols, 63s.; Malay kris, carved ivory hilt, gold mounted, £5.—739A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Antique Sheraton Sideboard, £15; six oak Chippendale chairs, old china cabinet, £5 10s.; old Sheraton table.—740A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Buffet, massive antique Jacobean, also table, Jacobean Welsh oak dresser with shelves, antique oak settle.—741A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Old books, old engravings, old etchings and drawings, caricatures.—R. MCCASKIE, 27, Marylebone Lane, London, W. Book catalogues free.

Ferns, 33 exquisite Irish and Killarney varieties, hardy plants, 1/6, free. 20 Ivies (varieties), 6d., free. 15 Honeysuckle plants, 1s., free.—Miss BENNETT, "Prospect," Rosscarbery, Cork.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE
(PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,

17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Also Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guide sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.

Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & CO.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel. Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL

LOVELY COLOURS,
BRILLIANT GLOSS.

A Necessity in Every Household during the Spring Cleaning season.

SPECIAL ENAMEL FOR BATHS
to stand Hot Water.

BELFAST & COUNTY DOWN RAILWAY

The following Health and Pleasure Resorts are served by the Company's System:—

Bangor, Donaghadee, Ballynahinch, Killough, Ardglass & Newcastle.

THE SLIEVE DONARD HOTEL, NEWCASTLE, Co. Down

(owned and managed by the Railway Company), is beautifully situated on the shores of Dundrum Bay, and commands unrivalled views of the famous Mourne Mountains. The Links of the County Down Golf Club immediately adjoin the Hotel grounds. Visitors staying in the Hotel are permitted to play over the Links at half the usual rate of charge.

For tariff apply to Mr. JAMES CLARKE, Manager, Slieve Donard Hotel, Newcastle, Co. Down.

THROUGH EXCURSION and TOURIST BOOKINGS from all the principal English Stations to NEWCASTLE, ARDGLASS, DOWNPATRICK, DONAGHADEE, and BANGOR.

Official Guide to the Mourne Mountains and County Down, by post, 1/2½, on application to CHARLES A. MOORE, Manager.

QUEEN'S QUAY TERMINUS, BELFAST.

HUMPHREYS & CROOK

Established over 60 Years.

Naval, Military & Sporting Tailors.

OPPOSITE THE CARLTON. 3, Haymarket, LONDON.

HOMESPUN GOLF SUITS

Equipment Department:
3, SUFFOLK STREET, PALL MALL.

Specialite: CROOK'S PATENT SLEEPING VALISE. A hold-all in transport and a tent in camp.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.
Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE SHAKESPEARE-BACON CONTROVERSY.

By F. ST. JOHN CORBETT.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 427. SATURDAY, APRIL 8th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Russell.

MR. SIDNEY J. POCOCK

Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Uxbridge Division of Middlesex.

(See page 45.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 427. Saturday, April 8, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND THE MEDITERRANEAN.—It was with considerable pleasure that his subjects learned that the King had after all found it possible to take his projected yachting trip in the Mediterranean, for all know his love for the sea and the great benefit to his health which he derives from a tour in the "Victoria and Albert." Although his Majesty is now looking very well, it cannot but be supposed that a few weeks in the Mediterranean, with blue skies, warm winds, and a certain amount of freedom from the cares of State, which he so unflaggingly discharges, will be welcome. Whether the King will follow the Kaiser and pay a visit to Morocco is very doubtful, but there can be no doubt that the Sultan's English tendencies would receive distinct encouragement from such an honour. He is already an admirer of everything English, plays lawn tennis, was once the possessor of the uniform of a British Guardsman, and his contemplated visit to a British man-of-war which had to be abandoned in consequence of the hostile feelings aroused among his subjects, will be fresh in the memory.

THE KING AND THE DIAMOND. — Since Lord Dalhousie brought the Koh-i-Noor to this country much water has passed under the bridges, and the famous Culinan diamond came to England by the much more prosaic method known as registered post, and a gem worth £500,000 was carried one-fifth of the distance round the world for the modest sum of 3s. Last week Lord Charles Montagu and Mr. Friedlander had the honour of showing the diamond to King Edward, whose interest in South Africa and all that concerns its welfare is well known, and he would naturally wish to see such a wonder as the Cullinan gem. It is not recorded that Lord Charles Montagu and Mr. Friedlander carried the stone, as Lord Dalhousie did the Koh-i-Noor, in a leather bag worn next to the skin, but it is quite possible they may have taken the precaution of carrying revolvers. The charge of precious stones, especially stones of great historical or monetary value, is a very trying one, and even the fact of its being insured for its full value can hardly have taken much weight off the minds of those charged with the keeping of the Cullinan to and from Buckingham Palace.

Langfier.

MRS. FRANK SHUTTLEWORTH

Daughter of the Rev. Robert Lang, and wife of Colonel Frank Shuttleworth of Old Warden Park, Beds.

THE PRINCE AND THE NAVY.—The Prince and Princess of Wales have inspected the "Renown," and, presumably, approved the choice of this vessel for their journey to the Shiny East in November next. The "Renown" is a name which came into the Navy, as many others have done, through a French prize, the "Renommée," which was captured in the Straits of Gibraltar in 1651 by the "Nonsuch," Captain Mildmay. It is interesting to learn at this moment that the Prince of Wales has just presented to the Museum of the Royal United Service Institution the telescope used by Lieutenant John Pasco, Nelson's Flag-Lieutenant at the battle of Trafalgar. This instrument remained in the possession of the Pasco family until, on the occasion of his visit to Australia, it was presented to the Duke of Edinburgh. Later it passed into the possession of the Prince of Wales, who has in this centenary year of Trafalgar made it over to the institution, where it will find a fitting resting-place.

Digitized by Google

Trampus. Abéniacar.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S TOUR.

While the Duke of Connaught went to Madrid on a visit to the King of Spain, the Duchess and Princesses Margaret and Patricia proceeded to Italy, where Prince Oscar of Sweden rejoined the party.

Elliott and Fry.

SIR G. D. TAUBMAN GOLDIE, K.C.M.G.

The new president of the Royal Geographical Society.

Raffi.

THE GRAND DUCHESS MARIA OF RUSSIA

One of the prettiest of Russia's young Princesses, and daughter of the Grand Duke Paul.

Elliott and Fry.

SIR CLEMENTS MARKHAM, K.C.B.

The retiring president of the Royal Geographical Society.

Copyright.

THE KING AND THE GRAND NATIONAL.

The scene in the paddock at Aintree before the race, Moifaa leading the parade. Owing to an unfortunate accident to the jockey before the race, the King's horse did not succeed in winning the Grand National this year, much to the disappointment of his many supporters.

Digitized by Google

Rouch.

THE KING AT AINTREE.

A view of the course over which the Grand National was run last week in the presence of the King. Kirkland won the race, the second and third being Napper Tandy and Buckaway II.

THE ACTOR'S RETORT.—Though of late years but little had been heard of him, the late Mr. Maurice Barrymore was always in the public memory. His real name was Herbert Blythe, and he was educated for, and admitted to, the Bar. But he preferred the stage, and, perhaps realising the truth of the adage about the prophet and his own country, he went to America to make his début. Shortly after his first season in London, he was travelling to Scotland, and got into conversation with some fellow-passengers. One remarked that he was a business man, and, suffering from overwork, had had to take a holiday. Barrymore said he was an actor in need of fresh air, and a third admitted he was an engineer taking a change for the first time for three years. A supercilious person sitting in a corner then remarked, "I never work; I am a gentleman." To which Barrymore replied: "Ah! you, too, are taking a holiday, I see!" And Barrymore it was, too, who remarked one stormy night that he had never seen such a wind. "Seen a wind!" quoth a friend. "What was it like?" "Like to have blown me inside out," was the actor's witty reply. Maurice Barrymore's daughter, Ethel, was seen in London last year in "Cynthia."

Copyright

PRINCESS CHRISTIAN AT RICHMOND.

The unveiling ceremony of the Queen Victoria Memorial Window in Christ Church, Richmond, was performed by Princess Christian in the presence of the Mayor and Corporation.

We must offer a full apology to Mr. Lumley Cator and Miss Adeline Blois for the unfortunate announcement which appeared in last week's issue of THE KING, to the effect that their wedding had already taken place. This was an entirely untrue statement and altogether without foundation.

Montegriff.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA AT GIBRALTAR.

Her Majesty landing at the Governor's Steps from the barge of the "Victoria and Albert." The guard of honour was supplied by the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, and her Majesty was accorded a very hearty welcome.

Digitized by Google

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

Copyright.

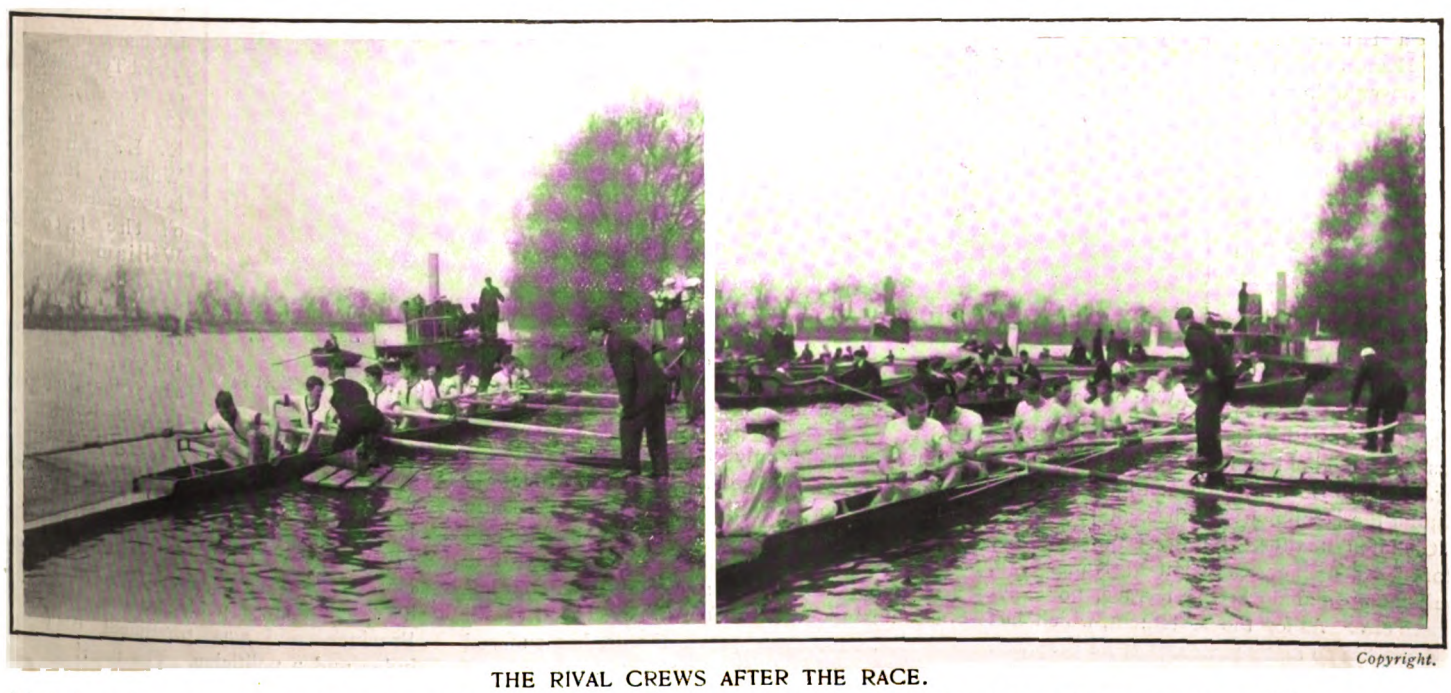
SCENES AT THE FINISH AT MORTLAKE.

The crews approaching Mortlake; the Oxford crew going easy after their victory.

Topical.

THE COURSE AT THE WINNING-POST.

Immediately after the race numerous craft swarm across the course, and in our illustration may be seen Mercédès IV., the motor-boat, winner of the Calais-Dover race, to the right of the tug in the foreground.



Copyright.

THE RIVAL CREWS AFTER THE RACE.

Oxford, who won by two and a-half lengths, pulling up at the landing-stage preparatory to disembarking, and the losers, who were very distressed by their exertions, preparing to leave their boat.

Digitized by Google

NEW YACHT FOR THE KING.—Messrs. A. and J. Inglis of Pointhouse, Glasgow, have secured the order to build the new steam yacht for the King. Several of the leading ship-building firms in the country were invited to tender, and in many instances the designs submitted for his Majesty's approval were accompanied by models. It is not expected that the new vessel will take the place of the "Victoria and Albert" built in 1899, neither will she equal the present Royal yachts in size. She will be of about 2,000-tons displacement and 310-ft. in length, and have a draught of between 14-ft. and 15-ft. In the matter of speed, however, she is to equal the "Victoria and Albert." She is to develop a mean speed of 18½-knots in a series of runs over the measured mile, and an average of 18-knots on a steam trial over a long course. She will be propelled by turbine engines, and will be the first Royal yacht to be fitted with this type of machinery. Designers had practically a free hand, and the designs were submitted without the names of the firms attached, so that it was possible to make a selection purely on the merits of the design.

LORD NORTON AND THE COLONIES. — A great deal of nonsense is being written about the late Lord Norton and Colonial self-government. One authority tells us that "he framed the New Zealand Constitution, as it stands unaltered to-day, walking up and down the terrace of Hams Hall." He never did, seeing that he was not Under-Secretary for the Colonies until 1866. As a matter of fact, the Constitution was drafted by Earl Grey, and, on reaching the Colony, it was found to be so unworkable, that Sir George Grey was asked to put it into shape. Since then it has been modifed in more than one particular. What Lord Norton actually did was to pilot the Dominion Bill through the House of Commons unaltered, but that is quite another story. He neither framed it at Hams Hall, walking up and down the terrace, nor anywhere else. As for the statement, which has appeared in so many places, that he prepared far-sighted schemes of self-government for Australia, that is also wide of the mark. Lord Norton's Imperial work is great enough to stand on its own merits. It only suffers from the picturesque fairy-tales of journalists with a plentiful lack of knowledge and cheap notions as to the manner in which Constitutions are made.

AUSTRALIAN POSTAGE. — Mr. Henniker Heaton, who has done more to promote cheap communications within the Empire than any other man, is as much to be congratulated on the new departure as Lord Stanley, the Postmaster-General. True, the penny rate of postage applies only to outward-bound letters; but the Commonwealth could hardly charge twopence for inter-State letters and one penny for inter-Imperial letters. It is easy to find fault with Australia for not coming into line with the other Colonies in this respect, but her circumstances are different. Not even South Africa, after three years of war, has suffered as Australia has done by a decade of drought. Its ravages were appalling, and the losses in proportion. Nevertheless, no outside help was accepted, and even Government aid was refused until things had become desperate. It is very safe to say that no other country in the world would have borne such a calamity any more bravely. That is why too much cannot be expected of Australia in our Imperial development for some time to come.

A MUNIFICENT GIFT.—Mr. Beit, who has just given £25,000 to the London Hospital as a thank-offering for his recovery from his recent illness, is one of the few multi-millionaires in the world who could be taken for an artist. Like the late Cecil Rhodes, he is as restless when he should be in repose as he is quietly concentrated in action. A curious story is told of him in Rhodesia. It appears that he, with a party of friends, was on a shooting expedition, and one night they camped out in unusually happy circumstances. The company was jolly, and under its influence Mr. Beit saw things in new perspective. At last he cried out, "Who would be a millionaire when one can be free? A trooper's life is the life for me. I'll enlist to-morrow." The morrow came, but Mr. Beit did not enlist. That was years ago, and he is still a millionaire, for time is as cruel to illusions on the veldt as elsewhere.

Lallie Charles.

THE DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND

Wife of the fourth Duke. The Duchess of Sutherland is the eldest daughter of the fourth Earl of Rosslyn, and was married in 1884.

AN ANGLO-CANADIAN ENGAGEMENT.—The engagement is announced of Miss Violet Tyrwhitt Drake, of Victoria, British Columbia, to Captain R. L. Muspratt Williams, R.A. She is the eldest daughter of the late Mr. William Tyrwhitt Drake. The family has been settled in the Province since 1859, that is to say, before Confederation, and after the discovery of gold. Miss Tyrwhitt Drake's grandfather belonged to the county family which owns Shardeloes in Bucks, and St. Donat Castle in Glamorgan. But he went out to the then remotest part of the Sovereign's Dominions in search of a career. At one time he filled a large place in the life of the Province, and was prominent both as a judge and a politician. The marriage of his grand-daughter to Captain Williams will take place in Victoria.

Digitized by Google

AN ANGLO-SOUTH AFRICAN ENGAGEMENT.—It was only the other day that Mr. Henry Oppenheim's son married Miss Sydney Brodie. The engagement of his daughter Linda is now announced. Her betrothed is the Hon. Kenneth Campbell, youngest son of Lord and Lady Stratheden and Campbell. The two families, who live next door to one another in Bruton Street, are much pleased at the engagement. Mr. Oppenheim is one of the many South African millionaires in our midst, and he and his wife have done some pleasant entertaining. Whether it is that the discovery of gold on the Rand is too recent, or the men, who make fabulous fortunes in mining, are too young, the fact remains the same that the South African girl is not nearly so well known in English society as the Canadian and Australasian. Last year Miss Ruhe married the Hon. Leopold Canning, Viscount Garvagh's heir, and Lady Gorst, wife of Sir Eldon Gorst, is a daughter of Mr. Rudd. These are the best-known South Africans married to titled Englishmen. Lady Falkiner, the prettiest and most charming of them all, died a year or two ago.

MISS CROSSLEY'S ENGAGEMENT.—The engagement of Miss Ada Crossley, the popular Australian contralto, is interesting to a wide circle of admirers, as well as to her own people. The happy man is Dr. F. Muecke, whom she met on her journey home from the Colonies last year. He is a surgeon, and at present on the staff of the London Hospital. Like herself he is a Colonial. Fortunately, Miss Crossley is not going to give up her profession, so that her beautiful voice will not be lost to the world on her marriage. She was born and bred in Gippsland, the wildest part of Victoria, and loves to describe herself as a child of the bush. This, and her home training, have had much to do in forming Miss Crossley's character. Her manner is simplicity itself, and never did a great artist do less to advertise herself. The visit she paid to her home last year was like a triumphal progress. She is the most popular, because the most unaffected, Australian who ever returned to her native land a famous woman with a world-wide reputation.

THE TRANSVAAL ATTORNEY-GENERAL.—Sir Richard Solomon, the Attorney-General of the Transvaal, was present at the King's Levee last week. He and his handsome wife are on a visit to England, to which they are now bound by closer ties than ever. For their only daughter is married to Sir Percy Girouard, late director of railways in South Africa, who was lately given a staff appointment at home. Lady Solomon is a sister of Mr. Lawson Walton, K.C. Her husband, the son of a missionary at the Cape, has the faculty of "getting on" in a wonderful degree. For he began his career as mathematical lecturer at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich. He got his first chance as the legal adviser to the Royal Commission, which sat in Mauritius twenty years ago, since when he has gone from one responsible post to another till he is now Attorney-General of the Transvaal. As a matter of fact his legal ability, judgment, and moderation were of the utmost value to the Government during the later stages of the War. Perhaps his pleasantest official experience was the representation of the Transvaal at the Durbar.

DEATH OF AN AMERICAN VETERAN.—With the death of General Hawley, the United States loses one of its grand old men. As statesman, soldier, orator, and journalist he has filled a large place in American public life for forty years. His wife is an Englishwoman, daughter of a country gentleman. She went to Philadelphia as a nurse, and it was there that Senator Hawley, for he was a legislator as well as a veteran, who fought in the Civil War, first met her. He promptly fell in love with her and married her. Owing to her husband's wealth and high position her influence in the good old society of the Quaker city is considerable. It was she who first brought the American woman to realise the value of the lady nurse. Her eldest daughter is named Victoria, after the late Queen. She has one of the most beautiful house-boats in the United States. Two years ago she and the Senator spent the summer in it off Newport so as to get the benefit of the sea breezes.

Langfier.

MRS. ALFRED OPPENHEIM

Who is a daughter of Lady Eleanor Brodie, was recently married to Mr. Alfred Oppenheim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oppenheim of 16, Bruton Street.

A TYPICAL COLONIST.—The death of Sir A. J. Cadman, Speaker of the New Zealand Legislative Council, will be deeply felt by Mr. Seddon. The deceased statesman was born in the Colony. His father was a pioneer settler in the Thames Valley District, and, on the discovery of gold, it was to him that the first miner's right was issued. He took an active part in public life, and the son followed in the father's steps. For a quarter of a century he represented Coromandel in Parliament, and was a trusted lieutenant of those potent personalities in New Zealand history, Sir George Grey and Mr. Ballance. He afterwards played a similar part in connection with Mr. Seddon, in whose Cabinet he was Minister for Railways. During the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Maoriland he was made a C.M.G., and, in 1903, a K.C.M.G. He was a typical Colonist of the old school.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE match between the Inverallochy fishermen and the members of the House of Commons on Saturday last proved to be a greater disappointment than was expected to be the case. It had been generally believed among golfers that the fishermen, whose fame as players had been widely trumpeted abroad in the South, would make a better fight on a seaside green like Sandwich than they would do had the match been played on a heavy inland course in the neighbourhood of a city. The members of the House of Commons beat the fishermen on the day's play by eight matches to two.

* * *

It appeared to be obvious that the fishermen did not do their game justice on account of being unduly nervous, and possibly through a too great desire to make their game correspond with the popular reputation which had preceded them. They had the air of players who were handicapping themselves by an excess of nervous anxiety, whereas if they had played with something of the easy indifference which is their habitual demeanour when at home, it was obvious to the critic who watched their play that the result of the matches might have been different. Another point about their play is that the majority of the styles have not been modelled after any good player, or any good school of players, such as may be seen among the youths who closely follow the game, and the style of players at well-known golfing resorts like St. Andrews and North Berwick. The fishermen are very direct and businesslike in their method of addressing and playing the ball. They appear to depend more upon their enormous muscular power than upon the grace of swing, and the effective method of timing the shot followed by our leading professional and amateur players. The fact is that they seem to be all self-taught players, each individual evolving a style peculiar to his own theories of how the ball should be struck and played. The majority of them play with a half swing, and the strongest points of their game is in the shot off the tee and their fairly consistent bold putting at the hole side. But probably, in consequence of being accustomed to practice on their home green at Inverallochy at holes whose distances are, for the most part, a tee shot and a pitch, the fishermen show that the weakest point of their game is in the intermediate shots with the brassie or the cleek. The fishermen are not good at picking up the ball for a good shot through the green, and their pitching in approach play is neither elegant nor effective. If one might offer a suggestion to Mr. Maconochie, M.P., who has done so much for the interests of golf in this remote part of Aberdeenshire, it would be that he should advise the fishermen's club at Inverallochy to engage a good professional with a fine style to give lessons to the younger members of the village as well as the fishermen themselves during the off fishing season, which lasts from October until May. Young boys are very imitative, and if they were taught

HOUSE OF COMMONS v. INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.
A. Ritchie ("Skeel") driving the first ball of the match; his opponent, Mr. Osmond Williams, M.P., watching the shot.

HOUSE OF COMMONS v. INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.
The Prime Minister approaching the 10th green surrounded by an interested "gallery."

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

how to grip the club and to swing in the elegant manner of the best school of professional golf, a vast improvement would speedily take place in the large amount of native-born golfing talent which is evidently an abundant supply at Inverallochy.

* * *

Many golfers have been heard to ask during the past week "Where is Inverallochy, and who are these fishermen golfers?" It is possible that after the match on Saturday at Sandwich, Inverallochy will hereafter have become so attractive that it will be brought within the annual orbit of the enterprising tourist. Inverallochy is a little fishing village on the Moray Firth, four miles south of Fraserburgh. The population, which numbers about 1,200, is entirely devoted to fishing, and the ratio of golfers at Inverallochy is probably higher than in any other community of the same size in Scotland. The club numbers about 130 members, nearly all fishermen, and it is about seventeen years ago since it was formed. The local landlord, anxious to encourage golf among the fishermen, gave them a splendid stretch of ground just outside their dwellings rent free, and it is here that the fishermen have by their unaided efforts cultivated a game which has now become famous. Mr. Dundas, the headmaster of the public school, is the captain, and Mr. White, a local merchant, the secretary. It is only between October and May that the fishermen play golf as a relaxation from the work of mending their nets and repairing their boats for the fishing season, which lasts from June until October. During these months they are at sea with their boats; but though their practice on the links is limited to six months in the year, their team of players claim the proud distinction of never having been beaten by a visiting team to their home links at Inverallochy. Four years ago the fishermen played a home and home match with the Victoria Club of Aberdeen. The teams were thirty players aside, and when the fishermen visited Aberdeen they lost the match by 22 holes. When the Aberdeen Club played the return match at Inverallochy the fishermen administered a crushing defeat of 69 holes.

* * *

Arrangements are being made to open a new golf course at Sandwich, and the work of clearing the ground has been begun. The new links will lie to the left of the present Royal St. George's course, and it is expected that in the making of the course about £3,000 will be expended. It is also understood that a large hotel will be built on the sea front, to be connected with the club-house on the new course by means of a small tramway. The cost of the hotel is estimated at £15,000.

* * *

One of the players who will compete in the Amateur Championship at Prestwick in the third week of May is Mr. George S. Lyon, the champion of Canada, and the winner of the Championship of the World at the St. Louis tournament last year. He leaves America for England in the third week of this month, and his intention is to get a little practice on Scottish courses before the Amateur Championship tournament opens.

* * *

Old Wallace's rude retort, as given in THE KING for March 18, "We didna' come here tae look at scenery; we cam' here tae gowff!"

HOUSE OF COMMONS v. INVERALLOCHY FISHERMEN.

On the way to the 3rd green: Mr. H. W. Forster, M.P., and Mr. A. W. Soames, M.P., accompanied by "Sang" Ritchie and Robert Stephen.

THE TWO TEAMS.

Back row, standing—Mr. Osmond Williams, M.P., A. Ritchie ("Sang"), Sir H. Seton-Karr, M.P., Mr. A. B. Tennyson, Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., M.P., Mr. Eric Hambro, M.P., Mr. H. W. Forster, M.P., Mr. Ryder Richardson (secretary of St. George's Club), and Mr. A. W. Maconochie, M.P. Sitting—House of Commons: Mr. Guy Pym, Mr. Wanklyn, Mr. Balfour, and Mr. Soames.

"FOLLOW OUR LEADER."

Crossing the canal bridge at the 14th hole in the Prime Minister's match.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

recalls two infinitely prettier yarns told by Miss L. B. Walford some years ago in an article upon Macrihanish, which may be new to some readers. To the remark, "What beautiful views there are from the links!" comes the priceless reply, "Yes, indeed, there are — on Sundays!" The overwhelming majority of golf yarns deal with the sayings, thoughts, and doings of the eerie and mysterious caddie-folk, and the following is not unworthy of the wisest of a wise race. A fellow, flushed with victory after gaining the ninth hole, looked around and broke into exclamations of ecstasy over the beauty of the landscape, "Ay, it's fine," quoth Donald, drily, "it's fine —when you're three up!"

* * *

Dalzell House, near Motherwell, where Lord Aberdeen is at present the guest of Lord Hamilton, is one of the few places where folk play "Scotch skittles," which differs entirely from the common game. The ball is hung by a long rope from a bracket in the wall, and is so thrown round a small post that it strikes the "men" as it swings back to the player. One can credit the assertion that it is not quite so simple as it looks.

George Stephen, the opponent of Mr. A. B Tennyson, playing an iron shot; a good grip and otherwise a fair finish.

The entries for the Ladies' Championship will close on May 18, and the annual meeting of the Ladies' Golf Union and draw for the championship will be held in London on May 19. The Sheringham Golf Club proposes to hold an open meeting on Saturday, May 27. As the Sheringham course is within a short drive of Cromer, it is probable that the majority of the Championship competitors will enter for the Sheringham meeting. The Council of the Ladies' Union, at their recent meeting, drew up a new rule referring to the starting time of competitors in the Championship. In future competitors not on the tee at starting time will be scratched, unless the committee consider the reason given an adequate one. The Union Gold Medal Open and the Silver Medal in the affiliated clubs will be competed for a Lytham and St. Anne's on April 17. The Golfing Challenge Cup will also be competed for at St. Anne's on the same date.

* * *

There is every prospect of North Berwick being provided with a relief course at an early date. A meeting was recently held in Edinburgh, under the presidency of Sir Robert Cranston, the Lord Provost, to discuss a proposal to form a syndicate to acquire about 114 acres of land from Sir Walter Da'rymple to the east of the Burn, leading from the Ladies' Glen at North Berwick, which would include the Rhodes links. Favourable terms have been offered by the agents of the proprietor, a lease for thirty-one years being offered at a rental beginning at £280 per annum. In considering the question of revenue and expenditure, it was estimated that the annual up-keep of the course and club-house would be covered by a payment of £2 2s. by 200 members, in addition to the rent from boxes and the issue of tickets to visitors. Before the meeting closed nearly 500 shares were taken in the new golf syndicate.

George Buchan ("Joe"), the opponent of Mr. Eric Hambro, M.P., driving from the tee. The grip is a wide one, hands too far apart, too much palm, and little follow through.

* * *

The Improved Golf Ball Company, Limited, have manufactured two new golf balls, and have placed them on the market for the benefit of golfers. They are "The Royal," a double-cored patent ball, whose cost is 1s. 6d., and "The Crown," at the price of 1s. 9d. Both balls are modelled on the Bramble pattern, which seems unhappily to have become stereotyped with all manufacturers of new balls. Golfers have something of a practical grievance against the uniformity which has become established in the marking of the rubber-core ball, for the universal choice of the Bramble pattern makes it impossible for players to distinguish with anything like ease one ball from another in actual play. These two balls are certainly as good and are as carefully made as any other kind of ball open to the choice of the golfer to-day. They are cleanly moulded, well painted, fly well, keep their shape, and can be played with at the hole side with assured confidence.

James Buchan, the leading player of the Inverallochy team, who played against the Prime Minister, approaching the 3rd green; a good grip with the hands, and otherwise a correct finish of the stroke.

Correspondence.

GOLF AND CURLING.

To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—In view of the coming curling tournament at the headquarters of the London Caledonian Curling Club, which promises to be the greatest ever held in the South of England, the following "yarns" may not come amiss.

Robert Stephen, who played against Mr. Soames, driving at the 5th tee; rather a constrained finish, with defective foot action.

The close association between curler and golfer is not a thing of yesterday. "The Golfer's Year Book, 1866," is dedicated to Colonel Fairlie of Coodham, as "the Champion Amateur of Scotland, as having held the Prestwick, St. Andrews, and North Berwick medals during the same year"; and it is of him that Norman Macleod sings in his famous curling song:

"There's braw J. O. Fairlie (he's there late and early) Better curlers than he or Hugh Conn canna be."

Hugh Conn, an auctioneer, played No. 3 in the invincible Kilwinning rink of the Earl of Eglinton, "Scotland's pride and Ayrshire's glory."

Conviviality, as opposed to revelry, has always been affected by both curler and golfer; and there is a quaint analogy between their favourite toasts. The above-mentioned Earl, at the historic dinner of the Grand Caledonian Curling Club at Kilmarnock in 1841, gave the hallowed toast of "The Tee" with commendable brevity. "The toast I have next to propose is short and small, and comes within a small compass. It is a centre, which brings all the curlers in Scotland together and constitutes many a keen contest and at the same time many an anxious moment." On the

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

NAZEING COMMON GOLF CLUB.

(1) Dr. Hawkins, captain of the club, the referee in the Taylor v. Braid match a week ago. (2) Watching the play at the 9th green in the Taylor and Braid match. (3) Some of the crowd following the two professionals. (4) A few lady golfers watching Taylor's last drive. (5) The Rev. T. W. Goddard, the hon. secretary, an old golfer who has written much about the game, and the inventor of a new gutta ball, watching the play from the club-house.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

other hand, the toast of the Bruntsfield dinners was "The green—the source of all our enjoyment"; and when the sad time came when the famous old club was to desert the famous old green for ever, one of their captains, Mr. T. S. Aitchison, sang:

"But still we'll toast ye, Bruntsfield Green,
And think o' happier days ye've seen
When o' the Links ye were the Queen,
And ruled the spiel,
Surrounded by your sons sae keen,
Wha lo'ed ye weel."

In spite of Norman Macleod's own default, for he was himself no curler, the Kirk of Scotland have supported the national winter sport like men and brothers. Think of that dear, old, guileless minister, who, before dismissing the congregation with the usual benediction, announced from the pulpit: "My brethren, there's no more harm in saying than in thinking it—if the frost hauds, I'll be on the ice the morn at nine!" Or the Rev. David Wadderstone, who was for twenty-three years minister of the parish of Bathgate, and died so long ago as 1780. A keen curler, he usually headed his flock against neighbouring parishes. Late on Saturday evening, one of his elders, John Clarkson, received a challenge from Shotts parish to meet on Monday, and was nonplussed how to communicate the joyous news to his minister; for obtrusion on a Scottish minister on Saturday ranks with sacrilege and Sunday golf. Finally, he decided to tell the minister in the session-house on Sunday morning. The pastor had no sooner entered than John said in a low tone "Minister, I've something to tell you—there's to be a parish play wi' the Shotts folk the morn at——" "Whist, man, whist! O, fie, shame, John! Fie, shame! Nae speaking to-day about worldly recreations." But as he was about to enter the kirk itself he wheeled round and whispered, "But whan's the hour, John? I'll be sure and be there!" The Rev. Mr. Lyon, minister of the parish of Blairgowrie from 1723 to 1768, continued to curl with unabated ardour even after age had scarcely left him strength to send a stone over the "hog." He once over-exerted himself in delivery, lost his balance, and fell on his back. Some of the bystanders hastened to his aid, while another graceless one placed the stone just thrown on the "tee." Still on his back the aged minister eagerly enquired where his stone was, and being informed that it was on the tee, exclaimed, "Then I'm no a bit the waur"!

Stalwart men these old curlers were, and could wield stones of 116-lb. weight. With such heavy stones William Gourlay did surprising execution; for they could move on—after taking away the "guard" and "raising" half-a-dozen stones in succession—gain a tee that had seemed impregnable. There are instances of stones having been thrown an English mile.

The following goes far to explain the extreme care of the old-time curler. The Lindsays of Dunrod had a reputation in the West Countree not unlike that of the de'il-may-care, hell-in-harness Logans of Restalrig in the East. The last of this majestic race, indignant at disobedience of a curling command, had a hole dug in the ice then and there, and the villain drowned therein. This is to this hour known as Crawford's Hole, in memory of the ruffian who expiated there his impious insubordination to his skip and feudal lord.—I am, etc., W. DALRYMPLE.

A TEE ON A SLAG HEAP.
The general nature of the Alexandria course.

GOLF AT ALEXANDRIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—While cruising in the Mediterranean this winter I had to spend three days in port at Alexandria, and having my golf clubs with me I took the electric tram to the Sporting Club Station and paid a visit to the links there.

ONE OF THE PUTTING GREENS AT ALEXANDRIA (THE RACE-COURSE).
The Grand Stand on the left.

The game is played on the race-course and polo ground of the Sporting Club, and through the courtesy of the hon. secretary, Major Ludlow, I was able to play a round.

Owing to the restricted area there is very little variety in the holes, except in their length. The committee have, however, managed to get eighteen holes in this small space of perhaps ten or fifteen acres. One might, perhaps, think that nine holes would have proved sufficient. As it is the holes cross and recross one another, as they go backwards and forwards across the race-course; and if there are many players one party must wait while another crosses. The course is quite flat, and clothed with clover grass, which is kept in fair order. The putting greens are a difficulty, being of hard rolled mud strewn with fine sand; it requires a very delicate touch to hole out even the shortest putt, and as they are only 10-yds. square one seldom finds one's self on the green after an approach of the shortest.

The teeing grounds are small and of the same material, and all balls appear to be teed up on nearly the same spot. Two of these grounds are on the top of a heap of slag adjacent to the racecourse, and the only bunkers are the sandy track of the race-course, some small irrigating drains, and the boarded edges of the polo ground. At only two holes can the brassie be used, namely, the tenth and last, the remainder being a drive and a "snip," except two, which are mashie shots. Altogether, after a month without golf, I enjoyed the round.

The Arab caddie boy could not speak English, nor could he count over ten, but, on the other hand, he only demanded one piastre for the eighteen holes. I send you two snapshots of the course.

All attempts to form links at Port Said have failed on account of the absence of grass and the constantly moving sand. At Beyrout there are no links, and I astonished the Arab caretaker of the race-course there and his friends by knocking a couple of balls round the course with a mashie, the course being 30-yds. wide, and 1½-miles long. A mad Feringee, indeed!—I am, etc., H. T. M.

FIXTURES.

April 8.—Glasgow (Killermont), Final Medal Competition; Stewart Cup (handicap).
April 10.—Barnehurst Ladies' Spring Meeting.
April 10.—Royal Guernsey Spring Meeting.
April 11.—Barnehurst Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 12.—Royal Blackheath Spring Meeting.
April 12-13.—Ranelagh Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 13.—Royal Liverpool Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 15.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal (Bogey).
April 15.—Glasgow, Spring Meeting (Gailes).
April 17.—Lytham and St. Anne's Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 20.—Glasgow (Killermont) v. New Club, St. Andrews.
April 21-24.—Frinton Easter Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XXXVII.—Mr. Sidney J. Pocock, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Uxbridge Division of Middlesex.

NUMERICALLY, geographically, and socially the Uxbridge Division of Middlesex is one of very considerable importance. The Royal Palace of Hampton Court stands on its confines, and a quorum of the House of Lords might very easily be formed within its four corners. For twenty years all told, Uxbridge has "gone Conservative" with no uncertain note. Thirteen years ago the majority was 3,143, and there has been no contest in the interval. The many-sided representative of the Uxbridge Division at Westminster was not only the learned author of a "Genealogical and Chronological History of the Royal Houses of Europe," but he held a quasi-Naval office which enabled him to wear a picturesque uniform at the smallest possible provocation. The pennant of Sir F. Dixon-Hartland, as High Admiral of the Thames Conservancy, has recently been transferred by resignation to Mr. W. F. Grenfell, and signs are not wanting that Uxbridge may shortly be the scene of one of those sensational political changes of allegiance, of which North Dorset and Buteshire have afforded the most recent and remarkable examples. In the person of Mr. Sidney J. Pocock of Charlton Court, Shepperton, Sir F. Dixon-Hartland will assuredly find an adversary worthy of his steel. Mr. Pocock became, some years ago, the owner of one of those delightful old-fashioned places still to be found near the banks of the Thames; and although he is not a "local preacher," as the "sitting member," from his recent utterances, would really appear to believe, both his past record and present views on the great political and economical questions of the hour, are precisely such as are calculated to induce the hard-headed and eminently practical market-gardeners and fruit-growers of the Uxbridge Division to hesitate before refusing their suffrages to the man whose motto is "Peace, Prosperity, and Progress," and whose watchwords are "Untaxed Food and Unity with the Colonies."

Copyright.

CHARLTON COURT, NEAR SHEPPERTON

The residence of Mr. Sidney J. Pocock, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Uxbridge Division of Middlesex.

Mr. Sidney Pocock comes of a good old Wiltshire stock. The Pococks of Whitley, near Melksham, have been notable yeomen for many generations, and Mr. Pocock's mother was a Keevil of Bradley, in the neighbourhood of Trowbridge. He was born just half a century ago at Broome Manor, Swindon, but his parents removed shortly afterwards to Stanford-in-the-Vale, near Farringdon, and his earliest youth was passed, like that of Tom Brown, within sight of the historic White Horse. Mr. Abraham Pocock and his wife were strong Nonconformists, and in due course their son went to Mr. Howell's well-known school at Farringdon, where he completed his education. About thirty years since Sidney Pocock came to London, where he joined Mr. W. H. Freeth in business as wholesale milk contractors and manufacturers of dairy requisites and machinery. The enterprise, started originally in Paddington, has now assumed very important proportions, and the names of Messrs. Pocock and Freeth, both as experts and exporters, are known in every part of the world. Mr. Pocock has practically retired from active participation in commerce, but he is still chairman of Freeth and Pocock, Limited, and a director of the Dairy Outfit Company, Limited, at King's Cross and Hemel Hempstead.

Possibly the great secret of Mr. Sidney Pocock's success in everything he has undertaken lies in the fact that he has gone through life with his eyes open, and that he does not know what it is to spell failure. As far as a thorough knowledge of practical farming is concerned he has very few rivals. In 1891 he gave important evidence before the Departmental Committee appointed by the Board of Agriculture. He has also taken an active part, as a member of the Council of the British Dairy Farmers' Association, in the movement for the reduction of railway rates for home-grown produce. The president for 1905 is Lord Northbourne, and amongst his colleagues is Mr. Jesse Collings, with whom he is on the best of terms, although the member for the Bordesley Division of Birmingham has neither offered to speak for him at Uxbridge, nor converted him to an acceptance of the aboriginal doctrine of "three acres and a cow" as the panacea for the ills which the British labourer is heir to. Mr. Pocock remembers the time when Mr. Collings's dictum was taken seriously "in the Vale," and the Berkshire peasants informed his father that when the time for choosing came, they had no idea of putting up with the worst animal in the herd! Eleven years ago Mr. Pocock was president of the Dairymen's Benevolent Institution. He signalised his term of office by collecting the then record sum of £1,160. He received an illuminated address of thanks, and remains a vice-president of this most useful charity. Although the life of the owner of Charlton Court has been an unusually busy one, he has visited many parts of the world, bringing back a store of pleasant and useful reminiscences from Syria, Palestine, Turkey, Egypt, and Canada, where he owns a considerable tract of fertile land. Possibly it is the travel-lectures which Mr. Pocock gives at P.S.A. gatherings which has imbued the mind of his political rival with the idea that he is given to preaching on the one day of the week not usually devoted to public meetings.

Since Mr. Pocock has undertaken what was once regarded as the almost impossible task of winning the Uxbridge Division for the Liberals, his activity has been phenomenal. Not only has he addressed meetings in every portion of the constituency, but he hopes before the General Election comes round to fulfil his promise of delivering (by the aid of relays of motor-cars) thirty different speeches on thirty different topics in thirty different places, in the course of a single day! He is a telling and vigorous speaker, and is heard at his best while upholding Free Trade, exposing the shortcomings of the Education Act, or explaining the advantages of certain forms of farming, and the necessity of still further facilitating the commerce of land. In the next House of Commons his ripe experience and practical knowledge of agricultural matters would be invaluable. Sir Charles Dilke is one of Mr. Pocock's neighbours and constituents at Shepperton, while in the person of Sir George Kekewich, K.C.B., Mr. Councillor Dobin of Feltham, and Mr. T. Wild, C.C., of Sipson, the Uxbridge Liberal Association possesses an ideal president, secretary, and treasurer. Mr. John Hill of Staines is labouring indefatigably as Mr. Pocock's agent, and no speaker in the Liberal ranks awakens greater enthusiasm or commands more respect than the veteran Mr. J. C. Buckmaster, M.A., J.P., of Teddington, as upright, vigorous, and eloquent now as he was fifty years ago, when he commenced his historic crusade on behalf of South Kensington in the days of "Old King Cole." Nor is feminine aid wanting, for Lady Kekewich hopes to lead the Uxbridge Women's Liberal Association to victory, while with Mrs. Crossley as vice-president, with Mrs. Schultz as hon. secretary, much good work is being accomplished in connection with the Uxbridge Division Liberal Social Council.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

FOR the moment a very widespread interest is being evinced in the Monaco Motor-boat Meeting, as, apart altogether from questions of sport, it is felt that the results of the races, which commence on Sunday next and extend over a week, may have an important influence on the future of the motor-boat industry. The British champions are very few in number, and should the foreign-built boats sweep the board, as they did last year, the mischievous impression that nothing good in the motor line, either on land or sea, can be expected from this side of the Channel, will be still further strengthened. In the racing classes there are only three British boats in all, two Napiers and a Brooke, against whom are arrayed all the great motor-makers and boat-builders on the Continent. It is somewhat disappointing that great firms like Vickers, Sons, and Maxim, and Thornycroft, who have a wide experience in building both petrol motors and boats, have not thought it worth their while to try conclusions with their foreign rivals at so important and so widely-advertised a meeting as the Monaco Regatta. A firm which has been building petrol-driven submarines for the British Government for some years past, ought to be able to compete with foreign car-makers who until a year ago had never turned out a marine motor from their works.

Whoever wins, there are certain to be some sensational speeds accomplished if the weather remains fine, and that motor-boat-racing is capable of producing excellent sport was proved last year, when two 21-ft. cruisers, "La Marguerite" and "Loodit," finished a 60-kilomètre course within 3-5-sec. of each other, while only 8-sec. separated the third and fourth boats. The most successful boat at last year's meeting was "Trèfle-à-Quatre," a 32-ft. racer, with a Seyler hull and a Georges-Richard-Brasier motor, identical in size and design with the one used on the winning car in the Gordon Bennett race. The most notable achievement of this little craft during the Monaco Week was the winning of a 200-kilomètre (125-miles) race in 5-hr. 16-min. 51-sec.,

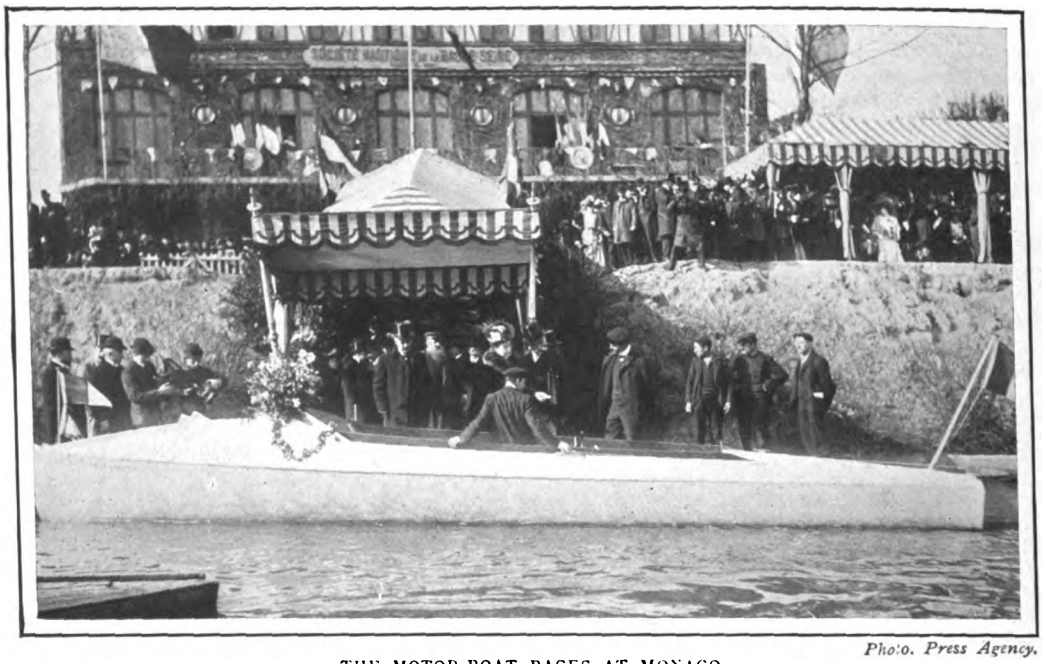

Photo. Press Agency.

THE MOTOR-BOAT RACES AT MONACO.

The launch of "La Turquoise," which has been entered by Mme. du Gast, the well-known French sportswoman, who drove a motor-car in the Paris-Madrid race. Mme. du Gast will steer her boat herself.

equivalent to an average speed of over 20-knots. In this event the Richard-Brasier engine first showed that capacity for regular and sustained effort which was so largely responsible for the maker's subsequent victories on land in the French selection trials and the Cup race itself. At Monaco "Trèfle-à-Quatre" caused general astonishment by covering round after round of the course with almost clock-like regularity. The fastest speed was in the race for the Prince of Monaco's Cup, when she covered a nautical mile plus a kilomètre, or 2,852-mètres in all, in 4-min. 17 3-5-sec., which works out at 40-kilomètres, or 24·8-miles, an hour, or practically 22-knots. This speed was only beaten once on the open sea during the year, when, on the occasion of the cross-Channel race in August, "Mercédès IV." averaged 25½ miles an hour. Other notable boats at last year's Monaco Meeting were "La Râpée III.," a 26-ft. Panhard-Tellier racer, and "Vas-y," a fine Delahaye-Pitre cruiser. There were about fifty craft in all engaged, ranging from the 60-ft. "Parisienne II.," fitted with three 60-h.p. Mors motors, which caught fire in her first race, and was entirely destroyed, down to the 7-ft. pinnace "Allo V.," fitted with a two-cylinder engine giving about 13-h.p., which covered a 25-kilomètre course in under 3-hr.

Photo. Press Agency.

ANOTHER COMPETITOR IN THE MONACO RACES.

The powerful 180-h p. "Mercédès-Mercédès," which was recently launched in Paris. She is considered one of the fastest petrol-driven yachts yet built.

I do not know whether there is any boat so tiny as "Allo V." at this year's meeting, but it is certain that "Parisienne II." would now be regarded as quite low-powered for a racer. At the exhibition of the competitors which was held in the early part of this week, were to be seen the 50-ft. "Dubonnet" with a single 300-h.p. Delahaye engine, the "Mercédès-Charley" with a Pitre hull only 40-ft. in length, but driven by a 180-h.p. motor, the "Panhard Levassor" with a 42-ft. Tellier hull and two 100-h.p. Panhard motors, coupled in tandem, and "Palaisoto I.," another 40-ft. boat with a 180-h.p. motor, to mention only a few out of many. There are five vessels fitted with Richard-Brasier engines, including the victor of last year's meeting. The biggest is the "Grand Trefle," a 12·18-mètres boat with engines of 150-h.p. and twin screws. The latter is an unusual feature in this year's racers, although "Napier II.," which lately made such a sensational trial on the Thames, has two propellers. One of the most interesting craft is "La Turquoise," which will be steered and "driven" by Mme. du Gast. "La Turquoise" is a 30-ft. Tellier boat with an Antoinette motor of eight cylinders set opposite to each other in V fashion, four on each side. Instead of a reversing gear the motor itself can be reversed by altering the position of the valve cams. Among the cruiser classes the most ambitious-looking vessel is the "Mercédès-Mercédès," which is really a fair-sized yacht, 60-ft. in length, with very comfortable cabin accommodation. On her trial runs she is said to have attained a speed of nearly 19-miles an hour. Her propelling machinery consists of two 90-h.p. Mercédès motors. Visitors to last year's Paris Exhibition will remember the dainty little model of "Mercédès-Mercédès" which was shown in the boat section.

Digitized by Google

I am sorry to see that the time-expired Marine Artillerymen at Eastney Barracks, who, thanks to the efforts of their officers, have been undergoing a course of motor driving and management for some months past, have not succeeded in satisfying the Thomson.

MRS. JAMES RANDELL

In her 12-h.p. water-cooled Lanchester car Mrs. Randell is a lover of outdoor pastimes, and has been an enthusiastic motorist for some years.

Automobile Club's examiners as to their proficiency in actual driving. I mentioned a few weeks ago that Mr. Worby Beaumont, Professor Vernon Boys, F.R.S., and Mr. R. E. Phillips had journeyed down to Portsmouth to examine these men, with a view to granting certificates to the proficients. The examination consisted of a paper of twenty-four questions on the practical construction of a car, followed by practical work on a number of machines lent for the purpose. Then the candidates were set another paper on the rules of the road and the Motor-car Act. The examiners reported that the men showed very considerable knowledge, not only of the parts of the car to which they had been accustomed, but of the proper functions of the mechanism, and in most cases were able to diagnose quickly any defects which had been intentionally occasioned. The examination into driving efficiency was less satisfactory in its results, which perhaps is not to be wondered at, as any course of instruction can only give a pupil a groundwork of knowledge, upon which, with care and the necessary opportunities for practice, he can build up the proficiency which lengthy experience on the road alone can afford.

The net result of the examination of the Eastney class is that ten men have been granted certificates for mechanical proficiency, but only one has received a driving certificate. It by no means follows, however, that the ten would not prove exceedingly valuable servants, and in the eyes of many owners the certainty of obtaining a man of exemplary character would outweigh the admitted deficiency in driving experience. No doubt the Automobile Club has very properly set a high standard of skill, as if its certificates are to carry weight in the eyes of the public, they must be granted only to drivers who can show a very considerable degree of proficiency.

RADIATOR.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

A LITTLE BIT OF SCANDAL.

TRY to keep something secret, try to hush up a circumstance, try to think nobody knows what you do not want known, and see how well you succeed in a city like ours. Not many weeks ago there were whispers of a peculiar case that made the wicked smile; a case that may be frequent enough, but which even the most intimate connections rarely hear of; a case that a man, as a rule, keeps to himself. It was something like "Ein Junglingliebt ein Mädchen," but not quite; for the "jungling" was over fifty and the "Mädchen" a married woman. But it was love, for all that, at least, on his side. He had begun to what is called "live" late in life. He had a wife somewhere in the country, a good woman—how she would like to hear herself described so!—who devoted her days to the washing and dressing of her children, and her nights to the mending of their socks. She made a splendid mother, but a wretched wife. He left home by the early train and came back at night for dinner every day, excepting Sundays and holidays, during twenty years.

One day he meets a woman to whom he tells the story of his daily life, and he begins to understand that he is not happy. She was a married woman, certainly, but her husband was away, had been away for years. A woman of experience, who knew a thing or two, as the parrot said. And things became interesting.

He spent his money royally, did this elderly lover. Took a snug little flat, furnished it, and prepared to pass the rest of his days (from four to six) with his Dulcinea. A heavenly time, as long as it lasted! At four o'clock he hung up his office coat and was off to his pastures new. At six he took the suburban train, and nothing was outwardly changed in his relations to his family.

One day, however, the idyll ended. Why did the concierge look after him as he mounted the familiar stairs? Why did the parlour-maid smile so strangely as she opened the door of the little flat? Why was everything strange on this particular day? Why, indeed? What had occurred? Nothing. A trifle. The husband had come home! And there, before the blazing wood fire—his fire—sat a fat, comfortable-looking individual lolling in the big arm-chair—his arm-chair, his hands in his pockets, his legs stretched across the rug—his rug. He was introduced, paid a visit of the traditional quarter of an hour, shook hands, and withdrew. He had left the husband in possession.

It was his first irregular love; his first adventure. It weighed too heavily. He had to tell somebody. He told a friend.

How it occurred nobody knows, nobody ever knows, but in an hour the story was all over Paris. Eventually it came to the ready net of the "reviewist" and found its way to the Scala. M. Daniel Jourda has called it "Affaire de Bourse."

All Paris goes to see the short act, placed before the last five numbers of the variety entertainment, sandwiched between Miss Compton and the surprise polka. The elderly stockbroker has provided his acquaintances with more merriment than he had out of the affair, poor fellow. And heartless Paris laughs as the story is unrolled. And he? Does he know that the cont etemps, as he picturesquely explained it, is filling the coffers of a music hall and the pockets of a dramatist? Not for a moment. He takes his six o'clock train as he has done for nearly a quarter of a century, and never associates the "Affaire de Bourse" placarded on the city walls with Fernande, his flat, and his furniture.

MLLE. MARCELLE YRWEN

Who is playing at the Scala, Paris. (From a photograph by Manuel.)

In the revue that follows there are some bright allusions, as usual, to the events of the day. They have a light way of handling some of the heaviest utensils, these Parisians, saucepans and others. How the word "casserole" has been extended! The happiest skit was, however, on the literature of the past. And past is the word to use. We are taken to the square stone building in the Bois de Boulogne, formerly the property of Sir Richard Wallace, known as Bagatelle. This building, as everybody knows, has been bought by the City of Paris. Here, while they discuss what will become of it, we see the ghosts of Alfred de Musset, Balzac, and Lamartine. How worried they look! What is becoming of their glory? Who reads them? Who remembers them? And here comes a venerable white-beard to join their ranks. Victor Hugo with tears in his eyes. And they tell each other sadly, so sadly, how their works are published in cheap editions, how even at threepence a copy nobody buys them, how they are offered to the public with a china dinner service or a phonograph.

Then comes Mme. Bovary, who objects to be dramatised. And finally we have a miniature representation of the German play at the Vaudeville, "La Retraite," with a commentary at the dress rehearsal by two of the well-known habituées, Marguerite Deval and Baltley. A private box is arranged for each of these ladies on the small stage, and two of the comedians appear in their places. "Marguerite Deval" is quiet. She never seeks to attract more than her share of attention. She waves a hand here, and gives a nod there: "Bonjour Yvette," "Bonjour Catulle," quite loud, of course, but not louder than necessary to be heard. "Baltley" is, for once, alone. The long white-robed figure, with the large black hat, the angular movements, the gruff laugh, are wonderfully imitated by that inimitable Morton. There is nothing funnier than a man in woman's clothes when the woman and her costume are taken seriously. And Morton has taken Baltley seriously! Have you ever seen the extraordinary woman with her long flat figure, her good-tempered smile, and her comical voice? She once played the part of a love-sick girl who helps a man to escape from prison with a rope-ladder. I remember her—and shall never forget her—drawing yards and yards of rope from the opening of her bodice. She looks as if she could do it still.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

A Paris Toilette

A ROBE OF POMPADOUR MOUSSELINE DE SOIE, TRIMMED WITH MALINES LACE. MAISON REDFERN.

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

PLYMOUTH WEEK will open this year on July 26, and will thus precede Cowes Week, instead of, as hitherto, concluding the season. The alteration has often been suggested, in the hope that yachts on their return from the Clyde would be able to take part in the regattas, and thus make the Western regatta week what it should be—one of the most important of the season. Of late years it has been found that many racing owners have either laid up their craft before the first week in September, or are, perhaps, indulging in a short spell of cruising before sending their boats into winter quarters. Whichever might have been the case, the result to the late fixture has been the same—a dearth of entries for the more important events.

Whether the new arrangement will improve matters remains to be seen; at any rate, the experiment is well worth the trial. The season is becoming so crowded with fixtures, that many clubs find it extremely difficult in arranging dates to avoid clashing with those of other clubs, and the complete alteration of a series of regattas as in the present instance must be in a great measure experimental.

The success of the week will depend upon one or two considerations. Firstly, if the proposed race from the Clyde to Cowes should take definite form, all the yachts taking part therein would be carried past Plymouth, and it is improbable that they would return to the Western port, with the Cowes and Solent fixtures so close. In the majority of cases, the craft would be in one or other of the yards, being scrubbed and undergoing a final tuning up prior to Cowes. Vessels taking part in the Plymouth regattas would, under favourable conditions, be able to get up to the Solent in time for any necessary cleaning, but the Southampton matches, if arranged as last year, on the Friday and Saturday preceding Cowes Week, would be likely to suffer, as many yachts would then be in dock or on the Hard.

The natural attractions of Plymouth are such that, with other conditions favourable, the Plymouth Week should be one of the most popular of the whole season, if such a description can be rightly applied to one of the most exclusive of pastimes. Plymouth Sound is an ideal yachting ground. It possesses the great advantage of depth of water and freedom from shoals. The coasts are bold, and can be approached quite close with impunity, and a lead-line often finds no place in the equipment of the local boats. Another great advantage is that, in all but the heaviest weather, even the smallest classes of boat can be raced, the breakwater providing comparatively smooth water inside when there is sufficient weight in the wind to knock up a big sea outside. In addition to these considerations, there is the other great advantage, without which the foregoing would be of but little worth—ample and secure anchorage for vessels of all dimensions.

With all these natural advantages, it is not to be wondered at that yachting has taken deep root locally. The port is well provided with clubs. The Royal Western, the senior club, is one of the oldest institutions in the kingdom, dating from 1827, and has commodious quarters splendidly situated at the western end of the Hoe, whence a magnificent view of the whole of the Sound is obtained.

The Royal Plymouth Corinthian Club was formed in 1877, and has recently constructed quarters on the front, just opposite the entrance to the Cattewater, in addition to winter quarters in Lockyer Street. The Royal South Western Club was established in 1890, and has also comfortable quarters on the sea-front at the western end of the Hoe. In addition to these there is a local branch of the Minima Club. Between these clubs all classes of yachts and boats are amply catered for.

The local enthusiasm for yachting is such, however, that notwithstanding the provision thus made by the clubs for all branches of the sport, a town regatta, conducted by a special committee, and for which prizes are provided by public subscription, always finds a prominent place in the annual week.

This town regatta has distinctive features of its own, and the day's programme is one of the most varied and interesting of any to be found around the coast, including, as it does, in addition to matches for every type of yacht, events for all the different classes of fishing craft. In these latter contests the keenest rivalry is displayed, particularly when, as is often the case, recognised champions of different ports are amongst the competitors.

Should the day of the town fixture be favoured with fine weather, the slopes of the Hoe are thronged with spectators, who, in addition to being able to see the whole of the racing, are also kept posted throughout the day with the positions of the competing vessels at the end of every round. This is done by means of huge signboards set up on the Hoe, in charge of officials to whom the progress of the racing is signalled from the committee-boat.

I know of no other regatta at which such a system is attempted. On the contrary, one often finds that the general public has no means of knowing what is in progress at a regatta.

CORINTHIAN.

Photochrom.

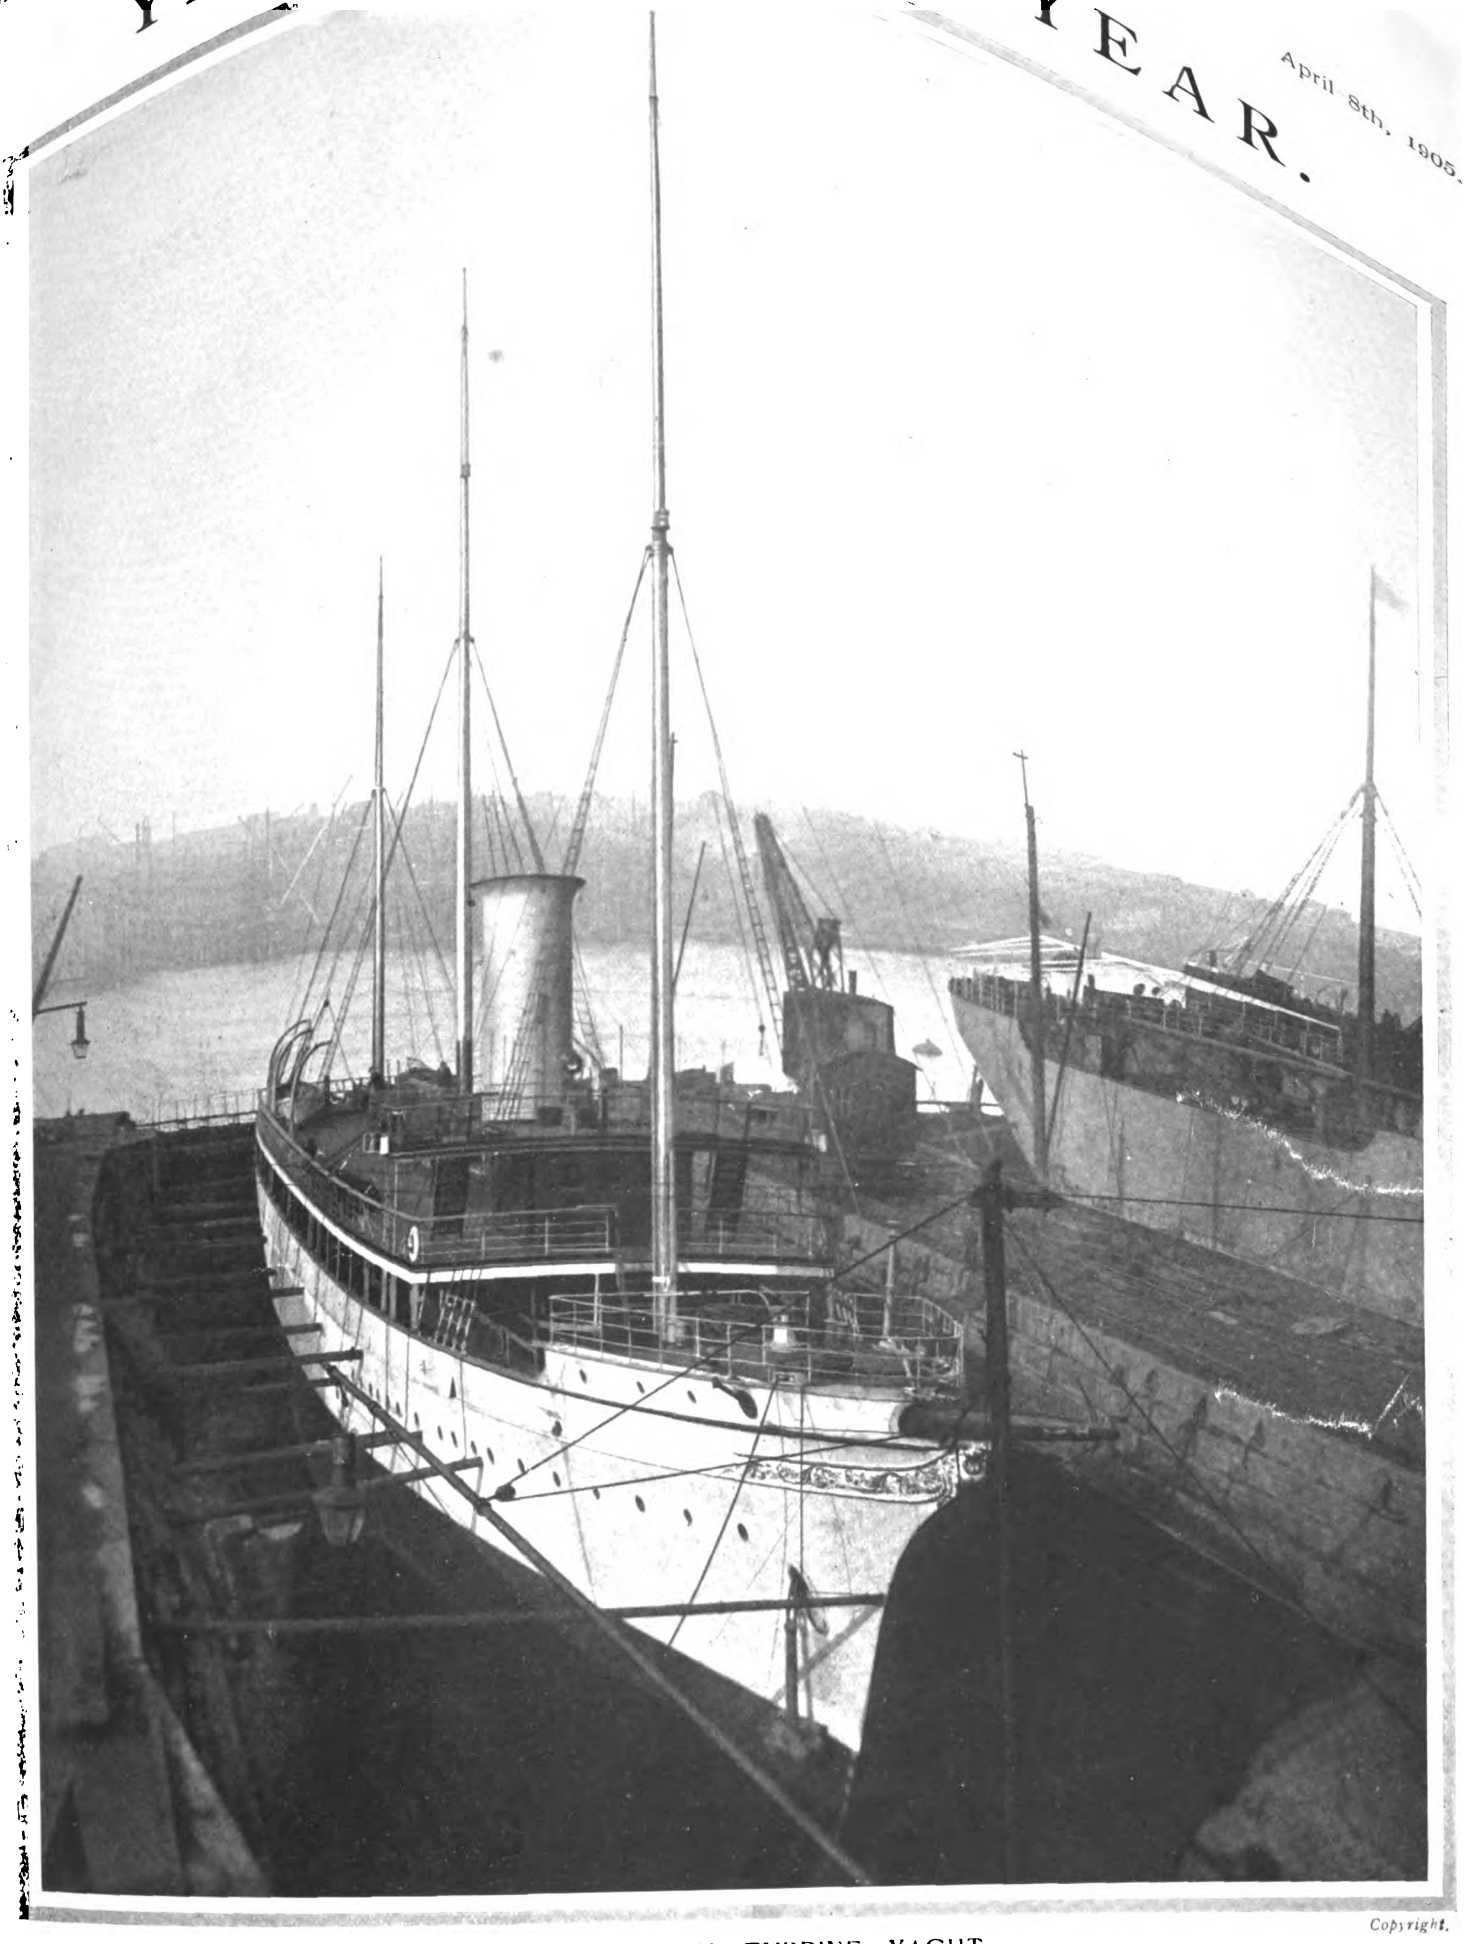
PLYMOUTH SOUND.

A view from the club-house of the Royal Western Yacht Club, which is situated on the Hoe. The club was established in 1827, and is one of the oldest yacht clubs in the country. The Plymouth Week usually opens with this club's annual regatta.

MEDITERRANEAN INTERNATIONAL REGATTAS.

| | |
|---|---|
| April 8 .. .. .. .. .. .. | Cannes. |
| April 9 to 13 .. .. .. .. .. | Monaco. |
| April 14 to 18 .. .. .. .. | Mentone. |
| April 20 to 30 .. .. .. .. | San Remo. |

Digitized by Google



Copyright.

A NEW 1,300-TON TURBINE YACHT.

Our illustration shows the new turbine yacht Albion, owned by Sir George Newnes, Bart., M.P., in dock at Walker-on-Tyne. The yacht, built by Messrs. Swan, Hunter and Wigham-Richardson, Ltd., has recently run her trials, making at her full speed 15¼-knots, and at her economical speed 12½-knots, which gives her a radius for steaming 300-miles a day. She comes round to Southampton this week, where further trials will take place, as those in the North were conducted in rough weather; and although the full results promised have been attained, it is believed that under favourable cruising conditions they will be exceeded. The Albion was designed by Sir William White, the late Chief Constructor of the Navy.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

A NEW PORTRAIT OF MISS GAYNOR ROWLANDS.

Miss Rowlands, who first made a name in the delightful musical comedy, "My Lady Molly," at Terry's Theatre, has come to the front with remarkable rapidity, and is at present playing in "The Orchid," one of the most successful of the unbroken series of Gaiety successes.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Messrs. Johnston and Hoffmann, 31, Devonshire Street, Portland Place, W.)

Digitized by Google

ACTRESSES AT HOME.

XV.—THE MISSES ZENA AND PHYLLIS DARE.

THE MISSES DARE AT RANDOLPH ROAD, MAIDA VALE.

Few young actresses succeed in attaining to a foremost position on the stage in the short space of time it has taken Miss Zena and Miss Phyllis Dare to become stage favourites. Miss Phyllis Dare was the first to get a part, in pantomime at the Coronet Theatre, and, curiously enough, her elder sister had to understudy her. But Miss Phyllis Dare was never in need of an understudy, for she turned up to every performance with (for her sister) tantalising regularity, and it was not until she was engaged to tour in a musical comedy that Miss Zena Dare could get a speaking part. That was little more than five years ago, and since then both sisters have continued to advance rapidly in public favour.

(From copyright photographs specially supplied to this paper.)

Digitized by Google

Letters to Stage Favourites.

XXI.—TO MISS DARRAGH.

DEAR MISS DARRAGH, — Every time I have seen you act—and the times have not been many, for you have not played often in London—I have felt certain that some day you would do great things.

You have the temperament of an actress far above common talent. You exercise that personal magnetism which is necessary to a striking stage success. While you are on the stage I cannot take my eyes off you. I watch your every movement, your faint changes of countenance, the lifting of your eyelids even, with emotion and interest.

You are what Mr. Carruthers called Evangeline, a disturbing person. I fancy there are few shades of feeling you could not express, and that your expressions of them would always have in them something individual, something sympathetic, something beautiful. Your low voice thrills with the suggestion of hidden fires. Your eyes, now sad, now merry, tell of a many-sided nature, or of a nature, rather, which can appreciate and interpret many sides of life. Your air of sleepy, melancholy grace has some quality of the tiger in it. I feel all the time as if, being roused sufficiently, you might spring.

I hoped that the spring might come in "Lady Ben," which gave you to us for the first time as a leading woman at a leading London theatre. I reckoned without Mr. George Bancroft. This ingenious person, instead of giving you live material to work upon, has merely provided an excellent mechanical rabbit.

It is possible that a toy animal of the furry kind might possibly induce a real tiger to leap upon it in mistaken fury. I have even seen Mme. Sarah Bernhardt quiver with passion and pour forth glowing frenzies of words in plays which were little better than "Lady Ben." But you have not yet got to the pitch of being able to make bricks without straw. At your stage of development you depend upon your author. What a pity you could not have chosen one who would have written a play better suited to your power.

It is not so much that the plot of "Lady Ben" is old-fashioned. All plots are old, and fashions come round in regular sequence, like the winds of March and April's fitful rain. It is in the treatment of his plot that Mr. Bancroft shows himself to belong to a bygone generation. I understand that he is in years a young man. His mind, however, dates back to the seventies. He is a disciple of Sardou at his baldest, a throw-back to the du Maurier period, when the young men of the period called each other "old chappie," and Mrs. Ponsonby de Tompkins angled for Sir Pompey Bedell.

Johnston and Hoffmann.

MISS DARRAGH

Who created the title rôle in Mr. George Bancroft's new play, "Lady Ben."

Even in the smallest details of his inventions he betrays this obsession of the past. He fixes a fashionable wedding for eleven o'clock. It was the custom of twenty-five years ago. To-day, anywhere west of Bow Church, it would be considered barbarous. He makes his preposterous young man give a bachelor supper on the eve of his wedding, and deliver a farewell speech, and speak the next morning of the consequent "head." The idea might have come straight out of "London Assurance" or "Pink Dominoes." He might as well have dressed the youth in chain armour.

I could forgive all this, though, if in the weightier matters he had not played our expectation so false. His "great scene" is in the third act. Lady Ben has promised to return her youthful admirer's letters if he will go to her house to fetch them at eleven o'clock on the night before his marriage. He has to be at the early Victorian farewell supper party, so his father goes instead.

Just before eleven Lady Ben hurts her ankle. She cannot move from the sofa in her boudoir. Would Sir Henry take the trouble to come up? When he is up, would he slide back the folding doors and find her keys on the dressing-table just inside the adjoining bedroom? Of course, he leaves them open. Then, just as he has got the packet of incriminating letters in his hand, enter unexpectedly Lady Ben's husband.

In a few moments he has the packet in his coat pocket, and Sir Henry has departed disconsolate, with visions of the Divorce Court before his troubled eyes. Then we pull ourselves together for a dramatic moment, sit forward and grip the arms of our stalls. With concentrated fury in your gaze, you drew yourself up on your sofa. "Now it's coming," we murmured. And it came.

What? a terrific tirade? a flow of biting sarcasm? an outburst of passionate invective? None of these. Merely the words, "You—— You—— What are you going to do?" Like Mr. Wemmick, the author at this critical moment dropped into poetry. One almost expected to hear the band strike up, and to see you and Sir Benjamin advance to the footlights for a duet, with a chorus of concealed French maids. In a musical comedy it would have been tolerable. In a drama of emotion—bah!

Really, my dear Miss Darragh, you must find something better than this.

Remember that your future depends in large part upon the impression you make now. Don't let the public mind associate you with failures. It cannot do you any good to let playgoers think you the sort of woman who could by any possibility fall in love with the terrible kind of very young man Mr. Charles Maude makes Harry Ballantyne. You never see such appalling young men in real life. Why on earth do they have them on the stage?

Just think. How can we have any respect for your taste or judgment if we have to couple you in our minds with this tedious puppet, and to realise that you do not see the absurdity of Harry Ballantyne's appealing to the heart of any woman, except his poor mother, and possibly a sister or an aunt? Quick, let us have something to wipe the memory of it clean off the tablets of our brains. Φ

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Stereoscopic.

MISS TITA BRAND

Whose season at the Shaftesbury Theatre opens this week with a revival of "Othello." A strong company has been engaged to support her.

Biograph.

MLLE. VAN PARYS

A member of the operatic company which has been playing with such success in scenes from "Faust," "Rigoletto," and other operas at the Lyceum

Hutchinson.

MISS LEILA GORDON

The versatile young actress who is appearing in Mr. Hamilton's "Peggy Machree" Company, now on tour in the provinces.

Biograph.

MISS MAIE ASHE

Who has been playing Angela at the Vaudeville in "The Catch of the Season.' Miss Ellaline Terriss will shortly return to take up this part.

Digitized by Google

The Ladies' Clubs of London.

II.—THE LADIES' ARMY AND NAVY CLUB.

THERE seems to be a sort of Freemasonry amongst Service people—a community of interest which brings and binds them together—and it is not by any means confined to Navy and Army men, but is just as virulent amongst their women-folk.

Mrs. G. A. Dundas, who is the founder and secretary of the Ladies' Army and Navy Club, is herself the widow of a well-known soldier. Her son is an officer in the Indian Army, and her daughter is married to a Naval officer. She comes from a Service stock, and it is appropriate enough that she should be so intimately associated with such a typical Service institution. The club was formed by Mrs. Dundas in 1902. From the commencement it was a distinct success, but sanguine as were the promoters, they hardly anticipated the enormous development and the record popularity to which the club has since attained. The first club premises were situated in Dover Street, and during the first year of its existence the membership was 1,200. Before the year was out, so rapid was its growth that a move was made to the present palatial house in Burlington Street, originally the Bristol Hotel, a very large sum of money being spent in improvements and decorating. H.R.H. Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar was the first president of the club, and on her death the office was graciously accepted by H.R.H. Princess Christian. Her two daughters, the Princesses Victoria and Louise, are both members, and the Royal president is a frequent visitor to the club. H.R.H. very often lunches there in a corner of the club dining-room, and without any formality.

Copyright.

H.R.H. PRINCESS CHRISTIAN
President of the Ladies' Army and Navy Club.

One of the most excellent arrangements in vogue at the Ladies' Army and Navy Club is, that out of every subscription 1s. is set aside as an annual donation to a charitable institution connected with the Services, to be designated by H.R.H. Princess Christian. The first year's contribution amounted to £100, and this amount was sent to the funds of the Incorporated Soldiers' and Sailors' Society.

The management of the club, which is under the personal supervision of Mrs. Dundas, is a task of some magnitude. With a membership of 3,600, and still growing, 60 bedrooms, which are almost always occupied, and a working staff of 76, it will be seen how onerous is the position, and how great are the responsibilities which it entails. No matter what the hour at which one may visit the club, there is always an atmosphere of activity. Little groups of elegantly-gowned ladies throng the vestibule, and the beautifully-appointed rooms are crowded with members and their friends. In the afternoon the tea-rooms are crowded to overflowing, as many as 300 to 400 people very often being present. The club is thoroughly up-to-date, and has its billiard and bridge rooms. The billiard-room, upholstered in green leather, is one of the most comfortable and restful rooms in the club. Billiard tournaments are held from time to time, and the club can boast of some first-rate players. The scheme of colouring in the principal dining-room represents the Service colours—red,

Lafayette.

LADY LURGAN.

Lafayette.

THE MARCHIONESS OF TWEEDDALE.

Lafayette.

THE DUCHESS OF SOMERSET.

Three of the Vice-Presidents of the Ladies' Army and Navy Club.

Digitized by Google

Lafayette.

MRS. G. A. DUNDAS
Secretary and Founder of the club.

Hodsoll.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA.
A corner of the club tea-room.

white, and blue. Flowers are in abundance, and an air of exhilarating cheerfulness is the predominating note of the club generally.

A feature of the club is the "Silence Room," a delightfully soothful retreat, where members with tired nerves may get complete and restful quietness.

The club is a social club, pure and simple, without any tiresome objects, and its members are in every part of the world. The club do all their own catering. There are three chefs, and the culinary staff are kept actively engaged in ministering to the material comforts of the members.

Each year a servants' ball is given by the club, the servants being allowed to each invite a friend. The event is very eagerly looked forward to, and heartily appreciated by the entire working staff.

In addition to the president, the following ladies act as vice-presidents: The Duchess of Somerset, Julia Marchioness of Tweeddale, the Countess of Coventry, the Lady Jane Taylor, the Lady Lurgan, and the Lady Emily Peel.

The Lady Jane Taylor is also chairman of the Executive Committee, with the Lady Margaret Campbell as vice.

Mrs. Dundas considers the things essential to the successful administration of a club to be infinite tact and infinite patience. She certainly embodies these virtues, as well as an untiring spirit of industry, in promoting the interests and welfare of the club.

Hodsoll.

THE READING-ROOM
At the Ladies' Army and Navy Club.

Digitized by Google

An Epitome of the Shakespeare-Bacon Controversy.

BY F. ST. JOHN CORBETT, M.A., F.R.HIST.S., F.R.S.L., Author of "A History of British Poetry," Etc.

A GROWING mass of literature is rapidly twining itself round what is now generally known as the Shakespeare - Bacon Controversy. The time has gone by when the doubt which has been cast upon the orthodox idea as to the authorship of the plays which bear the name of the Bard of Avon could be ignored, or even treated with contemptuous silence. The beginnings of the contest are easily traced. In the year 1852 the attention of the literary world was arrested by an article which appeared in Chambers's Edinburgh Journal. It was entitled "Who Wrote Shakespeare?" and was the first English essay on a subject which has been vexing the minds of some of the keenest literary critics for a considerable time. Long before that date the Shakespearian authorship of the plays had been held by some of these critics as distinctly questionable. Lord Palmerston and Lord Byron were amongst those who doubted. Hallam fell a victim to the craze. In 1837 Lord Beaconsfield, then plain Benjamin Disraeli, put the following expression into the mouth of one of the characters of his charming "Venetia": "And who is Shakespeare? We know as much of him as we do of Homer. Did he write half the plays attributed to him? Did he write one whole play? I doubt it."

Again, in 1856, Delia Bacon, an American authoress, raised the question of Shakespeare's claim. Her book was published with the aid of Nathaniel Hawthorne, who furnished it with a preface. In the same year a letter on the subject was written by William Henry Smith to Lord Ellesmere, followed, in 1857, by a short treatise, in which he pointed out that the more likely author of the plays was Francis Lord Bacon. In 1859 Lord Campbell wrote and published an essay to prove that the author, whoever he may have been, was a trained lawyer, whereas there is no evidence whatsoever to prove that Shakespeare was, or could have been one. In 1867 an American judge, named Holmes, advocated the claims of Bacon, as did also Mrs. Potts, in England, in 1883. Whittier says: "Whether Bacon wrote the wonderful plays or not, I am quite sure the man Shakespeare neither did, nor could." James Russell Lowell refers to the reputed author as "The apparition known to moderns as Shakespeare." Mr. Gladstone says, with characteristic caution: "Considering what Bacon was, I have always regarded the discussion as perfectly serious, and to be respected"; while John Bright went further, and gave it as his opinion that "Any man who believes that William Shakespeare of Stratford wrote 'Hamlet' or 'Lear' is a fool."

Whether the individual student of this question forms an estimate of the relative weight of the claims put forward on either side or not, it is well for him to become familiar with the kind of arguments used in the controversy. In the limited space at our disposal it is only possible to give some typical samples of these.

FRANCIS BACON, LORD VERULAM, VISCOUNT ST. ALBANS
Born January 22, 1561, died April 9, 1626. From a print by William Marshall, senior, 1640.

I.—ARGUMENTS AGAINST SHAKESPEARE.

1.—The plays were never entered at Stationers' Hall in Shakespeare's name, either by himself or by anyone else on his behalf.

2.—It is considered unquestionable that Shakespeare did not write all the plays attributed to him, therefore "someone" wrote those which are not his. All the plays in question fall into two groups—clever and commonplace. The same man, it is contended, could not produce both kinds.

3. — Shakespeare does not appear to have had any education to speak of previous to his going to London. How, in a few years, did he become a philosopher? He could not in the time.

4. — On retiring from the stage, he went back to Stratford and took to farming. From that time he did not write a line. Is this a likely line of conduct for the author of "Macbeth"?

5.—His will mentions no MSS., books, or copyrights.

6. — Writings of his which are unquestionable, such as the lampoon on Sir Thomas Lucy, are cited as being incompatible with the idea that their author wrote the plays.

With arguments like these we have pleas in favour of Bacon, quite equal to them in plausibility, e.g.:

1.—Bacon was a contemporary of Shakespeare, and possessed all that varied knowledge which is apparent in the author of the plays.

2.—Writing for the stage was then accounted disreputable. A man in the position of Lord Bacon would naturally shrink from recognition, and write his plays under an assumed name. It seems natural, we are assured, that he should adopt the name of the actor-manager under whom the plays were produced.

3.—We have laid on the table a mass of so-called internal evidence, in the shape of parallel passages, peculiar words and groups of words, the tracing of a bi-literal cypher, and marvellous coincidences, all drawn from a comparative study of the plays and the acknowledged writings of Bacon.

Digitized by Google

On the other hand, those who are interested in the Shakespearian claim sufficiently to take up the cudgels on the defensive side, have collected a goodly array of arguments, some of which we will briefly review.

II.—Arguments in Favour of Shakespeare.

1.—The Grammar School at Stratford-on-Avon, at which Shakespeare received his early education, was acknowledged to be one of the best existing in his day.

2.—It is fairly certain that he had some legal training.

3.—The details which we possess of his life in London are very remarkable. His rapid rise to the position of actor-manager is in itself a proof of more than ordinary ability. This Lord Penzance acknowledges when he says: "A man does not get himself accepted as the guiding hand of a commercial enterprise like that of a theatre without some special fitness for it."

4.—Shakespeare's contemporaries were jealous of him. If he was so great an impostor as is now alleged by the Baconians, why did not one of those contemporaries—Ben Jonson, for instance—show him up?

5.—During the portion of his life which is known as "the interval," we are not told positively that he was not educating himself. We are only asked if it was likely that he was.

6.—There is no question as to his having been the author of some portions of the plays. Moreover, it has been a "fixed and venerable belief" for nearly 300 years that he was the author of them all. The plays, too, must have been written by a man who had an intimate knowledge of acting in all its intricacies—who had, in fact, "walked the stage himself."

7.—It is a common thing for authors to destroy their MSS. and proof-sheets as soon as their works are printed. This, apparently, was Shakespeare's custom. It is well known that he was even ostentatiously indifferent to his own fame.

8.—As Mr. W. Carew Hazlitt says, "In the collected edition of the plays, men who had been personally intimate with the poet, who had acted in these compositions when they were brought upon the stage, who enjoyed the opportunity far better than we do of hearing reports and rumours about the pieces and their origin, who might even have beheld their friend with the pen in his hand, with the unfinished manuscript before him, attested his exclusive claim within their information to the work."

To these we must add some arguments against the theory that Lord Bacon was the author.

1.—The onus of proof rests with those who make the claim on Bacon's behalf. As yet, no positive proof is forthcoming. All hitherto said or written is mere conjecture. Dr. Dowden, in an article contributed to the National Review, makes it plain that it is early yet to state that Bacon must have written the plays.

2.—Except by a few enthusiasts on the Baconian side, such as Mrs. Gallup and Ignatius Donelly, the evidence based on the alleged discovery of the bi-literal cypher is accounted a failure.

3.—We know so much about Bacon that it seems strange, to say the least of it, that he could have written the plays without the fact being discovered sooner. Had Ben Jonson any interest in keeping it a secret? Were the booksellers deceived?

4.—Not merely in the lifetime of Shakespeare were the plays and poems equally published as his, but after his death, and while Bacon survived, they continued to be so, and the First Folio almost ostentatiously sets forth the authorship of Shakespeare, as the "Lear" of 1608 and the Sonnets of 1609 had previously done.

5.—Even granting that Bacon had cause to suppress his name in respect of the plays, what about the Sonnets, which could only have added to his reputation?

Perhaps the most recent serious criticism of Shakespeare's work and "qualifications" is that of Mr. Churton Collins, who, in his "Studies in Shakespeare," throws much light upon the vexed question of the poet's classical education. In doing so he modestly disclaims any attempt to assume an original standpoint. He admits that Russell Lowell long ago suggested that Shakespeare possibly had access to the Greek Dramas in Latin translations, and that other eminent and capable critics have maintained that in all probability he was a fair Latin scholar. Mr. Churton Collins scouts the idea that because the poet was not a University man he must needs have known but "little Latin and less Greek." While admitting that we have no proof of Shakespeare's having been educated at the Grammar School at Stratford-on-Avon, he contends that one of his class would be certain to be sent there. At the period at which he would enter the school it stood high amongst its fellows. Its headmaster then was Walter Roche, an ex-Fellow of Corpus, Oxon, a college pre-eminent in point of scholarship. The curriculum of the school, Mr. Collins tells us, included Cordelius' "Colloquia," and other classical works.

Apart from the ultimate issue of this discussion, which, though past its infancy, has not yet reached the stage of adolescence, the advantage to the student of studying both sides of the question is obvious. "A father dying," quotes Mr. Reed, "called his sons to his bedside and told them he had buried a treasure in his vineyard for them. In due time they found it, not in gold or silver, but in the beautiful crops that reward the spade and pick."

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

Born April, 1564, died April 23, 1616. From the portrait by Martin Droeshout. This picture forms the frontispiece to the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's works.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

THE appointment of Vice-Admiral Sir Arthur Moore to be Second-in-Command of the new Channel Fleet appropriately marks the change that has taken place in the constitution of that great organisation. As Second-in-Command of a Fleet including twelve battle-ships, even a Vice-Admiral of a year's standing may be congratulated on the assumption of duties and responsibilities hardly inferior to those of one of the greater independent commands, while the possibilities of the position are peculiarly interesting and significant, perhaps even more so than those ordinarily attached to the Commander-in-Chiefship of the former Channel Squadron. Apart from these hypotheses, Vice-Admiral Moore will undoubtedly fill the part which he has been called upon to create. As Commander-in-Chief at the Cape during the latter part of the South African War, he displayed the same capacity for working effectively in conjunction with the military authorities as had won him a special mention in despatches for his services in the Suez Canal operations in 1882. Sir Arthur has had an extended and varied experience, and has left his mark passim over a wide area. For he has been a Sea Lord, he has saved a man from drowning, he helped to systematise the defences of Australasia, and he was one of our representatives at the Anti-Slavery Congress at Brussels in 1889.

CAPTAIN THE HON. HUGH TYRWHITT, who is to command the "Renown" during the voyage of the Prince and Princess of Wales to and from India, is, of course, best known as Private Secretary to Lord Selborne during the latter's term of office as First Lord of the Admiralty. The measure of his success in that responsible post may be gauged from the fact that the new First Lord has been glad to avail himself of Captain Tyrwhitt's services in the same capacity. Captain Tyrwhitt will also be remembered as having taken part in the expedition for the relief of Gordon in 1884-85. Perhaps of closer interest in connection with his selection for the command of the "Renown" during the Royal Indian tour is the fact that he is brother-in-law to the King's Private Secretary, Lord Knollys. His father was the late Sir Henry Tyrwhitt, and his mother the Baroness Berners.

CAPTAIN M. E. BROWNING, who goes to the "Impregnable" as Flag-Captain to Vice-Admiral Sir Lewis Beaumont, Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, formerly acted in the same capacity under Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas, when the latter commanded the North America and West Indies Station. Captain Browning served in the "Carysfort" during the Egyptian War of 1882, and seven years later met with a serious accident on board the "Inflexible," which deprived him of his left hand. He will be remembered as the officer who taught the Prince of Wales his gunnery on the "Excellent." In 1900 Captain Browning performed an important public service by acting as Secretary to the almost historic Parliamentary Committee on water-tube boilers.

COLONEL G. F. N. TINLEY of the 31st Indian Lancers, who has just been appointed Assistant-Adjutant-General of the Meerut Division, vice Colonel H. S. Massy now on leave, has profited by the new system of throwing the staff appointments in all the Indian commands open to all Indian Army officers, regardless of the Presidency to which their corps was formerly assigned. Colonel Tinley has seen service in three campaigns, and two decades back, when he was the smart adjutant of a smart Bombay Lancer regiment—of which, by the way, the former commanding officer and latterday honorary colonel, General James Blair, V.C., only died the other day—Lieutenant Tinley was reckoned one of the finest and most daring riders in India.

COLONEL A. G. CHURCHILL has just been transferred from the Southern to the Scottish Command, where he is to serve till June, 1908—unless, as is very possible, promotion beckons him to another quarter—as a Colonel on the Staff. Although in the fat red "Birthday Book" of the British Army he has not against his name the crossed swords, which indicate war service, Colonel Churchill has done excellent soldier's work, and is greatly esteemed as a first-rate and eminently dependable officer. He started well at Sandhurst, where he was made an Under-Officer, and was noted for his draughtsmanship and riding, besides being generally liked as a "good fellow" of the calm non-swagger variety. In due course he went to the 12th Lancers, of which he was for four years adjutant. He also passed through the Staff College, and was given a D.A.A.G. ship at Aldershot, which, however, he only held for a year. More recently he served as Military Attaché at Tokio, where he remained several years, much liked and esteemed by the Japanese, and regarded with particular respect by the Tokio populace on account of the numerous inches which go to make up his exceptional stature.

Cozens, Southsea.

THE MOST RECENT ADDITION TO THE ATLANTIC FLEET.

The battle-ship "Commonwealth" steaming into Portsmouth Harbour, after having successfully passed her official trials, which took place off the Clyde. The "Commonwealth" was commissioned with a nucleus crew on Saturday last.

CADET battalions, as their commanding officers know well, are not always easily maintained at a high pitch of combined efficiency and popularity, and a good deal of enthusiasm has to be employed, and a good many sacrifices made before one of these organisations can be placed on a really sound footing. One is glad to see that the 1st Cadet Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment) has evidently aimed at that comfortable stage judging from its fine new headquarters which have recently been opened in Pond Street, Hampstead. It is something for a cadet corps to be able to claim that its headquarters are among the biggest and best equipped in London. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, we are informed, made a private inspection of the building the other day, and expressed to Colonel Sheffield, the commanding officer, his surprise at the goodness and completeness of the arrangements.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

A BUSY WEEK.

THERE was something almost weird in the behaviour of the weather at Lincoln on Tuesday, strange blustering gusts which blew alternately from all the corners of the compass were the precursors of a nasty chilling rain, but racing men are not easily daunted, and rain or no rain, the "Lincoln" horses had to be inspected. Housewife looked a little bit dry in her coat and rather tucked up, but she certainly moved all right. Old Le Blizon looked in rare fettle, Vedas was quiet enough with his muzzle on, but he is not an animal, to trust in, and must, I fear be written of as a "non-tryer," Catty Crag carried a rare bloom, and Elsey was justly proud of her appearance. There is no getting away from the good looks of Sansovino. Marsden and Salute both looked well in themselves, but they are by no means taking-looking animals. Red Heart's Pride is sure to win a good race before very long if she does not belie her looks. Grey Green is an exceptionally sturdy sort of animal, so compact, and with such depth, that at first sight he had distinctly the appearance of being on the big side, which he certainly was not. Vedas, Andria, and Le Blizon occasioned some delay at the start, but the eighteen runners were finally sent off on fairly level terms. After going a short distance, Airlie and Rosebury showed slightly in front in the centre, followed by Vedas and Catty Crag on the lower ground. Marsden and Housewife were both beaten when half the distance had been covered. Soon afterwards Catty Crag had to pull out and come round, and three furlongs from home Le Blizon took up the running from Sansovino, Rosebury, Vedas, Airlie, and Catty Crag. At the distance Sansovino took his place on the rails, and went on from Catty Crag, with Le Blizon, Park Ranger, Salute, and Andria following hard on their heels. Inside the distance Sansovino had enough of it, and, deliberately shirking his work, was stopping at every stride; some 50-yds. from the winning-post he half stopped to kick, and got Griggs out on to his neck, but riding with the greatest determination he kept his mount going, and just managed to scramble home by a very short head from Catty Crag, who, under the circumstances, was very unlucky to lose the race. Park Ranger was running on very strongly at the finish, and was only a neck behind the second.

A good field turned out for the Brocklesby Trial Stakes, and no more exciting finish could be witnessed than the tremendous set-to which took place between Pretty Dick, Whitsbury, and Early Bird, of which the first-named won by the shortest of heads, with the same distance separating the other two.

The Brocklesby Stakes was the principal item set for decision on the day after the Lincoln Handicap. Much interest attaches to this race, from the fact that it is the first appearance of the two year olds of the year, but it is a long time since such youngsters as The Bard or Donovan have been included in the Brocklesby field, and the inspection of the competitors for this year's race did not reveal anything that shows very great promise for the future. It is, I believe, the first time that the race has been won by an amateur horseman, and Mr. Thursby is to be congratulated upon his victory. He may have timed his challenge a trifle late, but he rode it out with grim determination when he did get to work, and got Mr. J. L. Dugdale's colt by Donovan out of Lady Lena home a short head in front of Mr. N. C. Cockburn's colt by Galashiels out of Miskah, with Mr. H. Barnato's Medelstone third, three lengths behind them.

Rouch.

THE WINNER OF THE GRAND NATIONAL.

Mr. F. Bibby's Kirkland by Kirkham—dam by Peregonius.

With everything in its favour that could possibly conduce to success, small wonder is it that the Liverpool Spring Meeting is almost universally considered to have been one of the most brilliant on record. The course itself was in the most excellent condition, and the tops of the fences, instead of being left square, were graded off, an alteration which, trifling enough in itself, was of no small importance when the nature of the Aintree fences is taken into consideration. The week's racing has been so full of interest and of such extent that space will not permit of its being dealt with in detail. As far as the first day's racing at Liverpool goes, one must be content to merely notice that the Union Jack Stakes of 1,200 guineas went to Mr. W. M. G. Singer's colt by St. Serf out of Lady Chancellor, who finished a length in front of Mr. J. B. Joel's Chestnut, with Mr. Thursby third on Standen, the property of his brother Sir J. Thursby. And that in a tight finish Mr. J. Buchanan's Lancashire was returned the winner of the Liverpool Spring Cup, with Wild Lad and Glenamoy for runners up. I have seen not a few races for the Grand National, but cannot remember anything like the enormous crowd assembled on Friday, the 31st ult. The clear light and bright sunshine rendered the spectacle of the parade, as the twenty-seven runners filed past the stands, an unusually cheery and interesting one, in addition to which with an average pair of glasses every incident in the race could be followed with ease. Rumour in the morning had been busy with the accident to Williamson, who was to have ridden Moifaa, and for some time there was much doubt as to whether the services of a capable horseman could be secured, but all doubts on that point were set at rest by Dollery being set at liberty to ride for his Majesty. There was no delay at the post, and as the flag fell Detail showed slightly in front. At the second fence Kiora and Royal Drake fell, at the next one Hallgate and Ascetic Silver came down, and Nereus and Longthorpe refused. Moifaa now took up the running, and strode along with Timothy Titus in close company. Biology and Detail fell at Valentine's brook, on landing over which Timothy Titus forced the pace from Moifaa, with Seahorse II., Ranunculus, Phil May, and Hercules II. keeping up a strong pursuit. On clearing the water Ranunculus took the lead in front of Timothy Titus, with Moifaa next; going into the country for the second time Dearslayer and Miss Clifden II. came down, Matthew and The Actuary were pulled up, two fences further on What Next came to grief, and Moifaa, who had been in difficulties for a long time, collapsed completely at Becher's brook. Timothy Titus forged his way to the front, but fell at the fence before Valentine's brook, in company with Bucheron and Aunt May. Ranunculus now drew out clear of Kirkland, with Hercules II. and Buckaway II. next, but lost his place nearing Anchor Bridge. At the last fence Phil May made a mistake on landing, Seahorse II. was pulled up, Kirkland took up the running, and although badly hampered by two loose horses, stalled off the challenge of Napper Tandy, and won by three lengths to a chorus of rousing cheers; Buckaway II., who had been last for nearly the whole of the journey, was placed third. Only eight out of the twenty-seven runners completed the course, which was covered by the winner in 9-min. 48-sec. Other features of the day's racing were the smooth running of Vedas in the hands of D. Maher in the Bickerstaffe Stakes, and the dual success of the pretty colours of Mr. Jersey in the Sefton Park Plate and the Northern Counties Plate.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

THE first three numbers of the Di kensian: A Magazine for Dickens Lovers, edited by Mr. B. W. Matz, are full of interesting things. Not the least interesting are the covers, which reproduce old drawings by Seymour and Cruikshank; and it is to be hoped that this very pleasant feature will be continued from month to month. The February number contains an amusing article by Sir William H. Bailey, which leads off with the remark that "Charles Dickens as a health resort is worth the consideration of medical men. A good dose of Sam Weller increases the capacity of the lungs for oxygen." In the March number Mr. Henry F. Dickens, K.C., writes on his father's social influence. Mr. B. W. Matz contributes a bibliographical note on "Sketches by Boz," and a very interesting feature in the series of poetical tributes to Charles Dickens is a short poem by the Hon. Mrs. Norton, that beautiful and unhappy lady, which is reprinted from the "English Bijou Almanack" for 1842. The illustrations are all well chosen and well reproduced. The Dickensian is the organ of the Dickens Fellowship, and a good deal of its space is devoted to the rather uninteresting proceedings of that excellent institution. But there is still space in the modest little magazine for a great deal of entertaining matter.

The Dickensian.

* * *

ONE would wish for the pen of a Thomas Love Peacock to describe the "Harmsworth Encyclopedia," published by Thomas Nelson and Sons and the Amalgamated Press, Limited. The object of a popular encyclopedia is its doom—to be popular; but if we must submit to the existence of popular books of reference printed in small print and illustrated with inferior pictures, we should at least ask that the information contained in them be exact and as full as possible. Now let us turn haphazard to a single article in the first sevenpenny part of this "everybody's book of reference." What has it to tell us about acting? The only thing it has to say about Greek acting is that the profession did not escape condemnation, which we submit has nothing in the world to do with acting. There is not a word about Roman acting, Indian acting, Japanese acting, Chinese acting, on any one of which there is plenty of information to be had in a hundred books. Its account of English acting is as meagre as it is off the point. A discussion of M. Coquelin's opinions or Mr. William Archer's is hardly the matter with which to fill out an article of only two columns and a-half, while the statements that "Kemble's Brutus cannot have been more majestic than Irving's Charles I.," or that "in England the stage has its ups and downs," are models of how not to write in an encyclopedia. In an article, too, that professes to be up to date, it is a little surprising to find no reference whatever to Dr. Mantzius's monumental work on the very subject of the article.

The Harmsworth Encyclopedia.

* * *

PERHAPS the best of an excellent series of books, for which the lovers of topography, anecdote, and folklore cannot be sufficiently grateful, is "Memorials of Old Herefordshire" (Bemrose and Sons, London and Derby), while they await with becoming patience the appearance of the long-promised Victoria County Histories, the chariot wheels of which tarry unaccountably in their coming. Mr. Compton Reade comes of a good old literary stock, and has already given ample pledges to contemporary literature both as a picturesque writer and painstaking seeker after truth. Mrs. Leather's chapter on the folklore of the shire will certainly be very widely read, and in a time when London doctors are prescribing cider as a remedy for half-a-dozen of the worst ills which twentieth century flesh is heir to, Mr. E. F. Bulmer's essay on "The Evolution of Herefordshire Cider" deserves respectful attention. Colonel Lucas Scudamore has just been chosen to fight Hereford for the Liberals. In "Old Herefordshire" is told in much detail the romantic story of his ancestors, and the narrative deals especially with the adventures of the John Scudamore who won immortality by giving Herefordshire the "Norman" apple.

Old Herefordshire.

AN EQUESTRIAN PORTRAIT BY LANDSEER AND MILLAIS.

One of the pictures in the "Tate Gallery" reproduced in the first number of Messrs. Cassell's sumptuous book on "The National Gallery of British Art."

WHATEVER complaints are made that good work has no chance of succeeding in the face of all the rubbish that is written, must be discounted by the great success of Professor A. C. Bradley's "Lectures on Shakespearean Tragedy." For a book of criticism, and a 10s. book at that, to jump so soon into a second edition is a tribute at once to the author and to the public. There can be no question that Professor Bradley has produced a masterpiece. To read his lectures on "Hamlet," "Othello," "King Lear," and "Macbeth" is, even for many who thought they knew their Shakespeare well, a revelation; and one great point is that Professor Bradley has treated these plays, not as philosophical disquisitions, but as plays, as tragedies written for the stage. Shakespeare is in the air this year, and there will be many chances of seeing the plays, and especially "Hamlet," acted by all sorts of people; and our advice to everyone is First read Professor Bradley, then go and see Shakespeare acted, and say if it is not more interesting than a "musical comedy."

Shakespearean Tragedy.

* * *

MESSRS. CASSELL AND CO. send us the first part of a new and sumptuous work on "The National Gallery of British Art (the Tate Gallery)." The complete work will contain forty-eight Rembrandt photogravure plates and numerous other illustrations; and when the large and handsome quarto is complete it will unquestionably be one of the handsomest art books recently published. The introduction is to be the work of Sir Charles Holroyd, the first and present keeper of the gallery, who is well known as an artist of great individuality and power, and a writer of some distinction. In the first number before us there is a handsome frontispiece, "The Yeoman of the Guard," by Sir John Millais, and three other full-page illustrations, Mr. C. R. Leslie's famous picture of "My Uncle Toby and the Widow Wadman in the Sentry Box," Mr. John MacWhirter's "June in the Austrian Tyrol," and the charming "Equestrian Portrait," by Landseer and Millais, which we reproduce on this page. And all that for 7d.!

The Tate Gallery.

* * *

THE name of Miss Mabel Greenwood is not unknown to readers of THE KING, and we are glad to receive from Mr. Henry J. Drane a little volume of her poems called "The Garden of Memories." Miss Greenwood's lyrics are full of a delicate and almost always plaintive music, and the very genuine feeling that inspires them gives them an effect which very likely more learned and academic verse might miss. They seem to spring straight from the heart, and their charm is something more than the mere beautiful use of words.

Poems.

* * *

MESSRS. A. AND C. BLACK announce a new picture-book on London which promises to be of exceptional interest. The coloured illustrations are to be reproduced from water-colours by Mr. Herbert Marshall, R.W.S., an artist who has made a unique reputation for the delicacy and charm of his colour and the poetic and mysterious beauty which he sees in many corners of a town which is too often declared by unsensitive and inartistic people to be ugly. The letterpress of the book is to be the work of Miss G. E. Mitton, a writer who during several years of work with Sir Walter Besant acquired a knowledge of her adopted home, which she has put to good account in many an interesting book on London.

Pictures of London.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

Biography.

Tracks of a Rolling Stone, by the Hon. Henry J. Coke. (Smith, Elder.)
Reminiscences of a Radical Parson, by the Rev. W. Tuckwell. (Cassell.)

Fiction.

Patricia: A Mother, by "Iota." (Hutchinson.)
The Bell and the Arrow, by Mrs. W. H. Chesson (Nora Hopper). (Werner Laurie.)
Tales of Rye Town, by Maud Stepney Rawson. (Constable.)
Elizabeth Grey, by E. M. Green. (Blackwood.)
Wanted a Cook—Domestic Dialogues, by Allan Dale (Putnam.)

Sociology.

A Peculiar People: The Doukobórs, by Aylmer Maude. (Constable.)

Sport.

An Angler's Hours, by H. T. Sheringham. (Macmillan.)

Digitized by Google

A REMINISCENCE OF A GREAT SIEGE

Copyright.

MME. STOESSEL AND THE SIEGE ORPHANS.

Among the passengers in the "Saint Nicholas" there were a number of children whose fathers had been killed in the course of the siege of Port Arthur. These returned to Russia under Mme. Stoessel's protection, and will be cared for by the Government until they are of age.

HOW TO USE ODOL.

EVERYBODY KNOWS by this time what Odol is—the best dentifrice and wash which science has yet invented for the cleansing and preservation of the teeth and mouth, and the only one recognised by the scientific world that will protect the teeth from decay, and which acts not only during the time of application, but for hours after use.

We have been told that people sometimes pour the Odol on to the toothbrush, and using it in that way, are astonished that they burn their mouths. They might just as well be astonished if, instead of sitting in front of the fire to warm themselves, they sat on it. Odol is a concentrated liquid, of which only a few drops — taste will determine how many—will suffice to make, with water, an antiseptic emulsion which ensures a complete purification of the teeth and the whole oral cavity.

This diluted emulsion is strong enough for all purposes.

Having put the Odol into the water and stirred the mixture with the toothbrush, rinse the mouth thoroughly. Clean the teeth in the ordinary way with the toothbrush dipped in the solution of Odol, then take a mouthful and retain it for about a minute in the mouth, so that the Odol may be absorbed by the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, the whole process being concluded by gargling with the mixture. This should be repeated every night and morning, also, if possible, after dinner, but most particularly before retiring to rest.

Clean the teeth with a toothbrush dipped in the Odol solution.

The use of Odol at night results in a most agreeable sensation, in that the air inhaled on passing the odolised mucous membrane is cooled in a most revivifying manner. All those who use Odol according to our directions practise the most perfect hygiene of the mouth and teeth on the basis of modern scientific principles. Odol penetrates into the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, impregnating them and leaving an antiseptic deposit on the surface, thus securing an after-effect for hours, which no other dentifrice can produce, not even approximately.

Conclude by gargling with Odol.

Smokers and others whose teeth readily turn black in consequence of stomachic or other diseases, do well in supplementing the daily use of Odol with an occasional cleaning of the teeth with tooth-powder. Tooth-soap or paste should on no account be used. How extraordinarily beneficial this rinsing with Odol is will be discovered by persons who have decayed teeth. In these cases the effects are prompt and surprising, and the faithful user of Odol will form a lasting attachment to it, owing to its delicious taste and charming flavour.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

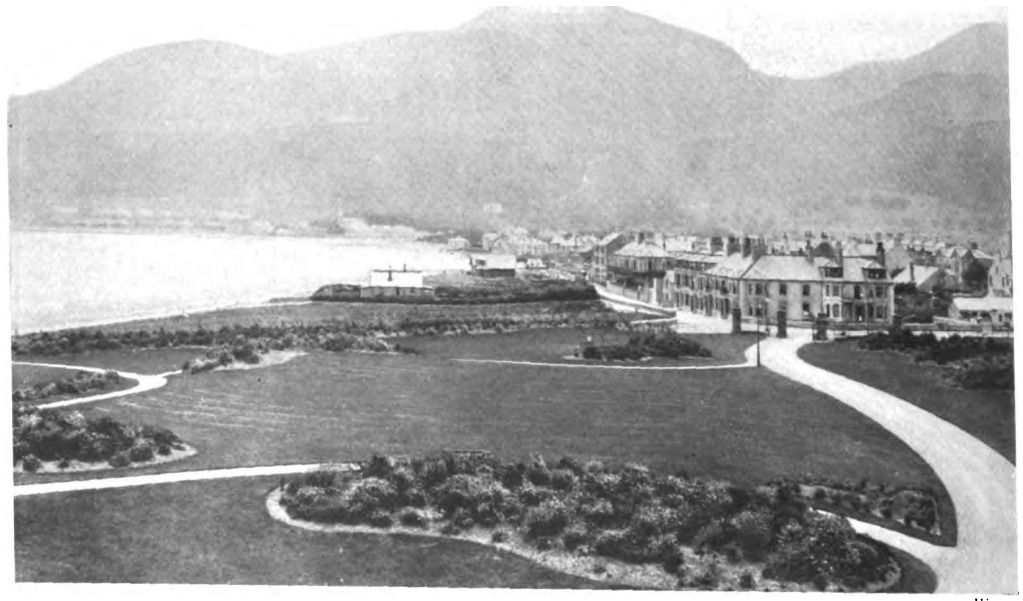
A HOLIDAY ON THE BELFAST AND COUNTY DOWN RAILWAY.

FOR the holiday-maker who requires an entire change, not only as regards scenery and climate, but also in the manner of passing the precious time at his disposal, let him try Ireland. There he can while away three weeks or a month with the greatest of ease, and without feeling in the least degree bored. Nowhere is the stranger accorded a more hearty welcome; and practically all the railway companies strive their utmost to make his stay pleasant by providing inexpensive excursions to the many different places of interest.

Undoubtedly one of the most enjoyable of holidays can be spent in this way by keeping to the line of the Belfast and County Down Railway, which, starting from Belfast in the north, with its several coaching and steamboat connections, serves practically the entire county. The chief centre of attraction, however, is Newcastle, situated in the south, famous for its charming scenery, exhilarating air, and lovely surroundings. Belfast is an important and in many ways interesting city to visit. Besides being the home of the linen industry—Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver's headquarters being situated here—Belfast is also celebrated for its vast ship-building yards. One of the largest of these shipyards is that owned by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, Limited, whose employés number close upon 10,000 hands. It would be difficult to beat Belfast as an excursion centre, though the majority of people prefer to make Newcastle their headquarters.

Before proceeding southwards, a run should be made out to Bangor, which lies on the north coast of County Down. The railway line skirts the southern shore of Belfast Lough all the way On the opposite side can be seen Carrickfergus Castle. The first station of importance after leaving Belfast is Holywood, whose history dates back many hundreds of years. In the year 1210 King John is supposed to have stayed at Holywood when travelling from Carrickfergus to Downpatrick. Where the two principal streets intersect is an old maypole—the last genuine one left in Ireland—which the good people of Holywood still persist in decorating each May Day.

Shortly before the train reaches Bangor we pass through Helen's Bay, the station for Clandeboye, the famous seat of the late Marquess of Dufferin. One of its chief features is a tower called Helen's Tower, from the summit of which on a clear day one can see as far as Ailsa Craig in one direction, and the Isle of Man in the other. The tower was erected scarcely more than fifty years ago by the mother of the late Marquess, Helen, granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan. Many beautiful verses have been written by Browning and Tennyson and by Helen Lady Dufferin.



Welch.

A GENERAL VIEW OF NEWCASTLE, COUNTY DOWN.

Picturesquely situated at the foot of the Mourne Mountains, the town has rapidly developed into a favourite health resort, the excellent golf links being one of the chief attractions of the locality.

Welch.

CASTLEWELLAN CASTLE, COUNTY DOWN.

This fine old mansion, the seat of the Earl of Annesley, stands on a wooded ridge close to the Slieve-na-lat Mountain, and distant from Newcastle about four miles. Also in the vicinity is Tullymore Park, the seat of the Earl of Roden.

These will be found there inscribed on tablets.

Among golfers the name Carnalen is well known; the Royal Belfast Golf Club—the premier Irish Golf Club, by the way—have their headquarters here. For yachting, sea-fishing, or bathing no finer watering-place exists round the coast than Bangor, the headquarters of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club; it can also be reached from Belfast by water by the steamers of the Belfast and County Down Railway.

The journey from Belfast to Newcastle, which is the real centre of attraction for the tourist and health-seeker, is of all-absorbing interest. We travel by the main line of the County Down Railway, and passing through Dundonald, Comber, Ballygowan, Saintfield, Ballynahinch, and Crossgar, stop at Downpatrick, the county town of Down, to visit the grave of the great patron saint. It appears, however, that for many centuries prior to the introduction of Christianity, Downpatrick was the capital of the surrounding district. Therefore the connection of St. Patrick with the place which now bears his name is not altogether clear. St. Patrick, according to tradition, lies buried on the south side of the cathedral; the actual spot is marked by a huge monolith of Mourne granite, the name "Patric," in Irish characters, being inscribed thereon. A splendid relic of an old monastery, founded in 1180 for the Cistercian monks by Sir John de Courcy, is to be seen in Inch Abbey, about half-an-hour's walk from Downpatrick.

Leaving Downpatrick and all its interesting associations behind us, we then pass through Tullymurry and Dundrum, with its fine old Anglo-Norman fortress overlooking the town and bay. Newcastle is reached shortly after, and here we are set down almost at the very door of the magnificent Slieve Donard Hotel, owned by the County Down Railway Company. The hotel is charmingly situated; one can obtain a bedroom either looking over the sea or out on the mountains. We are now in the midst of some of the most beautiful scenery in the country, including the celebrated Mourne Mountains. Golf is one of the chief

Digitized by Google

Think you would know How to Value

A keen, active, strong

Set of Brains?

You can build them from food if you select the kind of food that contains the Phosphate of Potash and Albumen in a digestible form. You might take a hundredweight of those elements in the crude state as sold at the chemists and yet not gain a fraction, for Nature is loath to take up and use these things except as prepared in her own marvellous laboratory, the grains of the field.

On the other hand, when you eat food made of the parts of Wheat and Barley especially selected and so treated that a weak infant can digest them, you on results—sturdy health and Brains that can and will do things.

Can Depend

That Food is

Grape-Nuts

Get the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each packet.

There's a reason.

GRAPE-NUTS CO., Ltd., 66 Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

---

"AN OLD FORMULA REVIVED"

Carlin's 'Calross' Mixture

A Blend of the choicest tobaccos.
Exquisite flavour & delicate aroma.
Exceptionally cool smoking.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Sold by leading tobacconists, & Sole Proprietors.

C.A. CARLIN & Co. 177 PICCADILLY

¼LB. SAMPLE TIN 2/6 POST FREE

---

CORNWALL

LONDON TO PENZANCE & BACK, 40/-

What the celebrated author, Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, says about CORNWALL:—

"I was delighted with the place and the people, and I can quite see the numerous possibilities of Cornwall as a Pleasure Resort both for Winter and Summer. Cornwall astounded and delighted me."

Thousands of delighted travellers acknowledge it to be the ideal home

WINTER, HEALTH, & PLEASURE RESORT.

Why incur the trouble and expense of a long Foreign Journey when the

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY

can take you in a few hours to the DELIGHTFUL

PADDINGTON to
Falmouth in 7 Hrs. 10 Min.
St. Ives „ 8 „ — „
Penzance „ 7 „ 40 „

Cornish Riviera?

Fast and Luxurious Trains. Cheap Fares.

G.W.R. Co.'s Tregenna Castle Hotel at St. Ives.

Write to SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, PADDINGTON STATION, W., for Illustrated Booklet Free. JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

---

JONES' PATENT LEGGINGS.

Best quality, in 3 patterns, 30/-

SIMPLEST
SMARTEST
SOUNDEST on the market.
SOLE INVENTOR and Patentee:

F. J. JONES, Sporting Tailor & Breeches Maker,
17, KING ST., ST., JAMES' From E. Tautz.

---

THE BRITISH MAID IS

MATCHLESS

AND THE

"MATCHLESS" METAL POLISH

IS BRITISH MADE.

BEST BRITISH BRASS BRIGHTENER.

Manufrs: The "Matchless" Metal Polish Co Ltd, Liverpool.

---

HARBUTT'S

PLASTICINE

The charm of Home Modelling is greatly enhanced when you use Plasticine; a clean, dainty material made in five beautiful colors.

THE COMPLETE MODELLER.

A most useful outfit containing every requisite, 2/10 Post Free.

Cheaper boxes, 8d. and 1/3, post free.
P. DEPT.

W. HARBUTT, A.R.C.A. PLASTICINE WORKS AND STUDIO. BATHAMPTON BATH.

---

'DAREN' BREAD

Awarded 32 HONOURS for Excellence of Quality.

TRY A LOAF.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray postage.

Digitized by Google

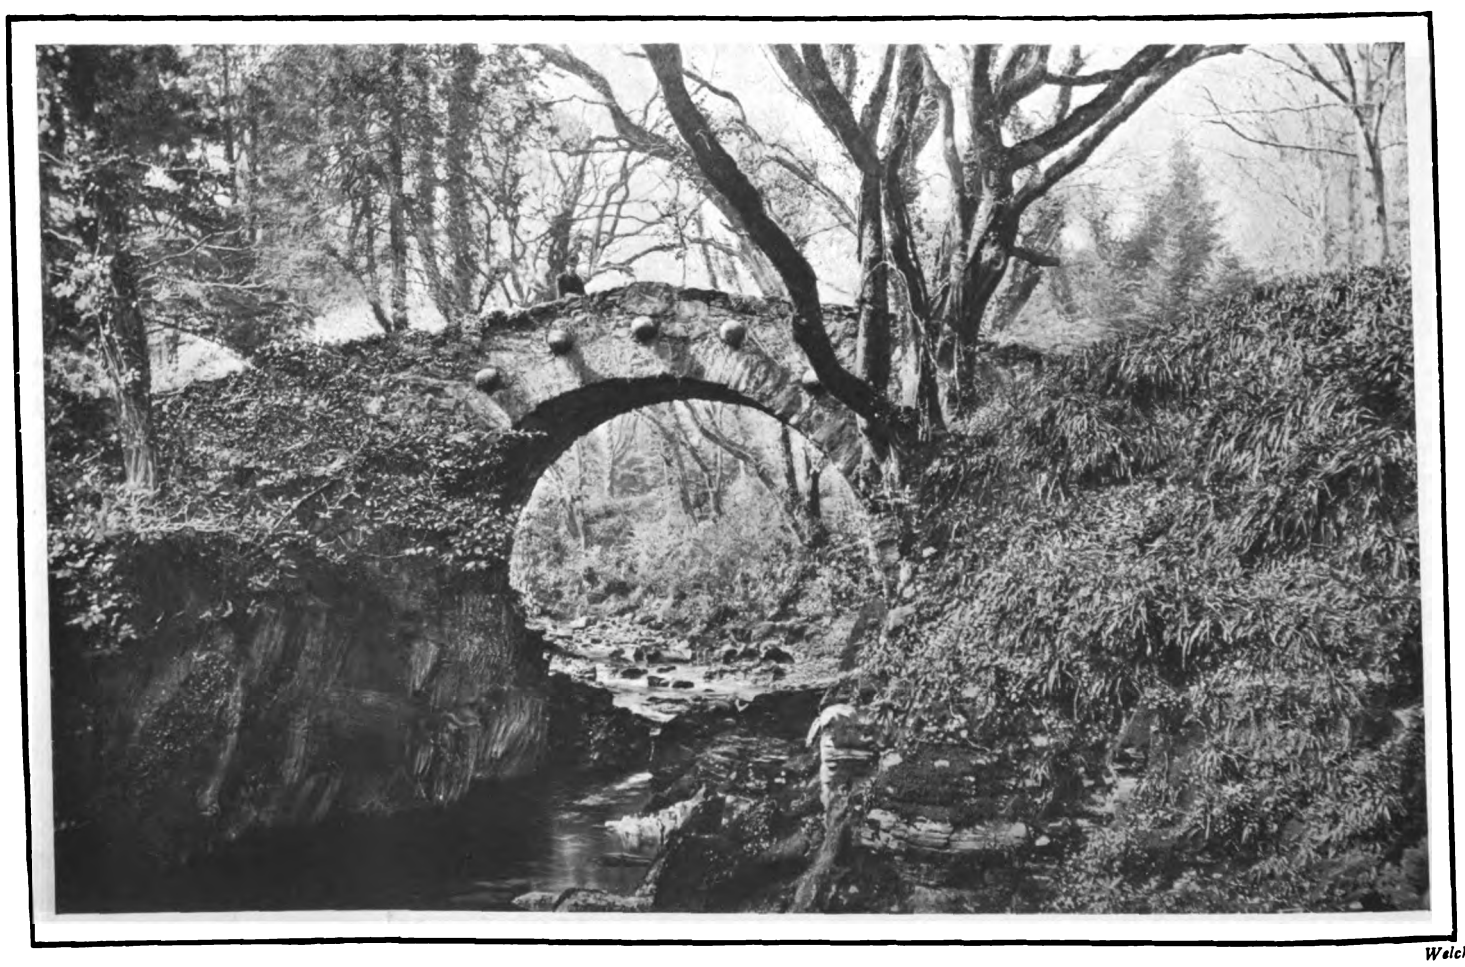
Welch.

HELEN'S TOWER AT CLANDEBOYE.

A conspicuous landmark on the north coast of County Down is Helen's Tower, which lies about two miles beyond Clandeboye House, the beautiful seat of the late Marquess of Dufferin. It was erected by the mother of the late Marquess, and has been the theme of verses of some of the greatest poets.

attractions; the links, natural sand dunes, extend from the railway station northward for several miles. The County Down Golf Club have their headquarters here.

No difficulty will be found in mapping out a programme extending over several weeks. For the mountain climber there are the heights of Slieve Donard (2,796-ft.) and Slieve Bearnogh (2,394-ft.) to be scaled. Short drives can be taken to Bryansford Village, with its grand views of the Mourne Mountains and Irish Sea, and Tullymore Park, the seat of the Earl of Roden, situated some two miles up the valley of the Shimna River. Donard Lodge, the property of the Earl of Annesley, is picturesquely situated on the slopes of Slieve Donard, and Castlewellan, standing on a ridge, is distant about two miles from Maghera and four from Newcastle. A tourist car runs to Rosstrevor, a splendid drive of about twenty miles through the mountains. Carlingford Lough is a charming stretch of water surrounded by wooded hills. From Rosstrevor one can continue by train to Warrenpoint and return to Belfast over the Great Northern Company's system. The return tickets are available by either company's route.



Welch.

THE OLD BRIDGE IN TULLYMORE PARK.

A charming drive from Newcastle, County Down, can be made along the picturesque valley of the Shimna River to Tullymore Park, the seat of the Earl of Roden. On the way we pass through Bryansford Village, with its creeper-clad cottages and pretty inn. At the further end of the village is the Gothic gateway forming the entrance to Tullymore Park.

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S FOOD

"———,
March 3rd, 1904.

To Messrs. Benger's Food, Ltd.

Gentlemen—I notice you advertise your food for 'Infants, Invalids and the Aged.' I do not come under any of these classes, yet I always use it for my last meal at night. It is so easily digested that having naturally a not too strong digestion I ensure a good night's rest.

The Rev. H. ———."

BENGER'S FOOD with Milk forms a delicate and highly nutritive cream, rich in all the elements necessary to maintain vigorous health, but entirely free from rough and indigestible particles, which often produce irritation in delicate stomachs.

Benger's Food is sold in tins by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

"My Forefathers knew something."

DEWAR'S "WHITE LABEL" WHISKY

Now on Sale at all Booksellers

THE

SPORTSMAN'S YEAR-BOOK.

Edited by A. WALLIS MYERS.

Price 3/6 net; post free, 3/10.

The Globe.—"Messrs. George Newnes have removed the reproach that the sportsman who wanted to have in one handy volume a summary of the doings of the year has up to now been ignored. The editor's aim to provide a record of personal achievements in the realm of sport which should possess the value of authenticity has been fully achieved."

The Star.—"Perhaps the most attractive feature of the book is the bijou biographies of leading living personalities in our national sporting life."

The Sportsman.—"One can only feel surprised that a book of this sort has been so long delayed."

GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 3-12, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

ALL TOBACCO LEAF. A DELICHTFUL WHIFF.

NO PAPER, NO DANGER, NO SMOKERS' THROAT TROUBLE.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGARETTES.

SOLD EVERYWHERE, 1D. EACH. 8/- PER 100, AND BY BEWLAY, 49, STRAND. ESTB. 1780.

The Flor de Dindigul Cigars are as excellent as the Cigarettes. Sold everywhere 3d. each, 5 for 1/-

THEY TOUCH THE LIVER

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

FOR HEADACHE
DIZZINESS
BILIOUSNESS
TORPID LIVER
CONSTIPATION
SALLOW SKIN
THE COMPLEXION

SMALL PILL. DOSE. PRICE.

Be sure they are Genuine
Carter's Little Liver Pills, in blue and white wrapper.
Look for signature—

All Chemists, 1/1½. Send for Booklet "Character Reading by Handwriting."

British Depot 46 Holborn Viaduct, London.

Brent Good

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

SOME FAMOUS DORSETSHIRE MEDALS.

As time goes on collectors are likely to confine their spheres of interest more and more strictly to some particular county, city, or other locality. This tendency is particularly noticeable in the matter of historical medals and tokens. In the magnificent work on Bath, recently published by Mr. Mowbray A. Green, one finds an example of the number and variety of tradesmen's tokens which can be discovered relating to a single place. As far as commemorative medals are concerned, the little county of Dorset is singularly rich. A fine collection of Dorset tokens, very similar in character and design to those of Bath, was formed some years since by the Hon. J. S. Udal, Chief Justice of the Leeward Islands, who has done so much to perpetuate the folk-lore of his native county. Mr. Udal will, it is hoped, at no distant date write an exhaustive account of these quaint memorials of the past. Meanwhile the present writer proposes to call the attention of collectors to two Dorset medals which can claim a national, as well as a county, interest. As the tragedy of "King" Monmouth both began and ended in Dorsetshire, the series of six fine medals relating to it may very well find a place in a Dorsetshire collection, but they do not possess the essentially local character of the scarcely less interesting medals relating to Giles Strangways and Anthony, Earl of Shaftesbury. These medals, like those connected with the "last phase" of luckless Monmouth, belong to the eventful seventeenth century. The Strangways medal (a glorious specimen of John Roettier's art at its best) is unquestionably one of the finest works of the kind in existence. It richly deserves European, as well as purely English, fame, and yet, by the irony of fate, the sturdy Dorset Royalist, to whose generosity Charles II. ultimately owed his safety, finds no mention in "The Dictionary of National Biography." The Countess of Ilchester and her son, Lord Stavordale, in their charming book on Lady Sarah Lennox, evince a laudable interest in the eventful history of their ancestors. They are credited with an intention of giving the world an account of the political and literary gatherings for which Bowood was celebrated when a grande dame of their kith and kin reigned there as hostess. Surely the subject of Giles Strangways is eminently worthy of their careful attention and painstaking investigations?

The story of Giles Strangways is briefly this: Born in 1615, he was the eldest son of Sir John Strangways of Melbury Sampford and Abbotsbury. He was educated at Wadham College, Oxford, as one of the "founder's kin," and when still very young married Susannah Edwards of Wadhurst, a great-grand-daughter of Sir Thomas Lucie of Charlcote. He became M.P. for Melcombe Regis in 1640, and for Bridport in 1641. From the earliest stages of the Civil War he was a devoted adherent of the Royalist cause. He took part in the defence of Sherborne Castle (1645), serving under Prince Maurice with the rank of colonel. He was placed on the Black List as "unpardonable," and was imprisoned for nearly three years in the White Tower. In September, 1651, he contrived to send the fugitive Charles II. 300 broad pieces, without which the successful termination of his wanderings would have been almost impossible. Their sterling loyalty cost John and Giles Strangways from first to last over £30,000. They were both returned to the Convention Parliament of 1660. From that time till his death, a quarter of a century later, Giles Strangways played a very important part in the affairs of Dorsetshire. He filled the office of High Steward of Bridport, represented the county in Parliament, and was made an LL.D. by his University. Loggan engraved his portrait. Original impressions are exceedingly rare, and in 1800 one fetched £10. Reproductions are common enough. Below Loggan's "head" appear six doggerel lines complimentary alike to the artist and his subject. He died in 1675, and rests with his ancestors in the church of Melbury Sampford. His only monument is the Latin epitaph, indicative of ripe scholarship, which he composed for the tomb of his father. Elizabeth, the great-grand-daughter of Giles Strangways, became the wife of the first Lord Ilchester. The present holder of the title is consequently his direct descendant. Hutchins and others erroneously suppose that the splendid Roettier medal was struck on his liberation from the Tower. This is not the case. It was executed at least twelve years later, after the Restoration, as one of an intended series (never completed) ordered by Charles II. in honour of illustrious sufferers in the Royal cause. The design and inscriptions speak for themselves. Examples in silver are sufficiently rare. Lord Ilchester is known to possess one in gold. A second in exceptionally fine condition recently came into the possession of Messrs. Spink. It is now in a private Dorset collection, and from it the photographs used in the accompanying illustrations have been made.

GEORGE BOWER'S SILVER MEDAL

Struck in 1681, to celebrate the rejection by the Grand Jury of a bill of indictment against Anthony Ashley Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury, for high treason. This was the subject of Dryden's poem, "The Medal."

The silver Shaftesbury medal, struck in 1681, is also rare. No example in gold is known to exist. Anthony Ashley Cooper, born six years later than Giles Strangways, sat in Parliament during the Commonwealth. His zeal for the Restoration was rewarded with a peerage. In 1672 he became Earl of Shaftesbury and Lord Chancellor. In the following year he was dismissed from office. He subsequently intrigued with Monmouth, and was indicted for high treason. On the Grand Jury throwing out the bill, George Bower struck this medal at the instigation of the popular party, who celebrated Shaftesbury's acquittal on November 24, 1681, with great rejoicings and bonfires. The medals were generally worn by his partisans. Lord Shaftesbury died two years later in Amsterdam. Dryden describes the medal in a satirical poem thus:

> "One side is fill'd with title and with face;
> And lest the King should want a regal place,
> On the reverse a tower the town surveys,
> O'er which our mounting sun his beams displays,
> The word, pronounced aloud by shrieval voice
> Lætamur, which in Polish is rejoice.
>
> . . . . . .
>
> Five days he sat for every cast and look,
> Four more than God to finish Adam took."

JOHN ROETTIER'S GOLD MEDAL

In honour of Giles Strangways of Melbury, Dorset, executed after the Restoration by order of Charles II. Only two examples in this metal are known to exist.

Like Giles Strangways, Anthony Ashley is still most worthily represented among Dorset worthies. The medals connected with the victories and achievements of the Dorset Hoods are rather Naval than commemorative in their character. Two varieties of copper token, however, exist, bearing the head of the first Lord Bridport fairly well executed, together with a laudatory inscription.

B.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.

7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON. W.

THE GRAND MAGAZINE

APRIL ISSUE. NOW READY.

Price 4½d. Nett.

GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., LONDON and NEW YORK.

FOR YOUR BOOTS!

Just try one tin. 7½d. brings two samples (black and brown) of

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

to your door. It's a real pleasure to watch the glossy surface appear after JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB!

It will do the same for all leather goods!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

HATHERLEY ORIGINALITIES

UNIQUELY COMBINE

GREAT STRENGTH WITH LIGHTNESS

THEIR UTILITY IS ILLIMITABLE.

TRADE MARK, ALHATHLAT.

"TSITTATTEE TABLES"

can be set up or re-folded by one person.

Very useful as Reserve Tables on Sporting Estates, or for Picnics, Garden Parties, Drawing and Artist Work.

Stocked in 2 sizes, in Pine, Oak, and Teak.

From 17/- to 54/-

HATHERLEY FORMS OR ROUT SEATS.

Exceedingly PORTABLE and CHEAP. For PICNICS, SCHOOLROOMS, and SPORTING ESTATES.

Stocked in 2 Sizes. Prices from 6/6

OF ALL STORES, IRONMONGERS, AND HOUSE FURNISHERS. . .

WRITE TO-DAY FOR BOOKLET OF ORIGINALITIES.

ALLAN, JONES & CO.,

Dep. C.L. HATHERLEY WORKS, GLOUCESTER.

LONDON—96, LEONARD STREET, E.C.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Scottish Automobile Club's Trials promise to be a great success, and the entries have been very numerous. Among the competing makers will be the Albion, Argyll, Ariel, Arrol Johnston, Chenard and Walcker, Daimler, Darracq, Gladiator, Humber, Minerva, Mors, Peugeot, Siddeley, Sunbeam, and Swift. The chairman and secretary of the club have recently been over the route for the purpose of making the preliminary arrangements. The trials take place on May 10, 11, 12, and 13.

* * *

In connection with the Tourist Trophy Race in the Isle of Man, the Continental Company have offered a prize of 100-guineas to the winner of the event, provided the car is fitted with Continental tyres. A 10-guinea cup is also offered by the same firm to the car which accomplishes the fastest circuit of the course regardless of other conditions. The latter is a prize which will have to be accepted by the Automobile Club with some care, as awards for speed, pure and simple, are entirely foreign to the principle underlying the contest. The entries now number forty, the latest additions being a Whitlock, two Dennis, one Minerva, and a Bristol.

* * *

We are informed that the flotation of "Argyll Motors, Limited," the new company which has been formed to take over the business of the Hozier Engineering Company, has been exceedingly successful, the shares offered having been largely over-subscribed. Arrangements have been made for the immediate erection of large works in the vicinity of Glasgow, with an output of between 1,500 to 2,000 cars per annum, and it is hoped that the 1906 model Argylls will be constructed in the new factory.

* * *

The following is the complete list of cars and drivers for the French Eliminating Trials, the entries having closed on the evening of April 1: 1, Charron-Girardot-Voigt (Girardot); 2, 3, and 4, Panhard-Levassor (Heath, Teste, and Henri Farman); 5, Gobron (Rigolly); 6, 7, and 8, Richard-Brasier (Thèry, Caillois, and Stead); 9, 10, and 11, Bayard-Clément (Albert Clément, Hauriot, and Villemain); 12, 13, and 14, Darracq (Hémery, Wagner, and De la Touloubre); 15, 16, and 17, Renault (Sisz, Edmond, and Bernin); 18, Automoto (Lapertot); 19, 20, and 21, De Dietrich (Gabriel, Rougier, and Duray); 22, 23, and 24, Hotchkiss (Achille Fournier, Le Blon, Lavergne).

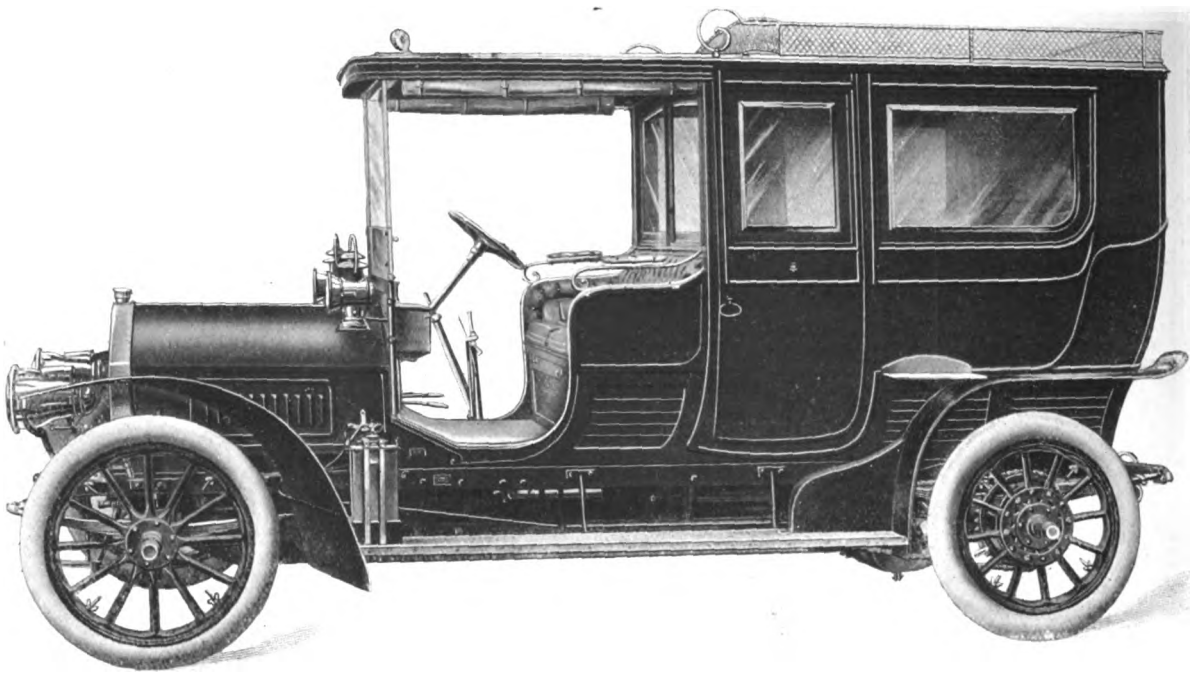
* * *

Colonel Purchas, the Commandant of the Gordon Boys' Home, who is forming classes amongst his boys for instruction in motor-car mechanism, is anxious to obtain, either as a gift or at a cheap rate, one or two cars, or even parts of cars, to be used for instructional purposes. Colonel Purchas, who is doing good work for automobilism by helping to increase the supply of reliable and well-brought-up drivers, should meet with a ready response from the trade and from private motorists who have old but still serviceable cars, whose market value is often extremely small.

The following are a few of the leading motor-car fixtures for the coming summer: May 23, Gordon Bennett Selection Trials in the Isle of Man; June 3, Bexhill Race Meeting; June 10, South Harting Hill Climb; June 12, Henry Edmunds' Trophy (hill climb); July 5, Gordon Bennett race; July 25 to 27, Blackpool Race Meeting.

* * *

We reproduce this week a photograph of a comparatively new type of car, at least so far as this country is concerned. The car shown below is a four-cylinder 20-h.p. Vinot, the sole agency for which has been secured by Messrs. T. J. Harman and Co. of 20, Regent Street, W. It will be remembered that different types of Vinot cars, including the 10-h.p., 14-h.p., 20-h.p., and 30-h.p., were shown first of all at the recent Crystal Palace Show, and again at Olympia. On both occasions a considerable amount of public interest was evinced in these cars, which are really most ingeniously designed, embodying all the latest ideas in motor-car construction. In Paris, and France generally, Vinot cars are very largely used, and so soon as their merits become better known over here should also attain equal popularity among purchasers of moderate-priced cars.



A 20-H.P. VINOT CAR, FITTED WITH LIMOUSINE BODY.

An excellent French car, recently introduced into this country by Messrs. T. J. Harman and Co. of 20, Regent Street. The car, which is of the latest 4-cylinder type, has comfortable seating accommodation for five.

* * *

One of the principal features of the Vinot car is the change-speed gear, the working of which is so simple as to render mistakes almost impossible. By pressing a spring it operates at three different heights; in the highest position it gives two forward speeds, in the middle two more, and in the lowest it puts in the reverse gear. The 20-h.p. type of cars, of which we give an illustration, is provided with both accumulator and chain-driven high-tension magneto ignition, while the chassis are specially constructed to permit of bodies being mounted with side entrances. The cars are very smooth in running, silent, and excellent hill-climbers. Last, but not least, the London agents keep a full stock of spare parts—an important consideration to the purchaser of foreign-made cars.

* * *

The programme for the motor-boat races at Monaco is as follows: Sunday, April 9—Racers of 8-mètres in length. Distance, 100-kilomètres. First prize, 5,500-fr. and a gold medal. Cruisers of 6·5-mètres: Course from Monaco to Nice and back. First prize, 4,000-fr.

Monday—Racers of 12-mètres. Distance, 100-kilomètres. First prize, 6,000-fr. and a gold medal. Cruisers of 8-mètres: Course, Monaco—Nice—Monaco—Mentone—Monaco. First prize, 5,000-fr.

Tuesday—Racers from 12 to 18-mètres. Distance, 100-kilomètres. First prize, 6,000-fr. and a gold medal. Cruisers of 12-mètres: Course, Monaco—Nice—Antibes—Mentone—Monaco. First prize, 6,000-fr.

Wednesday—Cruisers from 12 to 18-mètres. Course, Monaco—Nice—San Remo—Nice—Monaco. First prize, 6,000-fr. Auxiliary and yachts' launches: First prize, 3,000-fr. Fishing-boats: Course, Monaco—Antibes—Monaco. Prizes, 3,000-fr.

Thursday—Championnat de la Mer. Distance 200 kilomètres. Open to all racers and cruisers. Prizes 15,000-fr., first prize 10,000-fr.

Friday—Handicaps for racers. Distance 50-kilomètres. Prizes 6,000-fr. Handicaps for cruisers. Course, Monaco—Nice—Monaco. Prizes 4,000-fr.

Saturday—The nautical mile with standing start and flying-kilomètre. Open to all cruisers or racers which have finished their course throughout in the class races on the Championnat de la Mer. First race, open to boats up to 8-mètres. Second race, open to boats up to 12-mètres. Third race, open to boats up to 18-mètres. The three winners will race together in the final. First prize 5,000-fr. and the Prince of Monaco's Cup, value 10,000-fr. A prize of 1,000-fr. will be given to the maker of the propeller of the fastest boat at the meeting. Last year this prize was awarded to Messrs. Thornycroft, who were responsible for the propeller of Trèfle-à-Quatre.

The course which has been laid out in Monaco Bay is an irregular pentagon. The first side is exactly one nautical mile (1,852-mètres) in length, the second 2,100-mètres, the third 4,648-mètres, the fourth 1,000-mètres, and the fifth 3,000-mètres. The total length is therefore 12,600-mètres.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

"The qualities of the New Fiat Car can only be judged by a run. . . . Even with six passengers, minor hills seem non-existent as regards any effect to slow the well-balanced engine, the flexibility of which was shown when negotiating some awkward traffic on top gear. The suspension of the machine is excellent to quite an unusual degree."—MORNING POST, March 3rd, 1905.

Telephone Nos.:
3171 GERRARD.
1849 GERRARD.

F.I.A.T.

Telegrams:
"FIATISM,
LONDON."

THE WORLD'S FINEST TOURING CAR.

Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire:
Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

Agents for Yorkshire: H. JOHNSON & CO., Ltd.,
28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.

Brighton Depot:

Brighton and South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James's Street, Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:

Fiat Motors, Ltd., 37 & 38, Long Acre, London, W.C.

SOLE AGENTS FOR THE NEW PIRELLI (ITALIAN) MOTOR TYRES.

T. J. HARMAN & CO.,

SOLE BRITISH AGENTS FOR

VINOT AND DEGUINGAND MOTOR CARS.

ALL CARS FOUR CYLINDERS.

10-H.P. 14-H.P. 20-H.P. 30-H.P.

Silent, Fast, Reliable, Wonderful Hill Climbers.

10-14-H.P. 4 Cylindor Car, with Body, £370.

Trial Runs can be arranged.

GARAGE: WELLS STREET, JERMYN STREET
(One minute from Piccadilly Circus).

HIRE. A good stock of high-powered up-to-date Cars for Hire at Moderate Prices.

REPAIRS undertaken and executed by skilled workmen.

Accumulators charged. Accessories, Petrol, Grease, Oil, etc., at Moderate Prices.

20, REGENT STREET.

Telephone. 4762 GERRARD. Telegrams "VINOT, LONDON."

HUMBER CYCLES.

"Beeston Humber is synonymous with absolutely the highest design, workmanship, and material possible in a modern bicycle."—The Cyclist.

— TWO SPEED GEARS — FITTED TO ALL MODELS.

Humber Cycles are supreme wherever they are known.

By Royal Warrant Cycle Manufacturers to H.M. King Edward VII.

and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales.

£8 : 8 : 0
— TO —
£18 : 18 : 0

Catalogue with full details sent free on application to

Humber Limited

WORKS:
BEESTON (NOTTS.) and COVENTRY . .

DEPOTS:
LONDON - 32 Holborn Viaduct
LIVERPOOL - 73 Bold Street
MANCHESTER - 5 Deansgate
BIRMINGHAM 4 Victoria Square
NOTTINGHAM - Grey Friargate
SOUTHAMPTON 27 London Road

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR THE PARENT MAKE OF THE GENUINE

ROCHET-SCHNEIDER CARS,

FOR GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

LA LOCOMOTRICE CARS

(LICENCE ROCHET-SCHNEIDER)

AND BELGRAVE CARS.

DONNE & WILLANS, Ltd.

293, GILLINGHAM ST., SOUTH BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W

(200 yards from Victoria Station.)

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

NEW SPRING HATS AT THE MAISON NOUVELLE, REGENT STREET.

IN WHITE GUIPURE.

THIS is one of the most tempting seasons of the year for lovers of shopping. There are so many different articles of our wearing apparel that need replenishing, and so many delightfully fresh and novel modes in everything with which to satisfy our every wish. It is only money that is needed now, and the opportunity is there waiting to cater for us. The pretty white coats in all materials and a great variety of shapes are most alluring; the only pity is that white gets so quickly soiled in London that it is extravagant wear for everybody. You may say, "It can be chemically cleaned." I grant that, but unfortunately something generally goes wrong when a coat is cleaned; either it stretches, or it loses its shape, or shrinks. At any rate, it rarely leaves the cleaner's hands satisfactorily, and you always feel inclined to make use of a naughty word, "in a whisper," when your pet blouse comes home ruined. There are a few places where they turn out things well, but they require a great deal of seeking. However, white will be very much worn, in spite of this one disadvantage. White hats, white dresses, boleros, coats, long and short, in cloth, in serge, in silken fabrics, and even in house flannel. I saw one in this material the other day, trimmed with handsome embroidery on white cloth, and it really was most stylish in appearance.

Some of the most charming toques and hats were shown at the Maison Nouvelle in Regent Street, who invariably have a very large selection of all the latest Parisian styles. There were some very becoming white toques and large shapes; one of the prettiest was the white guipure hat here illustrated, with two long white ostrich feathers at the one side, loops of black velvet ribbon falling upon the hair, giving it character. Another new toque is an improved Marquis in blue-grey fancy straw, the edge having a ruche of blue forget-me-nots. This toque is much wider than the generality this season, and is most becoming, especially the back view here shown. Another favourite shape in large hats is the dark brown straw, with yellow roses and wheatears; the crown has a pretty band of velvet embroidered in sequins and silks, and softened with brown chiffon. This house, or rather, these houses, for there seem to be no end of them established in all the largest thoroughfares, have a very happy knack of displaying their modes to the greatest advantage; their shop windows are always attractive at all times of the year, but they are excelling themselves at this present moment.

IN BLUE-GREY FANCY STRAW.

Faced cloth and silk are running a race just now, but I think the odds are fairly even, for where you have the cloth gown, silk strappings are used in many novel forms, and the silk dresses are in their turn mixed with cloth. Neutral shades seem to be gaining ground in everything, the one gay spot being the masses of flowers and foliage on the hats and toques. Here, you cannot overdo it; Paris and Vienna beat us in that still.

I must try to describe a novel and dainty blouse bodice, worn with a mushroom faced cloth coat and skirt. This was of accordeon-pleated Mechlin net, made over several layers and interlinings of chiffon, which gave it a very light and charming airiness. Then over this, forming a long point back and front, and gradually decreasing in points to the shoulder, were alternate rows of waved lace (with a design of raised roses) and fawn satin ribbon. A tiny gold cord outlined the lace, and little golden acorns finished off each point. The sleeves were full to the elbow, also accordeon-pleated, and a very long tight cuff of ribbon and lace to correspond. I think it really was the prettiest I have seen for a long time. The coat and skirt were very simple, but that charming simplicity which costs more than the most expensively trimmed costumes, for every line must be perfect.

Talking of perfect lines reminds me of the lines and curves of a man's figure. It is usually the occasion of a general smile when you speak of men wearing corsets, but it is none the less a fact, and they are becoming very general indeed. There is no necessity for tight lacing—wasp-waists for men have not yet come into vogue; but the comfort of a corset, scientifically cut, to give the necessary support, has decidedly more supporters than anyone imagines, as those who wear them will testify. The latest and most satisfactory corset is made in the form of a webbing belt, which buckles at the back; this is so constructed that a man rests unconsciously on this, and so throws his shoulders back, and loses that ungainly stoop into which habit men past their first youth so often drop.

R. D.

IN DARK BROWN STRAW.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lonnilz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

BORWICK'S

5 GOLD MEDALS

FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY

BAKING POWDER

GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

---

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

---

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

---

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

---

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10/6. 11/3, 14/-, 15/6 & 18/-
SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

---

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

Estd.] [1835.

For Mutual Life Assurance.

Accumulated Fund over £5,900,000.
Paid in Claims ... £12,250,000

Profits: These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured; already divided to 1902, £6,160,000.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost, with provision for old age, and are singularly advantageous.

48, GRACECHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C.

APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES INVITED.

---

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

The Coffee of the Epicure.

Price per lb. 2/4 1/10 1/6

ASTOUNDING OFFER.

Just send a postcard and we will forward post free 3d. to the first 100 applicants of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.

A TIN

THE METATA AGENTS, 17k, Devonshire Square, LONDON, E.C.

Samples post free 8d. 6d. 4d.

ROUBLE COFFEE

---

S. & H. HARRIS'

WATERPROOF

HARNESS COMPOSITION.

This Article has been before the Public for upwards of 60 years.

WATERPROOF

SADDLE PASTE

Gives a fine polish and keeps the leather in good condition.

STOCKED BY ALL SADDLERS.

Manufactory: MANSELL STREET, LONDON, E.

---

OONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

---

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL. } Joint Managers.

---

Are you fond of your face? If so, use Williams' Shaving Soap.

Williams' Shaving Sticks and Tablets sold everywhere. Trial sample for 1d. stamp to pay postage. Write for Free booklet, "How to Shave."

The J. B. Williams Co.,
65 Great Russell St., London.

---

Icilma.

A clear, healthy complexion and white hands, proof against hard water, heat, cold wind, or fog, can only be obtained and kept by using Icilma Water, Cream, and Soap, Nature's remedies. Their cleansing, whitening, softening, and healing effect is unique and immediate. (Samples Soap and Cream, 2d.)

ICILMA CO., Ltd. (Dept. 43), 142, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

---

Preserve your Teeth!

BY USING

FRAGRANT

FLORILINE

It imparts a

FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH

that is rare and delightful,

IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.

IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.

For use with or without FLORILINE.

1/- per large Jar.

---

A WONDERFUL REMEDY.

The whole Treatment for 3/-, Ointment, Tablets, and Soap.

HERE IT IS. TRY IT.

ECZEMA, RASHES,

Pimples, Spots, Sores, Ringworm, Chaps, Chilblains, Rough Skin, BAD LEGS.

STOPS ALL IRRITATION AT ONCE.

CURED by the

ECZOLINE TREATMENT.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

A Gentleman writes: "My sister was troubled for 20 years with Eczema; she only used half a pot when she was absolutely cured." A Lady states: "Your pots are worth 20/- each. I was cured when I had been sent home from the hospital as incurable."

Ointment, 1/1½, 2/9, 4/6. Tablets same price. Soap, 6d. per cake; Shaving Stick, 6d. Of any Chemist, or HUNTER, Regent Street, Swindon, Wilts, Eng. Animal Eczoline same price, but Soap, 1/- per lb. Book, "How to Cure Eczema," 1d.

Digitized by Google

SUET PUDDINGS

CAN be light and digestible!

HOW? Use a little of

Brown & Polson's

raising powder

"Paisley Flour"

in the making, and steam instead of boil your puddings.

It is surprising how tasty and wholesome they are when made in this—THE BETTER WAY.

It is well worth an early trial.

Tatcho

Ever since I began to use "Tatcho," and learnt from experience its value, I have recommended it to my friends and acquaintances, and in no case has it failed to meet with unqualified approval.

Zetland House, Maidenhead.

Used "Tatcho" for a short time, the result being that the hair began to grow fast and thick.

" 18, Ashburn Place, Kensington, W.

I guarantee that this preparation is made according to the formulæ recommended by me, has found "Tatcho" very beneficial, the falling-off of hair having ceased. "Tatcho" is the nicest preparation for the hair.

Torr-Aluinn, Dunoon, N.B.

I find "Tatcho" excellent, and better than anything I have ever tried in the course of a long life.

High Croft, Winchester.

Tatcho

Chemists and Stores.

THE KING'S MENU.

RAGOUT DE SAUMON A LA MAITRE D'HOTEL.

For half a pound or so of cold boiled salmon make a pint of good béchamel sauce, mix with it two ounces of maître d'hôtel butter, and a dessertspoonful of finely-minced parsley, then heat up in this sauce the cold salmon cut into even-sized fillets, and an equal number of fillets of cold cooked cucumber. When hot, a squeeze of lemon juice can be added to this sauce if liked. Arrange the fish and cucumber fillets alternately in a hot silver or china dish and pour the sauce round. This is a very useful Sunday supper or luncheon dish, as it can be both prepared and served in a chafing-dish on the dining-room table, if everything is put in readiness beforehand.

BALLOTINES DE VOLAILLE.

Two legs of a fowl go a very long way when prepared like this, and are a very useful and economical dish when the breast has been used for an entrée, such as a suprême, for another meal. Begin by preparing a farce as follows, this quantity being ample for two large legs: Mince and pound together half a pound of lean white meat (such as rabbit, veal, or fowl) and a quarter of a pound of fresh fat pork or bacon, then rub through a fine wire sieve, and mix with it two ounces of grated tongue or lean ham, a couple of cooked chicken livers finely minced, four mushrooms, also minced, and if at hand a truffle is a great improvement. Season this mixture with coralline pepper, a dust of salt, and a few drops of sherry or Madeira (in which it is best to have cooked the chicken livers if possible), and bind with the yolks of two raw eggs. The legs, after boning (retaining the skin on them, mind), are filled with this farce, after which each leg is sewn up with a needle and thread to keep in the stuffing and preserve the shape of the legs. Put a good ounce and a-half of butter in a stewpan with an onion and carrot sliced, a piece of celery, a piece of fat bacon rind, a clove, three peppercorns, a bunch of herbs, and half a bay leaf; lay in the ballotines, and fry with the lid on the pan for ten minutes, turning the ballotines and shaking the pan to keep the contents from sticking and burning. Now add a cupful of good stock, put the pan in the oven, and braise very gently for about fifty minutes, basting the legs frequently, and if necessary adding another spoonful or two of stock or, better still, of light wine. The ballotines are then lifted out, brushed over with thin glaze, then set in the oven for a few minutes. They are then divided into either two or three portions each and dished on a potato border with broiled mushrooms or any garnish liked in the centre, or else arranged on a bed of spinach or mushroom purée, etc. Anyway, pour a good Espagnole or other more or less rich sauce round before serving. If the legs, after stuffing and braising like this, are left till cold, then cut into slices, and masked with a nice chaudfroid sauce they make a useful and pretty little cold entrée. The slices can be mounted on little croûtons spread with a ham or other savoury butter. Also when cold and sliced they will be found an excellent substitute for, or an addition to, salads in which Bologna and other sausages play a part. In this case, though, season the farce rather more highly than usual otherwise, and the grated ham should be a smoked one.

A SEASONABLE DINNER.

CONSOMME BOUQUETIERE.

RAGOUT DE SAUMON A LA MAITRE D'HOTEL.

BALLOTINES DE VOLAILLE.

GIGOT D'AGNEAU A LA PASCALINE.

PIGEONS ROTIS.

SALADE D'ORANGES ET TOMATES.

SALSIFIS, SAUCE MOUSSELINE.

MOUSSE DE MARASQUIN AUX FRAISES FRAPPE.

CROUTES DE CRABE FAUSSE.

PIGEONS ROTIS.

Bordeaux pigeons should be chosen for this purpose. Bard them and roast for about fifteen minutes, or a little less, basting the birds well. The strings and barding bacon are then removed, and after browning before the fire for a minute or two, the birds are sent to table, garnished with seasoned water-cress and accompanied by clear gravy or brown sauce, and the following or other salad to taste. Salade d'Oranges et Tomates.—Dip the tomatoes into boiling water for a minute, then skin them and set them on ice to make them firm and cold. Meantime, free the oranges from peel and pith, divide them into their natural sections, and with a sharp knife make a tiny slit in those that have pips and squeeze these out carefully. They and the sliced tomatoes are then seasoned, and dressed with oil and vinegar and a fourniture of finely-minced chives (or failing this, the green stem of spring onions will do), tarragon, burnet, or sweet basil.

SALSIFIS, SAUCE MOUSSELINE.

Wash, scrape, and trim the roots of a bundle of salsify, putting each one as it is done in acidulated water till all are ready, then cook in salted water till tender. They are then drained and served with the following sauce. Put the yolks of four raw eggs into a stewpan, and three tablespoonfuls of cream and two crushed peppercorns, stand the stewpan in an outer pan of boiling water and cook the eggs until they thicken, stirring well, then mix in by degrees, letting each bit dissolve before adding the next, an ounce of butter broken up into little pieces. The sauce is then wrung through a tammy cloth, a dust of salt, a grate of nutmeg, a squeeze of lemon juice added, and used at once.

Digitized by Google

CROUTES DE CRABE FAUSSE.

Take equal quantities of minced shrimps and cold cooked herring-roes (these latter are best steamed for this purpose, not fried) and pound down smoothly with two or three drops of the Escoffier anchovy vinegar, a spoonful of fresh cream, sufficient butter to make a workable paste, and grated Parmesan cheese in the proportion of half an ounce of this to every quarter of a pound of the minced fish. Season with salt, coralline, and freshly-ground black pepper, and a squeeze of lemon juice, then serve spread on croûtes or suitable biscuits, and a garnish of cress. For variety's sake chilli or tarragon vinegar can take the place of the anchovy vinegar given to-day.

LITTLE CHOCOLATE CAKES.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

LITTLE CHOCOLATE CAKES (Mouseué).—Beat half a pound of butter to a cream, mix in four ounces of castor sugar and two ounces of Fry's powdered vanilla chocolate, and work together for ten minutes, then mix in alternately by degrees four whole raw eggs and four ounces of fine well-dried and sifted flour. Work altogether for about a quarter of an hour, then pour the mixture into a buttered and papered tin that has been dusted with equal quantities of flour and castor sugar. Bake for about thirty minutes. When the cake is quite cold cut it into little shapes fancied (or it can, of course, be left as it is), and ice the top or whole of these with chocolate glace, and strew the tops with chopped almonds, pistachios, or rough white loaf sugar. For the glace, put into a stewpan an ounce of Fry's vanilla chocolate finely grated, with two tablespoonfuls of water, and cook till smooth; then mix with it half a pound of icing sugar and three dessertspoonfuls of warm water. Just let these warm up together, then use at once. Mind, if you let the glace after adding the sugar get really hot the icing will be dull. Then, do you know little chocolate meringue cakes? If not, here is a delicious recipe for them: Whisk the whites of seven eggs till so stiff that a knife will cut through them cleanly, then mix in a pound of castor sugar and four ounces of finely-powdered vanilla chocolate, which has been sifted together before being added to the eggs. Have ready a baking sheet covered with well-buttered paper, drop the mixture on it in spoonfuls, and stand aside for an hour before baking. The tin is then put into a moderate oven for ten or twelve minutes. Stand aside till the cakes are cold before detaching them from the paper.

PLASMON POTATO SOUP (G. S. D.).—Boil five or six potatoes, and rub them through a fine sieve, together with an onion boiled till tender, and also sieved. Mix this purée with half a gill of new milk, bring to the boil, then dilute with a pint and a-half of white stock (or all milk can be used if stock is not at hand) and half a pint of Plasmon stock. Season to taste with salt and white pepper, and if liked add a garnish of half an ounce of sago boiled till transparent in the stock.

SOUFFLE D'ORANGES GLACE (Son of a Gun.)—Rub the peel off six Mandarin oranges (which are a large kind of tangerine and the nicest for this sweet) on to five or six ounces of loaf sugar, crush this and put it in a double saucepan with the yolks of twelve and the whites of six eggs, and whisk together till warm and thick. Now remove the pan from the fire and beat the custard till cold and stiff, then add the strained juice of eight oranges, a liqueur glassful of Curaçoa, and half a pint of cream whipped till stiff. Have ready a papered soufflé dish, fill with the mixture, and freeze in the charged ice cave for three hours or so. The paper band must be removed carefully, so as not to tear away any of the soufflé with it, and as the soufflé must not wait after it is taken from the cave have the silver case ready to slip the dish into at once, or a serviette to pin round if this is used instead.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES has presented a piano to the Children's Happy Evenings Association, of which she is president, for use in one of its many branches. This is the third piano her Royal Highness has given to the association, which provides evenings of organised play weekly to some 16,000 children attending the county schools in London.

MESSRS. RAPHAEL TUCK AND SONS, LTD., have sent us some specimen sets of their latest post-cards, "The Wide, Wide World" Series, produced in the famous "Oilette" process, direct from either an original oil-painting or water-colour drawing, each post-card being practically a miniature painting. The reception which "The Wide, Wide World" Series of post-cards, although of comparatively recent issue, has met with, already gives every promise that they will become the most appreciated post-cards of the age. The educational influence of such a series of post-cards as "The Wide, Wide World" Series, is enhanced by the terse descriptive matter which is printed on each card.

AN interesting feature of the visit of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company to the Coronet Theatre this week is the revival on Thursday and Friday evenings of "Princess Ida." At Kennington Theatre this week Miss Minnie Palmer, after an absence of several years abroad, reappears as Tina in "My Sweetheart." For the week following Mr. Robert Arthur has arranged with Mr. Martin Harvey to give three performances of "The Only Way," and four of "The Breed of the Treshams." This will be Mr. Harvey's last appearance in the suburbs this spring previous to his London season in "Hamlet."

WE understand that at the Cape Town Exhibition four gold medals, being the highest awards, were secured by Spratt's Patent, Limited, for their packet bird seeds, parrot food, chicken meal and Chikko, poultry food and patent dog foods.

SOLDIER AND SAILOR COOKS.—The Sixteenth Cookery and Food Exhibition, which opens at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster, on May 2, will have quite a marked Military and Naval cachet, for the War Office has sanctioned the attendance of soldier cooks from the battalions of Guards in London and at Aldershot, and also from the regiments of the Household Cavalry, who will compete for prizes and the Army Cookery Challenge Shield. The Admiralty has also granted permission for three cooks' ratings, from the three home ports, to attend with their instructors and under the command of a lieutenant.

THE Grand National Trophy (of which we give an illustration) is designed on the lines of the standing cups of the sixteenth century. A finely-modelled figure, representing Victory with a palm branch, surmounts the cover, while the globe upon which the figure is standing is of rock crystal. The stem with the winged horses makes a rich support to the body of the trophy, and on parts of the cup are some very beautiful decorations, particularly on the cover, while the plain surfaces are in pleasing contrast, and give a fine effect. The trophy has been specially designed and manufactured by the eminent goldsmiths and silversmiths, Messrs. Elkington and Co., Limited, London, Liverpool, etc.

WHAT to do with the sons of our farmers and small landed gentry, and with boys brought up in our country towns, is a question of constantly recurring urgency. There are, of course, the Colonies, and of these, just now, Western Australia appears to be one of the most promising. She offers free lands, and many other advantages which are not obtainable in any other Australian State. Two Experimental Farms, one at Chapman, near Northampton, of about 1,000 acres, and one at Narrogin, on the Great Southern Railway, of about 2,000 acres, have been established, and full information can, no doubt, be obtained from the Agent-General for Western Australia, 15, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

THE programme at the Oxford is quite up to the usual mark, which is saying a good deal, and that the management is never at a loss in a moment of emergency was shown the other night, when Mr. Arthur Prince, at very short notice, took the place of a favourite comedian who was unable to appear. Mr. Prince is probably the most wonderful ventriloquist of this or any other generation, and the way he smokes and drinks during his performance makes his "turn" absolutely unique. The whole show is very excellent; but surely the boxing craze is played out.

FOR the second year in succession the Oxford and Cambridge crews accepted the invitation of the Directors of the Alhambra to spend the evening of the University Boat Race day at "The National Theatre of Varieties," and on the same evening the Alhambra welcomed the International football teams of England and Scotland, after their mighty battle at the Crystal Palace.

Copyright.

THE GRAND NATIONAL TROPHY
Designed and manufactured by Messrs. Elkington and Co.

WITHOUT doubt the most interesting section in the historic loan collection of the Naval, Shipping, and Fisheries Exhibition at Earl's Court will be the Nelson Room. Here will be seen the cap he wore as a baby, the dirk he carried as a midshipman, several locks of his hair, and the font at which he was baptised. The United Service Club have lent the sword presented to the hero after Trafalgar, and much later bequeathed to that institution. A suggestion of the gruesome will be found in the plaster cast taken after death upon the "Victory," and also the actual tourniquet utilised to stop the bleeding at the memorable sea-fight when Nelson lost his arm. Many autograph letters, his writing-table from the "Victory," his telescope, and the blue silk netted purse he had in his pocket when he received his death wound, are further items in the collection.

"CHRIST HEALING THE PARALYTIC," Murillo's newly-discovered masterpiece, has been published as a coloured print by Messrs. William Doig and Co., 174, New Bond Street.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE
Every Evening (except Mondays), at 8.30.
"A MAN'S SHADOW."
(For a limited number of performances.)
Luversan ... ... ... ... } MR. TREE.
Lucien Laroque ... ... ... }
Matinee every Saturday at 2.30.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Saturday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. George Edwardes' Season.
Every Evening at 8.15.
A New Musical Play entitled
LADY MADCAP.
By Paul Rubens and N. Newnham-Davis.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

IMPERIAL THEATRE.
MR. LEWIS WALLER.
Every Evening at 8.30.
MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE.
Mr. Lewis Waller and Miss Eva Moore.
Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays, April 8, 12, and 15, at 2.30.
Box Office 10 to 10. Telephones, 3193 and 3194 Gerrard.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: OTHO STUART.
Every Evening at 8.
Saturday Matinee, at 2.
HAMLET.
H. B. Irving, Oscar Asche, Lily Brayton, etc,
Every Wednesday, and Easter Monday, at 2.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
Telephone 2645 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh
To-night, at 8.30, in
THE WALLS OF JERICHO,
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.
Tita Brand's Season.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.
OTHELLO.
Matinee Saturday, April 15th, at 2.
Box Office now open, 10 to 5.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. and S. GATTI and CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening, at 8.15.
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

SAVOY. DU BARRI.
Sole Lessee: Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Managers: Mr. GILBERT HARE and Mrs. BROWN-POTTER.
To-night at 8, and Every Evening,
Christopher St. John's Adaptation of
"DU BARRI,"
By Jean Richepin.
Matinee every Thursday at 2.
Box Office 10 to 10. 'Phone, 2602 Gerrard.

THE LYCEUM. Twice Nightly, at 6.30 and 9.
Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30.
HIGH-CLASS VARIETIES.
Popular prices 6d. to 1½ guineas. Children half price.
Manager Director, THOMAS BARRASFORD.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Magnificent Varieties.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Major Dalrymple White | 63 |
| The March of Events | 64 |
| On the Links | 70 |
| The Styles of Eminent Players—VII.—Mr. Charles Hutchings | 74 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 75 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 76 |
| The Parisians of Paris: The Author and the Half world | 73 |
| A Well-known Singer | 79 |
| Under the Burgee | 80 |
| Yachts of the Year | 81 |
| Artistic Photography—I.—The Work of the Bassano Studios: Some Studies after Greuze | 82 |
| More Green-room Gossips—XXII.—With Miss Lettice Fairfax | 85 |
| Letters to Stage Favourites—XXII.—To Mr. H. B. Irving on his Hamlet | 86 |
| Actresses at Home—XVI.—Miss Lily Brayton | 87 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the Great Eastern Railway | 88 |
| The Services | 90 |
| The Royal Tour to India | 91 |
| The Racing Season | 92 |
| Literary Notes | 94 |
| Apt Quotations | viii. |
| The Romance of a Royal Remark Book | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| The King's Menu | xvi. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xviii. |

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Autograph letter of Admiral Byng.—821, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph letter of Mrs. Thrale or Henry Thrale, dated from Southwark.—822, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Quin's Jest Book.—156, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, Vols. IV. and V.—158, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Gentleman's Magazine for 1865, Vol. II. £1 offered.—159, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Theatre, small 8vo, 1791 Edition, Vol. III.—160, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Song or Music Books before 1783.—161, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Collection of Public Thanksgiving Prayers from 1588.—162, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Army List, 1815 and 1816.—163, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

New Six Shilling Novels. Price 1s. 6d. and 2s. each. List on application.—164, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Southwark views before 1750.—240, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picture of Showell's Meeting House, Southwark.—241, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Contemporary engraved portrait of Henry Thrale.—242, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures or rare prints relating to Selina, Countess of Huntingdon.—243, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Shakespeare by Droeshout.—244, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Small musical portrait of glee composers for extra illustration.—245, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Playing Cards relating to Civil War.—742, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good specimens of Walton's Figures. Signed.—743, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Pictures on glass dealing with Naval subjects.—744, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any Valentines before 1815.—745, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Specimen of French Masonic Certificates during the First Empire.—746, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

BOOKS.

Old prints, paintings, and curios for disposal. List sent.—218A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A fine copy of Nalte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE
(PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,
17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS
of every description, including
TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.
MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including
2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.
Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.
J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Charmingly situated Seaside on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Fishing and Golfing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guide sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hote, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.
THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.
A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.
Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.
Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.
Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,
Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels.'

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

DR. J. M. BARRIE says—"What I call the 'Arcadia' in My Lady Nicotine is the CRAVEN Mixture and no other."

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

A new Guinea Kodak

The No. 2 FOLDING BROWNIE

For Pictures $3\frac{1}{4} \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ins.

Takes the No. 2 Brownie Spool.

Daylight Loading and Unloading.

The most perfect Camera at the price. Well designed and strongly made. Dimensions when closed only $6\frac{7}{8} \times 3\frac{5}{8} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ins., and weighs but 16 ounces. Fitted with Brownie Automatic Shutter giving instantaneous, "bulb" and time exposures by a trigger release. Iris diaphragm. Automatic triple lock focussing device. Reversible finder, and screw sockets for stand work.

The Ideal Camera for the Beginner.
Take it with you on your Easter Holiday.

Write for Prospectus of the Kodak 1905 Competition. £400 in Prizes for Pictures on Kodak N. C. film taken with a Kodak.

Of all Dealers, or

KODAK, Ltd., 57-61, Clerkenwell Rd., London, E.C.

Branches:—96, Bold Street, LIVERPOOL; 72-74, Buchanan Street, Glasgow; 59, Brompton Road, S.W.; 60, Cheapside, E.C.; 115, Oxford Street, W.; 171-173, Regent Street, W.; and 40, Strand, London, W.C.

'DAREN' BREAD

Awarded 32 HONOURS for Excellence of Quality.

TRY A LOAF.

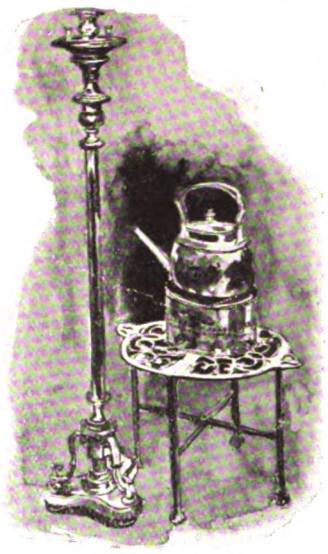
One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray postage.



Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

JONES' PATENT LEGGINGS.

Best quality, in 3 patterns, 30/-

SIMPLEST
MARTEST
SOUNDEST on the market.
SOLE INVENTOR and Patentee:

F. J. JONES, Sporting Tailor & Breeches Maker, 17, KING ST., ST., JAMES' From E. Tautz.

Digitized by Google

ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHY.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 428. SATURDAY, APRIL 15th, 1905. Price 6d.

Elliott and Fry.

MAJOR DALRYMPLE WHITE.

Prospective Conservative Candidate for East Wilts.

(See page 75.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 428. Saturday, April 15, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND FRANCE.—It would be ridiculous to pretend that the meeting of M. Loubet and King Edward at Pierrefitte Station had no significance. Unostentatious though the meeting was, it seemed to keep before the minds of the world outside that, as the two heads of the two neighbouring States are friendly, so the two States themselves are in cordial agreement. A railway carriage it appears is capable of many things, and may form an admirable substitute upon occasion for the "roadside inn" of Lord Rosebery. Pierrefitte, like Noisy-le-Sec, where Felix Faure met Queen Victoria seven years ago, as she too voyaged to the South of France, is a little wayside station, yesterday of local importance naturally, but to the great world outside simply a station like any other. To-day it is world-famous as a meeting-place, where a conversation began, the effect of which upon the world's history we have yet to learn.

THE KING AND ITALY.—The meeting between King Edward and the King of Italy is a natural event in view of the British monarch's voyage in the Mediterranean, and follows easily upon the Duke of Connaught's recent visit. The Italian Royal family have a great liking for everything English, and the way the two children have been brought up has been often commented upon with justifiable pride by the English Press. That this is in large measure due to King Victor's own predilections is generally recognised, but it is not well known that the children tyrannise over their father as no one else can. Outside the family circle the King is strictness itself, and his regard for discipline has done much to instil new spirit into the Italian Army, but he has not been able to do much in the way of drilling Princess Yolanda, who orders her father about with absolute authority. When she was quite a tiny mite she escaped one day from the nursery, and toddled down a corridor which led to the King's private apartments. He was closeted with a foreign Ambassador on State business of the most urgent nature, but the little Princess tapped vigorously at his door, and called loudly "Papa! Papa!" and until papa had held her on his knee some minutes and fed her with a few biscuits, she refused to go away or to allow her Royal parent to consider anyone but herself as deserving his attention.

Walter Barnett.

MRS. ELINOR GLYN

The well-known novelist, whose latest work, "The Vicissitudes of Evangeline," has had a success almost equal to that which attended the publication of "The Visits of Elizabeth.

THE PRINCE'S HOLIDAY.—After the slight operation which was necessary last week, and his subsequent detention at Marlborough House, the Prince of Wales not unnaturally desires a short change, and Scotland is likely to be the venue of his holiday, if only for a week. Easter he proposes to spend in Frogmore with the Princess and the children, but the fresh breezes of the moors and the prospects of salmon-fishing will no doubt do much to restore him to good health. The official reticence of the nature of the operation performed last week gave rise to some rather alarmist rumours, which are fortunately only rumours, and have no foundation. The penalty of Royalty, in these days of cheap journalism and the unreliable conscience of the "yellow" reporter, is much heavier than it was in the days even of such observant commentators as Fanny Burney, and that which would go unmarked in an ordinary citizen becomes subject for piquante paragraphs when Royalty is in question.

Digitized by Google

Copyright. Underwood and Underwood.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR'S CRUISE.

The visits that the Kaiser has been paying to the various countries bordering on the Mediterranean began with a short stay in Portugal, where he was the guest of the King and Queen. In our illustrations he is seen with a group of the Portuguese Royal Family at the residence of the Queen Maria Pia, and embarking in the State barge at Black Horse Square to rejoin the "Hamburg," in which vessel he commenced his trip.

Rajh.

THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE

Who recently appeared in St. Petersburg in his own translation of "Hamlet."

Blake and Edgar.

THE BEDFORD TROPHY

The shield presented by the inhabitants of Bedford to the cruiser of that name.

Tear.

LIEUTENANT C. ROSAS, C.N.

The Naval Attaché to the Chilian Legation, who was presented at the last Levée.

Copyright.

THE KING'S VISIT TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

King Edward left England last week to join Queen Alexandra. At Dover he was received by the Deputy-Mayor and Corporation, and on his way through France was joined for a short interview by M. Loubet, with whom he travelled from Pierrefitte to Paris.

Digitized by Google

BUSINESS MEN AND PARLIAMENT.—The appointment of Lord Cawdor to the post Lord Selborne has vacated, and the consequent resignation by the former Peer of his duties as chairman of the Board of Directors of the Great Western Railway, are interesting, and direct attention to the large number of Peers and Members of Parliament who are directors of companies. The Earl of Chesterfield, for instance, is a director in twenty companies, mostly mining concerns, and the Marquess of Tweeddale has a seat on the Board of twelve, submarine telegraph companies principally. But in the House of Commons there are four members who, between them, hold seats on the Boards of sixty-one companies—wine companies, hotel companies, tramway companies, shipping and railway companies, and, indeed, almost anything that can be turned into a joint stock concern, excepting, curiously enough, newspapers. Several members of the Lower House are directors of six companies and less, and altogether something like 3,000 companies have, at least, one Peer or Member of Parliament among their directors. The debates on the new Companies' Bill should be interesting. They, at least, will not fail for want of first-hand knowledge among the members.

Higgins.

SPORTS AT WOOLWICH.

The annual meeting between the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, and the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, resulted this year in a win for the former by six events to three. The finish of the 2-mile race is shown in the above illustration, Halland of Woolwich winning.

Russell, Wimbledon.

THE WEST KENT ARCHERY CLUB.

The new club-house of the West Kent Archery Club was opened last week at Bickley. Archery is a pastime which has been rapidly growing in favour again, and the success which has attended the meetings of the West Kent Club has been most satisfactory to those who were responsible for its inception.

Higgins.

THE WOOLWICH-SANDHURST MEETING.

The finish of the 100-yds., one of the three events which fell to Sandhurst. As usual the results of the races were signalled by flags, and at the start of the 2-mile race there were five dark ones flying for Woolwich and three light ones for Sandhurst, the ninth event falling to the Academy.

HEREDITY AND THE STAGE.—Our reference last week to the late Mr. Maurice Barrymore recalls the fact that his three children are all on the stage, and this instance of the truth of the old German proverb, "All good things go in threes," is by no means isolated in theatrical chronicles. One has only to think of the three brothers Kemble, of the Irvings, father and two sons, and of the three Terry sisters, Kate, Ellen, and Marion, to find instantly other examples. Then there are also the three brothers Frohman, of whom Charles is the best known in this country. Daniel Frohman began in a newspaper office, and now works hundreds of touring companies in the States, and "Gus" Frohman, of whom but little is ever heard, is the real founder of the family connection with the theatre. Another notable American "triplet" is the Sire Brothers, who have been connected with the Bijou, Casino, and other New York theatres at some of the most successful periods of their history.

Digitized by Google

THE STOCK EXCHANGE STEEPLECHASES.

THE POINT-TO-POINT RACES AT WING.

The annual meeting in connection with the Stock Exchange Steeplechases last week was not quite so well attended as in previous years, and the Nimrod Cup, for instance, had to be eliminated owing to lack of entries. Our illustrations show: (1) Mainsail II., ridden by the owner, Mr. S. Gurney Sheppard, winner of the Heavy-Weight Cup. (2) Mr. C. Carlos Clarke, the starter, who officiated in place of Lord Cowley. (3) The Inter-Regimental Yeomanry Race, between teams from the Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Northamptonshire, and Herefordshire Yeomanry Regiments. (4) The Open Steeplechase, won by Colonel Jenkins's Prater, with Mr. G. E. Clayton up. (5) The Stock Exchange Light-Weight Cup, won by Mr. A. J. Schwabe's Highland Laddie, with Mr. Cecil Grenfell up. (6) Some interested spectators at the meeting.

Digitized by Google

PORTMAN SQUARE.—The history of London is written in her squares, an American once wrote to a friend in the States, and within limits his remark is true. And the square at the junction of Baker Street and Orchard Street, overlooking which are the windows of the town house of the Duke of Fife, has played its part in the story of the metropolis. With it are bound up memories of the Mrs. Montague and the youthful chimney-sweep, where street" for Conquered and Enmity. It may reasonably be claimed for him that he caused most noise in the world of all the inhabitants of the square.

PRIZE-MONEY.—The reappearance of Togo's fleet, and the prospects of another Naval engagement, have revived the question of prize-money. But those who talk about the large sums that must be accumulating for the

THE COUNTESS OF KERRY

Alice Hughes.

Who was married last year to the eldest son of the Marquess of Lansdowne. The Countess of Kerry is a daughter of Mr. E. S. Hope, and a great-grand-daughter of the second Earl of Hopetoun.

once a Duke of Hamilton resided, and where a frugal Duke of Newcastle, resenting the extravagance and "smartness" of Mayfair, withdrew to eke out his existence in peace. And there M. Otto, the French Ambassador at the time of the Peace of Amiens, nearly had his house burned about his ears for exhibiting the words "Concord" and "Amitié," which were taken by the pre-Board School "man in the Japanese Naval officers are evidently ignorant of the fact that prize-money is not paid in the Japanese Navy; and it is quite possible that that privilege will also be withdrawn from the British Navy before the next great Naval war. For captains of cruisers on commerce-destroying raids would wax rapidly rich on the enormously valuable cargoes carried by liners and merchant vessels generally to-day. A most interesting volume could be compiled on the history of prize-money, and during the Nelsonic period in particular there were some lucky officers who could have founded family fortunes on their shares. On the lower deck, also, money was won and lost, and it is recorded that on one occasion, a man of generally good conduct having forfeited his share for some misdemeanour, the hat was passed round, each man subscribing a dollar, and each midshipman five. "This act is characteristic of the British seaman," the chronicler goes on to say, and his deduction is eminently just.

SPARROW CLUBS.—The ghastly cruelties practised upon the unfortunate little birds which fell into the clutches of the sparrow clubs of our ancestors are not likely to be repeated to-day, although there is apparent a strong revival of antagonism to the depredations of the mischievous and perky little creature. But that he has his uses is indubitable, and the London streets, at any rate, would seem strange without his chirruping presence. His very nickname "Philip" Sparrow is derived from his chirp, and to him 400 years ago a poet laureate wrote an epic. Skelton's "Boke of Phyllyp Sparowe" is a most curious and rare work, and it finds confirmation at a later date in Shakespeare's "King John," where Bastard says to James Gurney, "Philip?—sparrow!—James, there's toys abroad; anon I'll tell thee more." In Scotland he is called both "spurdie" and "sproug."

THE TRANSPARENT BOY.—Mr. A. C. Benson has called the boy of twelve a transparent creature. If Mr. Benson were a regular journalist one might suspect him of having merely invented a very happy phrase, which, like most of its kind, is not akin to the truth, for the average boy is very far from transparent. He can, on occasion, be even more decently opaque than the most hardened diplomatist, and he adds to it an artlessness which the elder man has left long behind him. The transparent boy is a dunce of the first water, for he has not the wit nor the ability to disguise his sentiments. Could any "transparent" boy have the cheek to tell his master, as a youngster did the other day, that the chief mountains in Scotland were Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond, and Ben Jonson? And how far could a master see through the boy who told him that David liked to stand in the doorway of the temple of the Lord "because he could walk about outside while the sermon was being preached."

EARTHQUAKES.—The town of Loh, son of Rama, the City of Dreadful Night, has been visited by a disaster as appalling as it is wonderful, which repeats the catastrophe of thirty years ago, and the beauties of Lahore have been in many instances razed to the ground. But it is the loss of life that is most serious; and though some time must elapse before we can be really sure that we have arrived at the sum total of deaths, it is to be feared that it will closely approach some of the most serious disasters of the past century. When Aleppo was destroyed in 1822 some 20,000 lives were lost; when Montemurro and some other Calabrian towns were involved, thirty-four years later, about half as many persons perished; and a decade later the terrific catastrophe in Peru occurred, when 25,000 were killed, 30,000 rendered homeless, and some £60,000,000 lost in property. The Martinique disaster of three years ago was, however, the most terrible of all, and all will fervently hope that this generation may not see a repetition of that tragedy.

Digitized by Google

THE EARTHQUAKE IN INDIA.

Copyright.

THE GOLDEN TEMPLE AT AMRITSA.

Reported damaged during the recent earthquake. Amritsa is the wealthiest city in the Punjaub, and the religious capital of the Sikhs, who hold the temple in the greatest veneration.

Copyright.

A GENERAL VIEW OF LAHORE.

Showing he Jumna Musjid, or Great Mosque, which was seriously damaged. The building on the right is the tomb of Ranjit Sing.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

APPARENTLY this is to be the age for the formation of Golfing Societies. Though the movement which has often been advocated to form a large and comprehensive Association for the purposes of golf is no nearer being realised than it was ten or a dozen years ago, golfers seem inclined unconsciously to be attacking the problem in detail. The liberal professions and important commercial interests in our varied industrial life are rapidly forming themselves into golfing societies embracing the playing members connected with them. Thus we have societies representative of the Bar, the Universities, the Press, the Solicitors, the Musicians, the Actors, the Stock Exchange, and some other bodies. The latest society to be formed is the Cricketers' Golfing Society, which is to be open only to members of first and second class county cricket teams and those players in the two principal Universities who have had the distinction of having a "Blue" conferred upon them. The intention is to play inter-club and inter-county golf matches; and considering the large number of very excellent cricketers who almost stand in the front rank as golfers, this commendable movement to organise their play on the links ought to meet with a great deal of hearty encouragement. Mr. Alfred Lyttelton, the Colonial Secretary, himself one of the best cricketers in his University days, and to-day one of the best players in Parliament, will be president of the new society, while Mr. H. W. Bainbridge will be captain, and Mr. G. L. Jessop hon. secretary.

* * *

The Stock Exchange Golfing Society, which was formed a few weeks ago, will have as its captain Mr. Mure Fergusson, and Mr. W. Brander, jun., and Mr. C. G. Tunks as joint hon. secretaries and treasurers. The committee is a strong one, and is thoroughly representative of all kinds of athletic sports among the members of the Stock Exchange. Among the names are Mr. A. D. Blyth, Mr. H. C. Blyth, Mr. F. H. A. Booth, Mr. Walter Carr, Mr. Horace Castle, Mr. J. H. and Mr. R. H. Hedderwick, Mr. W. E. Maclagan, and Mr. W. M. and Mr. H. W. de Zoete.

Proctor.

MR. TOM MORRIS OF THE LEVEN THISTLE.

The accompanying is a likeness of Mr. Morris, who tied for the Autumn Medal of the Leven Thistle at 77, but was beaten in playing off by Mr. George Clark, the champion of the Edinburgh Insurance and Banking Club, with 73, a record for Leven Links, which he shares with Mr. W. Norman Boase of the Royal and Ancient and the Innerleven. Mr. Morris is a native of Leven, and represented the Thistle, when only fourteen years of age, in their club matches against St. Andrews, when two of his opponents were Herd and Auchterlonie, Leith Thistle, Burntisland, etc. He removed to England at the age of sixteen, and, except when on holiday, played no golf for fourteen years. He holds the records of the Welsh courses at Colwyn Bay, Rhos-on-Sea, and Borth at 76 each. He won the Scratch Cup at Church Stretton on the opening of that course, the Porter Cup at Colwyn Bay in 1901, the Medal at Rhos also in 1901, the Hughes Cup at Borth in 1903—in the last two cases with record scores. Mr. Morris is not a relative of his more famous namesake of St. Andrews.

* * *

News comes from America that among the entries for the Ladies' Championship at Cromer next month there will be about eight American lady golfers. Last year Miss Mabel Higgins of Chicago was the only lady golfer from the other side of the Atlantic, and owing to the luck of the draw she unfortunately had to play at the outset of the tournament a couple of unusually hard matches. It is a great compliment, however, to our ladies to find that this year the number of American visitors is to be increased so greatly, for it indicates, at any rate, that they are certain of a most cordial welcome. Among the American ladies who are to be present at Cromer are Miss Georgiana Bishop, the United States Lady Champion, Miss Griscom, the ex-Champion, and the Misses Harriet and Margaret Curtis of Boston.

* * *

We are informed by the British Golf Company, Limited, that Mr. H. H. Hilton has been appointed manager to the company. No one knows more about the requirements of golfers than Mr. Hilton, and no one assuredly possesses a finer eye for the form of a golf club and its general appearance and balance suitable for all sorts and conditions of

Copyright.

THE TOOTING BEC LINKS.

A view of the course from the 15th hole. Mr. Cowell Davis and Mr. J. Verran approaching the green. The wooden hut under the trees is "The Halfway House," where refreshments are dispensed in the summer-time.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

players. His appointment as head of this company should be a guarantee at least that the clubs sent out by it have first of all passed the ordeal imposed by the rigid test of a skilled player.

* * *

We have received from Messrs. Chappell and Co., music publishers, New Bond Street, the musical score of a golfing song, entitled "A Golfer's Toast." The words are by Mr. A. T. W. McCaul of the Hanger Hill Golf Club, and the music is by Mr. Hermann Lohr. The lilt of the chorus seems to recall the measure of "John Peel":

"Then here's to the Links and a fair blue sky,
The soft down turf, and a clean straight lie;
For the swing of a club and the sea-bird's cry,
Are the charm of a bright May morning."

The music fits the words most admirably, and the composer has caught up their fine rollicking swing. The song, indeed, is a capital one in every respect for a golf dinner.

* * *

In the notice published a short time ago of the Bramshot golf course it was stated that the two professionals, Martin and Forrest, had been engaged in laying out the course. As a matter of fact, the course was laid out by Captain Seton and Mr. W. J. Muller of Mill House, Cookham, under the direction of Taylor.

LADIES' GOLF AT WINCHESTER.
Mrs. Lee White and partner at the 10th tee.

ROYAL WINCHESTER GOLF CLUB.

THE Royal Winchester Golf Club, with much enterprise, left the course over which so many of their members had learnt the game of golf in 1901, and under the guidance of their then professional, Taylor, laid out a new course on Teg Down. At that time Mr. E. H. Buckland was the moving spirit of the club, and was ably assisted by the hon. secretary, Mr. W. A. Hunt, the present captain. Taylor and Mr. Buckland planned out a very good course, difficult enough for the ordinary player. It was found, however, to be too short for Mr. J. A. T. Bramston, who returned such ridiculous scores that the course in 1902-3 was considerably lengthened, and now it requires very steady play, even on the part of the most skilful, to get at all low down in the seventies. The "Bogey" score is placed at 37 out and 41 home. The feature of the course, and that which adds to the enjoyment of the game, is the very excellent lies which obtain through the green, if the player keeps straight off the tee. For this state of affairs the committee have their reward, for, in defiance of popular opinion, they twice had the course rolled with a heavy steam roller, with the happiest results.

The holes which afford the most interesting shots—and interesting shots, in the opinion of the present writer, are what the layer-out of a golf course should endeavour to provide—occur at the third, eighth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth holes. To reach the third green two long shots are required, but the green is so well guarded by bunkers to the left and right that not only must the second shot be far, but deadly straight as well. For the eighth hole a drive and a short iron shot are all that are necessary to reach the green, but that second shot is one that requires a great deal of skill to play; a downhill lie, a wind behind, a bunker short of the green, a slippery green, and punishment for being too far, it is only a very accurately-played shot which remains near the hole. The tenth takes two fairly long drives to reach the green; bunkers have to be carried with both shots. The eleventh—a short hole—one shot, but what club to use is always a puzzle. If the green is overrun it means trouble, a sliced ball is punished, so is a pulled one, and if the ball is short of the green it is extremely difficult to play a ball near the hole. Perhaps the next hole is the best on the course; after a good drive a player is within reach of the green, and here is an interesting shot indeed. The green is raised above the level of the other ground, so that a ball with the slightest slice is at the bottom of the steep rise to the green, and on the left of the green is a hedge running parallel to the green. The thirteenth hole requires two very accurate shots to reach, and as the green is on a slope it is difficult to stop the ball near the hole; the distance is nothing, but a player is always pleased when he can write a four against the hole. To describe all the holes would be wearisome; suffice it to say they are varied, and each has a character of its own—some long, some

KENT v. HAMPSHIRE LADIES AT WINCHESTER.
Miss E. Hull driving in the recent ladies' match.

THE LADIES AT WINCHESTER.
Mrs. Lushington (captain) playing a second shot.

LADIES' GOLF AT WINCHESTER.
Miss Gowan driving from the 10th tee.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE WINCHESTER LINKS.
A view of the 11th putting green.

GOLF AT WINCHESTER.
One of the picturesque teeing grounds skirting the wood. Mr. Leonard Keyser (the hon. secretary) driving; Mr. E. Elgee and Mr. C. H. Sapte on the left.

THE WINCHESTER LINKS.
A view of the 12th tee and the fair prospect beyond.

short, and some of medium length. No one could say of Winchester golf that it was monotonous. The down is hilly, and often the ball is not on the same level as a player's feet, which all makes for variety and adds to the difficulty of the game. The greens are good and true, but the plantain at present has the better of it; however, war has been declared, and the plantain is to be attacked tooth and nail.

Should the blasé golfer require something a little different to the golf which obtains round London, he should visit Winchester, where he is sure of an enjoyable game over a course which is not quite ordinary, is well taken care of, and, summer or winter, in good order for golf.

---

IN our issue of January 21 there were published in this column some stanzas, with the heading "Incedit vel Jove digna Soror," of which a correspondent, with a turn for tuneful versification, sends the Editor the following version in Latin:

Incessu regina patet, Jovis esse videtur
Et Jove digna soror.
Sic tua carminibus toties laudata, Properti,
Cynthia nota fuit.
Non aliter sceptrum proprium mea Cynthia gestat
Et diadema suum;
Namque pilis inter lusores arte Dianam
Cynthia nostra refert.
Spicula succinctam non evitanda fatentur
Telaque certa deam;
Nostra tamen similes sibi vindicat undique lauros
Ludere docta pilis.
Talia tentantem me primo mane bubulci
Risibus increpitant;
Res peregrina mihi est, nequicquam fuste laboro,
Nec pila linquit humum.
Quaerere tum socii "cur nunc mutatus ab illo est
Cui prius haud placuit
Sic matutinos per litora verrere rores
Posthabita requie?"
Hoc aenigma diu dubios vexavit amicos,
Causa quibus latuit;
Nota sed haec dominae est; taceat licet ipsa, rubentes
Non tacuere genae. B.

---

FIXTURES.

April 15.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal (Bogey).
April 15.—Glasgow, Spring Meeting (Gailes).
April 15.—Royal Wimbledon v. London Scottish.
April 17.—Lytham and St. Anne's Ladies' Open Meeting.
April 20.—Glasgow (Killermont) v. New Club, St. Andrews.
April 20-25.—Le Touquet, Easter Meeting.
April 21-24.—Frinton Easter Meeting.
April 21-24.—Sundridge Park Easter Competition.
April 21-25.—Sheringham Easter Meeting.
April 22.—Tooting, Foursome Tournament.
April 22.—Rye, Annual General Meeting; "Master of the Rolls" Cup.
April 22.—Newhaven Spring Meeting.
April 22.—Beckenham Easter Meeting.
April 22.—Royal St. George's Spring Meeting.
April 22.—Royal Portrush Easter Meeting.
April 22-23.—Lytham and St. Anne's Spring Meeting.
April 22.—Rye Easter Meeting.
April 22.—Seaford Easter Meeting.
April 22.—Hunstanton Easter Meeting.
April 22.—Hayling Easter Meeting.
April 22.—Guildford Easter Meeting.
April 22-24.—Royal Ascot Spring Meeting.
April 24.—Rye, Club Gold Medal (scratch); Challenge Plate (1st round); "Master of the Rolls" Cup (3rd round).
April 24-28.—Royal Portrush Ladies' Easter Meeting.
April 26.—Oxford v. Cambridge.
April 26-28.—Royal Liverpool Spring Meeting.
April 27.—Royal Eastbourne Spring Meeting.
April 28.—Brighton and Hove Spring Meeting.
April 28-30.—Le Touquet, Matches with Mr. and Mrs. Ryder Richardson's (Mixed) Team.
April 29.—Huntercombe Spring Meeting.
April 29.—New Luffness, Spring Meeting.
May 1.—Hanger Hill, Foursome Competition.
May 3.—Royal and Ancient, Silver Cross and Bombay Medal.
May 3.—Warwickshire Spring Meeting.
May 4-6.—Sussex County Union, Annual Meeting at Rye.
May 5-6.—Hanger Hill, Spring Meeting.
May 6.—Sundridge Park Single Tournament and Foursomes.
May 6.—Glasgow Spring Meeting.
May 8.—Royal Blackheath Ladies' Spring Meeting.
May 8.—Hanger Hill, Mixed Foursome Competition.
May 8-12.—Irish Ladies' Championship, at Portsalon.
May 10-11.—Lytham and St. Anne's Professional Tournament.
May 12-14.—Le Touquet, Solicitors' Golfing Society v. Le Touquet.
May 13.—Parliamentary Tournament at Deal.
May 13.—Hanger Hill, Medal and Magistrate's Bowl.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE WIMBLEDON LADIES' GOLF CLUB.

THE SPRING MEETING.

(1) Mrs. Richardson at the 4th tee. (2) The club-house. (3) Mrs. Cameron at the 1st tee. (4) Miss M. Browne at the 8th tee. (5) The scratch players—Mrs. F. W. Brown, Mrs. Willock, and Mrs. Richardson. (6) Miss MacFarlane, Captain of the Club.

Digitized by Google

The Styles of Eminent Players.

VII.—Mr. CHARLES HUTCHINGS.

THE TOP OF THE SWING.

THE FINISH OF THE SWING.

THE FINISH OF THE IRON SHOT.

TRULY an amazing golfer is Mr. Hutchings, beginning as he did when most of us are thinking of taking to a less violent method of exercise, and, by careful study and a natural gift, rising in a short space of time to the highest form of playing excellence. Who among us will expect to win the championship when a grandfather?

Mr. Hutchings is one of the most interesting golfers to watch. His methods in a great number of shots are totally at variance with the accepted ideas of style; but the result of the shot is as good as, or better than, most people with ideal swings can accomplish. Who of us who were present at Hoylake when he won the championship will forget his magnificent play in the first round in the final, or, indeed, any round during the week? But in that particular round every shot came off, every putt went in; it was an extraordinary round for a final in the championship, when scores often run high. Who, again, will forget the excitement of the second round, when, with admirable courage and skill, Mr. Fry took him to the last hole, and the 3-yds. putt Mr. Hutchings had to hole to win? It was indeed exciting, and, small wonder, it rather laid the veteran by the heels for a bit; but by good fortune that is all over now, and Mr. Hutchings is playing as well as ever.

Mr. Hutchings plays, or rather played (for he has deserted his old course now), most of his golf at Hoylake; but he does not despise other courses. At St. Andrews he is a player to watch in a medal round. At Pau he is invincible. "Champion of the Pyrenees" being another of his titles. Indeed, all first-class courses know him well, and wherever he goes there is always a hearty welcome for him, and pleasure at his coming.

Nos. 1 and 2 show Mr. Hutchings at the top and finish of his swing. As will be noticed, Mr. Hutchings does not swing far back. He takes the shot very easily, thumbs down the club; but, on the other hand, he follows through (No. 2) further than any other first-class player. The great feature of Mr. Hutchings's swing is the slowness with which he comes down, until within about 2-ft. from the ball. Then he seems to put in a tremendous lot of force with his wrists, and he hits the ball very hard, rising on both toes to do it. Of course this is all wrong, according to the canons of golf; but no matter, the result is excellent. It is mainly with his wrists that he drives, and the result is a low ball with a suspicion of pull, not an enormous distance, but very straight. Mr. Hutchings knows thoroughly his distance, and never goes for doubtful carries, rightly trusting to his iron clubs, which very seldom fail him.

No. 3—Finish of iron shot. Mr. Hutchings is a beautiful iron player. In contradiction to the flight of his ball off wooden clubs, there is no pull whatever, but generally a slight, very slight, slice, and the ball drops very dead. Notice in this photograph that both heels are off the ground again. Mr. Hutchings with his iron clubs pulls his body up just at th time of hitting, as if to help his wrists through and brings the club up with a very sharp jerk.

No. 4—Finish of "run-up" shot He is a past-master at this shot, playing it with a long-bladed straight-faced club. He plays the shot closer to the ground than the majority of players, trusting to his knowledge of distance more than to the drag. The thumbs are down, and the right forefinger is hardly touching the club.

No. 5. This is hardly a bunker shot, the ball lying very well. I was glad when I saw him go into it, as I had been following him about for a long time, and he would not get into a bunker. But fate was kind to him, and his ball was lying so well that he put it 3-yds. from the hole, 150-yds. away.

No. 6—Putting. Mr. Hutchings is one of the best hitters of a ball on the putting green I have seen. He hits it so truly and relatively so hard. He putts with a club slightly wry-necked, both thumbs down and right hand resting very lightly on the club. His favourite distance is about 4-yds. It is a curious thing that all the golfers in the first flight are very good at from 4-yds. to 2-yds., and the one failing of most of them is the 1-yd. and 2-ft. I wish it were the other way. Mr. Hutchings uses his putter for all kinds of shots, one of his favourite strokes being a high shot with no run of about 160-yds. How he does it I have never been able to make out, as the club is not a heavy one and is quite straight in the face.

H. Ferrier-Kerr.

THE FINISH OF THE "RUN-UP" SHOT.

WELL OUT OF THE BUNKER.

THE PUTTING STANCE AND GRIP.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XXXVIII.—Major Dalrymple White, Prospective Conservative Candidate for East Wilts.

IN the "good old days" of electioneering, Wiltshire was veritably the "cockpit" of many a great political struggle, and many are the traditions, and bulky the volumes, which bear the records of the contests of such great political houses as the Longs, the Wellesleys, the Astleys, and the Methuens. Families have been impoverished, for elections lasted many weeks, and the costs were piled up by dinners, processions, poets, and banners to £80,000 or £100,000 for a single contest. The many small boroughs once contained in Wiltshire have been reformed out of existence, although they were represented frequently by eminent statesmen; but at the last Reform Bill the county divisions were increased, and the boroughs of Devizes (reputed to be the original Eatanswill, although there is another claimant for the doubtful honour) and Marlborough, with portions of North and South Wilts, were amalgamated into East Wilts, first represented by Mr. Walter Long, the present Chief Secretary for Ireland. Marlborough lies geographically near the centre of the constituency, and we give an illustration of the wide and picturesque High Street. Mr. Gladstone, in his great speech on the Redistribution Bill, said: "The associations of a great school, and the memory of a noble name, would perpetuate the fame of this ancient borough." Thus no longer does the old Castle Inn resound with the bacchanalian ditties of election dinners, in praise of a Pole, a Long-Wellesley, or a Methuen, now enshrined in "Wiltoniensis Scrapiana," or other collections of election literature. But yet—does heredity apply to places as well as persons?—the classic shades of the great coaching inn, now Marlborough College, send forth many a master to air his gifted eloquence in the Bœotian plains of agricultural Wiltshire, and to become the keenest fighter in modern political duels.

Copyright.

THE HIGH STREET, MARLBOROUGH
Once a well-known Parliamentary Borough; now the centre of the East Wilts Division.

The present member, Mr. Goulding, having announced his intention of retiring from the representation at the next election, East Wilts chose in Major Dalrymple White a probable successor who, both in person and by his family, has "done the State some service." This gallant Guardsman, who was born in 1866, is the son of the late General Sir Henry Dalrymple White, K.C.B., who commanded the 6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons with great distinction throughout the Crimean War, including the notable charge of the Heavy Brigade at Balaclava. He is the grandson of the late Sir John Chambers White, K.C.B., who served in the Navy throughout the great French War, and until his death as Commander-in-Chief at Sheerness in 1845, while his great-grandfather was General Sir Hew Dalrymple, Bart., who commanded the army in the Peninsula before the great Duke of Wellington took the reins. Thus he may well be proud of the prowess of his forbears both by sea and land. The family traditions were to be maintained, so after an education at Wellington and a course at Sandhurst, young Mr. White entered the Grenadier Guards in 1885. Home service, Canada, and Gibraltar contributed to his experience, and after the outbreak of the South African War the promising young officer resigned a Staff appointment to rejoin his regiment, fighting with them before Pretoria, at Donkerhock, Belfast, and the advance to Koomati Poort. He was also in the thick of it at De Wet's Dorp, and in the two days' action against De Wet at Slik Spruit he had a horse shot under him. Then came the arduous pursuit of Kritzinger in his mad raid into the Cape Colony, and the enforcement of martial law in the Hanover District, where Major Dalrymple White was Commandant till after the peace. He was mentioned in despatches, and possesses the Queen's medal with three clasps, and the King's medal with two clasps.

Major White has travelled extensively on the Continent and in Egypt, and he has a particularly intimate acquaintance with Canada and the United States, formed first of all during eighteen months' service on the staff of General Sir John Ross, K.C.B., who commanded the Imperial Forces there, and again in expeditions after big game in the Rocky Mountains and in Nova Scotia, or in fishing for the mighty tarpon in Florida. Extensive travel in every part of these vast dominions should give a man exceptional advantages when he attains the magnificent responsibility of taking his share in that great Parliament of our time, which in its deliberations and decisions not only "surveys," but dominates, "mankind from China to Peru." His experience of North America is supplemented by a considerable knowledge of the West Indies; and in South Africa, as Commandant of a District, Major White had exceptional opportunities for studying the very complex Dutch character, which should give him considerable authority on questions relating to colonial and foreign policy. And now, in the "piping times of peace," the gallant Major has settled down to woo the agricultural constituency of East Wilts; but even here he finds that the sword has not entirely given way to the ploughshare, for the division includes Salisbury Plain, as well as Collingbourne, and Tidworth, once the home of the "modern Nimrod," Assheton Smith, and a favourite meet of the Iron Duke's in his hunting days, now the headquarters of Sir Evelyn Wood and a numerous staff. The prospective Conservative candidate for East Wilts has for some time resided in the district, at Stokke, in the village of Great Bedwyn (which, by the way, once returned two members to Parliament). Here, while enjoying the sport which Wiltshire provides so plentifully for country gentlemen, he also pursues an indefatigable system of holding meetings and attending gatherings in every part of East Wilts, and thus (as the natives say) he captures many friends by his smart, soldierly demeanour and bonhomie, and adds to the success of many a gathering by his fluent oratory. He is a bachelor, but is accompanied often by his sister or his mother, Lady Dalrymple White, who thus obviate what would be a disadvantage in the coming fight, the lack of material aid from the ladies of the candidate's family.

Major White has an ideal in politics. He is modest in expressing it, but evidently his great desire is to put an end to the miserable bickerings of rival political parties, and to see in their place some day—is it the dream of Utopia?—a real "National party," which will not treat politics as if it were a game of football. Though opposed to Protection, he believes that much may be done to improve upon our present system of so-called "Free Trade" on the moderate and statesmanlike lines sketched out by Mr. Balfour, and he would welcome any outcome from the deliberations of a Colonial Conference which would tend to cement the Empire on a basis satisfactory to this country without entailing extra expense on the poorer classes, for whose needs he has great sympathy, and for whose amelioration he is content to labour.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

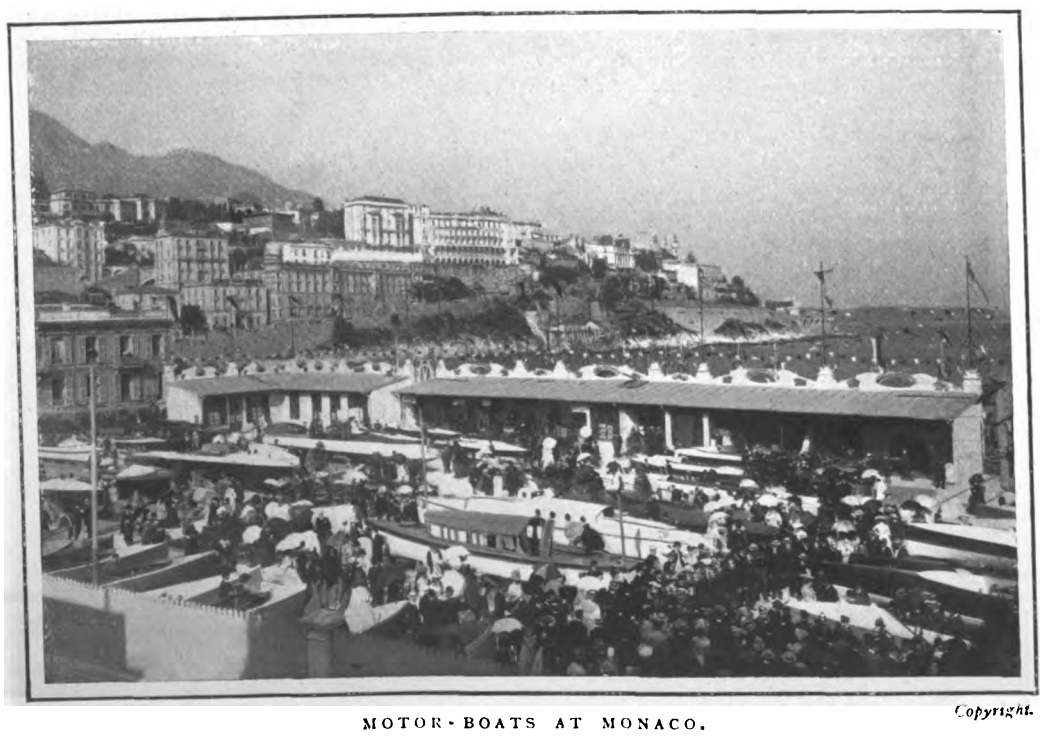
THERE is no question that a few years ago the motor-car threatened to have an injurious effect upon the yachting industry, and I could name several men who for a time gave up their yachts in their enthusiasm for the new pastime. The yacht-builders, however, have gained in the long run far more than they lost, and many yards are now finding renewed prosperity in the construction of motor-craft of various types. Indeed, there is little doubt that the adaptation of the internal-explosion engine for marine and river purposes will largely increase the number of people who spend their leisure time on the water, and for some time past the yachting journals have fully realised the fact. The situation was recently summed up by the Yachtsman in words which will bear repeating, as they express the opinion of the leading organ of the pastime on the advent of the marine motor: "Far from detracting from sailing sport, or even killing it, as so many sailing men gloomily prophesied on its advent, the motor has not only now been recognised by sailing men, but has even helped sailing as a sport. Its usefulness to the yachtsman, especially the Corinthian yachtsman, is now unquestioned, while that large and important section of our fraternity—the week-end sailor, who can only take his pleasure when his work ashore is through—has more reasons than one to be grateful for the motor. He may only go afloat when he can, not when he wills, and judiciously subordinated to the sail, a motor is a help to him in all weathers He must take his chance of sailing weather; but blow hard or not at all, his motor can always get him back to port in time. For larger boats a motor-tender is equally as useful as the auxiliary motor is to the smaller craft; it comes and goes in all weathers, and there is hardly limit to its usefulness."

The one weak point in the motor-boat is the fuel that is most generally used. Petrol possesses certain advantages over paraffin, but I doubt whether any system of tank, pipe, and carburettor installation, however carefully devised, could render it absolutely safe for use afloat. In open boats, where the risk of vapour collecting in the bilge is small, and the free current of air minimises the danger of an undetected leak, petrol may be used with reasonable safety, so long as the tanks and connections are properly arranged and sensible precautions are observed. On the larger craft, the decked cruisers and sailing yachts with auxiliary motors, I believe the makers will have to depend on paraffin as a fuel, and the sooner the fact is realised the better will it be for the popularity of the motor-yacht.

Possibly a compromise could be devised by which some insignificant quantity of petroleum spirit might be used for starting purposes, and the engine run entirely on paraffin after the first few revolutions. There may be room for improvement in the paraffin carburettor, but that it has already arrived at a considerable degree of perfection is proved by the fact that the only motor-boat which obtained full marks under every head in the Reliability Trials which were held last July by the Automobile Club, was driven from start to finish on paraffin, and never suffered from a single involuntary stop during the twenty hours' running. At the present moment the motor-boat-builders seem hardly to realise the danger of petrol in ordinary everyday use afloat, though they are paying more attention than formerly to the isolation of the fuel tanks and the prevention of leaks in the connections. In the case of the large craft, they would do better to direct their energies to the abolition of petrol altogether, and the substitution of some less dangerous source of power.

Copyright.

A FIAT CRUISER IN MONACO BAY.



Copyright.

MOTOR-BOATS AT MONACO.
The opening of the Exhibition.

With the advent of dry weather the side-slip question is relegated to the background for a time, and the dust problem is once more to the fore. During a recent week-end the dust on all the main roads near London was simply appalling, and the traffic which brought it into evidence seemed greater than I could ever remember it to have been. It must be admitted that the motor-car is by far the worst offender on the road; but every cycle and horsed vehicle adds its quota to the cloud, while a cycling "club run" rivals a fast car in the quantity of dust that it raises. Curiously enough, the average cyclist seems impervious to dust, though it must seriously diminish the advantage he derives from his weekly spin into the country. With head bent low over the handle-bar, he will follow in the wake of a car for mile after mile, regardless of the gritty fog in which he is enveloped, so long as he can keep up with his involuntary and unwilling pacemaker. The club runs, which seem almost as popular as they were in the early nineties, proceed contentedly in their own self-raised cloud of dust, and even the individual rider appears to prefer the main roads rather than the clear atmosphere of the side lanes, whose surface nowadays is often no wit inferior to that of the great traffic-worn highways.

Digitized by Google

This, however, is somewhat of a digression. What does concern the motorist is the possibility of alleviating the dust nuisance. The more enterprising of the local authorities are experimenting with tar and other substances, and doubtless it will be found practicable to protect at a reasonable cost the small towns and villages through which the great trunk roads pass. Nothing, however, short of remaking the surface with dustless materials will suffice to cure the evil in the open country. Reform in road construction may come sooner than is expected, and many of the leading county surveyors have already realised the folly of using road scrapings and fine gravel as a binding material for macadam. In the meantime, I think the motor manufacturers might do something to lessen the dust-raising propensity of their cars.

It is well known among motorists that the worst offenders are those machines which have low-hung fuel tanks or tool-boxes at the rear. Living on one of the most frequented main roads to the South of London, I may claim to have had, to my personal inconvenience, unique opportunities of studying the dust problem, and I can state without the slightest hesitation that, other things being equal, the greater the clearance between the ground and the rear of the chassis, the less is the volume of dust raised. Unfortunately many of the most fashionable makers prefer the pressure-feed system of fuel supply which generally results in the tanks being placed at the rear of the chassis. The Automobile Club commenced a series of experiments last autumn with the object of deciding definitely what were the main factors in dust raising, and it is to be hoped that these investigations will be continued. The results should be of the greatest value, if only the makers can be brought to see the wisdom of helping to lessen the dust terror by carefully avoiding any form of body or any feature of construction that is proved to aggravate the evil.

RADIATOR.

Thomson.

MRS. HOUSTON FRENCH IN HER PANHARD.

Mrs. French, who is an expert motorist, is a sister of Lady Forestier Walker, and wife of Captain Houston French.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE AUTHOR AND THE HALF-WORLD

WE are very tired of the "Eternal Feminine" in the pen of the modern dramatist. His women are all of the same type, of the same set, of the same composition. They all think alike, look alike, act alike. They all belong to the half-world, visit among each other, talk of the latest "collage," of the way he deceives her or she deceives him; always the same thing; and it can never vary. In this milieu nothing else is of moment. Half of Europe might fall into the hands of one of the Powers, and this world would not know it. But the newspapers, you may say. They read them. Certainly. But their newspapers are made for them. They all read the same. One in particular. It is called a newspaper, and it gives news of a sort. Have you never come across it? Surely. It has one of the largest circulations among the "dailies," and is to be found side by side with the Matin and other morning papers.

When the world was looking anxiously to the fate of Port Arthur this sheet came out with its leading columns devoted to a story by Jean Lorrain, and paragraphs of dresses worn by the cocadettes in view. Somewhere in a corner were half-a-dozen lines about the war; the remainder illustrated with portraits of murderers, and men and women who had profited by certain pills and potions that make the lean fat and the fat lean; long articles on the cabaret and the music hall, the music hall and the cabaret; how Mlle. X. lost her jewels, and how Mlle. Z. refuted her milliner's bill. And if there are no lost jewels or over-charged milliners' bills, the reporter who knows his business invents them.

And it is on this world that our authors write their plays. Have they any special reason for selecting one "world" more than another? Undoubtedly. They write on what they know best. They frequent the salons of these half-ladies. They delight in them, feel at home in them. They know no other life, study no other types, mix with no other class of society. In fact, if you bring the modern young author (I could name half-a dozen) into contact with a well-brought-up girl he has no idea how to behave. He is afraid to talk to her, as he may say something "incorrect"; he does not understand her. He cannot write on the thoughts and actions of the thinking world, for he knows no women who are not "fractious," and no men who do not pass their lives, as he does, in their company. Is it then surprising that the conversation between men and women in this set becomes tedious and monotonous to those who are not in it?

During four acts in "L'Age d'Aimer," M. Pierre Wolff introduces us to lovers and their mistresses. They are not particularly attractive, any of them; some young, some old, some foolish, some senile. A bald-headed individual snores on the sofa through the better part of an act. His "little friend" is asked if he always sleeps like that. "Ce serait trop beau" is her answer; and we agree with her. But there are lights and music on the stage, and we follow the pretty women and well-dressed men. They laugh and talk, scold and cry, in the apartment in Paris as in the château in Touraine. They sometimes say a witty thing; never a wise one. And they bored me! How they must bore each another!

Geneviève is a woman who acknowledges to forty years of age. A dangerous age to talk about, as nobody believes she speaks the truth. Does M. Pierre Wolff know so little of women! Her friends give her at least five years more! But let us say forty. A woman of this age who has a young lover cannot expect to keep him indefinitely by her side. She becomes sentimental, cries and looks plain, and the young bird seeks a younger mate. He comes back, of course, or there would be no play, falls into her arms, and is forgiven, and falls out again, in the natural course of things. We are sorry for Geneviève, as we are sorry for any woman who is unhappy. But we blame M. Pierre Wolff.

Copyright.

MME. REJANE AS GENEVIEVE
In "L'Age d'Aimer," at the Gymnase.

He cannot make this woman interesting. He has selected a demi-mondaine as his heroine, and a woman of this category must be bright and happy if she is to fulfil her mission and amuse. If she cries she is like any other woman, and not more amusing than the respectable type. She consoles the legitimate married woman; that she does without a doubt. But I can scarcely believe this was the object of the play.

L'age d'aimer (the age of love). What is it? M. Pierre Wolff has evidently wished to point out it is not at forty. Geneviève loves Maurice, a man ten years younger than herself; Taverney, an elderly beau, is devoted to Colette, a girl of twenty. These four people are constantly together, with the natural consequences that Maurice and Colette turn to each other like the flowers to the sun, while Taverney and Geneviève look on and lament. This, in a few words, is the theme that the author has developed into four long acts. If M. Wolff had called his play "Le Danger d'Aimer," he would have been nearer the mark, and would have conveyed his meaning more clearly. There is no doubt that the age of forty for a demi-mondaine is a critical one. An age when she is liable to become sentimental, and sentiment spells ruin in this career.

Mme. Rejane, charming and delightful in every rôle she undertakes, does all that is possible with the part of Geneviève. It is a pity she had not a stronger play for her début at the Gymnase. But she is well surrounded, and a strong company may compensate in some measure for the missing strength in the play.

There are six women's parts here, and each has been dressed by a specially appointed dressmaker. Oh those dressmakers! They are all men, but they all look like women. No matter. They have exquisite taste, and attract men and women of every world to see the half-world and the author.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

A WELL-KNOWN SINGER.

MLLE. FARRAR

Who has recently appeared with considerable success in grand opera in Paris, Berlin, and other Continental cities.

(From photographs by Manuel, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

THE Royal Thames Yacht Club has just issued its programme for the coming season. Following the custom of more recent years, the opening day's regatta—generally referred to as the River Matches—will take place off Southend. That will be on June 9. There will be five events on that date, including a handicap for yachts exceeding 100-tons Thames measurement, for which the first prize will be the Duke of Bedford's Cup, and a handicap for vessels between 50-tons and 100-tons, for which the first prize will be presented by Mr. Myles B. Kennedy, owner of White Heather. The only class race on the programme is, of course, that for the 52-footers, for which a prize is offered by Mr. Almeric Paget. The two other events for this date will be a limited handicap for vessels over 25-tons and not exceeding 50-tons, for a prize of £40, in which the old racers of the 52-ft. class take part, and a handicap for vessels between 9-tons and 25-tons measurement. In the two last-named events the boats will be steered by amateurs, and helmsman's prizes will be given by Sir James Pender, Bart. It will be seen that the programme is drawn up so as to provide for every class of vessel likely to be in commission.

The time-honoured Nore to Dover races, which take place under this club's burgee, are fixed for June 17. On that date the vessels will be divided into the same classes as on the first day. The first prize for the big handicap will be a cup presented by the Commodore, Mr. Theodore Pim, while the 50—100-tons handicap will be for the Clifford Probyn Challenge Cup. The 52-footers will sail for a money prize. Boats in the limited and the smaller handicap will, as on the opening day, be steered by amateurs.

It is usual in these matches to send the bigger craft outside the Goodwins, while the 52-footers and smaller vessels have the option of taking the inner passage. The start for these races two years ago will always be remembered by those who witnessed it. All the races were started to one gun, and twenty-seven boats of various sizes and rigs went crowding across the line. The committee steamer was at the windward end of the line, and, of course, it was there that the greatest fun prevailed as the boats tried for weather berth. Fortunately, no mishaps occurred, which says much for the smart handling of the boats, and the first across the line was Lucida, steered by her owner. Although everything went off well on that occasion, the experiment is too risky to be repeated, and the sailing committee will probably follow last year's precedent, and start the races with intervals of a few minutes between.

The club will also give a day's racing at Dover on Monday, June 19. One of the races on that date will be a handicap for yachts over 50-tons for the Marzetti Cup. The course for this race will be from Dover to Calais and back.

Stuart.

INDUNA

52-ft. linear rater, built at Southampton from the late A. E. Payne's design for Major Andrew Coats. She was not launched for twelve months after building, as her owner was on active service in South Africa. She was originally named Balœna, and her principal opponent in her first year was Baron de Forest's Magdalen. She is now owned by Mr. Noel T. Kershaw, and sails in the limited handicap class.

Prospects of racing on the Clyde during the coming season have been much improved during the last few days by the purchase of the old 65-footer Tutty, by Dr. John Inglis, who will sail her in Clyde regattas. Tutty, a Payne design, was champion of her class in 1899, when her chief competitors were Astrild, Senta, and Eelin. There are on the Clyde two boats of similar rating, Carina, the old 40-rater, built in the nineties for Admiral Montagu, and Zinita, the 65-footer which came out last year under Messrs. Connell's flag. It will thus be possible to form a class, although it is only to be expected that handicap allowances on a weight for age principle will be found necessary. But for the advent of Tutty it is probable that Messrs. Connell would not have fitted out Zinita this season, but would have built for the 52-ft. class, and it was generally understood that a provisional order had already been placed at Fairlie for a boat of that rating.

While it is extremely satisfactory thus to know that the Clyde racing will benefit by the formation of another class in the district, a certain amount of disappointment will be felt in English yachting circles if Fife thereby loses an opportunity of producing a new craft to oppose the Herreshoff boat in the 52-ft. class.

Eleven entries have been received for the Transatlantic race for the Kaiser's Cup. There are two British yachts, Lord Brassey's famous Sunbeam and the Earl of Crawford's Valhalla. The eight American vessels are: Atlantic, auxiliary, Mr. Wilson Marshall; Utowana, auxiliary, Mr. A. V. Armour; Apache, auxiliary, Mr. E. Randolph; Endymion, schooner, Mr. G. A. Lauder; Thistle, schooner, Mr. R. E. Tod; Hildegarde, schooner, Mr. E. R. Coleman; Fleur de Lys, schooner, Mr. L. A. Stimson; and Ailsa, yawl, Mr. H. Redmond. The German-owned schooner Hamburg is also entered. Atlantic will be in charge of Charles Barr, of America Cup fame. Ailsa is the old Fife-designed boat, and Hamburg is the old Rainbow built for the late Mr. A. L. Orr-Ewing. There is just a possibility that the old Watson yawl Sybarita might also be a competitor.

It is probable that an international regatta will be held at San Sebastian towards the end of the present summer. Prizes will be offered by the King of Spain for yachts between 40-tons and 100-tons measurement, and there will be valuable prizes for various classes. The proposed arrangements include a fête in honour of the visiting yachtsmen and a reception by the King.

CORINTHIAN.

---

MEDITERRANEAN INTERNATIONAL REGATTAS.

| | |
|---|---|
| April 14 to 18 .. .. .. .. | Mentone. |
| April 20 to 30 .. .. .. .. | San Remo. |

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

VIERA.

She was built at Fairlie in 1898 for the 52-ft. class, and was designed by W. Fife. She is now owned by Messrs. F. and C. H. Last, and sails in the limited handicap class.

Digitized by Google

Artistic Photography.

I.—THE WORK OF THE BASSANO STUDIOS.

AN interesting chapter might be written round the individuality of streets. Bond Street has always been a name to conjure with, the heart of social London, the Mecca of the man and woman of fashion, whose day would be incomplete and vain lacking the morning and afternoon promenade along this glittering thoroughfare.

As with streets, so it is with the premises—one dare not call them shops. All that money and taste can contrive in the way of beautiful and luxurious surroundings may be found here. From time immemorial Bond Street has been sacred to the fashionable photographer.

A photograph bearing the hall-mark of Bond Street is recognised in every corner of the world as unquestionably the last word in camera art. The name of Bassano has been associated with Bond Street for half a century, and the historic house has been honoured by the presence of celebrities and notabilities of every kind—kings, queens, generals, statesmen, society leaders, and beautiful and renowned actresses.

The priceless autograph books, which have been in possession of the firm from its commencement, contain a remarkable collection of distinguished names. Lord Kitchener has been a constant patron, and to be photographed at Bassano's has become almost a tradition amongst Army men.

On levée days the salon, a beautiful room decorated in white and gold, with deep green hangings—the chairs and couches are of the Louis Seize period—might be a set piece from a military play. Brilliant uniforms and clanking swords vie with the sober black and silver of the orthodox Court dress. As many as 100 officers have been photographed on a levée day.

The modern photographer, unlike his old-time brethren, tries to infuse as much artistic feeling into his work as the limitations of the camera will allow. The artistic conceptions of great artists like Romney and Greuze are carefully studied, and their methods of posing and draping so closely followed, that we have really artistic photographic studies moulded on similar lines, and stamped with the individuality of the artist. Everyone is familiar with the exquisite portraits of the great eighteenth century French painter Greuze, the beautiful studies of female heads, the charming pictures of young girls, with gracefully bared shoulders and flowing draperies. Greuze is recognised as being without compeer in his portrayal of these types of childhood and budding womanhood.

LADY IDA SITWELL.
(A study after Romney.)

The photographer has long recognised that his best effects are obtained by following the beautiful natural simplicity of the artist, and consequently the old-fashioned stock-in-trade of the old-fashioned photographer is being fast discarded. The revoltingly ugly stage properties, the ludicrous attempts to get artistic results from the use of ostentatious chairs and couches, books, fans, flower-pots, and all the paraphernalia of a suburban drawing-room, are disappearing, and in their stead we have really artistic methods.

The results must be gratifying to the long-suffering public and to the photographer. The Bassano pictures mark a new era in the evolution of the photograph. Their studies after Greuze, and their Romney and Cosway pictures, are all that the most fastidious could desire. In the Greuze pictures one gets charming simplicity and delicate technique. There is no straining after effect, just a pretty head, a glimpse of shapely shoulders, and a simple arrangement of drapery. Hitherto, the photographer with artistic leanings, in his anxiety to secure what he was pleased to term artistic results, tried to ignore the purely mechanical side of the photograph, inevitably sacrificing accuracy of likeness and expression for a questionable and not altogether desirable "art" quality. The Greuze portraits have none of that exaggerated effect. They are the result of technical excellence and perfect taste, and as such they are sure to commend themselves to all those who appreciate really artistic photographs.

One of the conditions which have combined to bring about the advance in the photographers' art has undoubtedly been the widespread use of the photograph for reproduction by illustrated newspapers. Some standard of artistic excellence has been established in response to this demand, and photography has been consequently modernised. The Bassano pictures may be taken as fair specimens of this evolution of the photograph. In the same way the other branches of their art have moved along in a markedly progressive direction.

Digitized by Google

A STUDY AFTER GREUZE.

This picture, which is one of the happiest results Messrs. Bassano have yet obtained, is one of the series of studies after great artists, which are marking a new era in the use of the camera. The new departure is a remarkable improvement on the photographs of thirty years ago, with their fearful and wonderful backgrounds, and accessories to correspond.

(From a photograph by Bassano.)

Digitized by Google

ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHY.

SOME STUDIES AFTER GREUZE.

MISS JESSIE BATEMAN.

MISS DELVA.

MISS LOUIE POUNDS.

MISS PAULINE CHASE.

(From photographs by the Bassano Studios.)

Digitized by Google

More Green-room Gossips.

XXII.—WITH MISS LETTICE FAIRFAX.

"Of Unrehearsed Effects."

THE shell-pink shaded lamps threw a quiet and grateful light on the dainty furnishings of the green-room at Mr. George Alexander's theatre, and it was with the same feeling of awe that one looks upon gems in a beautiful setting that I glanced round the room where Miss Fairfax was awaiting me. She had only just come off the stage, and I had just come from the auditorium, and, by way of opening conversation, we fell discussing a curious, trivial little incident, quite unrehearsed, which had occurred just before the fall of the curtain, and which, in all probability, had been unnoticed by the majority of the audience. The subject on which I had intended to interview Miss Fairfax was very far removed from "Unrehearsed Effects," but finding that she had a fund of anecdotes, I, diplomatically, made no reference to the other subject, and listened (and wrote) while she talked gaily of one reminiscence and then another.

"There are, of course, any number of reasons for unrehearsed effects," she said; "nervousness is one, forgetfulness is another, and the call-boy is another, especially on first nights. Many an unrehearsed effect has been caused by the absence of an important character at a crucial moment, and that all through the forgetfulness of the call-boy. I don't think it is altogether the poor boy's fault. No actor or actress should rely entirely on him, especially on a first night, for he cannot be expected to know exactly when a cue is coming. But the accidents he causes are sometimes very difficult to bridge over. For instance, I was once playing in a little piece at the Royalty, and was playing the part of a young girl engaged to be married. In the first act I had to count the days, from Monday to Saturday, which was to be the wedding day, and my lover was supposed to steal quietly into the room, put his arm round my waist, and say, 'Counting the days, darling?' On the first night I duly counted 'Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday,' and so on, but when I arrived at Saturday there was no lover!

"So I valiantly set to and counted them through again, and I could hear the anxious stage-manager calling for the missing hero. I finished counting, and still he wasn't there; so I could only sit down to wait. I have practically no inventive faculty, and couldn't on a first night make up a bit of 'business' to save my life. But at last a flushed and breathless young man rushed on to the stage and cried out, 'Counting the days, darling?', and half unconsciously I replied, 'I have been'; and the scene proceeded.

"But a much more terrible thing happened to me once before that. I daresay you remember the dance Miss Topsy Sinden did in 'Don Juan'? On tour I had that part, and the mechanical appliances at provincial theatres were not so good in those days as they are now—I am talking of ten years ago—and for the flight across the stage which finished up the dance I had to have strong wires fastened to hooks in my bodice, and was then swung across from one side of the stage to the other, being caught by the feet at the end of my journey by three men and helped to the ground. One night the three men were not there. I completed the first swing all right, but when I got to the top of it, and there was no one to catch me, I lost my balance, turned upside down, and swung back right into view of the audience, my legs wildly waving, and my hands clutching at the air. Fortunately, when I arrived at the side I had started from I was able to catch hold of some scenery and cling there until I was rescued. I don't think the audience really realised what had happened; but those behind the scenes did!"

"Have you ever been addressed by your real name on the stage?"

"Never. It is a most rare accident. I believe it has happened to Sir Charles Wyndham once, and I have heard one of our leading actresses say it had happened to her; but I forget which one it was now. But it is an accident that very seldom occurs, and I do not think I have ever been present on an occasion on which such a slip has been made."

"Have you ever been the recipient of advice from the gallery?"

"Never. Such small fry does not merit the attention of the gallery, I fear. But I have known plenty of players who have." That sounded hopeful, and I prepared for more anecdotes. "Oh, but they've all told the stories themselves so often that they are not worth repeating," Miss Fairfax continued; and my pencil remained idle for a few minutes.

"My earliest experiences of audiences were in pantomime in the provinces, and I played Cinderella. It is curious that the only two occasions on which I have appeared in the provinces have been in pantomimes, and on each occasion it has been in a town where a 'students' night' was one of the features of the last week of the run. And, really, on that night the actors had nothing to do. The students sang all their songs for them, spoke all their jokes, and even did all the kissing that was necessary. At least, they made noises with their mouths during the love scenes which we took to mean the sound of kisses.

"From pantomime I went to America to understudy Miss Ada Rehan with Augustin Daly. He was the most marvellous man I ever met. I remember I was understudy to Miss Rehan as Peggy in Wycherley's "Country Wife," a fascinating part, and one which she played grandly. I was called for rehearsal, and at that time, of course, knew very little of the technique of my profession. The first thing Mr. Daly said to me was, 'Now, mind your tones.' I had no idea what he meant, and looked at him with round eyes. And he set to and explained to me that in ordinary conversation we do not keep our voices on one note, but run up and down the scale. And for an hour he kept me talking, up and down, up and down, repeating my part over and over again, in different keys and on different notes. And that one lesson was enough. He managed so marvellously that even a little duffer, as I have no doubt I was then, it only needed an hour's training to get just what he wanted. Of course, I benefited enormously."

"Miss Fairfax, please," the call-boy interrupted with "This time," she said, as she passed down the corridor to the stage, "he has not failed me. There will be no 'unrehearsed effect,'" Nor was there, for I got back in front in time to see.

F. E. R.

Johnston and Hoffmann.

MISS LETTICE FAIRFAX

Who is appearing in Mr. Barrie's new play, "Alice-sit-by-the-Fire," at the Duke of York's Theatre.

Digitized by Google

Letters to Stage Favourites.

XXII.—TO MR. H. B. IRVING ON HIS HAMLET.

DEAR MR. IRVING,—As I watched your performance at the Adelphi Theatre the other night, I realised what a great actor your father is. He suffers from the same stage disabilities as you—a voice which has little natural beauty in its tones, a guttural utterance, an awkwardness of movement, high shoulders, dragging feet. Yet he makes us forget them all, and remember only his marvellous magnetism of personality, his commanding gestures, his arresting eye.

I wish I could persuade myself that you have inherited these gifts. In modern plays I have admired you without measure. I thought your "Admirable Crichton" a perfect piece of work. You were very good in "Letty." To go further back a little, you played the warm-blooded prig in "The Ambassador" quite as well as you played the elderly-young diplomatist in "The Princess and the Butterfly." In frock-coat and dress-clothes pieces you have scarcely ever failed to score. You have a more striking individuality, a keener intellect, a firmer grip on character than most of the actors of to-day.

But when you play Hamlet you let us into the secret of your limitations.

You cannot, as Sir Henry Irving did, triumph by sheer force of will over the drawbacks of figure and voice. It is not to be expected that you should. We cannot help being conscious of these drawbacks. Though your performance is interesting, and in many places admirable, it is never great. It never lifts us out of ourselves into the region of ecstasy. We never sink back into our seats at the end of a scene, breathless with its tension, murmuring "Magnificent."

Stay, though; there is one such scene—indeed two—which extort this spontaneous tribute. But then they are scenes in which you do not appear. They are Ophelia's mad scenes. Never have I seen an Ophelia who put into her madness so much power, as well as pathos, as Miss Lily Brayton.

Always in victims of disordered wits there is something uncanny, as well as pitiful. You feel a certain shrinking from them, as well as a sorrowful tenderness towards their affliction. No Ophelia within my experience has brought this aspect of Ophelia's madness before us. Their endeavour has always been to make the mad scenes merely pathetic, to represent Ophelia as being prettily wayward and eccentric, rather than incurably insane.

Miss Brayton grasps the difficulty with a firm hand. She alters her appearance. Her complexion has changed from its healthy pink and white of the second and third acts to an ashy paleness, the hue of countenance which anyone who has visited an asylum for lunatics always associates with a mind diseased. She alters her voice. It has no longer the firm, clear ring of confident youth. It is strangled, uncertain, quavering.

At her entrance she makes you feel at once the horror of the situation. There were three people she loved and trusted above all others. Of these the first, Hamlet, who had won her girlish heart, has gone mad (as she supposes) and killed her father, the second; while the third, her brother Laertes, is far away. With no one to turn to, she has lost her reason. The pity of it is almost intolerable.

THE NEW HAMLET.

Yet, little by little, Miss Brayton's Ophelia wins your heart again, mad as she is. She is still the same gracious child. Not even the overthrow of her reason can change her nature entirely. She remains sweet and lovable.

> "Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
> She turns to favour and to prettiness."

Other actresses have taken these lines as meaning that the mad scenes had in them no element of the painful or the terrible. For my part, I agree with Miss Brayton that madness must always be painful and terrible. Where her skill is so great is in showing that, in spite of her dreadful affliction, Ophelia could still turn "to favour and to prettiness" everything that came into her poor wandering mind.

You see that when I look back upon the performance, the Ophelia stands out in my recollection more clearly than the Hamlet. And I think the reason of this is that there was not enough unity in your conception of the character. In fact, strange as it may sound, Hamlet at the Adelphi did not seem to me to have any particular character. Why, right at the end—in the grave-diggers' scene—you suddenly appeared in an entirely new mood—cheerful, calm, and careless. Yet I did not feel surprised exactly, for I really scarce knew, even at that late period of the action, what sort of a man you imagined Hamlet to be.

One thing you certainly do not make him, and that is princely. He has no natural dignity of manner, no gracious courtesy, no amiability of demeanour. His style of conversation is short and sharp, nasal as well as guttural. Nor do you bring out his humour, save in your instruction to the Player:

> "Follow that lord, and look you, mock him not,"

which I thought was given in a manner both charming and original—not as a stern command, but as a sympathetic word of warning.

Still, of course, there is much that is commendable and even excellent in your performance, as plenty of critics more experienced than I have been pointing out. And I am a bad one to judge a new Hamlet, for I don't mind telling you it is a part I have always longed desperately to play myself.

What a curious fascination Hamlet has, not for actors alone, but for everyone who possesses the dramatic sense. I have no desire to play Macbeth, or Othello, or King Lear, or even Brutus. But I should love to play Hamlet. I have my own ideas about every speech, about every sentence almost. I can see myself in it!

Put my churlish attitude towards your effort down to base envy, my dear Mr. Irving. It is next door to impossible to pass fair judgment upon the accomplishment of a task which you want all the time to be trying your hand at yourself. That was, I am afraid, the state of mind the other evening of your imperfect appreciator, Φ

Digitized by Google

ACTRESSES AT HOME.

XVI.—MISS LILY BRAYTON.

MR. AND MRS. OSCAR ASCHE AT ELM TREE ROAD, N.W.

The latest Ophelia and the latest King Claudius, who are in private life Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Asche, have a charming home in St. John's Wood, a house which might be much more than the accepted four miles from Charing Cross, for it has all the appearance of a country mansion. As may be judged from our illustrations, both Mr. and Mrs. Asche are croquet players, and a further hobby on the part of the "producer" at the Adelphi Theatre is the care of dachshunds, of which animals he is accounted a good judge.

(From copyright photographs specially supplied to this paper.)

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

OF the thousands of holiday-makers who annually fly to the Eastern Counties during the summer months, it is astonishing how few ever dream of visiting Essex. Apparently for other reasons than that it has so long been stigmatised "a flat, dull, uninteresting county," Essex is regarded in a totally different light from either of its neighbours on the north. As compared with other English counties it may truthfully be called flat, but dull and uninteresting it certainly is not. For historic interest it stands, perhaps, second to no other county in England; while its natural beauties—seldom seen from the window of a passing railway carriage—have been painted over and over again by such famous artists as Constable and Gainsborough, both of whom were born on the borders of Essex and Suffolk. What lover of art is not familiar with the peaceful, pastoral scenery of North Essex, a country of cornfields and sloping river banks, of old-time water-mills, locks, and still backwaters? Here, again, we find spacious valleys, enlivened by white farmhouses and cottages, with their high-pitched roofs, sparkling distances of woods and grey church towers—altogether an ideal training ground for the artist.

The district known as "Constable's Country" can be conveniently reached from London by taking the train either to Manningtree or Colchester on the Great Eastern Company's main-line system. A good deal of this interesting country can be seen even if one decides to spend not more than a couple of days away from town. From Manningtree, which lies on the banks of the Stour, we can visit Dedham, East Bergholt, where Constable was born, and Flatford Mill. This excursion may be undertaken on foot or by cycle; it is not a very long one, the distance being about eleven or twelve miles at the most. Dedham Vale, which Constable chose as the subject of one of his most beautiful pictures now hanging in the National Gallery, is to some people rather disappointing. On a dull day it is like many another English valley; but seen under a congenial sky, on a day such as Constable chose when he painted it, an entirely different impression is given. Constable's picture of the "Vale of Dedham" was painted from a point in the little village of Langham, also on the banks of the Stour. "I associate," writes the artist, "my careless boyhood days with all that lies on the banks of the Stour. These scenes made me a painter, and I am grateful. The beauty of the surrounding scenery, its gentle declivities, its luxuriant meadow flats sprinkled with flocks and herds, its well-cultivated uplands, its woods and rivers, with numerous scattered villages and churches, farms and picturesque cottages, all impart to this particular spot an amenity and elegance hardly anywhere else to be found."

The little town of Dedham, which gives its name to the district, is an interesting spot, for here we find the church which forms so conspicuous an object in the painting. It is a handsome building, founded in the sixteenth century by Thomas Webbe and his son John, woollen manufacturers. It has a massive tower 130-ft. high. A curious feature of the interior will be noticed on the south side of the chancel, in the shape of a small recess with a chimney leading from it. This is said to have served the purpose of an oven for baking the sacramental bread. Some interest attaches to the Grammar School, which, under the Rev. D. Grimwood, provided young Constable with the finishing part of his education. Leaving Dedham, a pretty road takes us up to East Bergholt, situated on the Suffolk side of the Stour, Constable's birthplace. The family, originally a Yorkshire one, had occupied land on the border-line of Essex and Suffolk for three or four generations. The father of

Copyright—S. L. Coulthurst.

THE CONSTABLE COUNTRY—FLATFORD BRIDGE.

This picturesque bit of scenery on the Stour formed the subject of one of Constable's great masterpieces. The picture was painted nearly a century ago, but it is easy to recognise, even to-day, the quaint old structure which formed so conspicuous a feature in the artist's works.

Digitized by Google

Constable was a miller, owning the water-mills at Dedham and Flatford, the latter appearing in another of the artist's celebrated pictures. The two windmills near East Bergholt were also the property of the Constable family. Bergholt village still retains much of its quiet rustic air; its church has undergone but little change since Constable used to attend service there, and the peal of bells still hang in a kind of wooden cage in the churchyard.

A steep, narrow lane leads from Bergholt to Flatford Mill and Willy Lott's House, which formed the subject of another of the artist's great works, painted in 1817, now in the National Gallery. The old mill was a favourite subject of Constable's; he had painted it over and over again from different points of view. The picture which we know as "Flatford Mill" was bequeathed to the nation by the Misses Maria and Isabel and Mr. Lionel Constable.

Those who visit this peaceful old-world spot at the present day will not find it difficult to recognise the place from Constable's picture, although it is nearly 100 years ago since he painted it. The old mill is there, and so, too, are the old wooden lock and the towing-path—one of the artist's favourite haunts. Wild flowers grow here in endless variety, and it is an altogether ideal spot for the picnicker.

By many people Colchester, which offers, perhaps, more comfortable hotel accommodation, would be chosen as the starting point for excursions into the Constable country. In Colchester itself there is much to interest the visitor. Camulodunum, as the Romans termed Colchester, was one of the earliest Roman settlements in Britain. The ancient city walls are still in a good state of preservation, and the Castle, which boasts the largest Norman keep in England—twice the size of the White Tower of London—contains a museum rich in Roman remains. St. Botolph's Priory is an interesting old ruin, having once been the premier house of the St. Augustine Canons in England. It is built from Roman materials by Norman hands, and is very picturesque in its decay.

Copyright—S. L. Coulthurst.

IN THE CONSTABLE COUNTRY.

Dedham Lock, on the Stour. This lock, with the surrounding scenery, inspired some of the finest of Constable's works. The artist himself says in one of his letters, "I associate my careless boyhood days with all that lies on the banks of the Stour. These scenes made me a painter, and I am grateful."

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

THE appointment of Brigadier-General S. B. Beatson, C.B., to the suite of the Prince and Princess of Wales in special connection with the forthcoming tour of their Royal Highnesses in India, is of great Service interest. General Beatson himself is, of course, well known both as a distinguished fighting soldier with several campaigns to his credit, and also for his excellent work as Inspector-General of the Imperial Service Troops. An old Wellingtonian, and originally appointed to the 17th Foot, now the Leicestershire Regiment, he joined the Indian Staff Corps in 1876, and was appointed to that very crack native cavalry regiment, the 11th P.W.O. Bengal Lancers, subsequently seeing a quantity of active service both as a regimental and a staff officer. In 1882 he was A.D.C. to the late Sir Herbert Macpherson during the latter's period of command of the Indian Contingent in Egypt, and again in 1901 he had an important extra-Indian experience as commander of a mobile column in South Africa. General Beatson is the son of the late Captain William Stuart Beatson of the old East India Company's service, and his mother was a niece of the first Lord Lurgan, whose family, the Brownlows, have numbered many distinguished soldiers. He is also related, the writer of these notes believes, to that well-known General Beatson who, after a distinguished Indian career, had command of the Osmanli Irregular Cavalry, better known as the Bashi-Bazouks, in the Russian War. On his wife's side, again, he has many Service connections, for her father was that notable veteran of both the Crimean and Indian Mutiny Campaigns, the late Sir William Elles, K.C.B.

Copyright.

THE LAST MAJOR-GENERAL IN COMMAND AT WOOLWICH, WITH HIS STAFF.

For more than a century Woolwich has been a first-class command, but it has been latterly changed into a station, and is now commanded by a Colonel, receiving orders direct from the headquarters at Dover of the Fifth Division of the Eastern Command. Those in the above illustration are, reading from left to right: Back row—Quartermaster-Sergeant Harley, Clerk to D.A.A.G., and Sergeant-Major Tresidder, Garrison S.M. Middle row—Quartermaster-Sergeant Bonynge, Garrison Q.M.S., Sergeant-Major Brewster, Superintending Clerk R.A., Major Tennant, B.M.R.A., Sergeant-Major Goold, Superintending Clerk R.A., and Quartermaster-Sergeant Cresswell, Garrison Provost-Sergeant. Front row—Lieutenant-Colonel Laffan, C.R.E., Colonel E. B. Coke, C.V.O., C.R.A., Major-General Sir J. Leach, K.C.V.O., Major De Rougemont, D.S.O., M.V.O., D.A.A.G., and Captain Ward, A.D.C.

MAJOR-GENERAL J. C. DALTON, who has just been appointed to the command of the Artillery at Gibraltar, is no stranger to the "Rock," for he was D.A.A.G. there in the eighties for nearly four years, during which time he edited the Gibraltar Chronicle. An accomplished littérateur, General Dalton has produced some valuable Artillery manuals, and he was one of the chief compilers of the well-known "Army Book for the British Empire," which, as it was, perhaps, the best and most instructive publication it ever gave birth to, the War Office has for years allowed to remain out of print. General Dalton saw service in the Afghan War, and was for some time C.R.A. at Devonport. But he has been chiefly employed at Army Headquarters, both in the Intelligence Division and the Military Secretariat. He is an old Cheltonian, and, of course, a Staff College graduate. When he gets his next step he will be a Lieutenant-General R.A., as his father was before him. He married the daughter of that fine old soldier Sir George Barker, sometime commanding at Hong Kong, and, later, Governor of the Bermudas. His younger brother, Charles, is well known as editor of the "Waterloo Roll Call" and of the Army Lists and Commission Registers, 1661-1714.

IT is interesting to learn that the life of the late Duke of Cambridge is making progress in the capable hands of Colonel Willoughby Verner, the well-known Rifle Brigade officer who guided the fighting square after Abu Klea and El Gubat in its march to the Nile. Colonel Verner will also be remembered as having been severely wounded at Graspan, where he was serving on the staff. But, creditable as his war record is, his chief distinction has so far arisen from peaceful achievements. He is known throughout the Army as the inventor of a number of appliances for military sketching and surveying, including the luminous magnetic and prismatic compass and the adopted pattern of cavalry sketching case. Colonel Willoughby Verner is also the author of several works of much military and historical interest, and was the founder and editor of the Rifle Brigade Chronicle. In him the old Duke will have an able and sympathetic biographer, and the life of the former Commander-in-Chief, by such a competent soldier-writer, will be awaited with great and widespread interest, especially at a juncture like the present.

REAR-ADMIRAL C. H. ADAIR, who has just attained flag rank, has an important reputation in connection with Naval gunnery, his command of the Sheerness Gunnery School dating from the beginning of 1902. He had been A.D.C. to the King since January, 1904. He has not been fortunate in the matter of war experience, being only credited with service as lieutenant of the "Helicon" during the combined Naval and Military operations in the Eastern Soudan at Suakin in 1884-85. But an officer does not become a Naval A.D.C. to the King and get promotion to Rear-Admiral on the Active List for nothing, and, in any case, the right sort of authority on gunnery is worth more to the Navy just now than the possessor of war records unaccompanied by any special qualification.

CAPTAIN LYON'S appointment to the "Blenheim" having been cancelled, the cruiser has been recommissioned by Captain E. R. Pears for service in the Sheerness Chatham Reserve Division. The "Blenheim" was formerly on the China station, where she was replaced by the "Andromeda." Shortly after she was first commissioned she was sent to the Pacific, and was in American waters at the time of the Spanish-American War, provoking many admiring comments by her splendid appearance. Her new captain has seen a good deal of active service, having come to the front recently as Commander of the "Perseus," which was busily employed during the Somaliland operations in landing troops and stores, and in the maintenance of a patrol of the coast in order to stop gun-running. Previously Lieutenant Pears had taken part in the Benin City Expedition under Admiral Rawson, and he was also an Acting Sub-Lieutenant in the "Ruby" during the Egyptian War of 1882.

COMMANDER W. H. COWAN, D.S.O., who was formerly Senior Officer of the Devonport Instructional Flotilla, and who has just been appointed to command the torpedo vessels in commission in reserve at Devonport, has already compiled a brilliant record of distinguished service. After a very brisk and full experience on the coasts of Africa under Admirals Sir Frederick Bedford and Rawson, he served with the gun-boats on the Nile in the Khartoum Expedition, and was Staff Officer in the later operations against the Khalifa in 1899. He also acted as Naval A.D.C. to Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener in South Africa.

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL TOUR TO INDIA.

THE BATTLE-SHIP "RENOWN" IN PORTSMOUTH HARBOUR.

The recent visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Portsmouth to inspect the battle-ship "Renown," makes it practically certain that that vessel will be chosen for the duty of conveying the Royal party to India in November next. She will be commanded by Captain the Hon. Hugh Tyrwhitt, who has recently been acting as private secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

AFTER the heavy and exciting business of the Lincoln and Liverpool meetings, the past week's racing has been comparatively tame, although the sport itself has been of a thoroughly interesting nature. The Warwick Meeting was, as usual, well patronised, but although the racing on the first day of the meeting was fairly good, there was no special feature which calls for notice. On the second day Ypsilanti, by winning the Jockey Club Plate, incurred a penalty which will probably put him out of court for the Kempton Park Jubilee; and the running for the April Handicap was interesting from the fact that Catty Crag to some extent enhanced the form of the Lincoln Handicap by making hacks of Golden Saint and Gilbert Orme, and it must be a matter of regret to J. Osborne that he should have sold this very useful horse for, I think, about fourteen sovereigns. Mr. G. Thursby rode a couple of winners at the aristocratic meeting at Croxton Park, and while the horses were at the post for the Private Sweepstakes some diversion was created by the collapse of the flooring of the Stewards' stand. Fortunately no one was injured; but both Lord Lonsdale, who hung on to the railing of the stand, and Captain Forester came in for a good deal of chaff from their friends.

A good many people went on from Warwick and Croxton Park to Leicester, but owing partly to the bitterly cold weather and the counter attractions of Pontefract, Maiden Erlegh, and Aylesbury the attendance was decidedly below the average, and the sport does not call for much comment.

Before these lines are in print the Craven Meeting will have come and gone; but the Derby Meeting, which takes place at the end of the week, promises to be as interesting as ever. The Doveridge Handicap of 600 sovs. is the principal event on the first day of the meeting, and of the thirty-eight original entries, twenty-eight have been left in; but in estimating the chances of the candidates it must be noticed that the weights have been raised 13-lb. all round, Sansovino, with his extra penalty of 10-lb. for winning the Lincoln Handicap, appears quite out of court, but Andria (8-st. 5-lb.) should run considerably better than he did at Lincoln. The Drakelow Maiden Plate may not improbably fall to St. Galette. The Sudbury Stakes, with an entry of just fifty runners, is very dangerous to deal with so long before the race. On Saturday, the second day of the meeting, the Derbyshire Plate has attracted twenty-three entries, and at present nothing appears to have a better chance than the top-weight, Percussion.

W. A. Rouch.

CHALEUREUX, A CESAREWITCH WINNER.

Rock Sand, Sir J. Miller's strong champion, has at last retired from the racecourse to the stud. His deeds are fresh in the memories of all race-goers, and from his splendid breeding there is every probability that he will become the sire of yet another Derby winner for his popular owner. Sainfoin, his sire, was bought by John Porter and Sir R. Jardine at the sale of the Hampton Court yearlings for 550 guineas, and sold by them to Sir J. Miller for 6,000 guineas and half the value of the stakes if he should win the Derby, which he did, beating the French horse Le Nord by three-quarters of a length. It is not altogether uninteresting to note that in this respect his son, Rock Sand, followed in his footsteps by defeating another French horse, Vinicius, for the same great race; and in connection with the sale of Sainfoin, it is rather a curious fact that at the same sale and on the same day Memoir, the winner of the Oaks, was amongst the other yearlings sent up for sale.

W. A. Rouch.

ROQUEBRUNE, THE DAM OF ROCK SAND.

Backers appear to be hardening their hearts, and speculation on the City and Suburban is already fairly brisk. If St. Amant is ever going to reproduce the form he showed in the race for the Derby, he will probably do so at Epsom. Dean Swift ran sufficiently well in the Cambridgeshire last back end to entitle him to respect for this race, and at the present moment Nabot, Andover, and Challenger also appear to be horses that should be taken notice of.

The executive of the Stock Exchange Steeplechase provided a capital day's sport on Saturday, on the course which they used some few years ago at Wing, near Leighton Buzzard. It is a very sporting course, and the fences require plenty of doing. Mr. C. A. Grenfell rode Mr. A. J. Schwabe's Highland Laddie to victory in the Light-weight Challenge Cup; the Inter-Regimental Yeomanry Race (an excellent institution) went to the Northamptonshire team; Mr. S. Gurney Sheppard's Mainsail II. made hacks of his opponents in the Heavy-weight Challenge Cup; the Open Steeplechase was won by Colonel Jenkins's Prater; and Mr. A. Chapman brought a cheery day's sport to a conclusion by winning the Farmers' Race with Mr. G. Chapman's Dainty IV.

On the same day a crowded attendance once more testified to the popularity of the meetings held at Alexandra Park, under the auspices of Messrs. Pratt and Co.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

W. A. Rouch.

ROCK SAND: SAINFOIN—ROQUEBRUNE

Winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, Derby, St. Leger, and other races.

W. A. Rouch.

SAINFOIN: SPRINGFIELD—SANDA

Winner of the Derby in 1890.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

WE have received from Messrs. Cassell and Co. "The Blue Adventure Book," which contains a series of stories reprinted from "The World of Adventure," under the editorship of Mr. A. T. Quiller-Couch. It is a capital book for boys of all ages, containing stories of adventure of all kinds, from "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "The Loss of the 'Kent,' East Indiaman," through a hunt for a murderer, told by Mr. Dick Donovan, to some stories of American Indians that will fascinate the youngest and the oldest of readers. Some of the most interesting numbers are the account of the sufferings of Charles Jackson in the Irish Rebellion of 1798, the adventures of Alexander Henry among the Chippeway Indians, the story of De Latude's imprisonment in the Bastille, and the siege of Caldecote Hall, Warwickshire, during the Civil War. The book is very handsomely illustrated with coloured plates and in black and white, and not a page of it is dull.

An Adventure Book.

* * *

FOLLOWING the very successful publication of "A Belle of the Fifties," the memoirs of Mrs. Clay of Alabama during the American Civil War, Mr. Heinemann has issued another volume of recollections by an American lady, "A Diary from Dixie," as written by Mary Boykin Chesnut. Mrs. Chesnut's husband was Senator for South Carolina from 1859 to 1861, and afterwards A.D.C. to Jefferson Davis and a Brigadier-General in the Confederate Army. It is only to be expected, therefore, that Mrs. Chesnut is very thoroughly on the side of the South, and the editors of her book, Miss Isabella D. Martin and Miss Myrta Lockett Avary, are hardly claiming too much when they state that in this diary, as perhaps nowhere else in the literature of the war, will be found the Southern spirit expressed with such delightfully unconscious frankness. The diary covers the important years 1861-65, and is continuously interesting. The book is illustrated with well-chosen photographs of the people and scenes concerned.

A Diary from Dixie.

* * *

A NEW volume in Messrs. Black's series of colour books is the work of Mr. and Mrs. Nico Jungman, who lately collaborated so successfully in their beautiful book on Holland. The subject of the new work is Norway, in which they have found in some respects an even more interesting theme. The pictorial qualities of the country are known, at least by reputation, to nearly everyone; but the common knowledge is nearly confined to those parts which are within the reach of the casual tourist. Mr. and Mrs. Jungman have gone further afield, and the result will give those who secure their book not only a widely-increased knowledge of the scenery of the country, but also an intimate acquaintance with the home life of its inhabitants.

Pictures of Holland.

* * *

IN a "Queen of Unrest" (Swan Sonnenschein) Mr. Harry Tighe, who is already known as a novelist of some skill, tells in a popular form the story of Juana of Castile, the mother of the Emperor Charles V. Juana was the daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, and was married to the Archduke Philip, who died early. Her life was a sad one. The last forty-six years of it she spent in confinement as a lunatic. To English readers her life is particularly interesting, since she visited Henry VII., by whom she was sought in marriage. Mr. Tighe has told her story in an agreeable manner, with the novelist's keen sense of dramatic possibilities combined with the patience and accuracy of a historian.

A Queen of Unrest.

* * *

MR. K. KYNASTON GASKELL'S "Catalogue of British, Hanoverian, and other Waterloo Medals in the Collection of Henry Gaskell, with Notes on the Last Survivors," comes out very appropriately in reference to the approaching ninetieth anniversary of the "ever-glorious eighteenth of June." It will assuredly find a place in every Napoleonic as well as Wellingtonian collection, for it contains good portraits (not elsewhere obtainable) of the four last surviving officers who took part in the battle, the last of whom died in 1891, at the age of ninety-six. The last authentic surviving British combatant was Private Samuel Gibson, who survived Lieutenant-Colonel Hewitt only two months.

The Gaskell Medals.

THE SCENE ON DECK DURING THE BURNING OF THE "KENT," EAST INDIAMAN, IN 1825.

One of the illustrations to "The Blue Adventure Book," edited by Mr. A. T. Quiller-Couch. (Cassell and Co.)

Mr. Gaskell credits Mrs. Moon and Mrs. Watkins (the one died in 1903, and the other in 1904) with being the last surviving eye-witnesses. Mme. Dupuis, who saw the battle from the hills to the south, is alive, and will be 103 on June 6 next. It is satisfactory to know that Mr. Gaskell in his painstaking researches has unmasked one or two impostors, the ever-green "trumpeter" amongst them.

* * *

MESSRS. ISBISTER send us a very unusual book, a translation by Mary Louise Hendee of Pasteur Charles Wagner's book, "The Simple Life," which was publicly recommended to the American people the other day by President Roosevelt. The drift of the book may be gathered from its title. It is hardly strange that in these over-elaborate, over-civilised days of ours a new and far more genuine Jean-Jacques Rousseau should have arisen in the person of an Alsatian Protestant minister, to warn us against the physical and moral results of over-complication of life. Miss Grace King contributes to the little shilling volume an introduction and a biographical sketch of the author.

The Simple Life.

* * *

MR. AUSTIN RIVERS sends us a little volume called "Lovers in London," by A. A. Milne, some chapters of which, if we remember right, are reprinted, without acknowledgment, from a contemporary. The book is amusing enough in a rather American way. It describes how He and She saw the sights of London, and may be picked up in an idle moment after dinner. From Messrs. Constable we have received "A Rough Reformer," by Ernest Glanville. Mr. Glanville has ideas, and, on the whole, we have been interested in his story of a poor young man who becomes rich several times and poor again, and starts, while very rich, a number of reforms, not for the sake of the reformed, but because he has a mania to be doing something of the kind. Mr. Glanville is not good at describing Society; but there is power in his book of an uncommon and welcome order.

Two Novels.

* * *

A NEW and very handy little series of reprints is "The Cameo Classics," just started by the Library Press. It is too late to protest against such books as "The Beauties of Sterne," which forms the second volume, but the other three announced show a good choice, and the little sixpenny volumes are pleasant to handle and to read. Meanwhile Messrs. Macmillan and Co. announce a series of pocket editions of the works of Scott, Dickens, and Thackeray, printed on India paper and bound in cloth and leather. India paper, or, as it is sometimes called, thin paper, is, if a necessity, a disagreeable one; but there is no doubt, if we are to have the whole of the Waverley or the Pickwick Papers in a volume that will go comfortably into the pocket, India paper it must be, and, after all, if you get someone else to turn over the pages for you first, the trouble is not so bad.

Reprints.

BOOKS TO READ.

Fiction.

A Frontier Mystery, by Bertram Mitford. (White.)

The Master Mummer, by E. Phillips Oppenheim. Illustrated by F. H. Townsend. (Ward, Lock.)

Li Ting of London, and other stories, by George R. Sims. (Chatto and Windus.)

The Bell and the Arrow: An English Love Story, by Mrs. W. H. Chesson (Nora Hopper). (T. Werner Laurie.)

Captain Balaam of the "Cormorant" and other Sea Comedies, by Morley Roberts. (Nash.)

History.

Makers of Modern History: Three Types, Louis Napoleon—Cavour—Bismark, by the Hon. Edward Cadogan. (Murray.)

Music.

The Concert-Goer: A Handbook of the Orchestra and Orchestral Music, by William H. Daly. (Paterson.)

Natural History.

Wild Flowers Month by Month in their Natural Haunts. Illustrated from photographs depicting the various flowers as they are found growing. In twelve parts. Part I. by Edward Step, F.L.S. (Warne.)

The Camera in the Fields: A Practical Guide to Nature Photography, by F. C. Snell. (Unwin.)

Sport.

An Angler's Hours, by H. T. Sheringham. (Macmillan.)

Swerve, or the Flight of the Ball. Illustrated by explanatory diagrams by P. A. Vaile. (Tamblyn.)

Topography and Travel.

Letters from Catalonia and other parts of Spain, by Rowland Thirlmere. (Hutchinson.)

Our Sudan, its Pyramids and Progress, by John Ward, F.S.A. (Murray.)

Lhasa and its Mysteries, with a Record of the Expedition of 1903-4, by L. Austine Waddell, LL.D., C.B. (Murray.)

Digitized by Google

The Food Route to Brains

is a sure and pleasant way.

Why should one flounder along with a worn down, fagged out Brain when a simple experiment with food will restore, rebuild, strengthen and nourish that Brain and put it in shape to work hard, make money and do things.

What's the Use

to trifle. Cut out the old time heavy breakfast and try this—

A little fruit,
Two soft boiled eggs, Toast,
A saucer GRAPE-NUTS and Cream or Milk, and A cup of our Postum Food Coffee.
(Postum boiled full 15 minutes.)

The Result

will show in a day or two and grow plainer from dav to day as the Phosphatic elements specially provided in Grape-Nuts and Postum begin to fill the delicate little cells in brain and nerve centres with grey matter. That means a stronger, sturdier set of brains.

Grape-Nuts

There's a reason.

GRAPE-NUTS CO., Ltd., 66 Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

IT is a very interesting fact in connection with the Pianola that it raises the standard of one's musical taste.

We can trace this by comparing the requisitions received from subscribers to the music library. Frequently the Pianola owner starts by selecting Rag times, and Popular music; later a Liszt Rhapsodie, or a piece of Moszkowski, or one of Mendelssohn's "Songs without Words" is asked for, until finally the list is composed almost entirely of music of the best class. The truth of the matter is, that many people do not appreciate classical music because they have never had the opportunity of becoming thoroughly acquainted with it. It is, of course, different with those who possess Pianolas, for the world's music becomes known to them.

Although this advertisement deals with the Pianola's educational uses, it must not be supposed that it is the instrument's only charm. It interests and entertains, and as a social factor it is equally valuable.

The achievement of the Metrostyle Pianola is not even attempted by any other piano-player. It would interest you. Call!

Write for Catalogue Q.

Orchestrelle Co.,
ÆOLIAN HALL,
135-6-7, New Bond Street, London, W.

S. SMITH & SON, LTD.,

Watchmakers to the Admiralty. CLOCK and CHRONOMETER MAKERS.

THE "STRAND" HALF-CHRONOMETER.

9, STRAND, W.C.

WATCHES from £1 1 0 to £900.

With our Registered Dust and Damp Proof Cap.

NON-MAGNETIC £1. 1. 0 EXTRA.

OUR "STRAND" All English. 18-ct. Gold Full or Half Hunter Cases, £16. 16s.; Silver Full Hunting Cases, £6. 6s., Half Hunting Cases, £6. 15s.
Crystal Glass, Open Face, 18-ct. Gold, £13. 15s., Silver, £5. 5s.

OUR ALL ENGLISH "STRAND" WATCHES AR THE BEST VALUE EVER PRODUCED.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—All our Watches, Clocks, and Jewellery can be purchased on "The Times" SYSTEM of MONTHLY PAYMENTS at Catalogue prices.

8-day Keyless Carriage Timepiece in Ormolu. Gilt and Bevelled Glass Cases, including Leather Case, £1. 1s.
Lever Escapement, £1. 15s.
Striking on Gong hours and half-hours, £3. 15s.
With Repeating Action, £4. 4s.
Every Clock Guaranteed.

Our Illustrated Catalogue or "Guide to the Purchase of a Watch," Book F., 135 pages, 350 illustrations, free by post. Ditto Clocks, F. Ditto Jewellery, F.

NON-MAGNETIC £1. 1. 0 EXTRA.

SPECIALITY: With Dial as below, indicating Railway Speed up to 100 miles, 10s. extra.

"STRAND" CHRONOGRAPH.
Our Own Special Make, Strong 18-ct. Gold Cases £21. Steel or Silver Cases £8. 8s. With 30-Minute Recorder, £5. 5s.; 18-ct. Gold £15 15s.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE — FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE — FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

APT QUOTATIONS.

IN REGENT STREET.

"Man seems the only growth that dwindles here."—GOLDSMITH.

(Drawn by Savile Lumley.)

Digitized by Google

Great Eastern Railway.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

Quickest and most Direct Route

TO THE East Coast Watering Places, Norfolk Broads.

Frequent and convenient Service

OF EXPRESS TRAINS.

EXCURSIONS FROM LONDON
On Thursday, April 20th,

FOR

5 and 18 days to North Eastern Stations and Scotland.

5, 6, and 9 days to the Eastern Counties, Lincolnshire, Lancashire, Yorkshire, and North Eastern District.

On Saturday, April 22nd,

FOR

3, 4, 6, 7 and 8 days to Lincolnshire, Yorkshire, and Lancashire.

Midnight Trains on Saturday, April 22nd,

To Cambridge, Norwich, &c., at 12.20 night.

To Clacton, Ipswich, Yarmouth, Lowestoft, &c., at 12.25 night.

Tourist, Fortnightly, and Thursday and Friday to Tuesday Tickets. Restaurant Cars.

All further particulars of arrangements for the Easter Holidays, write the SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, Liverpool Street Station, E.C.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.

Easter Holiday Excursions

TO

Scotland,

North of England,

Yorkshire, Lancashire,

Midlands & Eastern Counties.

Cheap Tickets will be issued to Edinburgh and Scotland generally.

| | |
|---|---|
| NEWCASTLE. | HARROGATE. |
| SUNDERLAND. | LEEDS. |
| SCARBOROUGH. | BRADFORD. |
| YORK. | HALIFAX. |
| BRIDLINGTON. | NOTTINGHAM. |
| HULL. | DERBY. |
| SHEFFIELD. | LINCOLN. |
| MANCHESTER. | GRIMSBY, &c. |

For full particulars see programmes to be obtained at the Company's Stations, Town Offices, and Agencies.

OLIVER BURY, General Manager.

LONDON AND SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

EASTER EXCURSIONS

from LONDON,

WATERLOO and certain SUBURBAN STATIONS

TO THE Principal Health and Pleasure Resorts of the

SUNNY SOUTH

AND SOUTH-WEST COASTS,

DEVON — CORNWALL,

etc., including

ILFRACOMBE — EXETER — PLYMOUTH — WADEBRIDGE — CAMELFORD — PADSTOW — LYME REGIS — SWANAGE — WEYMOUTH — BOURNEMOUTH — THE ISLE OF WIGHT, Etc.

Extra Trains and special facilities for Passengers holding Ordinary and Week-End Tickets.

PARIS at EASTER

14-DAY EXCURSION TICKETS from WATERLOO, etc., via SOUTHAMPTON to the FRENCH COAST, for PARIS, NORMANDY, BRITTANY, etc., also to the CHANNEL ISLANDS.

For full particulars see Programmes, obtainable at the Company's Stations and Offices; or from Mr. HENRY HOLMES, Superintendent of the Line, WATERLOO STATION, S.E.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.

THE BEST ROUTE
FOR COMFORTABLE TRAVEL AND PICTURESQUE SCENERY.

EASTER EXCURSIONS
From St. Pancras Station

with bookings from City, Greenwich, and Woolwich Stations, will be run to ALL PARTS of . . .

The Midland Counties, Derbyshire, Lancashire, Yorkshire, The Lake District, Ireland, and Scotland.

PROGRAMMES FREE ON APPLICATION to the Co.'s District Superintendent, St. Pancras; Thos. Cook and Son, Ludgate Circus, and Branch Offices; or to any Midland Station Master or Agent in the London District.

EXTENSION OF WEEK-END TICKETS.

Cheap Week-End Tickets will be issued on Thursday, April 20th, as well as on Friday and Saturday, April 21st and 22nd, from London (St. Pancras) to the principal Seaside and Inland Holiday Resorts, including the Peak District of Derbyshire, Morecambe, the Lake District, Yorkshire, the North-East Coast, Scotland, and other parts, available for return on any day up to and including Tuesday, April 25th, except day of issue. Cheap Week-End and Day Excursion Tickets will also be issued to Southend-on-Sea during the Easter Holidays.

For ordinary train service arrangements see the Co.'s Time Tables, etc.

DERBY. JOHN MATHIESON, General Manager.

SOUTH EASTERN AND CHATHAM RAILWAY.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

PARIS via FOLKESTONE - BOULOGNE, or DOVER-CALAIS, 1st Class 55s. 4d., 2nd Class 37s. 6d., 3rd Class 30s., available by 2.20 p.m. and 9.0 p.m. Services from CHARING CROSS on April 19th, 20th, 21st, and 22nd; also by 10.0 a.m. Service on April 20th. Returning from Paris any day within 14 days. For Return Times, see Handbills.

BRUSSELS and Back, via CALAIS or BOULOGNE 22s. 11d., via OSTEND 18s. 4d., tickets available for 8 days.

CHEAP SATURDAY to MONDAY TICKETS, also Special 8-Day Tickets will be issued to BOULOGNE and CALAIS; and 8 Day Excursions will be run to OSTEND, AMSTERDAM, THE HAGUE, etc. Continental Services as usual during the Holidays. A Special Express will leave Victoria (S.E. & C.) at 8 50 p.m. for Dover, on Thursday, April 20th, in connection with the Boats to Boulogne, Calais and Ostend respectively.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, ST. LEONARDS, HASTINGS, BEXHILL, CANTERBURY, WHITSTABLE, HERNE BAY, BIRCHINGTON, WESTGATE, MARGATE, BROADSTAIRS, RAMSGATE, SANDWICH, DEAL, WALMER, DOVER, FOLKESTONE, SHORNCLIFFE, HYTHE, SANDGATE, and NEW ROMNEY (LITTLESTONE-ON-SEA), CHEAP RETURN TICKETS will be issued from LONDON by certain Trains on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 20th, 21st and 22nd, available to return on Tuesday, April 25th by any Train (Mail or Boat Expresses excepted).

CHEAP DAY EXCURSIONS on GOOD FRIDAY and EASTER MONDAY from the principal LONDON STATIONS to ASHFORD, CANTERBURY, DEAL, TUNBRIDGE WELLS, GRAVESEND (for Rosherville Gardens), HASTINGS, BEXHILL, WHITSTABLE, HERNE BAY, BIRCHINGTON, RAMSGATE, BROADSTAIRS, MARGATE, HYTHE, SANDGATE, FOLKESTONE, DOVER, etc.

CHEAP DAY EXCURSION to ALDERSHOT on BANK HOLIDAY, leaving CHARING CROSS at 9.24 a.m. Return Fare 3s. 0d., Third Class.

CRYSTAL PALACE (HIGH LEVEL) on BANK HOLIDAY. Return Tickets (including admission) will be issued from London.

For full particulars of the above Excursions, Extension of Time for certain Return Tickets, Alterations in Train Services, etc., see Special Holiday Programme and Bills.

VINCENT W. HILL, General Manager.

LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RAILWAY.

Paris, Rouen & Dieppe at Easter
14-Day Excursions. (Via NEWHAVEN.)

Thursday, April 20th, from Victoria 9.45 a.m., 10.0 a.m. and 2.15 p.m., and London Bridge 10.0 a.m. (1 & 2 Class), and Wednesday. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 19th to 22nd, from Victoria and London Bridge 9.10 p.m. (1, 2 & 3 Class). Fares—Paris, 39s. 3d.; 30s. 3d.; 26s.; Rouen, 35s. 3d.; 27s. 3d.; 23s. 8d.; Dieppe, 31s.; 25s.; 20s.

DIEPPE.
Thursday to Tuesday Cheap Return Tickets.

From London Bridge and Victoria, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, April 20th to 24th. Fares, by Day or Night Service, 1st Class 30s., 2nd Class 22s., and by Night Service only, 3rd Class 16s., available for return up to April 25th. 1st and 2nd Class tickets are also issued by a Special Afternoon Service leaving Victoria 2.15 p.m.

SPECIAL PROGRAMME AT DIEPPE CASINO, APRIL 20TH TO 25TH.

Details of Continental Manager, London Bridge Terminus.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

TRAVEL BY THE

G.W.R.

FOR CHEAPNESS, SPEED, AND COMFORT.

| Fares (3rd Class) from London to | | Fares (3rd Class) from London to | | Fares (3rd Class) from London to | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Penzance ... | 40/- | Newquay ... | 40/- | Weymouth ... | 23/10 |
| Falmouth ... | | Plymouth ... | 37/4 | Swansea ... ... | 29/- |
| St. Ives ... ... | | Exeter ... ... | 28/4 | Cardiff ... ... | 25/6 |
| Helston (for the Lizard) | | Ilfracombe ... | 33/- | Tenby ... ... ... | 37/- |

For particulars of train service and all other information, send a post card to the Superintendent of the Line.

PADDINGTON STATION, W. JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

THE ROMANCE OF A ROYAL REMARK BOOK.

("Recovery of the MS. Journal kept by King William IV. (1780-82), describing his impressions of Gibraltar, New York, and other parts of North America, while serving as a Midshipman on board H.M.S. 'Prince George.'")

IN no part of the world do the autographs of Royalty, great and small, find so ready a market as in the United States. American collectors are, as a rule, far more enthusiastic than their European confrères, and it is, therefore, curious that such a unique item as a holograph account of the Great Republic, written towards the close of the War of Independence, by one who, just fifty years later, was destined to ascend the British throne, should have escaped their notice and found its way into the possession of an enterprising London bookseller, Mr. Roche of New Oxford Street, who happened to be present at the sale of the personal property of Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar several months since—a sale remarkable for the almost total absence of Literature of any kind.

Lot 15 was described thus: "MS. Poems by Adelheit Carolath, Countess Pappenheim, in pen and ink, bound in calf and gilt with double clasps; MS. Abstract of the principal occurrences in the Naval History of Great Britain, by Prince George, 1780, in his own handwriting; MS. System of Geography, 1781, by Prince William (Henry), in his own handwriting; MS. Remarks on Countries, &c., 1780, by Prince William Henry, in his own handwriting, all bound in calf." With the first two items the writer has no present concern, except that the supposed abstract by Prince George (George IV.), although the handwriting greatly resembles his, may possibly be one of the MS. books used by the Naval Instructor on board the ship bearing his name, upon which his younger brother and ultimate successor served first as an Able Seaman and afterwards as a Midshipman.

In 1780, the third son of George III. was popularly known as "Jolly young tarry breaks"; half a century later he was spoken of apologetically as "Our good Old Sailor King." If George III. was penurious in everything else, he spared no expense in the education of his children. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York were good classical scholars while still in their teens, and one of their sisters (the "dear Princesses" of Fanny d'Arblay) became an accomplished artist, while a second wrote tolerable poetry, and a third played Handel's music on the harpsichord. Their training began almost as soon as they could walk, and Prince William's caligraphy at the age of fifteen certainly did infinite credit to Dr. Majendie and General Budé. There is no sort of doubt but that the contents of the two last-named volumes, the one bound in green and the other in white calf, are entirely in the neat and legible handwriting of the Royal sailor. From his youth upwards Prince William was, like his father, an industrious correspondent. In the possession of the writer is a letter addressed by him on November 18, 1782, from the "Barfleur" off Sandy Hook, to his old tutor Dr. Majendie. The identity of the handwriting in that and in the two volumes of MS. notes is at once recognisable, although, as might be expected, a slight improvement in it had certainly manifested itself between March, 1780, and November, 1782. The "Abridged System of Geography" fills twenty-three quarto pages; the "Remark Book" contains no less than fifty-six. The latter is, of course, by far the most interesting.

The story of the connection of William IV. with the Navy (which began as early as July 12, 1778, and only ended exactly half a century later, when he was summarily removed from his post as Lord High Admiral) has yet to be written. We really know quite as little about his Naval career as we do of that of another Royal Lord High Admiral, James II. The best existing account of the earlier portion of his life at sea is to be found in Vol. LXVI. of "The Dictionary of National Biography." William was born in Buckingham Palace on August 21, 1765. At five he was made a Knight of the Thistle; before he was thirteen his father had arranged with Captain Robert Digby that he was to go to sea with him. In July, 1778, George III. wrote to the future Lord Hood asking him "to write down what clothes, necessaries, and books he ought to take," and informing him the boy had already "begun geometry," and that the King would "have an attention to forward him in whatever you may hint as proper to be done before he enters upon that glorious profession." In May, 1779, three months before his fourteenth birthday, he embarked (accompanied by his old tutor) on board the "Prince George," his anxious father informing Lord Hood that "he had sent an hair-trunk, two chests, and two cots, done up in one mat, to be delivered unto you for the use of my young sailor," and adding that "he flattered himself he would be pleased with the appearance of the boy, who neither wants resolution nor cheerfulness, which seem necessary ingredients for those who enter into that noble profession." The honest enthusiasm of the King over his sailor lad found an echo in the hearts of his subjects. Prince William Henry was the hero of the hour. Ballads like the one reproduced were circulated throughout the length and breadth of the country. This was a time of wars and rumours of wars, and the patriot Prince was depicted as saying:

> "The cause of my country I'll boldly espouse,
> To the sea I am wedded and give her my vows;
> With Rodney, with Digby, with Ross I will go
> And die, but I'll conquer each insolent foe."

Ten months later he wrote the title-page of the "Royal Remark Book," which, after the lapse of just a century and a quarter, has now come to light. He begins it with a description of Gibraltar and its garrison, and then passes on to a detailed account of "the occurrences which took place there from the arrival of a squadron of ships, under the command of Vice-Admiral Darby, destined for their relief, to their departure from that place, April 20th 1781." Later in that year he commences his "information of various kinds relative to New York and its Dependencies." He seems to have been in constant communication with officials of every description, and to have made excellent use of his opportunities. George III. followed his son's career with eager interest.

An engraving of Prince William by Bartolozzi was published at the very time he was making entries in his "Remark Book"; but far more interesting is that after the picture of Thomas Stothard, who was commissioned by King George to proceed to Portsmouth, and to paint a picture of Prince William on board the "Prince George." This picture, as is pointed out in Commander Robinson's "British Fleet," derives particular importance from the fact that it shows the first uniform ever authorised for midshipmen.

The "Remark Book," unfortunately, comes to an end before the time when Nelson joined the Prince during his West Indian cruise (1783), when he seems to have pleased everybody he met, and earned the unqualified good opinion of England's greatest Admiral.

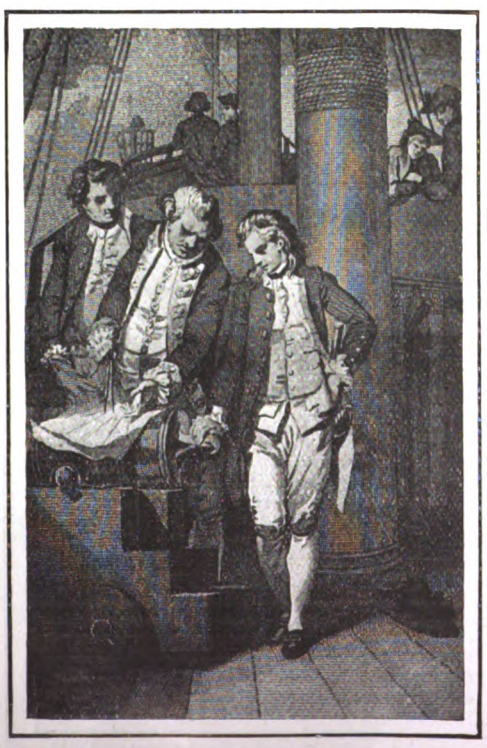
R. K. Y.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY

Afterwards William IV., as a midshipman. From an engraving by Bartolozzi,

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY

From the portrait by Gainsborough, engraved by Dupont.



PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY ON BOARD THE "PRINCE GEORGE."

After a drawing by Stothard, engraved by Collyer.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.
"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.
"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

FEATURES in 'FRYS'
April Issue; Now on Sale.

The
LORD CHIEF JUSTICE
AS AN OUTDOOR MAN.
With a Special Portrait.

SIR WALTER GILBEY:
SQUIRE AND SPORTSMAN.
By HAROLD BEGBIE.

SECRET of the JAPANESE ARMY
By F. A. McKENZIE.

GOLF FAULTS, Illustrated.
The fourth of the Series, by J. H. TAYLOR.
Illustrated by G. W. BELDAM.

C. B. FRY'S ## MAGAZINE.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524 Kensington.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641.
Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hote or à a Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excel ent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

DINARD.

HOTEL DES BAINS.—Modern comforts; electric light; moderate charges.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

GENOA.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL.—New. Quiet rooms. Apartments with bath. Gardens.

SAN REMO.

BENECKE & HEYWOOD, House and Estate Agents. Bankers. Full particulars of all Villas and Properties.
GRAND HOTEL DE NICE.—First-class Family Hotel.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT
Estd.] INSTITUTION [1835.
For Mutual Life Assurance.

Accumulated Fund over £5,900,000.
Paid in Claims ... £12,250,000.

Profits: These are divided every five years solely amongst the Assured; already divided to 1902, £6,160,000.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued, combining Life Assurance at minimum cost, with provision, or old age, and are singularly advantageous.

48, GRACECHURCH STREET, LONDON, E.C.
APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES INVITED.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.
"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

MR. S. F. EDGE recently carried out some careful tests of the petrol consumption of an 18-h.p. Napier, the results of which are of particular interest in view of the fact that in the forthcoming Tourist Trophy Race, for which his firm has entered two cars, the competitors will be restricted to an allowance of petrol calculated at the rate of 1-gal. per 25-miles of dry average road, the standard road taken for the purposes of the calculation being that from London to Oxford viâ Uxbridge, High Wycombe, and Stokenchurch. The net results of these experiments were as follows: Starting from the nineteenth milestone from London, 1-gal. of petrol was placed in the special tank fitted to the car for the purpose of the tests. Twenty-five and three-quarter miles were covered on this allowance, the car stopping at the second telegraph post short of the forty-fifth milestone. The ascent of Dashwood Hill was included in this run. Having filled up with another gallon of petrol, the car ran from there to the fifty-second milestone, just outside Oxford, turned, and reached a point half a mile past the thirty-fifth milestone from London, giving a distance of 24½-miles to the second gallon. The third run was from the thirty-fourth milestone to the thirtieth milestone and back to the seventh telegraph post short of the fifty-first milestone, the distance on this occasion being 24¾-miles. The fourth trial started from the forty-fifth milestone to the eighteenth out of London, the result being 27-miles dead on the gallon. The average of these four runs was 25½-miles to the gallon.

* * *

A few days later some further trials were carried out, the car being loaded on this occasion according to the conditions of the Tourist Trophy Race, that is, with two people on board and 300-lb. of ballast in the tonneau. Curiously enough, a better average was made than in the former trials. The first run was from the nineteenth milestone to three-quarters of a mile past the forty-third, a distance of 24¾-miles. On the second gallon the car covered 26-miles, from the forty-fourth stone from London to the fifty-second and back to the thirty-fourth. The third gave 25-miles, and the fourth 27-miles. The average of these four tests was therefore 25 11-16-miles to the gallon. These experiments are instructive, as showing that the allowance of petrol provided by the rules, which has in some quarters been subjected to rather adverse criticism as being too low, is amply sufficient for a well-built touring car of reasonable horse-power.

* * *

The Lanchester Engine Company have opened extensive showrooms and repair shops in London at 311, Oxford Street. Mr. Frank Lanchester himself will be in charge of the company's London depôt.

Messrs. Darracq and Co., following the lead of the majority of the great Continental firms, have just placed on the market a touring car of very high power. The engine is rated nominally at 70-h.p., the dimensions of the cylinder being 160-m.m. bore by 140-m.m. stroke. The machine, which we are informed can be regulated to run as quietly and as slowly on the top speed in traffic as the well-known 15-h.p. Darracq, is priced complete at £1,450.

* * *

In reference to the paper on "The Future of the Electric Automobile," recently read by Mr. Chambers before the Automobile Club, in which the lecturer maintained that electricity was the most suitable motive power for town carriages, Professor Hubert von Herkomer has written to the journal of the Club as follows: "As all experiences in motoring should be of use, I would like to say that I have done with my English 28—36-h.p. Daimler everything that could be desired in town, such as shopping, calling, theatre, and night work, with the greatest satisfaction. I have my adaptable side windows of celluloid, which have proved an immense success, enabling me to be completely sheltered from wind and rain, or to have the sides open, according to weather—each change easily effected by the occupant whilst the car is running. . . . I am firmly convinced that the petrol car can compete with the electric car in town, and do country work in addition."

Topical.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL FOX, CHIEF OFFICER OF THE LONDON SALVAGE CORPS
On his 40—45-h.p. Mercédès.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 and 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

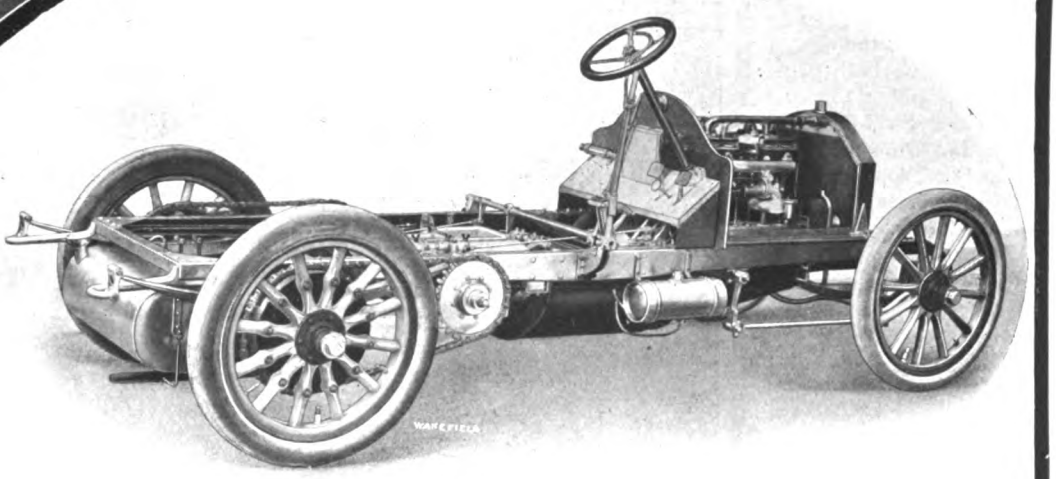
Brighton Depot: BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST MOTOR GARAGES, LTD., ST. JAMES'S STREET, BRIGHTON.



Sole Agents for the New Pirelli (Italian) Motor Tyres.

Telephone Nos.:
3171 GERRARD.
1849 GERRARD.

Telegraphic Address:
"FIATISM, LONDON."

CHASSIS OF 24-H.P. FIAT, 1905.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland

Fiat Motors, Ltd., 37 & 38, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Agents for Yorkshire, H. JOHNSON & Co., 28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.

Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire, PYTCHLEY AUTOCAR Co., Northampton.

7,000 MILES ON AN ARIEL

CAR, without a mechanical adjustment or fracture, with the exception of splitting of a ball in a thrust bearing of the back axle.

LOUGHTON, ESSEX, 19/3/05.

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your request for information about the running of my 15 h.p. Ariel, I beg to state that she completed 6,000 miles without a machinery mishap early in February.

At about 6,300 a ball broke in a thrust bearing of the back axle. It was necessary to renew this bearing, as it had been damaged by the consequent smashing.

The car has during the last week completed 7,000 miles, and had it not been for the splitting of a ball, would have maintained its record for non-stopping. So far it has exceeded my expectations for reliability and wear, and it looks like going on indefinitely.

Faithfully yours, A. BUTLER HARRIS
M.A., M.B., Oxon.

The Ariel Motor Co., Ltd.

Booklet, "Ariel Achievements," post free on request. Trials free.

The ARIEL MOTOR CO., Ltd., 127-130, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

TIME passes all too quickly, and before most of us are awake to the fact, Easter will be upon us, and find some of us, doubtless, still unprepared for the sunshine. How his bright, piercing gaze shows up our little weaknesses, not alone in our clothing, but, alas, the weak spots in our personal appearance. The dark, dingy days have hidden some of our blemishes, and with the kindly help of a becoming veil and a little powder, we have thought we really looked remarkably well. But, there, all that is at an end, unless we have taken the precaution of following out Dr. Dys's famous remedies, and have used his delightful Sachets de Beauté accompanied by the Sève Dermale. Then we need not fear the brightest sun, and can discard veils and powder, and "Look the whole world in the face, and fear not any man." Those who have neglected this, don't lose any time, but apply to Darsy, 54, Faubourg St. Honoré, Paris, and your money will be well spent, indeed.

Dressmakers are unusually busy this spring, I have been told, for the different style of corset now so much in vogue has rendered all their last season's toilettes, which might still have done service, almost valueless. The waist is so much longer and the floppy style of bodice quite out of date. The skirt also must be very differently cut to give the necessary flare at the hem. Muslins, both spotted and checked, simply but gracefully shaped, will be general favourites for the river season. These will be made in quaint old-fashioned form, taken from historical pictures. Black ribbon velvet will be much used to finish these off in the way of waist-belts and at the neck and wrists, and as trimmings to the soft picture hats, which will be worn with these gowns. Linens will also be worn, but do not lend themselves so well to the full skirts as the former.

A TASTEFUL COSTUME IN DUCK EGG GREEN CLOTH.
(Peter Robinson, Regent Street, W.)

I predict a very good time for the laundries this year, especially for those away from towns. I was astonished to see how general it is becoming for families to send their linen baskets by train sixty and even eighty miles, to be returned at the end of the week purified by sweet country air. How much more healthy such a practice must be than having your linen smoke cured, instead of dried by the sun and wind.

I saw some delightful designs in washing materials at Peter Robinson's last week, whose variety is really amazing in all goods. There were also some charming light-weight cloth costumes, that are just the very thing for present wear. One was a very smartly cut coat and skirt in fine faced cloth in pale blue-grey. The skirt had a ruching of the same coloured velvet round the full hem. The coat, which was short, had handsome revers and collar of guipure studded with velvet buttons to match the gown. A swathed belt of mousseline taffetas outlined the waist. The sleeves were vertically pleated from the shoulder to the elbow, and fell from there full to the wrist, which was finished by a ruching of velvet to correspond with the skirt. A small toque in grey satin straw, with aigrette of white osprey and velvet to match the costume, was worn with this. Another very elegant model was the one illustrated here, in superfine faced cloth of duck egg green. The skirt was trimmed at the foot with very handsome embroidery, with touches of gold here and there. The coat bodice had a corresponding band of this all round. Cavalier cuffs turned back with band of embroidery and Valenciennes lace to the wrists. The vest was of white cloth, with true lover's knots in gold and silk flowers interspersed in delicate tints. Several rows of narrow Valenciennes lace finished this coat. A large black straw hat completed this costume, and made a pleasing contrast.

The millinery at this house is particularly pretty and becoming, and many novelties are to be seen there, both in the shapes and variety of trimming. For silks, this firm is second to none; you can get them in all qualities, and all are equally reliable.

The demand for the corset belt, or rather let me call it "health support," for men, is rapidly on the increase, so I am told by good authority, and this will quite do away with the injurious braces. Men want support just as much as women, only they don't care to acknowledge that they wear "corsets," so they are now to be called "health supports." For evening dress they are invaluable, and give an elegant and slim appearance to even those who have any protuberance below the waistcoat. Man, of course, is not vain, or given to study his personal appearance, as the so-called "weaker vessel," woman, is supposed to do. Still, I have known just a few who are very particular over every item of their apparel, and who devote more time to it than a great many women. But, naturally, these must be the exceptions!

Do women dress for men's appreciation, or for that of their own sex? is the question so often asked, and so unsatisfactorily answered. I maintain a woman dresses well, from the foundation, throughout, for her own personal feelings. I don't deny that, where her affections are placed, she takes especial pride and pains to look her best; but it is her duty, as much to her husband as to herself, to make the very best of the charms given to her, and every woman has some personal charm, which careful study will bring out.

R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

HUMBER CYCLES.

"Beeston Humber is synonymous with absolutely the highest design, workmanship, and material possible in a modern bicycle."—The Cyclist.

— TWO SPEED GEARS — FITTED TO ALL MODELS.

Humber Cycles are supreme wherever they are known.

By Royal Warrant Cycle Manufacturers to H.M. King Edward VII.

and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales.

£8 : 8 : 0
— TO —
£18 : 18 : 0

Catalogue with full details sent free on application to

Humber Limited

WORKS:
BEESTON (NOTTS.) and COVENTRY . .

DEPOTS:
LONDON - 32 Holborn Viaduct
LIVERPOOL - 73 Bold Street
MANCHESTER - 5 Deansgate
BIRMINGHAM 4 Victoria Square
NOTTINGHAM - Grey Friargate
SOUTHAMPTON 27 London Road

Now on Sale at all Booksellers

THE

SPORTSMAN'S YEAR-BOOK.

Edited by A. WALLIS MYERS.

Price 3/6 net; post free, 3/10

The Globe.—"Messrs. George Newnes have removed the reproach that the sportsman who wanted to have in one handy volume a summary of the doings of the year has up to now been ignored. The editor's aim to provide a record of personal achievements in the realm of sport which should possess the value of authenticity has been fully achieved."

The Star.—"Perhaps the most attractive feature of the book is the bijou biographies of leading living personalities in our national sporting life."

The Sportsman.—"One can only feel surprised that a book of this sort has been so long delayed."

GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 3-12, Southampton Street Strand, London, W.C.

"A new and sumptuous work. . . . Will unquestionably be one of the handsomest art books recently published."—King, Navy & Army, April 8, 1905.

Parts I. & II. Now Ready, Price 7d. net each, of

THE

NATIONAL GALLERY OF BRITISH ART

(THE TATE GALLERY).

Containing exquisite Rembrandt photogravures and beautiful reproductions of the principal pictures.

With an Introduction by SIR CHARLES HOLROYD, Keeper of the Gallery.

CASSELL & CO., LTD., and all Booksellers.

ALL TOBACCO LEAF. A DELIGHTFUL WHIFF.

NO PAPER, NO DANGER, NO SMOKERS' THROAT TROUBLE.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGARETTES.

SOLD EVERYWHERE, 1D. EACH. 8/- PER 100, AND BY BEWLAY, 49, STRAND. ESTB. 1780.

The Flor de Dindigul Cigars are as excellent as the Cigarettes. Sold everywhere 3d. each, 5 for 1/-

Tatcho

Ever since I began to use "Tatcho," and learnt from experience its value, I have recommended it to my friends and acquaintances, and in no case has it failed to meet with unqualified approval.

Zetland House, Maidenhead.

Used "Tatcho" for a short time, the result being that the hair began to grow fast and thick.

" 18, Ashburn Place, Kensington, W.

I guarantee that this preparation is made according to the formulæ recommended by me, has found "Tatcho" very beneficial, the falling-off of hair having ceased. "Tatcho" is the nicest preparation for the hair.

Torr-Aluinn, Dunoon, N.B.

I find "Tatcho" excellent, and better than anything I have ever tried in the course of a long life.

High Croft, Winchester.

Tatcho

Chemists and Stores.

THEY TOUCH THE LIVER

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

FOR HEADACHE
DIZZINESS
BILIOUSNESS
TORPID LIVER
CONSTIPATION
SALLOW SKIN
THE COMPLEXION

SMALL PILL. DOSE. PRICE.

All Chemists, 7/11. Send for Booklet "Character Reading by Handwriting."

British Depot 46 Holborn Viaduct, London.

Be sure they are Genuine
Carter's Little Liver Pills, in blue and white wrapper.
Look for signature—

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

WITH the exception of the ducklings, all the dishes in to-day's menu could be eaten by anyone who for health's or conscience sake desires Lenten fare.

ŒUFS A L'ITALIENNE.

The eggs for this plat can be poached in the usual way, or else as balls, or the yolks only poached, this latter, in France especially, being a favourite way of preparing them. The eggs are broken as usual, then the yolks and whites separated, and the former slipped very gently, one at a time, into plenty of boiling acidulated water, in which they are poached for about two minutes, this being long enough to set them nicely. For the balls, either boiling acidulated water or deep smoking fat can be used, the method being the same with either. Have ready a deep pan three parts full of the fat or boiling water, and stir it with a long wooden skewer round and round till it resembles a miniature whirlpool, when an egg is broken into the very centre of this, and the whirling kept steadily going round and round till the egg is cooked, when it will be a round ball. Have ready the required number of squares of hot buttered toast, piled up with hot mushroom purée, put an egg (ball or poached to taste) on each, dust this with coarse freshly-ground black pepper, pour a brown Italienne sauce round, and serve very hot. For the sauce the following proportions must be adhered to, though a larger or smaller quantity can be prepared as required. Begin by boiling a gill (four tablespoonfuls) of light white wine till it is reduced to half (i.e., two tablespoonfuls), then stir in a teaspoonful of Lemco, two gills of rich Espagnole, which has been well reduced by rapid boiling, and finally a heaped tablespoonful of d'Uxelles mixture, and use at once. For this, which is one of the nicest garnishes and additions to sauces possible, especially for dressed eggs, fish au gratin, etc., mince very finely equal quantities of mushrooms—the stalks and peel answer very well for this purpose—and well washed and dried parsley, and half as much finely-minced shallot or chive as you have mushrooms. For instance, say you have a dessertspoonful each of minced mushrooms and parsley, take a large teaspoonful of minced chive or shallot for these quantities. The shallot or chive is then cooked in a little butter, with a dust of salt and pepper, on the stove for five minutes, stirring well all the time to prevent it sticking to the pan or burning; the parsley and mushrooms are then added and cooked with the shallot for another five minutes, when it is ready for use. Instead of a purée of mushrooms, a nicely-seasoned broiled mushroom can be placed under the eggs on the toast, while tomato or a plain Espagnole sauce can be used instead of the Italienne one, for a change.

TIMBALE DE SAUMON EN ASPIC.

For this, cut some cold cooked salmon into small cubes, sprinkle it with a little lemon juice and good fresh olive oil, and set aside to marinade for half-an-hour. Meantime, have ready a plain mould lined with aspic jelly, and half a pint of green mayonnaise, and the same quantity of just liquid aspic jelly. Mix these two latter together, and with some of it coat thinly the aspic-lined mould. When this inner lining is set, put in a layer of the salmon, cover this with a thin layer of the mixed aspic and mayonnaise, and repeat these till the mould is full, finishing with a layer of the stiffened mayonnaise. When set (and it is an improvement to stand the mould on ice or in the charged ice cave for an hour or so just before serving), turn out, arrange any nice salad to taste round, and arrange a garnish of halved hard-boiled eggs (preferably plovers or bantams) and prawns, as in the illustration. A salade cuite of little pea shapes of young potatoes, carrots, and turnips (boiled, of course), green peas, and tiny sprays of cooked cauliflower, all tossed together in an oil and vinegar dressing, is very good, and the garnish can then consist of turned olives stuffed with anchovy or crayfish butter. Again, some cooks omit the garnish of prawns, and instead decorate the mould itself with a star of crayfish tails arranged round a slice of truffle or hard-boiled egg white, at the bottom of the mould (which will be the top when turned out, of course), and a chain of crayfish tails or bodies and slices of truffle running round the sides of the mould, these being set, of course, with a few drops of aspic to the aspic lining when this is firm. Any nice fish can take the place of the salmon in this recipe, and the aspic stiffened mayonnaise can also be varied to taste.

AN APRIL LUNCHEON.

ŒUFS A L'ITALIENNE.

TIMBALE DE SAUMON EN ASPIC.

CANETONS AUX PETITS POIS.

POMMES NOUVELLES A LA MAITRE D'HOTEL.

MACARONI A L'ITALIENNE.

OMELET AU KIRSCH.

GELEE D'ORANGE.

CANETONS AUX PETITS POIS.

Roast the ducklings, unstuffed, and serve accompanied simply by plain brown gravy and young peas, which after boiling in slightly sweetened salted water with mint, are drained, and a little fresh butter stirred into them, with a dust of freshly-ground black pepper. The young potatoes, after being boiled or steamed till tender, but not broken, are tossed for a minute or two over the fire with a little butter, finely-minced parsley, and a squeeze of lemon juice, and then, just as they are to be served, sprinkle with a dusting of salt.

TIMBALE DE SAUMON EN ASPIC.

(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

MACARONI A L'ITALIENNE.

The fresher macaroni is the better, and, for this reason, it is hardly ever good in England except in those houses where the mistresses see for themselves that it is bought, a small quantity at a time, just as it is required, from one of the Italian paste shops in London, chiefly in the Soho quarter, which make a specialité of it, and addresses of which I can give those readers of THE KING who write for them. When you have it, on no account wash it nor put it on in cold water—both crimes of which many English cooks are guilty. Instead, have ready plenty of fast boiling water, slightly salted, throw the macaroni into this, and boil for from fifteen to twenty minutes, till, on being tested with a fork, it is found to be tender but still crisp (as macaroni cooked to a soft flabby pap, as it usually is here, is quite spoiled). The boiling must then be stopped instantly by a dash of cold water, the pan lifted off the fire, the macaroni thoroughly drained, and then returned to the hot dry pan. Now, for about three ounces of it, stir in by degrees about two ounces of grated Parmesan cheese, shaking this well amongst the macaroni as you add it by degrees, then add an ounce of butter, about a gill and a-half of good tomato purée, and a seasoning of salt and freshly-ground black pepper. If the tomato purée is omitted, and the cheese and butter only added to the macaroni, then it is served as macaroni à la Napolitaine, while, if to a velouté sauce (made with white chicken stock thickened with white roux) or a béchamel one, are added a couple of ounces (to the four or five gills of sauce) of grated cheese, and the cooked macaroni then mixed with this, you have macaroni à la Milanaise. Fresh macaroni, cooked as directed, only needs trying to become as popular in English households as in Continental ones, where much more care and intelligence are, however, brought to bear on household matters than is unfortunately (for our health and tempers) usual here.

OMELET AU KIRSCH.

For this, add a spoonful of Kirsch to the eggs as you mix them with the sugar, a teaspoonful of liqueur to every two eggs being a very usual allowance, then after making the omelet as usual, put some sieved cherry jam over the omelet just as you slide it out of the pan (as if an omelet is firm enough to turn out, as so many cookery books say, it is practically spoilt for a connoisseur, as above all it should be soft, not of a pancake-like firmness), pour round it two or three spoonfuls of Kirsch, and then set fire to this by putting a match to a teaspoonful of the hot Kirsch, and adding this blazing to the spirit round the omelet, so that it reaches the table blazing.

---

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

SAUMON A LA COLBERT (Zack).—Make what is known as a Court-bouillon by mixing a pint of good fish or vegetable stock with a gill of light white wine (or claret can be used instead, when it becomes a Court-bouillon au bleu), bring this to the boil in a roomy stewpan, and then slip into this as many nicely-trimmed fillets of salmon as the pan will hold without their overlapping. Bring the bouillon to the boil again, then draw the pan to the side of the stove and let it simmer gently, but steadily, for about ten minutes, the exact time depending on the thickness of the fillets. These are then lifted out and kept hot on a dish. Meantime thicken half a pint of the bouillon they were cooked in with an ounce or so of roux, tammy this sauce, then add a little finely-minced parsley, with a liaison of the yolk of an egg beaten up with an ounce of butter, and add finally a spoonful of the "Escoffier" brand anchovy or tarragon vinegar. The sauce must then be used immediately after these are added, pouring it round the fillets, and serving with seasoned watercress.

SALSIFIS A LA POULETTE (Yvette).—For this boil the salsify as usual in salted acidulated water, cutting it into even lengths, and serve it masked with poulette sauce. For this thicken a pint of chicken stock, well flavoured with mushrooms, with three ounces of white roux and cook for twenty minutes, season to taste with salt and white pepper, then put the saucepan into an outer one of boiling water, and add to it, when thus en bain marie, the strained yolks of two eggs which have been beaten up with an ounce of fresh butter. Some cooks finish this sauce with two tablespoonfuls of chopped button mushrooms which have been cooked separately in milk. When not wanted for masking two ounces of roux is sufficient for this sauce, and it is not so much reduced by cooking as in to-day's recipe.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

Feel Baby's Flesh

A Frame-Food Baby has very firm flesh, because Frame-Food is rich in the proteids, potash, and phosphorus from wheat.

These are the Flesh Formers.

Now most infant foods are too fattening. They make babies Flabby.

This is unhealthy, because too much fat uses up Reserve Strength. The best test is—Feel Baby's Flesh.

You can tell a Frame-Food Baby.

He has fine limbs.

Because Frame-Food feeds the bones as well as the flesh.

Mothers say so, and so do Medical Authorities. Write to-day for book containing mothers' letters and medical opinions. This book gives much important advice about the care of children and will be a REAL HELP to you as a mother.

We will forward a free sample tin if you will send a penny stamp but please mention this magazine. Or get a 16-oz. tin, price 1s., from your grocer or chemist to-day, and start at once to give your child firm flesh, firm legs, and a firm hold on life. Address—

FRAME-FOOD

The Famous Factory, Southfields, London, S.W.

L&C. HARDTMUTH'S KOH-I-NOOR

THE BEST PENCIL MADE.

IS YOUR PENCIL A KOH-I-NOOR OR IS IT ONLY AN IMITATION?

Everything that can make a good pencil is in every one manufactured by L. & C. HARDTMUTH — in labour, lead or wood. That is the reason of their sheer merit. They are economical, too—they last longer than several inferior pencils, and are more satisfactory all the time.

Of Stationers, Photographic Dealers, etc. Dainty Illustrated Booklet on Pencils, post free, from L. & C. Hardtmuth, 12, Golden Lane, London, E.C

HANSEN'S JUNKET TABLETS

A SEASONABLE CHANGE.

Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the strength of the next best. They make better junket than any other preparation and are always reliable. Housewives everywhere are adding this delicious dish to the day's menu. Be sure you get Hansen's.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depôt, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

TURKISH The only Genuine Turkish Cigarettes.

REGIE Cigarettes.

Of all tobacconists and Stores, and at 169, Piccadilly, London, W.

"Angelus" The World-Famed Piano-Player

AS PURCHASED BY ROYALTY AND THE WORLD'S GREATEST MUSICIANS.

The most perfect, artistic, and human-like. The most musicianly in its aim. The SIMPLICITY and COMPLETENESS of the "ANGELUS" EXPRESSION DEVICES are unique. DEFERRED PAYMENTS arranged if desired. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.

You are invited to call or write for Art Catalogue 41

J. HERBERT MARSHALL, Dept. 41, Angelus Hall, Regent House, 233, Regent St., LONDON, W.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,

117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S

The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA

The Most Nutritious and Economical.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

THE splendid programme of excursions arranged by the London and South Western Railway Company for the Easter holidays is well worth the consideration of any in doubt as to the best place to spend an enjoyable time. No difficulty will be experienced in making a selection from the numerous delightful resorts reached by this company on the Sunny South and South-west Coasts, the most lovely of which will be found between Southsea and Plymouth, and include the Isle of Wight, Bournemouth, Swanage, Weymouth, Lyme Regis, Seaton, Sidmouth, Budleigh Salterton, Exmouth, etc. To those who delight in the pleasures of a more rigorous climate, the well-known resorts of North Devon and Cornwall—Ilfracombe, Lynton and Lynmouth, Westward Ho, Clovelly, Bude, Camelford, Padstow, Newquay, etc., offer exceptional attractions, directly facing the Atlantic breezes, which impart a tone to the air unsurpassed for its health-giving and bracing qualities. Others who may prefer the quiet inland resorts will have an opportunity of visiting the most celebrated to be found in England, including Tavistock and Okehampton for the magnificent moorland scenes of Dartmoor), Salisbury, Wells, Bath, Gloucester, Cheltenham, Brockenhurst and Lyndhurst Road (for the sylvan scenery of the New Forest), Midhurst, etc. Many will be spending Easter on the continent, and for them the company has made ample arrangements. Fourteen-day excursion tickets will be issued from Waterloo to the French Coast for Paris, Normandy, Brittany, etc. The sea passage is only five hours in the most luxuriously fitted vessels in the Channel Service. Similar tickets will also be issued to the Channel Islands. Full particulars of the special arrangements for the Easter Holidays are given in the programme, to be obtained at any of the company's London offices and stations, or from Mr. Henry Holmes, superintendent of the line, Waterloo Station, S.E.

THE Midland Railway Easter Holiday arrangements include cheap excursions on Tuesday, April 18, to Londonderry. Wednesday, April 19, to Dublin, Cork, Killarney, Belfast, Londonderry, and Portrush. Thursday, April 20, to Londonderry, viâ Liverpool, by direct steamer, to Nottingham, Birmingham, Derby, Manchester, Blackburn, Oldham, Liverpool, Sheffield, Leeds, Scarborough, Barrow, and the Furness and Lake District, &c., returning the following Monday, Tuesday, or Friday; to Alnwick, Berwick, Newcastle, Carlisle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Greenock, Perth, Stirling, Aberdeen, Inverness, Nairn, Forres, Ballater, etc., returning Monday, April 24. Tickets will also be issued by the Scotch excursion at slightly more than the single ordinary third class fare for the double journey, available for returning on any day within eighteen days from and including date of issue. Cheap week-end tickets will be issued on Thursday, April 20, as well as on Friday and Saturday, April 21 and 22, from London (St. Pancras) to the principal seaside and inland holiday resorts, including the Peak district of Derbyshire, Morecambe, the Lake District, Yorkshire, the North-east Coast, Scotland, and other parts, available for return on any day up to and including Tuesday, April 25, except day of issue. Cheap week-end and day excursion tickets will also be issued to Southend-on-Sea during the Easter Holidays. Early issue of tickets.—To prevent inconvenience and crowding the booking offices at St. Pancras and Moorgate Street Stations will be open for the issue of tickets all day on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, April 19, 20, and 22, and tickets to all principal stations on the Midland Railway will also be issued beforehand at any of their City booking offices.

THE Great Northern Railway Company announce that, for the Easter holidays, cheap excursions will be run from London as follows: Thursday, April 20, for five or eighteen days, to Darlington, Newcastle, Berwick, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Helensburgh, Dumbarton, Stirling, Perth, Dundee, Aberdeen, Inverness, and other stations in Scotland. Thursday, April 20, for five, six, or nine days, to Cambridge, Huntingdon, Lynn, Norwich, Cromer, Yarmouth, Grimsby, Lincoln, Nottingham, Leicester, Derby, Sheffield, Huddersfield, Manchester, Liverpool, Doncaster, York, Hull, Harrogate, Scarboro', Whitby, Stockton, Hartlepool, Middlesbro', Durham, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Shields, Sunderland, Leeds, Bradford, Halifax, Blackburn, Bolton, Burnley, Bury, Rochdale, and other principal stations in the Norfolk, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Staffordshire, Lancashire, Yorkshire, and North Eastern Districts. Monday, April 24, for half, one, two, or five days, to Grantham and Nottingham; also for one, two, three, four, five, six, eight, or fifteen days, to Skegness, Sutton-on-Sea, and Mablethorpe, and for one day to St. Albans, Hertford, Harpenden, Luton, Dunstable, Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Peterboro'. The cheap week-end tickets usually issued each Friday and Saturday will be issued on Thursday, Good Friday (if train service admits), and Saturday, April 20, 21, and 22, available for return on any day up to and including Tuesday, April 25 (except date of issue). To prevent inconvenience from crowding at the company's principal terminal station, King's Cross, tickets, dated in advance will be issued at King's Cross (G.N.R.), Victoria (S.E. and C.), Ludgate Hill, Aldersgate, Farringdon, and suburban stations, and at the various ticket offices.

THE various variety entertainments in London are drawing crowded houses. At the Coliseum the programme is, perhaps, the best since the opening of that splendid house. Mme. Alice Esty, Miss Winifred Hare, and Miss Madge Lessing winning the heartiest applause in their respective scenas. The Port Arthur spectacle, too, is a remarkable example of modern stage effect. The Hippodrome performance is as bright and entertaining as ever, the inimitable Cinquevalli being one of the most important turns, and "America's Lads in Blue" exhibiting their amazing methods of up-to-date army tactics. The two-house a night show at the Lyceum is also being well patronised, and the operatic scenas, in which Mdlle. van Parys sings so charmingly, have become quite an established success. Miss Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas are excellent in their musical duologue "Her Birthday." All the variety theatres are preparing great attractions for the Easter holidays.

SPECIAL excursion tickets will be issued by the South Eastern and Chatham Railway during the Easter holidays to Paris, viâ Folkestone and Boulogne, by the service leaving Charing Cross at 2.20 p.m. on April 19, 20, 21, and 22. They will also be issued by the night mail service each evening from April 19 to 22, inclusive, viâ Dover and Calais, returning from Paris any day within fourteen days. Cheap return tickets to Boulogne and Calais, available for eight days, will be issued at Charing Cross from April 19 to 24, inclusive. The Casino at Boulogne will be open from April 21 to 25, inclusive. On Good Friday, Easter Sunday, and Easter Monday, special day excursions will be run. Cheap tickets to Brussels by the Calais, Boulogne, and Ostend routes will be issued from April 19 to 24, inclusive, available for eight days. Special cheap eight-day return tickets to Amsterdam, The Hague, and other Dutch towns, viâ Queenboro' and Flushing, will be issued from April 19 to 24, inclusive. Cheap eight-day return tickets to Ostend will be issued from April 19 to 24, inclusive. During the holidays the Continental services will run as usual. The home arrangements are as follows: Cheap return tickets to Tunbridge Wells, St. Leonards, Hastings, Bexhill, Canterbury, Whitstable, Herne Bay, Birchington, Westgate, Margate, Broadstairs, Ramsgate, Sandwich, Deal, Walmer, Dover, Folkestone, Shorncliffe, Hythe, Sandgate, and New Romney (Littlestone-on-Sea), will be issued from London by certain trains on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, April 20, 21, and 22, available to return on Tuesday, April 25, by any train (mail and boat expresses excepted). Cheap day excursions on Good Friday and Easter Monday will be run from the principal London stations to various South Coast resorts. Full particulars of the excursions, extension of time for certain return tickets, alterations in train services, etc., are given in the special holiday programme and bills.

THE Great Central Railway Company are offering ample and admirable facilities to those desirous of spending Easter at places reached by their comfortable and picturesque route. Excursions are announced from London (Marylebone), Woolwich, Greenwich, and Metropolitan stations, to all the principal towns and holiday resorts in the Midlands, North of England, North-East and North-West Coast watering-places, Douglas (Isle of Man), Scotland, and Ireland. The information has ben concisely tabulated in the form of an A.B.C. programme, giving the times of starting, fares, dates and times of return, etc., for any station (alphabetically arranged), which can be easily seen at a glance. Copies of this lucid guide can be obtained free at Marylebone Station or any of the company's town offices or agencies. We also notice that the Great Central Company have issued an Easter souvenir card of an attractive nature, depicting the harbingers of spring in the form of primroses and violets, and skilfully drawing attention to their Easter facilities, which is a distinct departure in railway advertising.

THE Caledonian and London and North Western Railways have a reputation for accuracy and attention to detail which is unsurpassed, and the care which has been expended upon the preparation of their new guide-books will do much to enhance that reputation. "Through England and Scotland" and "Through Scotland," both written by Mr. George Eyre-Todd are books which are not merely guides to interesting sites, they are well-written histories, full of information which the traveller may not note as he journeys, but which may be reperused and marked in the privacy of the study, when the actual journeying is at an end, and it only rests to go over the same ground again and again in imagination. In this the guide-books will greatly assist, and even for those who have never been privileged to visit one half the places described, the literary charm and telling descriptive power of Mr. Eyre-Todd will make these books well-thumbed denizens of the library bookshelves.

AT Easter it is now quite the fashion to flit across the Channel to Dieppe, Rouen, or Paris, where, on foreign soil, amidst unfamiliar scenery and surroundings, it is not difficult to dismiss from the mind all business worries, and to enable the journey to be performed economically the Brighton Railway Company have arranged to run a special fourteen day excursion viâ the Newhaven-Dieppe Royal Mail Route, through the charming scenery of Normandy and the Valley of the Seine. The tickets will be issued on Thursday, April 20, by the morning express service and by a special afternoon service, also by the express night service on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, April 19 to 22. Special cheap return tickets to Dieppe will be issued on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, April 20 to 24, available for return on any day up to and including the following Tuesday. At Dieppe the Casino will be open for the holidays.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL.
The following Plays will be given during Shakespeare's Birth Week, April 24th to April 29th, inclusive. Monday, RICHARD II. Tuesday, THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR. Wednesday Matinee, RICHARD II. Wednesday Evening, TWELFTH NIGHT. Thursday, HAMLET. Friday, MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING. Saturday Evening, JULIUS CÆSAR.
Box Office (Mr. Watts) open 10 to 10. HIS MAJESTY'S.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee Saturday next at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. George Edwardes' Season.
Every Evening at 8.15.
A New Musical Play entitled
LADY MADCAP.
By Paul Rubens and N. Newnham-Davis.
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.15.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee: MR. FREDERICK HARRISON.
Managers: MR. FREDERICK HARRISON and MR. CYRIL MAUDE.
To-night and Every Evening at 9.20.
EVERYBODY'S SECRET.
Preceded at 8.25 (for a limited number of performances) by
A CASE OF ARSON.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.25.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: OTHO STUART.
Every Evening at 8.
Saturday Matinee, at 2.
HAMLET.
H. B. Irving, Oscar Asche, Lily Brayton, etc,
Every Wednesday, and Easter Monday, at 2.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
Telephone 2645 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh,
To-night, at 8.30, in
THE WALLS OF JERICHO,
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.
Tita Brand's Season.
Every Evening except Good Friday.
EVERYMAN.
Matinees April 17th, 19th, and 22nd, at 3.
Box Office now open, 10 to 10.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night and Every Evening at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. and S. GATTI and CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening, at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15

SAVOY. DU BARRI.
Sole Lessee: Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Managers: Mr. GILBERT HARE and Mrs. BROWN-POTTER.
To-night at 8.15, and Every Evening,
Christopher St. John's Adaptation of
"DU BARRI,"
By Jean Richepin.
Matinee every Thursday at 2.15.
'Phone, 2602 Gerrard.

THE LYCEUM. Twice Nightly, at 6.30 and 9.
Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2.30.
HIGH-CLASS VARIETIES.
Popular prices 6d. to 1½ guineas. Children half price.
Manager Director, THOMAS BARRASFORD.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Magnificent Varieties.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Captain Malcolm Kincaid Smith | 95 |
| The March of Events | 96 |
| On the Links | 102 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 107 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 108 |
| The Parisians of Paris: The Poor and their Dogs | 110 |
| Under the Burgee | 112 |
| Yachts of the Year | 113 |
| The Ladies' Clubs of London— | |
| III.—The Lyceum Club | 114 |
| Plays and Players | 116, 117 |
| The Traveller— | |
| By West Coast Royal Mail Route to Scotland | 118 |
| "La Paix Perpétuelle" | 120 |
| The Racing Season | 122 |
| The Services | 124 |
| Literary Notes | viii. |
| The Modern Cicerone | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book— | |
| Engraved Portraits of William Shakespeare | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Paris Restaurants | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Autograph letter of Admiral Byng.—821, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph letter of Mrs. Thrale or Henry Thrale, dated from Southwark.—822, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Quin's Jest Book.—156, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, Vols. IV. and V.—158, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Gentleman's Magazine for 1865, Vol. II. £1 offered.—159, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Theatre, small 8vo, 1791 Edition, Vol. III.—160, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Song or Music Books before 1783.—161, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Collection of Public Thanksgiving Prayers from 1588.—162, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Army List, 1815 and 1816.—163, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Southwark views before 1750.—240, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picture of Showell's Meeting House, Southwark.—241, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Contemporary engraved portrait of Henry Thrale.—242, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures or rare prints relating to Selina, Countess of Huntingdon.—243, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Portrait of Shakespeare by Droeshout.—244, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Small musical portrait of glee composers for extra illustration.—245, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Pictures on glass dealing with Naval subjects.—744, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any Valentines before 1815.—745, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Specimen of French Masonic Certificates during the First Empire.—746, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Scarce Arundels, Angelico's Annunciation, Limia St. Catherine, Adoration Trinity, Giorgione, Primavera, Venus rising, etc.—219A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Grand Oil Painting, Venus and Cupid, 69×54. Landscape, Wilson, R.A. Drawings by Alken, Herring, set by Solomon.—220A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Nalte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

New Six Shilling Novels. Price 1s. 6d. and 2s. each. List on application.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE (PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,

17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Charmingly situated Seaside on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Fishing and Golfing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guide sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

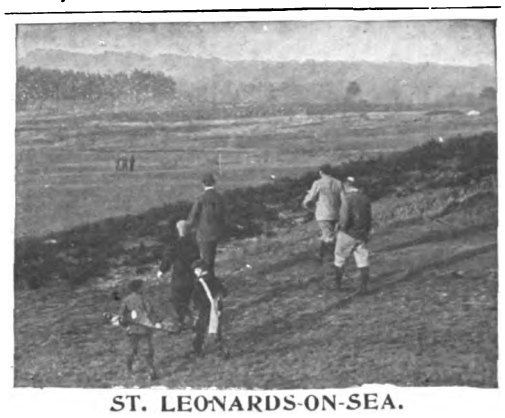
The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.



ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. COX, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL

LOVELY COLOURS,
BRILLIANT GLOSS.

A Necessity in Every Household during the Spring Cleaning season.

SPECIAL ENAMEL FOR BATHS
to stand Hot Water.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

The Coffee of the Epicure.

ASTOUNDING OFFER.
We will send post free, 3d.,
A PACKET
of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.
THE METATA AGENTS,
17k, Devonshire Square,
LONDON, E.C.

| Price per lb. | Samples post free |
|---|---|
| 2/4 | 8d. |
| 1/10 | 6d. |
| 1/6 | 4d. |

ROUBLE COFFEE

HUMPHREYS & CROOK

Established over 60 Years.

Naval, Military & Sporting Tailors.

OPPOSITE THE CARLTON. 3, Haymarket, LONDON.

HOMESPUN GOLF SUITS

Equipment Department :
3, SUFFOLK STREET, PALL MALL.

Specialite : CROOK'S PATENT SLEEPING VALISE.
A hold-all in transport and a tent in camp.

"Luxury's Necessity."

THRONE

The Royal Toilet Soap.

FRAGRANTLY PERFUMED.

DELICIOUSLY EMOLLIENT.

4d. per Tablet, 10½d. per 3-Tab. Box.
Of all Chemists and Stores.

EDWARD COOK & CO., LTD., The Soap Specialists, LONDON, E.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD
AND
CURES INDIGESTION,
CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,
June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE
sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper, by the Sole Proprietors,
ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

Digitized by Google

LA PAIX PERPÉTUELLE.

By DAVID HANNAY.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 429. SATURDAY, APRIL 22nd, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Elliott and Fry.

CAPTAIN MALCOLM KINCAID-SMITH

Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Stratford-on-Avon Division of Warwickshire.

(See page 107.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 429. Saturday, April 22, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND ALGIERS.—The King and Queen have chosen the best possible time of the year to visit Algiers, for it is flower-time in the "great North African sun garden," as an enthusiastic visitor once described Algeria. From February to May the land is filled with genial warmth and sunshine and the odours of countless almond trees and wild flowers. In Algiers itself it is the season, and the streets and squares have been thronged for weeks past with people of every nation. The principal meeting place in the city is the Place Du Gouvernement, bordered on three sides by double rows of plane trees, and on the fourth by the Djemaâ-el Djedid, or New Mosque, erected in 1660 by a Genoese architect, who foolishly designed the building in the form of a Greek cross. This was only discovered when the building was complete, and the unfortunate architect was immediately condemned to death by the reigning Dey. In the Mosque is preserved a most magnificently illuminated copy of the Koran. The King and Queen have certainly seen Algiers at its best, and the enthusiastic welcome accorded them showed that the inhabitants and visitors appreciated the honour they had received.

THE KAISER IN SICILY.—This week the Kaiser passes from Greece to Sicily, from Corfu to Taormina, and the little town nestling at the foot of Etna has become a place of international importance. But Taormina is little likely to have its head turned by the honour, for this is by no means the first time it has welcomed a Royal and Imperial visitor, and it has a history beside which the great kingdoms of the world appear as growths of a day. Founded in the fourth century B.C., it was fought for and conquered alternately by Greeks, Romans, Carthagenians, and Syracusans, not to mention the more modern Normans and Neapolitans. And one of its wonders is the huge Greek amphitheatre, despoiled, according to official accounts, by the Saracens, but, according to local tradition, by a Duca di San Stefano, who stole its architectural beauties to adorn his palace. Even the hotels in Taormina have pasts, and one stands to-day for the reception of the blatant millionaire as it has stood these many hundred years for the reception of those, weary of the turmoil and strife of the world without, who came to seek shelter and peace in the enfolding arms of a monastery. To-day the moneyed traveller sleeps in the little cell that once sheltered a pious monk, and frivolous youths and maidens play tennis on the century old turf where of yore the saintly superiors took their decorous evening exercise. But nothing can quite modernise Taormina, not even touring Royalty.

Advance Agency.

A COSTLY VASE.

A small piece of Sevres ware, 16¾-in. in height, was sold at Christie's last week for £4,200. The companion to this valuable objet de vertu is in the Royal collection at Buckingham Palace.

Reproduced by permission of Messrs. R. W. Partridge, St. James's Street, S.W.

MR. CHOATE AND THE SECRETARY.—Now that Mr. Joseph Choate is leaving us the newspapers are reviving all the stories about him (and they are many) that can be remembered. But one, which shows the famous American Ambassador at his very best as a wit, has escaped attention up to the present. He had occasion once, some few years ago, to call upon the heads of one of the departments in Washington upon a matter of business. The Secretary was out, but a new private secretary, who literally "knew not Joseph," received the visitor in the haughty and bored manner common to great men's private secretaries the world over. "Can you tell me," asked Mr. Choate in his blandest manner, "when the Secretary will return?" "Really," was the reply, "really, I have no idea." Mr. Choate looked him up and down gently for half a minute, and remarked, "No, I didn't think so. You look it."

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

THE FUNERAL OF GENERAL LORD CHELMSFORD.

The late Lord Chelmsford was buried at Brompton Cemetery last week with full Military honours. The first part of the service was held at St. Jude's Church, Collingham Place, of which Lord Chelmsford had been a churchwarden for a quarter of a century, and subsequently the coffin was conveyed on a gun-carriage to the burial ground, where it was carried to the grave by twelve non-commissioned officers of the 2nd Life Guards.

SHAKESPEARE AND SUBURBIA.—Mr. Bernard Shaw has been having his usual tilt at the Shakespearian students, and in the course of a lecture last week remarked that Shakespeare came to town, and wrote a play, "quite a clever Bedford Park sort of play." Unfortunately for the ignorant, Mr. Shaw omitted to define precisely what he meant by a Bedford Park sort of play, but the complementary adjective "clever" has no doubt pleased the denizens of Chiswick and its purlieus. It is curious how each suburb of London has its distinctive individuality. Hampstead has been described as the place where the rich Jews go to, Upper Tooting, for some reason unknown, has become a synonym for snobbishness, Chelsea is the home of art, and what passes nowadays for Bohemia, and we all of us know Mr. Gilbert's bon mot in "Patience," apropos of the Guardsman in his scarlet uniform, "Primary colours! Oh! South Kensington." But it has remained for Mr. Shaw to identify clever play-writing with Bedford Park. Possibly the authorities of his "trade union" may be able to extort from him an explanation (if there be one) of his enigmatical remark. But in the meantime Shakespearian revivals continue to flourish.

Abmiacar.

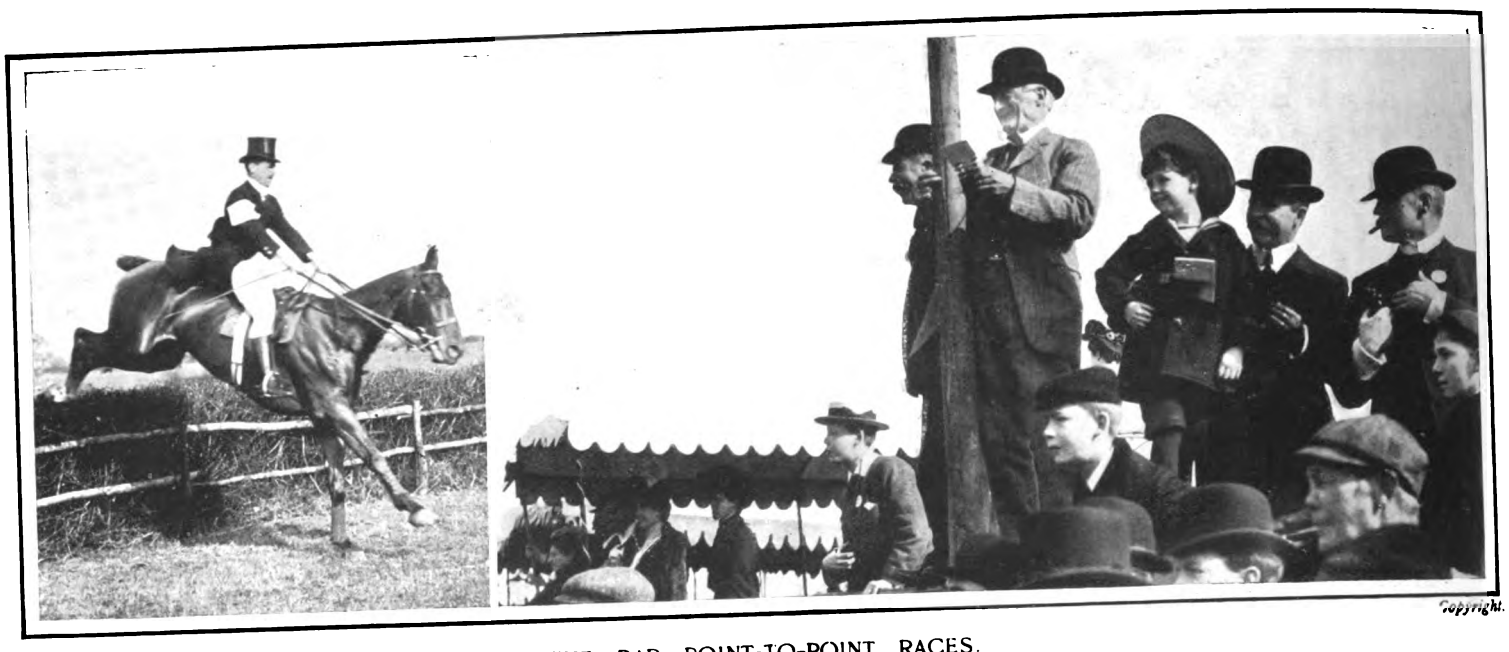
THE KAISER AND THE KING OF ITALY.

The visits which the German Emperor has been paying in the Mediterranean naturally included a meeting with the King of Italy, and the two sovereigns inspected the new Italian battle-ship "Regina Margherita" at Naples. When leaving Naples the Kaiser sent presents to the King of Italy's children, the Princesses Yolanda and Mafalda, to whom, as is well known, King Victor Emmanuel is devotedly attached.

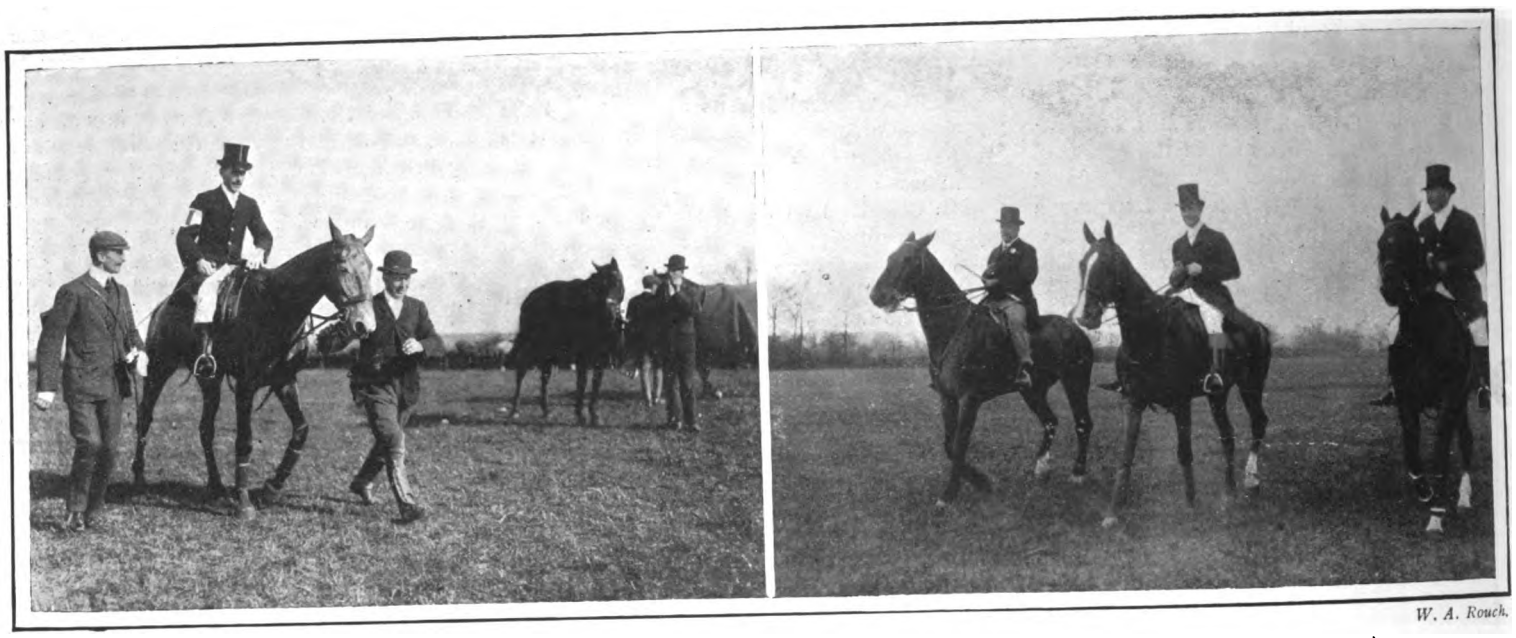
Digitized by Google



Copyright.

THE BAR POINT-TO-POINT RACES.

Mr. H. G. Farrant winning the Heavy-Weight Race on Alcestis. The Hon. Mr. Justice Grantham, judge.



W. A. Rouch.

THE ABBESS (OWNER UP)

Winner of Light-Weight Race.

MR. JUSTICE BUCKNILL (STARTER)

With two of the field.

Lafayette. W. A. Rouch

THE KILDARE AND NATIONAL HUNT MEETING.

The scene in the Paddock, Punchestown. Irish Grand Military—The stone wall.

Digitized by Google

Bolak

THE PRESENTATION OF THE CUP.

Mrs. Kenneth Kinnaird handing the cup to the Aston Villa captain, Howard Spencer.

Topical

THE CHAMPION OF THE SEA.

The motor-boat "Panhard," which won the principal event in the races at Monaco, and sank while running in a handicap race the next day. Nearly all the contestants have received some damage, and four have been lost.

Russell

THE CUP FINAL AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

Before over 100,000 spectators Aston Villa last Saturday registered their fourth victory in the struggle for the possession of the Football Association Cup. The two goals which were scored for them both came from the toe of Hampton. Our illustration shows the play which ensued upon a corner taken by Hall near the end of the first half.

Dark.

AN ASSAULT-AT-ARMS AT THE CAXTON HALL.

Some of the competitors at the competition held under the auspices of the Amateur Fencing Association last week—Mr. Newton-Robinson, who took over the English team to Paris last year, Miss Evelyn Bear, and M. Joseph Renaud, in whose honour the assault-at-arms was held.

Digitized by Google

THE TABBY CAT.—We have been accustomed to look on the tabby cat as quite an ordinary thing. Its very name is a synonym for commonness, and yet if the authorities are to be believed, "tabby" is a word which we have derived from a very romantic source. Long years ago, in the days before even the adventures so graphically related in the Arabian Nights Entertainments, there lived in the neighbourhood of Baghdad a certain Prince Attab, who, forestalling the princelings of to-day, became the head of a large business, and this large business was the manufacture of a special kind of watered silk, costly, and therefore much sought after by the incroyables of the day. His business grew, so that at last the quarter of Baghdad where the silk was manufactured came to be called Attab, and the silk took its name from him also. Anyway, it is quite certain, to come down to later days, that Pepys, when he wrote of his "false taby wastecoate with gold lace" had not in his mind an imitation catskin garment, nor had Herrick the feline tribe in his mind when he wrote "Let others look for pearl and gold, Tissues and tabbies manifold." Tabbie then meant watered silk, and from their markings, no doubt, the cats were named after it.

THE COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Who among the many thousands of people who have been discussing the Budget and the Chancellor of the Exchequer during the past few days, realise that the inception of this office dates back to the Conquest? The Court of Exchequer took its name from the little squares marked on the table around which it sat to transact the financial business of the Crown, and it held two full sessions in the year, at Easter and Michaelmas, whence comes, no doubt, the fact that our financial year closes in March. The accounts of the Court were kept by the ancient method of "tallies," little wooden sticks inscribed with the sum paid, and the name and address of the payee, and divided equally, the one part being retained by the Court and the other given as receipt. This system remained in vogue till 1782. To-day we speak of the Budget being introduced. Formerly, it was always "opened," budget being a diminutive of the word budge, a wallet, and it has no connection with the similar sounding word budge, to move. And to-day, though he has hundreds of millions to deal with, the Chancellor of the Exchequer only speaks for a little more than an hour; formerly he held the floor for over five hours.

LADY HERBERT. Thomson.

Who was married to Lord Herbert, heir of the Earl of Pembroke, in 1904. Lady Herbert is the daughter of the late Lord Alexander Paget, son of the second Marquess of Anglesey.

THE MEMBER FOR EGREMONT.—Colonel J. R. Bain, who was taken suddenly ill in the House of Commons last week, is largely interested in the iron and coal industries of Cumberland. He has represented the Egremont Division of the county in the Conservative interest since 1900, when he succeeded Mr. Duncombe. The family is of Scottish origin, Colonel Bain's grandfather having been Lord Provost of Glasgow. His father was Sir James Bain, who migrated to Cumberland on leasing the Whitehaven Collieries from Lord Lonsdale. Colonel Bain is married to a daughter of Sir George Burton, Chief Justice of Ontario, one of the soundest and ablest lawyers in the Dominion. He was born in England, the second son of the late Admiral G. G Burton. Mrs. Bain was married in 1886.

SOME QUEER CUP TIES.—The final match for the blue riband of the Association football world has occasionally been played under much worse meteorological conditions than those which obtained last Saturday. Indeed, matches have more than once been played in a thick mist, and the ridiculous position has arisen of a goal being shot quite unknown to anyone on the ground, including the man who had scored it! On one occasion, too, in 1876, in a final tie between the Old Etonians and the Wanderers, what should have been the deciding goal of the match was disallowed, because the goal-posts, being very insecure, had been knocked over in the scrimmage which led up to the goal being shot. Snow has been another spoil sport, and so seriously did it handicap the players in the semi-final between West Bromwich Albion and Small Heath Alliance in 1886, that the spectators, becoming weary of the slow progress of the game, started a snowball fight on their own account, and were soon swarming all over the ground.

THE CROWN AND POLITICS.—In view of the recent correspondence upon the subject of the alleged support which King Edward is inclined to give to the Conservative Party, we may be allowed to recall a story, no doubt long since forgotten, about Queen Victoria and the Whigs. It was quite early in her reign, and the High Church clergy were imbued with the idea that her Majesty was too favourably disposed to the Whig Party, who were then in power. One of these clergymen, Mr. Hook, who afterwards became Dean of Chichester, was preaching before the Royal family at the Chapel Royal, St. James's, one sultry Sunday in July, and in one of the strongest passages of his sermon he said, "the Church will endure, let what will happen to the Throne." After the service the Queen was asked if she had not found the church very hot." I did," she replied, "and the sermon was hot, too."

Digitized by Google

THE SPEAKER'S VOTE.—Those who regard the Speaker of the House of Commons merely as a sort of form-master, put up to superintend the proceedings in the House, and to see that the dear "boys" who represent the views of the electorate do not call each other rude names or speak out of their turn, must have been surprised to read the other morning that it was by the Speaker's casting vote that the question of tramways over the bridges was referred to a committee for further consideration. But the Speaker's casting vote has been exercised occasionally in much more dramatic moments and on more vital questions. One recalls immediately the fierce debate on the impeachment of Lord Melville in 1805, when 216 members voted for and 216 against him. He was a personal friend of Pitt, under whom he had held numerous high offices, including that of Lord President of the Court of Session, and it took Mr. Speaker Abbott ten minutes to make up his mind to give his vote for the impeachment. Melville's doom practically finished the career of Pitt, and it is recorded that tears coursed down his cheeks, only half hidden from the curious spectators by a group of sympathetic friends, and the hat which he had hastily crushed down over his brow.

COLONEL MONEY ENGAGED.—Colonel C. H. Money, R.M.L.I., is engaged to Mrs. O. Thompson, a young Australian widow. The son of an officer in the Madras Cavalry, he has the blood of the first Lord Exmouth in his veins, and his great-grandfather was Admiral Halsted. He has a fine record of service in the Royal Marines, beginning with the Zulu War, where the Navy had to come to the aid of the Army, as it very often has done. In the Egyptian War he took part in the engagement at Port Said, and in all the actions which led up to Tel-el-Kebir. At Kassassin he captured two guns, a gallant feat which was mentioned in despatches. Colonel Money also served in the South African War, in which he won the C.B. From 1897 to 1899 he was senior officer of the Marines in the Mediterranean Fleet.

BRIDGING THE ZAMBESI.—If we were an imaginative race, the bridging of the Zambesi would stir us to our depths. But seeing that we are exactly the reverse, we take it as a matter of course. Nevertheless, it is a fine monument to the genius of the race. There, if anywhere, is England, her mark. A while ago a foreigner said that it was in little things Englishmen failed. Give them something big, and they would carry it through without a hitch. The bridging of the Zambesi is an instance. Not only is it a link in the Cape-to-Cairo Railway, one of the mightiest conceptions of these later days, but it is a remarkable feat of engineering. For the Victoria Falls are a greater and grander Niagara. With this achievement the names of Cecil Rhodes, the originator, and Sir Charles Metcalfe will be for ever associated.

A DISTINGUISHED NEW ZEALANDER.—Captain Sir William Russell-Russell, the guest of the evening at the Royal Navy Club banquet on April 11, is a New Zealander of the very best type. His father, a colonel in the 58th Regiment, fought in the Maori War, and, when it ended, settled in the Hawkes Bay Province. The son was sent to England for his education, and served for a time in the Army. On his return home he devoted himself to sheep-farming, in which he found a mine of wealth. Flaxmere, the largest of his estates in Hawkes Bay, is one of the finest runs in the Colony. In politics he followed in the steps of his father, who was Minister for Native Affairs in the Stafford Ministry. He has held Cabinet rank in two Governments, and for several years filled the thankless post of Leader of the Opposition, with Mr. Seddon as head of the Government. Sir William is a keen sportsman, as well as a polished and cultivated gentleman.

THE COUNTESS OF PEMBROKE Alice Hughes.

Wife of the present Earl and sister of Rear-Admiral the Hon. Hedworth Lambton. The Pembroke Earldom is one of the oldest in the Peerage, dating back to a feudal tenure of the days of Edward I.

DEATH OF A CANADIAN NAVAL OFFICER.—Captain E. B. Van Koughnet, R.N., who died suddenly in the "Mongolia," and was taken to Gibraltar for burial, belonged to an old Canadian family. The founder, a scion of a noble Dutch house, went to the New World in 1782, since when his descendants have made their mark in Canadian history. The late Captain Van Koughnet's father was one of Sir John Macdonald's closest friends and colleagues, and was himself a lawyer and politician of some eminence. His son entered the Navy in 1863. Three years later he served on the Canadian Lakes during the Fenian Raids, one incident of which was his rescue of three men who were in danger of being drowned. For this he was awarded the medal of the Royal Humane Society. Captain Van Koughnet was flag-lieutenant under Earl Clanwilliam on the North American Station, and, under Lord Alcester, in the "Alexandra." In the Soudan he served with the Naval Brigade, and was severely wounded at the relief of Sir Charles Wilson. At Durban he was so successful as Transport Officer that his services were mentioned in despatches by Sir Redvers Buller. Like many other distinguished Colonials, Captain Van Koughnet married a peer's daughter, Lady Jane Alexander, third daughter of the Earl of Caledon.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE LADIES' WEEK AT RANELAGH.

THE gathering of ladies at Ranelagh (more fully described in another column by a lady correspondent) has for several years now become one of the chief golfing events of the year. The entry last week was considerably over 200, and it says a great deal for the administrative management of Miss Pearson and the other officials associated with her in the government of the Ladies' Golf Union that the meeting passed off with so much brilliant success. The ladies were also indebted to the authorities of the Ranelagh Club, and particularly to Mr. J. H. Neat, the secretary, for the whole-hearted efforts put forth to make the competitors feel comfortably at home. Miss May Hezlet carried off the playing honours of the meeting by her very fine scratch score of 76.

* * *

The annual match between the House of Commons and the Ranelagh Club took place in fine weather on Saturday, and resulted in a tie, the scoring being 3½ points each in the singles, with a victory in the afternoon for the House of Commons in the foursomes by 3 points to 1½. Among those who won their matches in the morning were Mr. Balfour, Mr. Wanklyn, and Mr. Osmond Williams. On the Ranelagh side Mr. J. H. Neat halved his match with Mr. H. W. Forster, M.P., and Mr. Montrose Cloete, Mr. R. H. Pringle, and Mr. Jonson won their matches against Mr. Lyttelton, Mr. Marshall Hall, and Lord Dunedin, the Lord President of the Court of Session, and better known to the public as Mr. Graham Murray.

MISS MAY HEZLET, THE WINNER OF BOTH SCRATCH TROPHIES LAST WEEK, AND WHO ON THURSDAY RECORDED THE FINE SCORE OF 76.

A team of Scottish golfers from Luffness are making a short tour in England to play a series of matches with clubs in the North. They began with a match on Saturday against a strong team of the Lytham and St. Anne's Club, among whose players were Mr. John Ball and Mr. Hilton. Against those two renowned players Luffness pitted Mr. Robertson-Durham and Mr. Angus Macdonald, but the only victory on the Luffness side was recorded by Mr. Kirkwood, who won his match against Mr. Wilson, while Mr. Currie halved his match against Mr. E. G. Terry. The Lytham and St. Anne's Club won on the day's play by 12½ matches to 1½.

* * *

The Rochford Club celebrated the extension of its golf course by inaugurating a professional competition on Saturday, in which Jack White, the Open Champion, Vardon, Braid, and A. H. Toogood of Chingford were competitors. The event was mainly noteworthy for the brilliant game played by Toogood, who, though well known to be capable of playing a champion game, has not yet had the good fortune to win the celebrity of his powerful professional rivals. On Saturday, however, he won the competition by one fine round of 72, made up of 37 out and 35 home. He led by 3 strokes from Vardon, who was 75, while Braid and White were each 76. In the afternoon, what is described as an International four-ball foursome was played, Toogood and Vardon opposing Braid and White. Although the Scotsmen started well by winning the first hole, and the match being square at the turn homewards, Toogood and Vardon won the match by 3 and 2 to play. Golfers will wish that Toogood may sustain this very excellent form during the remainder of the season, and that he may have a later opportunity of forcing his way into, and holding his place in, the front rank of professional golf.

* * *

The new course of the Farnham Golf Club was also opened last week by a professional tournament, in which the players were Braid, Vardon, White, and Tom Vardon. Vardon

MRS. KITCAT AND MRS. FRITZ WINTERBOTTOM AT THE TEE IN THE PRETTIEST CORNER OF THE LINKS.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

and Braid played brilliant golf, and tied with a fine score of 75, while Tom Vardon was 78, and White, owing to a series of misfortunes, took 87. The two brothers played against Braid and White in the afternoon, and after a very close match the four-ball foursome was halved.

* * *

The Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society played a match last week against the Lytham and St. Anne's Club, twelve a side. It was the opening of the society's match tour, and they played so well that they beat the strong Lytham and St. Anne's side by 8 matches to 4 in the singles, and 4 matches to 2 in the foursomes. Mr. Hoffmann, Mr. J. L. Low, and Mr. Croome won their matches against Messrs. Ball, Hilton, and Boyd, while Mr. Graham and Mr. Mair halved with Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Brickhill.

* * *

At the present time there is a good deal of activity among golfers in Italy. The principal competition lately has been for the Italy Cup, which carries with it the title of being Amateur Champion of Italy. Until last week the holder was Mr. F. E. Dubs, but in the final round for the trophy at Florence last week victory was secured by the Hon. Denys Scott, of the Royal North Devon Club, who beat Mr. F. R. Scovel, an American player, by 4 and 3 to play. In the competition played for the trophy presented by Mr. Lovell to the Rome Golf Club, Mr. R. Hamilton, a member of the British Embassy, won with a net score of 83, Captain Barnes being second with 87.

* * *

Everyone has heard of the large annual golf meeting held at Ranelagh for ladies. It is a spring festival, and thither gather golfers from all the different greens in the kingdom. This year the entry was unusually large, 244 names were received, and until late on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons competitors crowded the first tee. Premier honours on both days fell to Miss May Hezlet, ex-champion, with good scratch scores of 80 and 76, while the handicap prizes were carried off by Miss Gardner (Eastbourne), Miss Hotham (captain of Woking), Mrs. Lister, and Miss Oliver. The International Cup, presented by the members of the Ranelagh Club for the best aggregate of eight scores (four on each day), was taken by Ireland with a total of 689, England being three strokes behind, and Scotland third with 720. An Inter-Cup competition was won for the first time by the Woking Club, who tied with Mid-Surrey, and eventually beat it by two strokes.

* * *

The putting tournament which takes place on the lawns, and is restricted to players not entering the medal round, is a great feature of the meeting; and although Mrs. Browne (Wimbledon), a really marvellous putter, was victorious on Wednesday, Miss Maclean of the same club beat her on the following morning. An afternoon putting competition, open to all, at specially prepared holes in the gardens below the terrace, was won by Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Ames.

* * *

Why is Ranelagh invariably favoured by fine weather? On the three previous days rain fell incessantly, and yet during the meeting the sun shone and the birds sang gaily. The course was in admirable order, and the professional, A. Clay, deserves many compliments on the efficient manner in which he procured and controlled the large army of necessary caddies, while the best thanks of all those who love open tournaments are due to the management of Ranelagh for the use of their club and green.

MISS BENCE PLAYING A SECOND SHOT—THE TOP OF THE SWING.

MISS JACKSON PLAYING AN IRON SHOT TO THE 4TH GREEN—A STYLISH AND CORRECT FINISH.

* * *

The annual match between the Royal Wimbledon and London Scottish clubs was played at Wimbledon on Saturday. The result was a win for the Royal Wimbledon by 5½ matches to 2½. The London Scottish side was not so strong as is usually the case in the selection of teams for this very keen struggle. Mr. Stanley Froy, the London Scottish captain, was in good form, and won his match against Mr. V. A. Pollock, a brilliant young player, who was victorious over the same opponent last year. Mr. G. R. Girdlestone won his match against Mr. F. H. Newnes, while Mr. Horne, Mr. Lawford, Dr. Worth, and Mr. Fabeck each scored a win against Mr. J. Gibson, Mr. H. M. Smith, Mr. John Duncan, and Mr. F. W. Cooke.

MISS LLOYD ROBERTS IN THE PUTTING COMPETITION.

* * *

Golf on the Braid Hills at Edinburgh is one of the most remarkable developments of the game seen in the United Kingdom in recent years. The "Dispatch" trophy by foursomes among the Edinburgh clubs is at present being played over that course, and there are entries from forty-eight clubs, giving nearly 200 competitors. The general public of Edinburgh take the keenest interest in the games, and the local golfers at a recent meeting passed a unanimous resolution calling upon the Edinburgh Town Council to take immediate steps to extend the Braid course, and to relieve the terrible congestion of players always seen there in good weather. The booking fees from the golfers amount to £700 annually, and members of the Town Council present at the meeting of golfers expressed the heartiest sympathy with the extension movement. Last week there were 2,109 players tickets issued on this municipal golf course, a fact which proves the popularity of the game among all classes in Edinburgh.

* * *

In view of the Easter holidays, golfers are reminded that there is excellent golf at Paris. The Société de Golf de Paris have a very sporting inland eighteen-hole course of over 6,000-yds. at La Boulie, near Versailles, where there is an excellent and luxurious club-house. English visitors will always find a hearty welcome. Any golfer lucky enough to have a free day during the holidays to spend in Paris, should take a run down to these links, or, better still, go there on June 8 and 9 for the championship and handicap competitions, and win some of the handsome and valuable prizes. This meeting is in the week before the Grand Prix. Further particulars can be obtained from M. Herbert, secretary of the Société de Golf de Paris, La Boulie, Versailles, Paris. There is an English-speaking professional, who is a good player.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Correspondence.

THE PLEA FOR A GOLF UNION.

To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—The praiseworthy efforts of the editor to bring forth views for and against an Association have met with a response only from those in favour of allowing the present system to stand. Those who have previously pleaded for an Association have apparently felt too much discouraged by previous failures to come into the arena once more, and the newer players, not knowing enough of how we are governed, or left alone as the case really is, are unable to formulate an opinion on the subject.

The melancholy part of it is that no valid reason has been advanced for letting matters alone. While it is admitted that the rules, in at least their verbiage, need revision, the only side which has really been heard is the "let-matters-alone side," and this seems likely to have its way, because it is far the easier.

Mr. Hutchinson, in his article against an Association or Union, said, among other things, that a Union "would do too much." This, as baldly stated, seemed absurd, but by diligent enquiry among those who knew about other Associations, it would appear that what he feared was this. After an Association had made the rules sufficiently clear to prevent the endless questions, now sent to the Rules of Golf Committee, they would find themselves with so little to do that they would thirst for more work, and then begin to interfere with portions of the game which at present are left entirely to the individual selection of the players—such as the particular brand of ball, or the shape of clubs, and any other matters which might suggest themselves to minds filled with pernicious activity. This does not seem to be a danger not possible to be guarded against. By drawing up a constitution for the Association, which would most carefully limit the powers of the General Committee, and making that constitution only alterable by a two-thirds vote of all the clubs belonging to the Union, such action as is feared might well be prevented without actually prohibiting possible and necessary changes in the powers of the General Committee, which do not happen to occur to us now.

Others say that when a number of players meet together so much nonsense is talked. Supposing we admit that, yet in the coming together of many minds earnest for one thing—namely, the good of the game to be procured by different methods—no matter how much nonsense may be talked, there is always a very large residuum of common-sense left below the froth, and from this most certainly good would come.

One golfer in a letter has only just discovered apparently that we follow the Royal and Ancient rules from courtesy, that St. Andrews is as free as air and utterly independent of golfers generally, and that we have no properly constituted governing body. I wonder how large a majority of players are in like case. It is necessary to keep this question to the the front until some influential club (it would be invidious to suggest one) takes upon itself the responsibility and expense of sending a letter inviting every golf club in the country to send a delegate to a general meeting to be held in London, as being the more convenient gathering place to the larger number of clubs, to talk the matter over and frame a constitution for a National Golfing Union. The suggestion is not made through any dissatisfaction with, or disrespect for, the Committee of the Royal and Ancient Club, but from the feeling that a body of men which has grown to such numbers as the noble army of golfers can show at present should have a government of its own, and is much too dignified to be beholden to the Committee of any private club for Ten Handicap.

MISS HEARSON AND MISS LIGHTFOOT PUTTING ON THE 5TH GREEN.

THE GOLFING GIRL.

To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—According to a critic of the lady golfer as seen to-day on the links, a new danger is threatening her, for besides "a strained anxious look in the eyes" (the result, we are told, of following the flight of her Haskell), we are further warned that she is developing "golfer's voice," from the necessity of frequently discussing a shot at long range in the open air. This practice, it is said, "strengthens the voice unduly, making it strident, thunderous, penetrating, and women (proceeds the indictment) who spend their days on the links somehow forget to lower their tones when indoors."

This is pretty "tall" treason to be written against the "bonnie breezy open-air girl" of books and poetic fancy. It ruthlessly dashes her from her pedestal too, and exposes the poor little clay feet with cruellest candour. The indictment is made by a "mere man,"

MISS HENTSCHEL DRIVING FROM THE 3RD TEE.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

MRS. JILLARD PLAYING AN AWKWARD SHOT AT THE 18TH GREEN.

of course, but the fact rather adds to the sting, for even the newest of "girlies" likes to stand "well with her world"—well with mankind in general. When we are also warned that "women are losing their sway and power by aping the manners and dress of the opposite sex, that, by putting themselves on a level with men, the old-world chivalry, the gentler amenities of a byegone age are no longer considered their due," it is time to face facts, and "my lady of the links" must look to it, if she wishes to reign supreme. Perhaps

LADIES WAITING THEIR TURN TO BEGIN PLAY.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

MRS. NORMAN HUNTER IN THE PUTTING COMPETITION.

MISS MACALLUM PLAYING A "DESPAIRING SHOT" FROM A GRAVEL PATH.

MISS V. HEZLET COMPETING IN THE PUTTING COMPETITION.

there is just a small grain of truth in the charge. Everyone admits that any hobby ridden to excess is undesirable, but the early Victorian "hunting-woman" probably had to bear her share of adverse criticism when she rode to hounds, courting accident and sudden death in the perilously long and ample riding-habit of her day, while the "bicycle girl" has also been tilted at for her "bicycle face."

Then the "motor maniac" has been the target for countless gibes, generally at the hands of those who know not the exhilarating joy of the mad rush through space and air. Perhaps in time the "golfing girl" will find her own particular sphere of recognition, and even in the "silly season of sea-serpents" and "giant gooseberries" cease to be heard or heard of.

Her voice even may become "Cordelia-like"—"ever soft, gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman" under the mellowing influence of passing years and public opinion. One wonders, looking back through the mists of centuries, whether Mary Stuart was condemned for playing golf! Her enemies certainly took advantage of her doing so with Bothwell "in the fields beside Seton," to prove her indifference to Darnley's fate; but, on the other hand, if the Queen were bored by Bothwell's grim society (as some have averred), what better antidote than a round of the links? One wonders, too (this, of course, from a feminine view), what the Queen of Scots wore on such occasions, whether she set out upon a round of "gowff" in the "Marie Stuart" cap associated with her picture. One knows that Mary had the prettiest taste in shoe leather (doubtless acquired during her early sojourn in La Belle France). Violets were her special fancy, it is said, for she even perfumed her dainty love-locks with their fragrance. This brings one back to the "vexed question"—Why should not the golfing girl remain feminine? Is there any reason why a bracing open-air game, played, as a rule, in lovely surroundings, should render her less attractive or more indifferent to the cultivation of the softer graces and general womanly charm?

By all means let women play golf, though remaining proof against its fatal snare by not becoming slaves to the pastime. May I add, that sensible raiment is not necessarily unbecoming, and that the golfing girl need not neglect the care of feet and figure in following the game. Her frocks should be well cut, and also of the best quality of material. Scottish tweeds or Irish homespuns are equally serviceable for the purpose. Irish homespuns in cream colour are particularly effective, and though they are cheap, they are never "nasty." A smartly-cut "shirtie" and hand-knit jersey are almost indispensable, while for head gear, a tweed cap, "Tammy," or Panama can always be worn, as weather and individual taste dictate. Well-cut boots or shoes should always be worn on the links, while as a relief to "tailor-made" exigencies of costume by day, the softest, most alluring of gowns can be chosen readily for evening wear. The philosophy of clothes exercises an enormous influence over one's moods, and even one's golf (to say nothing of looks), so that the golfing girl need never lay herself open to the ready gibe of the scoffer, that she is invariably badly dressed and something of a "fright" in the eyes of the unsympathetic. The golfing girl should therefore aim high in all her ideals, and should be reluctant to permit the give-and-take of modern life to lower them in the slightest degree.

GERTRUDE CROWE.

FIXTURES.

April 22-24.—Royal Ascot Spring Meeting.
April 24.—Rye, Club Gold Medal (scratch); Challenge Plate (1st round); "Master of the Rolls" Cup (3rd round).
April 24-28.—Royal Portrush Ladies' Easter Meeting.
April 26.—Oxford v. Cambridge.
April 26-28.—Royal Liverpool Spring Meeting.
April 27.—Royal Eastbourne Spring Meeting.
April 28.—Brighton and Hove Spring Meeting.
April 28-30.—Le Touquet, Matches with Mr. and Mrs. Ryder Richardson's (Mixed) Team.
April 29.—Huntercombe Spring Meeting.
April 29.—New Luffness, Spring Meeting.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XXXIX. — Captain Malcolm Kincaid-Smith, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Stratford-on-Avon (South-West) Division of Warwickshire.

A CENTURY ago the total number of representatives sent to Westminster by Warwickshire was six. It is at present five. In those days Warwick and Coventry each returned two members, two others being elected by the rest of the county. The influence of the Brookes, the Dugdales, and the Mordaunts was predominant, although they deemed it prudent to associate with them in the expensive contests for which Warwickshire was celebrated certain successful shakers of the Indian pagoda tree like Mr. Charles Mills and Mr. Peter Moore, to whom money was no sort of object, and who could indulge in expenditure of the most lavish description. At the present moment Warwick and Leamington enjoy the distinction of claiming the athletic successor of Mr. Chamberlain at the Colonial Office as their common property, while, with a single exception, the rest of the county divisions have, for some time past, gone consistently Tory. Under the old régime, Stratford-on-Avon was, curiously enough, not a Parliamentary borough, but at the present moment it forms the centre of the constituency which for many years consistently gave its suffrages to the eminent needle-maker and ardent Volunteer, who will always be kindly remembered as the successful organiser of the simultaneous firing of beacons at the Diamond Jubilee of her late Majesty Queen Victoria. On his lamented death the cloak of Conservatism, as far as South-West Warwickshire is concerned, was transferred to the shoulders of Mr. P. S. Foster, the present holder of the seat. With the recurrence of Shakespeare's birthday and in the presence of the prevailing agitation for the erection of a National Shakespeare Memorial, the subject of the future representation of Shakespeare's country derives additional interest, especially when one reflects that South-West Warwickshire includes within its limits the personality of Miss Marie Corelli, as well as that of Mr. Joseph Arch and Sir George Trevelyan, while the fair châtelaine of Warwick Castle, notwithstanding the traditions of 1805, is engaged on an active van crusade on behalf of those Labour candidates in whose fortunes she takes a generous interest.

Meanwhile, a vigorous assault on the Tory stronghold of the Stratford-on-Avon Division is being carried on by Captain Malcolm Kincaid-Smith, in whom, it becomes every day more apparent, Mr. P. S. Foster will, at the coming election, find an adversary worthy of his steel. The prospective Liberal candidate for the South-West Division of Warwickshire comes of an ancient Scottish family, for he is the youngest son of the late Major Kincaid-Smith of Polmont, Stirlingshire, whose widow lived for many years at Aldingbourne House, Chichester.

Malcolm Kincaid-Smith proceeded, at the commencement of 1888, to Mr. J. P. Carter's house at Eton, where he remained till he headed the Army class, and passed direct into Sandhurst in November, 1892. Both in 1893 and 1894 he championed Sandhurst in the annual racquet match with Woolwich, and in the autumn of the latter year received a commission in the 9th Lancers. Having seen service in Natal, West Africa, and the North-West Provinces of India, the South African War broke out, and Lieutenant Kincaid-Smith, who was at home on leave, joined his regiment at the Cape and remained with it until after the capitulation at Paardeberg, when he returned sick to Kimberley hospital, where he remained for some weeks, and was afterwards invalided home. As soon as he recovered he returned to South Africa, and remained on active service as staff officer to one of General French's columns operating in Cape Colony until the close of the war eighteen months later. The following year he returned to India, where, in November, 1903, he so injured one of his eyes while playing racquets that he was compelled to come to England, and eventually to accept half-pay. Captain Kincaid-Smith, however, was not a man to remain long idle, and he hoped to utilise the practical experience he had gained as a soldier during nearly ten years' service in many lands, by promptly converting his sword into a political pruning-hook. He accordingly settled down to a country life in a comfortable hunting-box in the Warwickshire borderlands, and nearly a twelvemonth since was "adopted" as the prospective Liberal candidate for the Stratford-on-Avon Division, which stretches from the outskirts of Leamington and Warwick to Hockley Heath, within five miles of Birmingham on the north, and below Long Compton, Brailes, to the south. Since he pitched his tent at Chadleigh, Captain Kincaid-Smith has shown himself to be both a politician and a rider to hounds. He is still a bachelor, but in Lady Trevelyan, as the indefatigable head of the South-West Warwickshire Women's Liberal Association, he finds a tower of strength. Captain Kincaid-Smith has not only addressed nearly 100 meetings in various parts of his own division, but he did excellent service to his party during the recent successful campaign in North Dorset, where his terse, soldier-like utterances created a favourable impression on his hearers. We live in an age of wars and rumours of wars, and this being the case, Captain Kincaid-Smith's knowledge of foreign as well as British soldiering is likely to be of great use in the next Parliament. He was present both in 1901 and 1903 at the French and German Army manœuvres, with a view of studying continental methods at close quarters. He frankly tells you that he resents much of the criticism directed at the Army, the War Office, and Military Administration generally, especially from those who, during the last two or three years, have been accustomed to apply such epithets as ignorant and ill-educated to our officers. He always stoutly maintains that, man for man, our Regular officers, as well as our non-commissioned officers and men, are the equal of, if not superior to, those of any other nation in the world. He admits that he does not think it will ever be possible to devise a scheme of Army Reform that will satisfy the people of the country, divided as it is into two distinct conflicting schools—on the one hand, those who honestly believe that conscription is the only solution of our Military problem, and, on the other hand, those whom he thinks more rightly appreciate our Military needs, and see that conscription is impracticable for foreign service and unnecessary for home defence. He would like to see a large increase in our Volunteer Forces, and is strongly opposed to any decrease in their numbers. He regards as most fatal the doctrine held by many that our Volunteers must be looked upon as so many combatant units, and considers that they should be regarded rather as a school of arms for the nation, and as affording an opportunity for Englishmen to show their national patriotism. The supply of suitable officers for the Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers is, in his opinion, the most perplexing, if not the most important, of our Military problems. He insists most strongly on the necessity for maintaining our Naval supremacy, and would have us all boldly recognise that a supreme Navy is the real key to economy in our Military expenditure.

Photochrom.

TRINITY CHURCH, STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

SOMEONE has apparently been playing a practical joke upon the French Press, which has caused a considerable amount of amusement to the very few people who were aware of the facts. Some weeks ago the British Empire Motor Trades Alliance, which ungainly title serves to identify a body newly formed for the purpose of "booming" the motor industry in this country, inserted a series of displayed advertisements in The Times, pointing out the merits of British cars, and exhorting purchasers to patronise the home product. Attention was also drawn to the fact that an English car, the Siddeley, held the world's record for reliability, the statement doubtless being based on the successful 5,000-mile trial recently accomplished by this machine. Following on these advertisements, there appeared in one of the French motor papers an alarmist article, pointing out that the supremacy of the French industry was being seriously threatened, and that The Times itself, in a series of "leading articles," was taking up the cudgels on behalf of the British motor-makers. Other French papers, both lay and technical, followed suit, and their effusions were translated and distributed amongst the British Press. Some fell into the trap, and even the staid Automotor Journal commented on articles in The Times, which exist only in the imagination of a French editor.

The little joke, presumably of some London correspondent, has had an interesting outcome. M. Paul Meyan, the editor of La France Automobile, addressed a letter to The Times offering to run his French car against any British-built machine, over a 5,000-kilomètre course, consisting of daily runs from 350 to 400 kilomètres in length, the match to be for 10,000-fr. a side. Mr. Siddeley has promptly taken up the challenge, the only conditions attached to his acceptance being that the contest should be under the joint control of the Automobile Clubs of Great Britain and France, and that half the distance should be run in this country. M. Meyan is too good a sportsman to back out of his challenge, and there, therefore, seems every chance of an interesting International match taking place.

Navello, Monaco.

THE MONACO MOTOR-BOAT REGATTA.
The start of the 8-mètre racers.

When numbering was imposed upon the whole body of motorists as a punishment for the sins of a few, it was thought that an effective check had been placed upon the drivers who "rushed" police traps or made off at top speed when they had caused an accident. Those who have studied the Motor-car Act closely, however, have long suspected that it contained a serious defect, and their suspicions were partly verified by a recent decision in the Divisional Court. The facts were reported at the time, and therefore I will only refer to them briefly. The driver of a horsed vehicle held up his hand to stop a car which was approaching at an alleged excessive speed. The signal was disregarded, and on complaint being made to the police they applied to the registered owner for the name of the driver of his car on the occasion in question. This he refused to reveal, and was accordingly summoned and fined under Section I. (3) of the Act.

The section is somewhat obscurely worded, but lay readers, and some eminent lawyers as well, have generally taken the view that there is no obligation on the part of the owner, under the Act, to give the name and address of the driver, who, of course, may be the owner himself, unless the driver has refused to furnish it. Now it is clear that such an interpretation would be of very great advantage to the reckless driver, as so long as he could avoid personal identification—which is practically impossible when a mask or even goggles are worn—he would be safe from punishment, if he refused to stop on demand. The Lord Chief Justice, in delivering judgment in the appeal from the conviction, took the view that the owner was obliged to give the name and address of his driver if the latter were charged with reckless driving, and that his duty arose under the section, whether or not the driver himself had refused the information. At the same time, he appears to have come to the conclusion that in the case of any offence other than reckless driving the owner could refuse with impunity to identify the culprit. Numbering is an unpleasant infliction, from which motorists would gladly be relieved; but so long as it is required by the law of the land it is as well that it should be effective against the very class of driver which rendered it necessary in the interests of the public.

The flaw in the Act which this case has brought into prominence is not likely, however, to embarrass the police, as they will probably manage to avoid the difficulty by always alleging reckless driving, whether the facts support their case or not. As a motorist, I am fully aware of the injustice that often results from the present state of

Topical.

THE WINNER IN THE 40-FT. CLASS.
"Napier II." at racing speed.

Digitized by Google

the law; but I do not believe that any advantage would be gained in the long run if an attempt were made to profit by an obvious flaw in an experimental Act in order to set at nought the principle that underlies it. The Act will come before Parliament for revision in little more than a year's time, and it is only by a loyal observance of its spirit, if not of its strict letter, that motorists can hope for a relaxation of its restrictions. It should not be forgotten, moreover, that there is no guarantee that the law may not be made even more stringent, if it is found to be ineffective in preventing reckless driving and excessive speed.

In spite of the doubts which have been expressed as to the utility of Reliability Trials, and other competitions of a similar nature, there is little indication that the makers have lost faith in their value as a means of drawing attention to the merits of their machines. The entries for the Scottish Trials, which will be held from May 10 to May 13, over some of the most hilly country in the Highlands, have reached the very large figure of forty-four cars, among which are the names of some of the best-known firms at home and abroad. The chief interest, however, will attach to the performances of those machines which have not hitherto had an opportunity of displaying their powers in public. Most important of these are the inexpensive multi-cylinder cars which have recently become such a feature of the trade in this country.

About eight months ago an enterprising British firm placed a three-cylinder 12—14-h.p. car on the market at £375, which was regarded as remarkably cheap. This, however, was quickly followed by a four-cylinder 12-h.p. car at £300, and another of 8—10-h.p. at 215 guineas. The next sensation was a Belgian-built 14-h.p. vehicle, also with a four-cylinder motor, at £275, and finally another British car with a three-cylinder 8—9-h.p. motor at £200. Needless to say, this constituted a revolution in the accepted scale of prices, and its effect has apparently been already felt by the older makers. Purchasers naturally object to pay £600 or £700 for what can be obtained at half the price elsewhere. The new cheap cars, however, suffer from the absence of any disinterested evidence as to their reliability and durability, the two most important points which the cautious buyer has to consider. The results of a single competition can hardly be regarded as conclusive, but the Scottish Trials will afford an opportunity of comparing the hill-climbing powers and general running of the newcomers with their older and more expensive rivals.

RADIATOR

"LA RAPIERE." Topical.

A 20-ft. racer with a 100-h.p. Panhard engine. Winner in the 8-mètre class.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris

THE POOR AND THEIR DOGS.

[illegible] d'Austerlitz, past the Orleans Railway [illegible]levard de l'Hôpital, you come to a gate [illegible]ce where three times a week horses and [illegible]ndays, however, from two till five o'clock [illegible]. But do not think you find here any fine specimens of the canine breed—boarhounds, setters, pointers, spaniels, poodles, or terriers. The well-to-do Parisian has never even heard of the "Marché-aux-chiens." If he wants to purchase an animal to suit his expensive tastes he knows where to obtain the article. The Boulevard de l'Hôpital is not his sphere, and his arrival there would not only arouse curiosity, but a feeling of uneasiness among those who have strong reasons not to divulge whence come some of the dogs they offer for sale.

Enter the gate, and you find yourself in a new world, in mongrelborough, and look from man to beast, from beast to man. No, it is no fancy. They all look alike, man and beast, with the unmistakable stamp of the cross-breed. Having overcome the first shock of surprise, examine the four-footed creatures. They are so different from what we imagine a dog should be, and appear so much more like the funny things we used to draw in our school days. All the misfits in dogland! Here they are, brought by their owners or guardians in every possible kind of receptacle. Little heads peep out of baskets, cigar boxes, paper bags; and a whole family of pseudo-Skye terriers without tails, and with heads like spaniels, wink at you through the holes in an orange box. Their owners are woefully shabby, and so are they; yet man and beast try hard to appear respectable. Anyone who has ever been to a dog show knows that the noise there is perfectly deafening. Not so here. If a dog barks at all it is in a subdued manner—something like a humble cough—after which he looks round with an apologetic glance, as if to say, "I couldn't help it; my throat irritates me." But if they all lack beauty and breeding, Nature has endowed them with qualities of the mind. They are Bohemian dogs—bastards, outcasts, anything you like—but their knowledge is great, and adversity has sharpened their intellect. They watch the proceedings keenly, and when you pass and a man calls out "Achetez mon chien," the poor brute by his side will follow you with his melancholy eyes as if to say, "Please take me out of this!" Altogether, it is a queer sight, and, from a psychological point of view, an instructive one; but there is a distinct touch of sadness in this seamy side of human and animal life. Poverty is the link that binds man and beast. Whilst the rich man's dog comes in for his master's pleasures, its ragged, humbler companion knows what it is to see the home without a morsel of food. And who knows but that in his whine for a crust there is not also a sorrowful note for his human friend? And now let us get acquainted with those who have come to make an honest, or possibly a dishonest, penny, as the case may be. Who are they? Whence do they come? What brings them here? At first the questions are not easy to answer, but you soon recognise familiar types, and their story unfolds as you look at them. Curiously enough, the professional dog dealer, the man with an unclean record, does not put in an appearance here. The police know him, like he knows the police, and he prefers to hawk his living goods further away from public gaze. No; the majority of those we meet here really own the dogs they offer for sale, and if they try to dispose of them it is because they need the money. That good-looking, long-haired youth carrying what is supposed to be a fox-terrier, hails from the Latin quarter. His two friends behind him grin with delight as they watch him waylay a buxom lady, and in fluent langnage try to secure her as a customer. Should he succeed, you may be sure he will stand treat all round, and find himself the next day as penniless as before—minus his dog. With the pale girl opposite the case is different. She holds her little pet under her arm, whispering to it, anxious to find a buyer, yet afraid to part with her "Petit Chéri." Many of the others appear to be similarly situated, and this imparts something of sadness to the proceedings. It would not be quite safe to believe implicitly all the pathetic stories that one poured into your ears. I saw a curious-looking old lady squatting on a basket, and at her feet a long yellow mass of bones, which she informed me was a "chien magnifique," who, for three years, had been like a member of her family, and she wiped her eyes as she added that it broke her heart to say good-bye to this true friend. Half-an-hour later I heard a shout, "Stop him!" and people rushed towards the entrance. I first thought it was a pickpocket, although I wondered what a thief expected to find in such a place. I soon discovered my mistake. Something long, lean, and yellow ran with lightning speed up the road and disappeared round the corner. It was the "faithful friend," who had parted company with the old lady.

I dare say you will wonder who are the buyers of these extraordinary specimens of the canine race. I, too, was anxious to solve this problem, and I boldly interviewed the smart policeman who had been on duty here every Sunday for many years. He smiled and repeated my question: "Who buys all these dogs?" Then, after a pause, he shook his head. "No Parisian wants them; he knows too much. The customers are nearly all yokels. If a thing has four feet and barks, that is all they want!" And he pointed to two peasants in blouses, proudly leading away their acquisitions. "I reckon they sell about fifty dogs here every Sunday," added the policeman.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Geniaux, Paris.

IN THE DOG MARKET.

Geniaux, Paris.

A SCRATCH PAIR.

Geniaux, Paris.

WAITING FOR PURCHASERS.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

MISS SUZY MABEL

One of the most popular of the young actresses now appearing at La Scala, Paris.

(From photographs by Walery, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

FITTING-OUT is now quite general in all the yards at the various yachting centres, and in many instances preparations have been sufficiently advanced for vessels to be put afloat. In the matter of new yachts the winter's record has been a poor one; but now that we are drawing nearer to another season the activity displayed in the building districts is fully up to the average of more recent years, and several enquiries have been made during the past few weeks for the purchase of vessels. Some well-known yachts have already changed hands. Cala Mara, a steam yacht of 313-tons, formerly owned by Mr. W. H. Johnson, has recently been purchased by the Marquess of Camden, and the Hon. Mrs. Eliot Yorke, having sold her steam yacht Garland, has purchased Sunflower, a steam vessel of slightly larger tonnage, formerly owned by Sir E. Walter Greene, Bart., M.P. She will be renamed Garland.

The enthusiastic yachtsman is, however, more particularly interested in the doings of sailing craft. The King's famous old cutter, Britannia, has been undergoing a thorough overhaul at Cowes. For the last few years his Majesty has had her in commission for day cruising during the Cowes Week, immediately after which she has dismantled and returned to her mud berth. It is only to be supposed that the same programme will be followed this year, for the simple reason that there is now no 90-ft. class in existence. It is, however, interesting to note that Sir Maurice FitzGerald is going to have his yawl, Satanita, in commission this season. This vessel, it will be remembered, [illegible] cutter in the same year as Britannia, and in a season, remarkable for the magnificent fleet of 90-footers, established the reputation of being the fastest reaching vessel in a fresh breeze ever built in this country. She won the Queen's Cup at Cowes a few years ago under exceptional conditions, not having been scrubbed for a considerable time before the race, and showed a remarkable turn of speed, notwithstanding a plentiful crop of weeds on her under-body.

The bare fact of these two being in commission, and the probable presence of Ailsa in this country, and possibly Sybarita, would seem to suggest a possibility of some sport amongst these famous old craft during Cowes Week. A dust-up between these old opponents could not fail to awaken a certain amount of interest, particularly amongst those who were following the sport at the time when these vessels were in their prime. Much would, of course, be required in the way of tuning up to get Britannia into anything like racing trim; but in regard to age, there would not be much to choose between the craft named—Sybarita excepted. If such a contest could be promoted, another likely competitor would be Navahoe, the Herreshoff boat which came across here in Britannia's first year, and is now owned by Herr Wätjen, and sailed by Edward Sycamore with an English crew, largely composed of men who sailed under him in Shamrock II.

Debenham, Cowes.

BRITANNIA

Built in 1892 for H.M. King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales. One of the most successful 90-footers ever built. She was designed by the late G. L. Watson. During the last few years she has been fitted out for Cowes Week each year, and has been used by the King for day cruising. She is now being overhauled for the coming season.

The attention of keen racing men will naturally be directed more particularly to the contests in which the 52-footers will be engaged, and the International character of the sport in this class, imparted by the presence of an American craft, will create a general interest in the racing, and the performances of the invading yacht will be followed with equal interest on the other side of the Atlantic. The new Herreshoff boat, which will be known as Sonya, has been built to the order of Mrs. Turner Farley, who last year sailed the 36-ton yawl Nebula in cruiser handicaps. The vessel arrived on this side some few days ago, so that there will be ample time for fitting out and getting her into trim for the early regattas. Doubtless there will soon be opportunities of seeing her under way, and opinions of her powers will be forthcoming from various quarters. Experience teaches, however, that it is extremely difficult to estimate with any degree of certainty the relative speeds of yachts unless in actual contest. Mrs. Farley's boat will be in charge of an East Coast skipper.

The command of Maymon, last year's champion, has been taken over by A. Hogarth, so that although Fife has not had the opportunity of turning out a new craft to meet the Herreshoff production, he will at least know that the handling of his boat will leave nothing to be desired. A few days ago, there was reason to hope that, late though it might be in the year, there might be another recruit to the class. The hopes raised are, however, not destined to be realised.

Prospects of racing in the Solent classes appear inclined to improve somewhat. A few weeks ago, it was generally taken for granted that there would be neither a 36-ft. nor a 30-ft. class in the district this season. Hopes are, however, expressed that there may be some racing for the first-named. Nyama, a Fife design, built for Captain J. Orr-Ewing, was purchased a few days ago, and it is understood that her new owner will race her in the Solent if the opportunity occur. There is a new boat now in course of construction at Southampton, and should she remain in the district, the two would form the nucleus of a class.

The Royal Alfred Yacht Club has recently had under consideration a question which has been regarded as of great importance by the members. The club has been in the habit for many seasons of offering challenge cups for competition in various classes. With a dearth of Y.R.A. classes, the question arose whether the interests of the sport would be served by putting up the cups in the possession of the club for competition amongst the one-design boats, of which there are several classes in Dublin Bay. The club has, however, decided to offer but one of the challenge cups this season, and that will be for the only purely racing class that will do the whole round of the big regattas, the 52-footers. The club by its action is evidently desirous of giving the greatest encouragement to the highest form of racing.

CORINTHIAN.

MEDITERRANEAN INTERNATIONAL REGATTA
April 20 to 30 .. .. San Remo.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Stuart.

INYONI

An ex-20-rater, designed by Fife. Outclassed for sailing in the pure racing class, she has for some seasons past competed regularly in handicap matches. She is now in India. Her present owner is Mr. R. T. Scovell, well known in London yachting circles. She sails regularly in matches of the Bombay Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

The Ladies' Clubs of London.

III.—THE LYCEUM CLUB.

WHEN Miss Constance Smedley first thought of the Lyceum Club, it was with the idea of establishing a centre where professional and University women, isolated in the genteel boarding-house and cut off from cultured society, could find congenial atmosphere and the refinements of life without a heavy financial strain. More than this, she wanted to make the club the first step of a great movement which would have for its avowed object the bringing together of the women in every country who exercised the creative faculty in literature, journalism, art, and music, University women, and the wives and daughters of distinguished men. To effect such a combination was no easy task. The scheme was suggested to a number of well-known ladies, and everyone who was approached expressed approval and gave promises of support. So the idea grew, and in November, 1903, in response to a circular, 500 applications for membership were received. In June the club secured one of the finest houses in Piccadilly—the old headquarters of the Imperial Service Club—and since that time the progress of the club has never halted. Lady Frances Balfour is chairman of the Executive Committee, Mrs. Moberley Bell is vice-chairman, and Miss Smedley acts as hon. secretary. The other names on the committee are representative of every woman of intellectual distinction in England.

Biograph.

THE LYCEUM CLUB, PICCADILLY.

Fired by the success of the initial venture, Miss Smedley toured the world with the object of forming branches of the club in all the chief American and Continental capitals. The vastness of the scheme was such as to frighten the most optimistic, and the complexity of social and professional life in other countries where distinction of caste, religion, and politics were very strongly defined, gave rise to some opposition. Miss Smedley broke down for a time under the severe strain; but she persevered in face of all discouragement, and succeeded in infecting the women of other countries with something like her own missionary enthusiasm. The result of these labours was the expansion of her original idea to such colossal proportions, that a survey of the work done fills one with admiration and wonder.

The most influential people in France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Holland, Belgium, America, and the Colonies have taken up the scheme, and the women of these countries are being brought into line with their English sisters.

All restrictions and distinctions have been bridged over by this wonderful Freemasonry of culture. The most exclusive Court circles combine with the ultra-democratic. Radical and Socialist, Protestant and Catholic, Royalist and Republican, have all been assimilated. The club is cosmopolitan in the best sense of the word. English members going abroad are received with open arms and treated as guests of honour. One of the features of the club is its Saturday night house dinner. With charming impartiality the club invites some distinguished men to be present as guests of the evening, and each sex strives hard to outdo the other in the gallantry of their attitude and in their mutual admiration and goodwill.

Miss Smedley speaks in warm terms of the help and sympathy which the men have shown towards the club. Its thoroughly practical character may be gauged

Biograph.

THE MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE LYCEUM CLUB.

The names, reading from left to right, are: Standing—Mrs. M. S. Boyd, Mrs. G. H. Chesterton, Mrs. Jack Johnson, Lady Lurgan, Mrs. Elkin, Miss Donie, Mrs. Stanley Boyd, M D. (half hidden), Mlle. Eugene Joachim, Mme. Starr-Canziani, Miss Vaughan, M.D., Miss J. Macgregor (side face), and Miss Lucy Kemp-Welch. Sitting—Miss C. Smedley (secretary), Mrs. Moberley Bell, Mrs. Oscar Beringer, and Mrs. John Lane.

Digitized by Google

Hodsoll.

THE READING-ROOM AT THE LYCEUM CLUB.

A feature of the reading-room is the number of foreign journals reserved for the use of members, keeping them au courant with intellectual activity in every part of the world.

by the many features specially designed for the hard-working professional women.

The fact that table d'hôte luncheons and dinners are served at three prices—an excellent luncheon being supplied for ninepence—indicates the same consideration for the working woman. The club has made a definite attempt to bring together the women throughout the world by offering them facilities for obtaining comfort and affording them assistance in turning to pecuniary advantage the products of their brain, and the success of the effort is undeniable.

The great newspapers of the world have commented favourably and encouragingly on the work of the club, and applications for membership have been received from every quarter of the globe. In October the club will have houses open in Paris and Berlin, and then follow Florence, New York, and Boston. When the great International scheme is fully matured, the women of the world will have much to thank Miss Smedley for.

Hodsoll.

THE TEA-ROOM AT THE LYCEUM CLUB.

The tea hour brings together many members of the Lyceum Ladies' Club for the delightfully informal gossip so dear to the feminine heart.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

MISS MAXINE ELLIOTT IN "HER OWN WAY."

Copyright.

Few actresses have attained the popularity which it has been Miss Elliott's lot to gain. In Mr. Clyde Fitch's play, "Her Own Way," to be produced at the Lyric on Easter Monday, she has a part eminently suited to her talents, and a strong company to support her. The above illustration shows the last scene of the play—the meeting of Georgina Corley (Miss Maxine Elliott) and Lieutenant Richard Coleman (Mr. Charles Cherry), who has lost an arm during his service in the Philippines.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

MISS EDITH WYNNE-MATTHISON.

Ellis and Walery.

During this week the performances of "Othello" at the Shaftesbury Theatre are suspended, to allow of a revival of "Everyman," in which Miss Wynne-Matthison is appearing and Miss Tita Brand plays Knowledge. The revival is being given by arrangement with Mr. William Poel, who, in connection with the Elizabethan Stage Society, has so often presented the old morality play in this country and America.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

BY WEST COAST ROYAL MAIL ROUTE TO SCOTLAND.

HOLIDAY-MAKERS who are accustomed to spending their summer vacation year after year in the South, have probably but scant knowledge of what a holiday tour in Bonnie Scotland means.

Hitherto the holiday-maker with a month, or even less, at his disposal, has been inclined to view the journey North with a certain degree of apprehension, or we should say misapprehension. But there is really no reason why this slight obstacle should prevent his visiting the lovely land of lochs, for the journey from Euston to Edinburgh, by the favourite West Coast Royal Mail Route, takes no longer than from Paddington to Penzance —a run that is thought but little of nowadays.

Starting from Euston, one has the choice of travelling by either day or night expresses. The trains which are run in conjunction with the Caledonian expresses are practically all of the type known on the Continent as trains de luxe, having corridor carriages, dining and sleeping compartments, and, in fact, all the luxuries and conveniences of a modern hotel. The journey North is of all-absorbing interest; the varied scenery, though viewed from the window of a rapidly-moving express, nevertheless cannot fail to produce a lasting impression on the observer. At Carlisle a brief stop is made, and one of the powerful Caledonian engines attached to the train. From this point, for the remainder of the journey to Glasgow or Edinburgh, we travel over the Caledonian Company's system.

Although Edinburgh may be the capital of Scotland, there is no doubt that Glasgow is the centre for which the majority of tourists make. But whichever city be chosen as a halting-place, one can rely on finding comfortable hotel accommodation. There are, of course, many ways of "doing" the Highlands and the Western Isles, as the tourist will quickly discover if he refers to the Caledonian Company's programmes and handbooks. Although Glasgow may not be an ideal spot to stay in for long, it will, nevertheless, be found a most convenient centre from which to gain easy and speedy access to the "show" places in the district. Moreover, it will be found that by far the greater number of these pleasure trips, undertaken for the most part by rail and coach and steamer, start from and terminate at Glasgow. On the other hand, those who prefer the comparative quiet of Edinburgh will not do amiss by staying there.

Within an hour's run of Glasgow Central Station one can reach the glittering waters of the Firth of Clyde at Gourock, whence the Caledonian Company's luxurious steamers start to the various points of interest on the firth; or again, at Wemyss Bay, an attractive little watering-place on the banks of the Clyde. But for natural loveliness of scenery and variety of interest there are probably few more delightful tours than the one to the famous Trossachs. Here one is confronted with a choice of routes. The most interesting is, perhaps, that which takes the tourist by way of Stirling, Callander, Loch Vennachar, Loch Katrine, and Loch Lomond. It is the only way by which the tourist can follow the chase as described in "The Lady of the Lake."

From Glasgow a start should be made from Buchanan Street Station, the old terminus of the Caledonian Railway. The journey to Stirling is by no means devoid of interest, for we pass through the old battle-ground of Scotland, which includes such names as Falkirk and Bannockburn, the latter one of which every Scotsman has good reason to be proud.

From Stirling to Callander is but a short run. Here a coach meets the train and takes the wayfarer for a delightful drive by the Pass of Leny, under the shadow of Ben Ledi, and follows the route pursued by Fitzjames at the beginning of "The Lady of the Lake." Each succeeding scene takes some memory from its mention in the poem. To detail all the sights would take up more space than is at our disposal. To complete this tour we take the steamer to Stronachlachar, situated at the head of Loch Katrine. A charming coach drive of five miles over the moor takes us to Inversnaid, the stronghold of Rob Roy.

Once more we take steamer, and sail down the Queen of Scottish Lakes to Balloch, where a train awaits to carry us back to Glasgow or Edinburgh, as the case may be.

Among the many other delightful excursions from Glasgow or Edinburgh, mention should be made of those to Oban for the Western Isles and Ballachulish for the Ossian country. The route to Oban, "the Charing Cross of the Highlands," lies by way of Stirling, Callander, and Loch Awe. From Callander the Oban line follows the route of the Fiery Cross in "The Lady of the Lake." In the little churchyard of Balquhidder lie the ashes of Rob Roy and Helen his wife. At Lochearnhead Station a coach meets the train to take passengers down to the village of Loch Earn, whence the new line runs beside the loch to St. Fillans, Comrie, and Crieff. Shortly after leaving Lochearnhead the train commences to ascend the wild and desolate Glen Ogle, on the other side of which lies the little Highland town of Killin, with Ben Lawers beyond, towering above the reaches of Loch Tag. Then follow Crianlarich, where coaches are waiting to convey tourists by the Glen Falloch to Loch Lomond and the Trossachs; Loch Awe Station, whence a steamer runs the full length of the loch to Ford, from which point a delightful coach drive can be taken to Ardrishaig to meet the steamer "Columba." The remainder of the

Valentine.

IN THE LAND OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

A view of Callander Bridge, with Ben Ledi in the distance. Although no actual mention occurs of Callander in "The Lady of the Lake" it is, nevertheless, the most convenient point on the railway to visit this interesting district, including, of course, the far-famed Trossachs.

Digitized by Google

Valentine.

A VIEW OF BALLACHULISH FROM ABOVE THE PIER.

Probably few tourists make the excursion to Ballachulish, which is situated in the Western Highlands, and approached from Connell Ferry by a new branch of the Caledonian Railway. In the near neighbourhood rises the mount upon which poor James of the Glens was hanged for the historic "Appin murder" described by Stevenson; also the wild pass of Glencoe.

journey into Oban from Loch Awe is full of romantic interest. Passing through the wild pass of Brander, and again through the pass of Awe, we reach Achnacloich, the point of embarkation for the tour up Loch Etive and Glen Etive, and down the wild and desolate Glencoe. From Connell Ferry runs the new line of railway to Ballachulish, through a region in which centre the memories of Fingal and Ossian. Leaving Connell Ferry, and making a rapid descent of Glen Cruiten, the "valley of the knolls," the train presently steams into the pretty little town of Oban. From this point trips may be made in almost every direction—through the islands of the Inner and Outer Hebrides, by the Caledonian Canal: a day's voyage, finer than that of the Rhine, to Inverness. Or the traveller can take a trip down the Crinan Canal, or the Mull of Cantyre, to the Firth of Clyde, and so back to Glasgow.

Valentine.

ST. FILLANS, ON LOCH EARN.

Undoubtedly one of the most lovely rustic spots in the Highlands. At the present time the traveller must take the train to Lochearnhead Station, on the Caledonian System, and thence proceed by coach to the head of the Loch. An extension of the line, however, is nearing completion, when it will be possible to travel through without break from Oban to Perth.

Digitized by Google

"La Paix Perpétuelle."

By DAVID HANNAY.

THE smiling and well-satisfied face of the Abbé de Saint Pierre, which is presented to the reader on this page, may not strike him as by any possibility belonging to a dreamer and an enthusiast. It has much more the air of one of those worldly ecclesiastics, or semi-ecclesiastics, who enjoyed a comfortable benefice with no corresponding cure of souls, and who were familiar to the drawing-rooms of good society in Paris all through the eighteenth century. Nor is it altogether inappropriate that this should be the aspect under which he is preserved for posterity. In the way of benefice, indeed, the Abbé had little, for sixty or eighty pounds a year of our money represented the sum of his independent fortune, and he spared a part of that during years for the support of a still poorer friend of hopeful genius. But if he had little, he was a philosopher, and he wanted little. Honour and troops of friends were not denied him. Of the friends not a few were charming women who petted him emulously during the greater part of a very long life spent in the best, the wittiest, and the most intelligent society of Paris. We can confidently believe that few men have been happier than Charles Irénée Castel, Abbé de Saint Pierre, and certainly few have had more time to enjoy their felicity. He was born in 1658, when Cromwell was still alive, and he died, cheerful and unpretentious, in 1743, two years before Prince Charles Edward sailed on his romantic adventure. The nearest approach to a disaster in his placid existence was his expulsion from the Academy in 1718. He had committed a shocking offence by saying, in print, that Louis XIV. ought to have been called the "Redoubtable," and not the "Great." The courtly Academicians called on him to recant, and, when he proved contumacious, turned him out. The Abbé bore the persecution blandly, and went on as if nothing had happened. From thirty to forty volumes of political and economical speculation attest his industry. By the consent of his warmest friends, they are all ill-written, and full of repetitions. But they are also full of ideas. The Abbé was a forerunner of the "Philosophes" who in due time destroyed the loyalty of thinking Frenchmen to the old Monarchy. He is not, and cannot be, read; but he has always been spoken of with respect, and he achieved the end he aimed at. When a friend expostulated with him on his unmerciful repetitions, he asked for examples. They were poured out in abundance, but the critical friend must have felt completely beaten when the Abbé only replied, "I see you remember them. That is why I repeated myself. If I had not done so, you would not have remembered."

If there is any recollection of the tranquil and persistent Abbé to-day, he owes his immortality to the treatise which secured him the liking of Voltaire and Rousseau, and the honour of a biography and an analysis of his work, and ideas, written about half a century ago by M. G. de Molinari. It is what we may still fairly call the famous scheme for establishing an enduring pacification of Europe, published first in 1713, under the name of "Projet de Paix Perpétuelle." In this case the author was effectually protected against either of the two forms of misfortune which have consigned his other works to oblivion. We have not ceased, nor are we likely to cease, to be interested in the subject. His scheme for limiting the absolute power of the King, to which he gave the odd name of "Traité de la Polysynodie," is a mere curiosity. France has found a way of her own for suppressing regal despotism. The problem needs no further discussion, and is as dead as Louis XIV., the Great, or the Redoubtable. But war, and the danger of war, we have always with us. Then again, no better solution than his has yet been discovered, and, therefore, the Abbé's Project for a Perpetual Peace may be said to hold the ground. Indeed, this does not put the case honourably enough for him. It would be nearer the truth to say that nobody has yet found a better way for the suppression of war than his, and that if we do approximate a little, and very tentatively, to his ideal, it is by moving with hesitating steps on the road he pointed out.

L'ABBE DE SAINT PIERRE
Born 1658, died 1743. From a print in the British Museum.

When the Abbé addressed his countrymen in 1713 he was not without an example to encourage him in his speculation. There were even many, if they were properly sought for. An authority which should keep the peace, at least among Christian peoples, had been the dream of intellects as good as, or better than, his in remote times. The Holy Roman Empire was nothing else than such a "fond imagination." The great Sully had a plan of his own, which Saint Pierre quoted. But the defect of all these devices was that the authority which was to keep men from fighting had to begin by imposing its will on all the world by force, and that when it did make the attempt it was beaten. Saint Pierre was preserved from falling into this error by the very date of his treatise. In 1713 the French had had a series of lessons, beginning at Blenheim, or even earlier at La Hogue, to show them that the use of war as a resource for obtaining their way had its very formidable dangers. They were much in the humour to listen to his persuasion when he argued that even successful war was a costly method of reaching their aims. What constituted the originality of "La Paix Perpétuelle," and has secured attention for the ideas of the author, was precisely the fact that he did not look to a common sovereign authority to play the peacemaker, and that he did not draw a fantastic plan for cutting up Europe into arbitrary divisions of equal strength, which were then to counterbalance one another, after the manner of Sully. As was too much the custom with him, the solid centre of his "Projet" is wrapped up in a cloud of words for which he found three volumes hardly enough. We ought not, perhaps, to blame him for arguing at some length that war is not meritorious in itself. There had been—and after his day there was—a pretty general belief that a prince of spirit would, as a matter of course, take, or if it did offer itself spontaneously, then make, an opportunity to gain glory by arms. Our own James I. was widely sneered at for being a lover of peace. That subjects should fight cheerfully for the glory of their prince was part of the creed of a monarchical age. It was not superfluous to insist on the other point of view—the enormous damage which war caused, and most particularly to the subjects. Louis XIV. had done much to turn the reflections of his good people in that direction. Yet even in 1713 the Abbé need surely not have spent pages in proving that security was better than danger, that it would be enjoyed if wars of conquest ceased, and that treasure wasted on armies and in campaigns to conquer a few frontier towns could be spent to much better purpose. His trust in repetition as a method for insinuating truths into the obtuse human head was indeed excessive.

Digitized by Google

Yet when his proposal is stripped of verbiage, it may claim to contain all the sense which it is possible to say on the subject. The proof, perhaps, is that we have found nothing better to offer. Begin, said the Abbé, by recognising that every state, big or little, is the legitimate owner of what it now has. Let them have no cuttings up and rearrangements. Then let them, or as many of them as will join to begin with, guarantee one another against foreign attack and rebellion within. This last clause has offended some modern liberal admirers of Saint Pierre, but it came naturally enough from the pen of a writer who had seen his King provoke England to war by recognising the son of the exiled James II. as the true sovereign of this country. Modern liberal critics, too, have not, it may be, sufficiently considered that a league which guarantees one of its members from conquest or insurrection, would have a sound claim to insist that he should not provoke internal disturbance by bad government, as well as that he should not drag the coalition into hostilities by aggression. Having come to this understanding among themselves, the states of the league would then be strong enough to defy attack from without, and to control any single power which attempted to disturb the general harmony. They could reduce their separate armaments by as much as a half, and spend the balance on themselves. There was in his own time considerable originality in Saint Pierre's demonstration that a state which adds to its population and power at home, increases its strength more effectually than by acquiring outlying provinces. The doctrine is understood to have become a platitude now, though to judge by contemporary events in Manchuria, there is still one European state which lags far behind the author of "La Paix Perpétuelle."

In 1713, his views were decidedly new. Men had not yet realised to the full how utterly weak the widespreading Monarchy of the Spanish Habsbourgs had been. They thought it strong because it was big. When the league has once settled its alliance, it can provide for the settlement of all disputes arising within its borders by arbitration. There was no part of the Abbé's Utopia which did more to earn for it the description of "the dream of a worthy man" than this. To-day, though we are far enough off from perpetual peace, the rulers of Europe do not seem to think arbitration so purely a vague sentimental fantasy as it looked to the shrewd contemporaries of the Abbé de Saint Pierre. They, at any rate, think it worth while to make arbitration treaties, and hold that they thereby diminish the risk of war. The progress, such as it is, is in his direction. Something has been done to carry out another of his ideas. He drew up a scheme for the formation of a kind of Common Council of Europe, which should employ the united forces of the confederacy, and on which all the members would be represented in proportion to their contribution to the fund. It would have been something on the lines of the Federal Council of the German Empire, and would have decided by a majority. Between this and the Hague Tribunal there is a great gap. Yet if the Czar's invention is ever to mean anything, it will attain to reality by becoming just such an International court as the well-meaning author of "La Paix Perpétuelle" elaborated in his modest study. The concert of Europe has at least risen to reality from time to time, and at intervals which tend to diminish. All the Triplices and Duplices which have figured and do figure in the papers, are after all but partial attempts to obtain a lasting peace by mutual guarantees of territory and promises of support. They have not brought about the reduction of armaments, which continues to be as unattainable a blessing to-day as it was 200 years or so ago. But while these big leagues, intent on security, and not on conquest, face one another and balance one another, the peace of the world, if not sure of attaining to perpetuity, is still, in Prince Bismarck's phrase, very well protected. The good Abbé's dream that a sufficient number of powers would join to make it dangerous for any one to stand out, is a long way off fulfilment. His appeal to the common-sense of mankind, in which he had a touching faith, if only it could be fully enlightened, has not so far been justified. But he was a patient, tranquil man, and I incline to believe that if he were allowed to return and contemplate the existing condition of Europe, he would be fairly satisfied with the progress his teaching has made. Who now sings the virtue of making war for its own sake? Do we not arbitrate with hesitation, but with unanimity? Are we not all banded to guarantee one another till in Europe, and out of it, we are all tied too tight to make war? It would simplify matters if we went all the way with the Abbé at once. A very hopeful person may even bring himself to the point of expecting that by the time another two centuries have passed, the human race will have travelled from its present attitude towards war nearly all the way to the wise unanimity not to make war at all, or allow a perverse minority to make it.

Crooke, Edinburgh.

MR. DAVID HANNAY
The essayist and writer on Naval matters.

Cardinal Fleury, to whom the Abbé sent a copy of his Projet, told the author, "You have forgotten to send missionaries to touch the heart of princes, and to persuade them to enter into your views." Saint Pierre might have answered that he had nothing to send except the book. A few years later, when Fleury was Prime Minister, and was in alliance with our Sir R. Walpole to maintain peace, he could further have claimed that the Cardinal and the English Prime Minister were of the same mind as himself; if not because he had converted them, then because experience had shown them that war was unprofitable, and that his method of keeping the peace, by mutual guarantees and alliances, was at any rate the best resource available.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

THOSE racegoers who go to Newmarket simply to attend the races can know but little of the many fascinations of the place itself. Nowhere in the world can so many splendid specimens of the thorough-bred horse be seen in all the stages of their career, and certainly in no other place can such a knowledge be gained of the actual work done by a racehorse when undergoing the trying ordeal of his preparation for a great race. To get out early on to the Heath on some fine morning to watch the long strings of thorough-breds come sweeping up the gallops, and to listen to the unmistakable rhythm of the cadenced stride of a racehorse is in itself an education; the air that sweeps across the wide expanse of springy turf is keen and fragrant. If you want to be alone you have but to wander away down below the plantation, or find yourself a comfortable seat somewhere away on the Ditch, and while you think a lark will soar his way into the blue ether overhead and sing you songs so glad, so free, and so full of the passionate joy of life, that to you, too, comes a sense of elation, and a clearer perception of all the infinity of Nature. But there is the business of racing to attend to, and the Craven Meeting, which began on the 11th inst., is never devoid of interest, both on account of the actual racing and of the information one may glean concerning the well-being, or otherwise, of the candidates for the classic races of the year, and of the prospects for some of the handicaps which are shortly coming on for decision. Two curiously-named races have long since disappeared from the programme of the Craven Meeting, one of which was the Port Stakes, a sweepstakes of £100 each, half forfeit, and the other the Claret Stakes, to which the subscription was £200 each; both these races were for four year olds. In those days betting was considerably heavier than it is now, and these two races were often the medium for a tremendous gamble. Sir J. Miller, the new steward of the Jockey Club, won the first race of this meeting with Colonel Wozac, and to not a few of us memories of a game and brilliant horse came back, when Colonel Hall Walker's Merry Moment, by Count Schomberg out of Merry Gal, fought a tremendous battle with Scotch Mistake in the Ashley Plate, and just snatched the victory by a short head. For the Crawfurd Stakes, Bass Rock, Chaucer, and Dumbarton Castle finished in the order named, and the brilliant speed displayed by Mr. L. de Rothschild's grey colt should draw attention to the value of his sire, Grey Leg. Blackwell's stable is in irresistible form just now, and not content with winning races for his patrons, that very able trainer decided to win one for himself, and his filly by Newhaven out of Peace had small difficulty in accounting for Superabundance and Ludlow in the Three Year Old Selling Plate. If much interest was lacking in the Forty-sixth Biennial, owing to the absence of Cicero, there was at all events an opportunity for having a good look at Shilfa, a colt, if I mistake not, who is destined to make very great improvement in the future. He is one of the best-bred horses in England, being by Isinglass out of Merle, and in appearance there is a marked resemblance to his famous sire. He could only finish third on this occasion behind Fincastle and Flashlight, but he is clearly a colt to bear in mind for the future.

W. A. Rouch.

OFF TO WORK IN THE EARLY MORNING.

W. A. Rouch.

STEADY EXERCISE.

Wednesday morning was anything but promising, however the day turned out all right, and a capital day's racing was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. The apprentice W. Evans, who seems to have gained confidence since Lincoln, rode a remarkably pretty race in the Apprentices' Plate, which he won for Mr. J. B. Joel on Quite Ready, and in the same race there figured a cheery little lad, C. Jackson by name, who can go to scale at 3-st. 12-lb. The Column Produce Stakes also fell to Mr. J. B. Joel, his colt Chestnut, by Persimmon, just managing to get home a head in front of Amitie. The heavy going and the substantial burden of 9-st. 5-lb. prevented Mark Time from having much to say to the finish for the Babraham Plate, in which Glenamoy, after looking all over a winner, had to accept a decisive beating by Pradella, with King's Limner an indifferent third, a performance for which, however, Orator made some amends to Lord Durham, by winning the Forty-sixth Sale Stakes for him. A very exciting contest took place for the Granby Plate, the last race of the day, which resulted in a verdict in favour of Sir E. Vincent's Cythera by a short head in front of Lord Ellesmere's Crank.

The hollow victory of Mr. F. Alexander's Chuckaway in the Second Welter Handicap on the concluding day of the Craven Meeting drew renewed attention to Andover for the City and Suburban Handicap, and I fancy he will not be far from winning that popular event. The Duke of Portland's St. Oswald, who won the Craven Stakes, is a neat, useful-looking colt; but unless I am mistaken when they meet later on Shilfa, who was second to him in this race, will turn the tables on him. It may have escaped the notice of a good many people that Shilfa is engaged in the Derby, and I shall be by no means surprised to see him make a bold attempt to win that race. Mr. Sol Joel's French-bred Imperial II., by Clairon out of Immortelle, gave such an exhibition of speed in the Flying Handicap that he is probably at the present moment the best sprinter in England. His many friends were more than glad to hear that the Conyngham Cup had been won by Harry Beasley on his own horse, Lively Lad, and Captain Rasbotham has been the recipient of many congratulations on his successful ride in the Scottish Grand National.

Whatever the quality of the racing at Easter may be, it never fails to attract immense crowds, and we are glad that at the moment the weather prospects are of the best, since enjoyment of the Easter meetings depends upon plenty of sunshine almost more than it does at those of any other time.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

NOTES FROM NEWMARKET

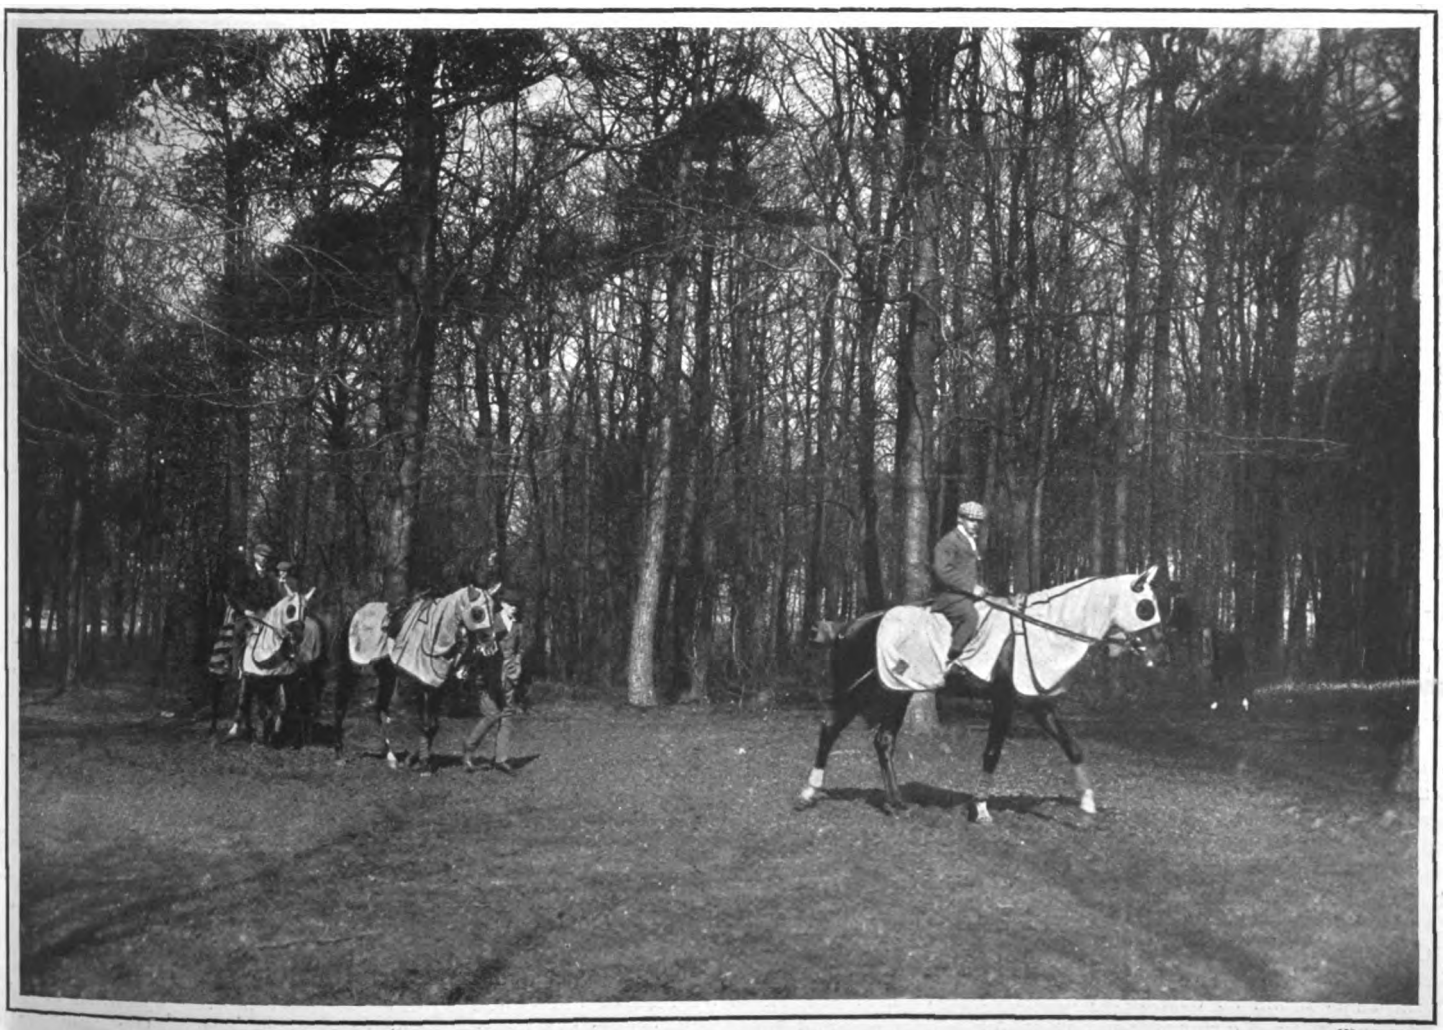
W. A. Rouch.

WAITING FOR ORDERS.



W. A. Rouch.

THROUGH THE PLANTATION.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

APART from its other historical performances, it must not be forgotten that the Russian Baltic Fleet was the first large Naval unit to "point a moral and adorn a tale" in a strangely significant direction. Everyone knows that the problem of coaling at sea has long been regarded as one of almost supreme importance, and it goes without saying that its puzzling character has been all in our favour. Great Britain being a nation possessing numerous coaling stations, and one, moreover, whose policy it has always been to build war-ships of large coal-carrying capacity, the longer other countries remained without any coaling stations to speak of, and the longer they went on building ships carrying only short supplies of coal, the more marked our Naval superiority was bound to be. That, of course, is a mere elementary truism. But the truth is often capable of inconvenient developments. When the idea of the despatch of the Baltic Fleet was first mooted, general incredulity was expressed as to the possibility of such an enterprise. Russia had no coaling stations on the route, her ships had no extraordinary coal-carrying capacity, and coaling at sea was still a difficult and often unsatisfactory process. But the Baltic Fleet started, and the progress it actually made is perhaps the most serious Naval lesson which the British Empire has learnt since the demonstration of the value of the torpedo.

Of course, it was clear that sooner or later the time would come when the fighting radius of war-ships would be enormously increased by the possibility of coaling expeditiously and safely at sea. There was also an entirely new set of chances to be taken in regard to oil fuel, since it was evident that oil could be pumped into a battle-ship or cruiser from a tank steamer much more easily than coal could be transported from a collier. It was obvious, too, that improvements in these directions would cut both ways; and the fact that the Admiralty was going ahead both in the matter of experiments in coaling at sea and in that of oil fuel was reassuring. But the circumstance that the Russian Baltic Fleet, without the advantage of Temperley transporters, and relying solely on coal for its engine fuel, managed to get so many thousand miles, has brought the new conditions of Imperial defence home to us with singular force, and it is earnestly to be desired that no official effort will be wanting to instruct the British public as to the real significance of the lesson involved. The supreme importance of strong battle-fleets remains, of course, uninfluenced. But those who have always deprecated any decrease in the cruiser-battle-ship class will find a powerful argument in the new order of things indicated by the actual achievements of the "Second Pacific Squadron" of the Russian Navy.

It is interesting to the writer of these notes to reflect that long ago he foreshadowed some such difficulty as that which is reported to have arisen in connection with the relative positions of Lord Kitchener as Commander-in-Chief in India and Sir Edmund Elles, the Military Member of the Viceroy's Council. It is exasperating, of course, for a strong Commander-in-Chief to have his vote on the Council neutralised by that of the Military Member, and Lord Kitchener is not by any means the first Commander-in-Chief in India to kick against the restriction thus involved. With the Viceroy possibly supporting the Military Member, and the Secretary of State possibly supporting the Commander-in-Chief, an intolerable situation could easily be reached, the effect of which upon the efficiency of the Indian Army is better imagined than described. But Lord Curzon, the great "K.," Sir Edmund Elles, and Mr. Brodrick are all sensible and shrewd, as well as strong men, and it should not be difficult to avoid a regrettable impasse. The real lesson of the situation is applicable nearer home. Some day we may hope to have a great soldier as First Military Member of the Army Council who will want to level up the Army, just as the present First Lord of the Admiralty is levelling up the Navy, "off his own bat." If that great soldier happens to be "K.," one fears that either the current War Secretary and the rest of the Army Council will have to sit still and look on, or serious discomfort will ensue.

Johnson and Logan.

THE "CARNARVON."

The new cruiser "Carnarvon," which recently passed her official trials on the Clyde with most satisfactory results. When completed, the "Carnarvon" will become a Devonport ship for manning and other purposes.

Captain Philip Tillard, A.D.C., who has been reappointed to the "London" to date from the 26th inst., has been in command of the great battle-ship since August, 1903. He is in his fortieth year of service, and so is hardly to be accounted exceptionally lucky, notwithstanding his accelerated promotion to Lieutenant from the Royal yacht. Captain Tillard has seen a good deal of important service in the East, and was Lieutenant of the "Bacchante" during the operations in 1885-87 which ended in the annexation of Upper Burma. He landed with the Naval Brigade in that campaign, and was again to the front in the operations in China in 1900, being mentioned in despatches by General Gaselee, commanding the British contingent.

Digitized by Google

IN RICHMOND PARK.

"GREEN GROW THE RASHES, O!"

There are few parts of the outskirts of London to which the jaded town-dweller wends his way more willingly than to Richmond. Permission has recently been accorded to the Volunteer Forces to drill in the Park.

Odol not only cleanses the teeth but also insures them against decay.

TO USE ODOL: Mix a few drops with water, rinse, and then brush the teeth in the ordinary way; gargle with the remainder. The cost of Odol, half-a-crown a flask, or eighteenpence the half-size, is moderate when it is remembered that a flask will last for months. Of all Chemists.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

AT the end of 1902 Mr. T. Fisher Unwin ventured upon a somewhat bold undertaking—the issue, at a very low price, of a special series of books for Continental readers. The experiment has been abundantly justified by results, and the neat grey volumes of Unwin's Library are now to be seen at all the chief booksellers on the Continent, as well as on many railway bookstalls. Travellers will do well to look out for this collection, which now contains some forty volumes, mostly of fiction, by the best writers of the day, though works of a more serious character are occasionally included.

Unwin's Library.

The handy size and exceptional lightness of the books make them peculiarly convenient for carrying about. The price is astonishingly low — only 2-fr. or 1-mark 50; and a special feature of the collection is that each work of fiction is complete in one volume. The books are all printed in Great Britain; their type is large and clear, and they appear in most cases simultaneously with the ordinary English editions. A well-known Anglo-Continental journal, the Davos Courier, says of them: "They are the best thing that has yet been done in the way of English books for Continental circulation."

* * *

A NEW monograph on the famous mediæval city of Nuremberg is about to be published by Messrs. A. and C. Black in their smaller series of Colour Books. The illustrations are by Arthur G. Bell, who is a constant exhibitor at the Royal Academy, the New Gallery, the Institute of Painters in Water-colours, and elsewhere. The letterpress is by Mrs. Bell, who is the author of many art publications. Both the pictures and the letterpress were done on the spot during a visit of many weeks made last year. The book is, therefore, a very actual and faithful picture of the Nuremberg of to-day.

Nuremberg.

* * *

A NEW novel by Mr. Max Pemberton is always eagerly looked for, and his latest publication, "'Mid the Thick Arrows" (Hodder and Stoughton), will not disappoint his numerous admirers. Mr. Pemberton has deserted history and politics this time, and given us a novel of modern life, which shows that he is quite as much at home in this class of book as in those with which his name is chiefly associated. "'Mid the Thick Arrows" is a story of Society life, and is concerned with a millionaire, who, in his youth, has married the wrong sort of woman, and has to pay for it later in life when all things should be going well with him. The book is very hard to put down. It is needless to say that Mr. Pemberton knows exactly how to make the best of his plot, and his plot is a good one. The book has the further advantage of being extremely well illustrated by Mr. Fred Pegram, R.D.A., one of whose drawings we reproduce on this page.

'Mid the Thick Arrows.

* * *

TO his excellent little series of dark blue shilling volumes, which began with the Mark Rutherford books, Mr. Unwin has recently added "The Outcasts and Other Stories," by Maxim Gorky. The volume contains, besides "The Outcasts," two short stories, "Waiting for the Ferry" and "The Affair of the Clasps"; they are all excellently translated, and are stories which must demand attention, even were it not that Gorky is, necessarily, very prominent to the public mind at the present time. It is to be hoped that his recent experiences will not turn him entirely from literature to political reform. Valuable as his work may be in the latter direction, more permanent and wide-spreading good must result in the end from his work in the former, though many years may have to pass before its influence becomes appreciable.

The Outcasts.

* * *

THERE is some capital fun in "Misrepresentative Men," by Harry Graham (Colonel D. Streamer), which we have received from Messrs. Gay and Bird. The table of contents alone is delightful. We find Theodore Roosevelt jostling Bacon, Adam next door to Joan of Arc, and Mr. Winston Churchill following hard upon Nero. The verses on each subject are full of humour, and we are seized with a desire to quote them all; but taking one at random, we give the first stanza of his poem on Bacon:

Misrepresentative Men.

"In far Elizabethan days
(Ho! By my Halidome! Gadzooks!)
Lord Bacon wrote his own essays,
And lots of other people's books;
Annexing as a pseudonym
Each author's name that suited him."

There is humour, too, in the illustrations by Mr. F. Strothmann, one of which we reproduce.

"IT WAS WELL FOR HER THAT SHE DID NOT KNOW."

One of the illustrations, by Fred Pegram, in "'Mid the Thick Arrows," by Max Pemberton. Published by Hodder and Stoughton.

* * *

WE have been invited to tea by Mr. Herbert Compton in a little volume called "Come to Tea with Us," which has been published by the Anti-Tea Duty League, of which Mr. Compton is the organising secretary. Part of his book is concerned with a very racy and amusing description of a tea-planter's life, and he talks in general very chattily and pleasantly about tea—how it is grown, how it is made, what it costs, and so on. There is no concealing the fact that Mr. Compton's tea-cup contains a chasse of something other than interesting information. It is, in fact, a manifesto of the League. As such we have no concern with it in these columns, but it makes good reading. The illustrations, some of which are by Mr. Tom Browne, are very good, and include the poster cartoons relating to the taxation of tea which are at present amusing or puzzling us on all the hoardings.

Tea with Mr. Herbert Compton.

* * *

MESSRS. S. W. PARTRIDGE AND CO., who do so much for present-day children in the production of interesting and serviceable books, announce a new "Life of Nelson," specially written for boys by Mr. J. Cuthbert Hadden, who is already known for his "Nelson Navy Book." It is a good subject, and Mr. Hadden will be very unfortunate if he does not produce a very popular and successful book, which will come with especial appropriateness during the present year.

A Boy's Life of Nelson.

"WHEN EVE APPEARED UPON THE SCENE."

From a drawing by F. Strothmann. Reproduced from "Misrepresentative Men," by Harry Graham Published by Messrs. Gay and Bird.

BOOKS TO READ.

Miniatures, by Dudley Heath. The Connoisseur's Library. (Methuen.)

English Embroidery, by A. F. Kendrick. Library of Applied Arts. (Newnes.)

Robert Browning, by C. H. Herford. Modern English Writers. (Blackwood.)

The Taming of the Brute, by Frances Harrod (Frances Forbes-Robertson). (Methuen.)

A Vagrant Englishwoman, by Catherine J. Dodd. (Smith, Elder.)

A Frontier Mystery, by Bertram Mitford. (White.)

A Spoiler of Men, by Richard Marsh. (Chatto and Windus.)

'Mid the Thick Arrows, by Max Pemberton. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

Penthesilea, by Laurence Binyon. (Constable.)

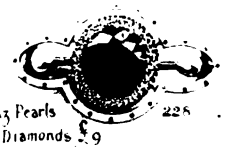
The Outdoor Handy-book, by D. C. Beard. (Newnes.)

Two Argonauts in Spain, by Jerome Hart. New edition. (Longmans.)

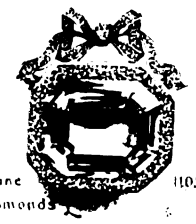
Digitized by Google

Diamond Brooches
And Pendants

Crysolites & Diamonds £22



Topaz Pearls & Diamonds £9



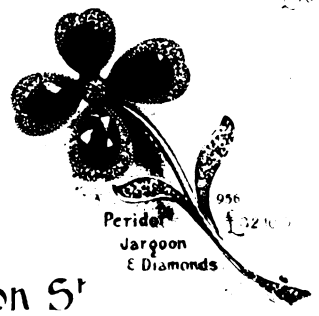
Tourmaline £14

Aquamarine & Diamonds £105

Pearls & Diamonds £14

Pink Tourmaline & Diamonds £36

£22

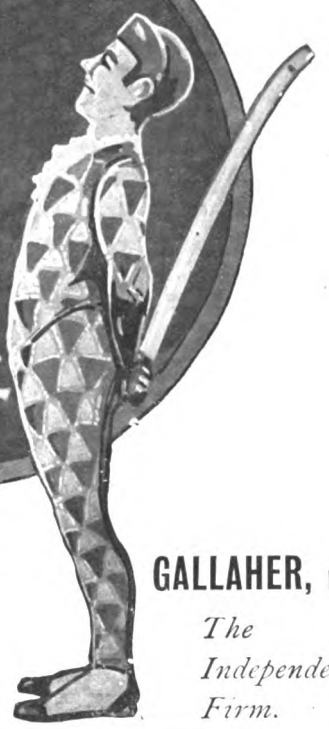


Peridot Jargoon & Diamonds £22

Hancocks
Corner of Bruton St
New Bond St London W.

HARLEQUIN FLAKE

The SIGN of a GOOD SMOKE



A Concentrated Tobacco for Pipe Smokers Delightfully Cool.

Sold everywhere in 1, 2, & 4 oz. Tins.

GALLAHER, Ltd.,
The Independent Firm.

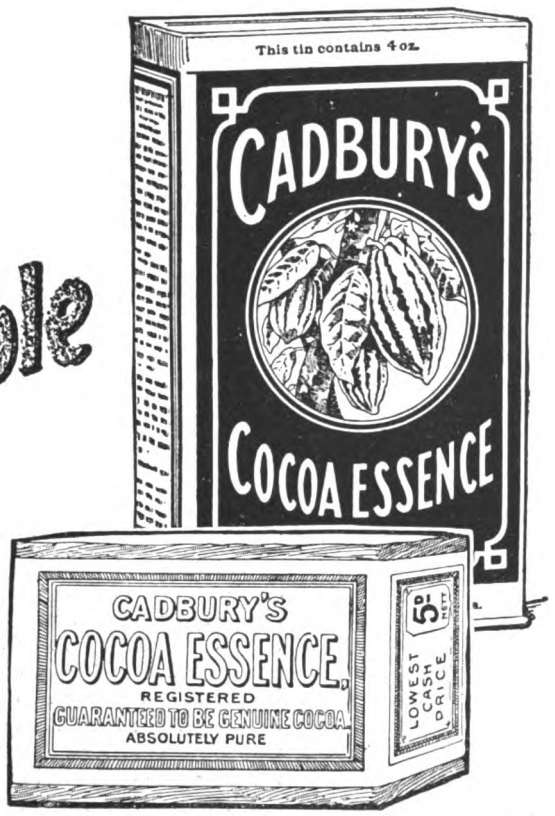
The Most Seasonable Drink is Cocoa



The Best and Most Delicious Cocoa

CADBURY'S

Absolutely Pure therefore BEST

Digitized by Google

THE MODERN CICERONE.

"Historic Sites and Scenes of England," issued by the Great Western Railway Company, 1905.

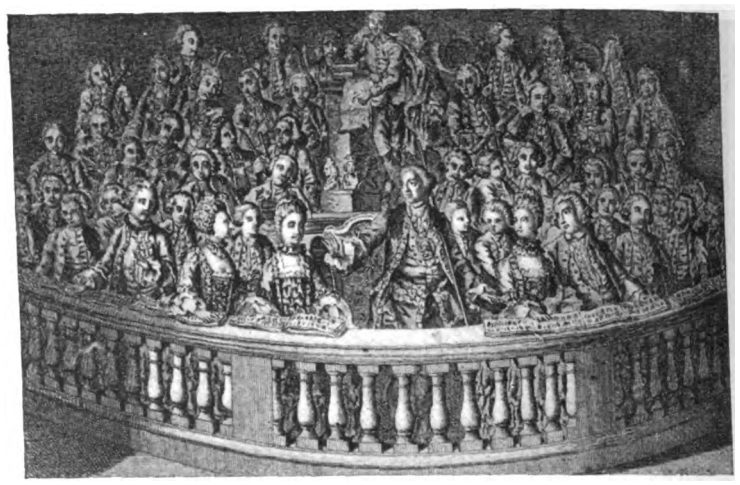
THE literary attainments of a nation are indicated by its guide-books, and it is a significant fact that the average Englishman still steers clear of them. But the end of the nineteenth century saw also the end, practically speaking, of the utilitarian guide-book era, the era in which facts were stated for the benefit of the traveller in the baldest and least interesting manner, and no attempt at careful or even cohesive compilation was apparent in the brochures which were sold at extortionate prices, and were of little actual value when obtained.

But with the coming of a new century, a new spirit seemed to enter into the councils of our railway companies, and during the past five years there has been a steady and gratifying improvement in the composition and appearance of the books which some at least of them have issued gratis. And among the pioneers in the new movement have been the Great Western Railway, whose guide-books are to-day worthy to rank with works published and sold in tens of thousands at 10s. and even higher prices. It is marvellous that a book such at that which they have just recently issued, which is, avowedly, for the benefit of American travellers, but which contains also so much of interest for Englishmen, concerning their native land and its historic sites and scenes, can be produced, copiously illustrated, written by a man whose attainments in literature are obviously of the very highest order, and printed on art paper, for the nominal price of one shilling. One is indeed inclined to wonder if the book is the work of one man only (the title-page gives us no information on the subject), for it seems impossible that any one man should have at his finger ends such a vast store of information upon the history and topography of Great Western England as is contained in the 120 odd literary pages of this brochure. For he is never at fault. From Hampton Court to Bath, from the Channel Islands to Wales, he knows them all, knows who are the most interesting historical personages connected with them, can give interesting little details of the rise and growth of the more important centres served by the system, and with it all can write good King's English with a flowing descriptive pen, which bespeaks the man of wide learning and acute observation.

To follow him through the pages of this entrancing volume would take far too much space, but we may note his interesting résumé of the history of the line. Paddington in 1804 was a rural village, and it was only in the year of Queen Victoria's Coronation that the line was first used, a train running on "the broadway" from the new terminus to Maidenhead. It was on the Great Western that Queen Victoria took her first railway journey in 1842 in the special saloon, now long since banished to Swindon as a relic of the "broad-gauge," and it was in the same train, over the same route, that King Edward first travelled by the iron road. It was fitting that the last journey of Queen Victoria should have been over the same line, and all will remember the sad and solemn journey of four years ago. From Paddington our author takes us up the Thames Valley to Eton of the College and Windsor of the Castle fame; through "beechy Bucks" to Stoke Poges, and Berks to Reading; to Oxford, of which he gives a most interesting account, and so into Shakespeare's country, the bourn from which, to adapt Hamlet's words, no devout traveller would wish to return. Thence we pass into Warwick and so to Bath, to which he devotes perhaps the most interesting chapter in his book.



THE SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL, 1769.

Garrick reciting the Jubilee Ode, assisted by a mixed choir, on April 23, 1769.

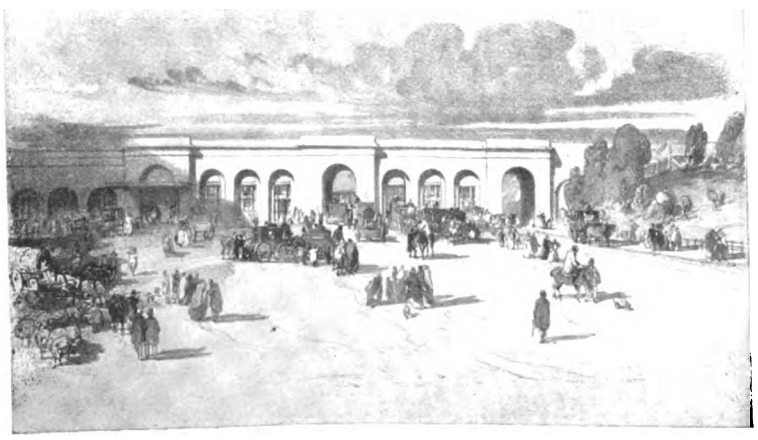
WEYMOUTH IN 1803.

George III.'s favourite watering-place, where he frequently stayed with Queen Charlotte at Gloucester Lodge.

We all know Bath. That is to say, we can all recall the fact that in the eighteenth century Bath was the social capital of the country, and the centre of all the gaiety and fashion of the day. But few of us realise that for three centuries Bath has been the Queen of English inland watering-places, and that it was not solely during the reign of Beau Nash that she was famous. And we certainly do not realise to the full the fact that Bath, as it stands to-day, is very much the same Bath as that wherein the political, social, and artistic stars of a century ago disported themselves. And yet between the Bath of 1904 and 1804 there lies this difference. In the early days of the last century Bath lay a whole day's journey from London, and even then the feat performed by the coaches "Mercury," "Prince of Wales," and "Duke of Clarence" was considered marvellous, the ordinary "machines" spending two days on the road. And now it is a two hours' train journey from Paddington, just time, that is, to skim comfortably through a light novel, two feats that our forefathers with their coaches and three-volume tomes surely never contemplated. Bath, we are told, was discovered by King Bladud, B.C. 863. Nor was he the only King who derived benefit from the healing properties of the springs; and if, as our anonymous author says, the town is happy which has no history, either the aphorism is all wrong, or Bath must be reckoned one of the saddest spots in the whole world.

The Spas of England receive their due meed of attention, as do the cathedrals, and one of the best-written chapters in the book is that devoted to the "shores of the Severn Sea." These few lines will serve to show that the book is exhaustive in its dealings with the topographical. Nothing, however, but a personal examination of its pages can carry conviction as to its fund of information upon the historical aspects of the wide expanse of country connected with London by the Great Western Railway. Intended primarily for the American traveller, "Historic Sites and Scenes of England" is a work which the student will do well to keep in an easily-accessible corner of his bookshelves. For it combines all the useful qualities of an authoritative work of reference with a charmingly-told story of a trip through parts of England rich in historical associations and literary connections.

F.



PADDINGTON STATION

As it appeared sixty years ago, when first Queen Victoria travelled by the Great Western Railway. She travelled by a special Royal saloon, which is still to be seen in the museum at Swindon.

Digitized by Google

"AN OLD FORMULA REVIVED"

Carlin's
'Calross'
Mixture

A Blend of the choicest tobaccos.
Exquisite flavour & delicate aroma.
Exceptionally cool smoking.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Sold by leading tobacconists, & Sole Proprietors.

C.A. CARLIN & Co. 177 PICCADILLY

¼LB. SAMPLE TIN 2/6 POST FREE

BENGER'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

Benger's Food with Milk forms a dainty, delicious and most easily digested cream.

"Retained when all other foods are rejected." London Medical Record.

Benger's Food is sold in tins by chemists, etc., everywhere.

AS PURCHASED BY ROYALTY & THE WORLD'S GREATEST MUSICIANS

The WORLD-FAMED "Angelus" PIANO-PLAYER

THE MOST PERFECT, ARTISTIC AND HUMAN-LIKE IN TECHNIQUE, WITH INSTANTANEOUS AND COMPLETE CONTROL OF TEMPO AND EXPRESSION.

The extraordinary success and popularity of the "ANGELUS" are undoubtedly due to its artistic excellence and the perfection to which the expression devices have been advanced. Their simplicity and completeness are the unique features of the "Angelus." The control is so perfect, the action so sensitive and effective, the response so immediate, that all the effects of expert hand-playing are realised with the most gratifying sense of mastery. The 'Angelus' is the only Piano-Player with Orchestral Organ Combination, or may be obtained as Piano-Player only. The 'Angelus Piano' (Drawing Room Upright Grand), with Player combined, can be used as an ordinary Piano, or with the Angelus Music Roll. In this form the Angelus cannot be seen even when being used. Deferred Payments arranged if desired. Discounts for Cash. All music-lovers are invited to write for Catalogue No. 41, or call at Angelus Hall, where demonstrations are given with pleasure

J. HERBERT MARSHALL, Dept. 41, 'Angelus' Hall, Regent House, 233, Regent St., London, W.

HARBUTT'S PLASTICINE

The charm of Home Modelling is greatly enhanced when you use Plasticine; a clean, dainty material made in five beautiful colors.

THE COMPLETE MODELLER.

A most useful outfit containing every requisite, 2/10 Post Free.

Cheaper boxes, 8d. and 1/3, post free.

P DEPT.

W. HARBUTT, A.R.C.A. PLASTICINE WORKS BATHAMPTON AND STUDIO. BATH.

GLOBE

Globe Polish is now supplied to the Public in the form of either a paste or liquid. It is universally acknowledged to be the best Polish on the Market, and, indeed, commands a Sale far exceeding all rivals. It is unaffected by climatic changes, and is consequently invaluable to Motorists. Unlike certain liquid and other polishes containing Naphtha, it is in either form guaranteed to be Non-Inflammable. It will not scratch the softest metal work. It is absolutely non-injurious to the skin of the user.

RAIMES & CO., LTD., Tredegar Works, London, E., and Stockton-on-Tees.

'DAREN' BREAD

Awarded 32 HONOURS for Excellence of Quality.

TRY A LOAF.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray postage.

THEY TOUCH THE LIVER

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

FOR HEADACHE
DIZZINESS
BILIOUSNESS
TORPID LIVER
CONSTIPATION
SALLOW SKIN
THE COMPLEXION

SMALL PILL. DOSE. PRICE.

Be sure they are Genuine
Carter's Little Liver Pills, in blue and white wrapper.
Look for signature—

Brent Good

All Chemists, 1/1½. Send for Booklet "Character Reading by Handwriting."

British Depot 46 Holborn Viaduct, London.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

ENGRAVED PORTRAITS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

ONCE more St. George's Day (April 23) is approaching, bringing with it not only the festival of England's patron saint, but the birthday of England's greatest poet. On this particular occasion the Swan of Avon is more than usual to the fore, for the project of a national memorial is again in the air, and Mr. Beerbohm Tree has contrived to demonstrate that, from a managerial point of view, Shakespeare does not, as has been long maintained, always spell ruin. Up to the present time Shakespeare centenary commemorations have not been a conspicuous success. We know nothing of that of 1664, which happened between the Restoration and the Great Fire of London. Garrick's "tribute of admiration" a century later was spoiled by the weather and several sins against good taste which provoked the ridicule that kills. In 1864 Sir Augustus Harris was not old enough to organise a spectacle worthy of so promising a tercentenary, and the world has still some time to wait for either 1914 or 1964. Nevertheless, the memorial crusade is making Shakespeare in some sense a question of the hour. His engraved portraits, good, bad, and indifferent, are more prominently displayed than usual, and enquiries are made for the book published some eighty years ago, which tells you all that was then known of the portraits of Shakespeare by Droeshout and others, especially of those executed after the Felton, the Chandos, and the Duke of Somerset's pictures. In dealing with the subject, Mr. Wivell attempts an exposé of spurious pictures and prints. No better book on the subject has been produced since, although several paintings not then generally known have since come to the front, like that known as the Hunt portrait, now preserved at Shakespeare's birthplace. A short time ago a very curious picture of Shakespeare came into the possession of Mr. James Tregaskis of the Caxton Head, viz., a head painted on a piece of canvas, fixed by tiny pegs to one side of an ancient pair of bellows. It was reputed to have belonged to Queen Elizabeth, and was certainly once the property of Talma, at the sale of whose effects it passed to M. Wartel for the sum of 3,100-fr. Round this portrait are three quaint rhyming inscriptions in Gothic letters, the first running thus:

THE HUNT PORTRAIT OF SHAKESPEARE
Preserved at his birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon.

> "Whome have we here stucke on the bellowes—
> Thatte Prynce of Goode Fellowes,
> Willie Shakespere!"

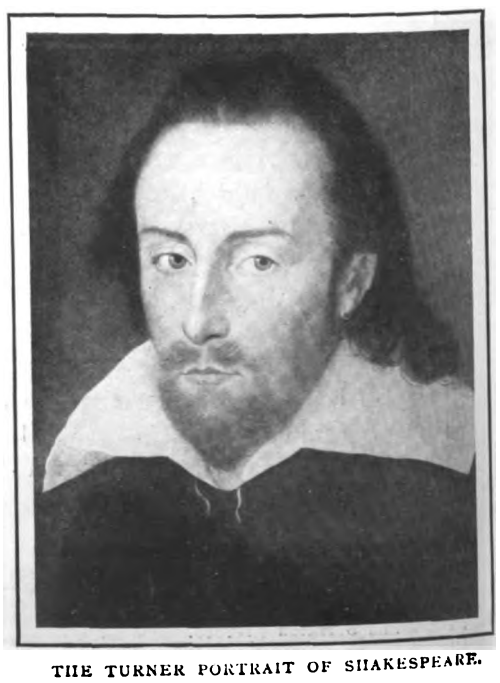
It fetched between 80-guineas and 90-guineas. Mr. Tregaskis has now accumulated no less than ninety-six different portraits of the poet comprising woodcuts and engravings in mezzo tint, line, and stipple. Mr. Albert Sutton of Manchester has secured a second collection, somewhat smaller, but remarkable for the presence of several fine proofs, a genuine Droeshout head, the portrait dedicated to Edmund Kean, and an impression of the Duke of Buckingham's private plate, the work of Scriven. Both Mr. Tregaskis and Mr. Sutton have several views of the tomb at Stratford, which has undergone so many vicissitudes. The following may be taken as an almost complete list of the painters and sculptors known to have chosen Shakespeare as a subject of illustration. It begins with Burbage, and then come Ozias Humphrey, Gerard Johnson, Burney, Thurston, Hilliard, Copantiers, Ravaillac, Banks, Cipriani, Holder, Pye, and Zoust. The engravers include Droeshout, Marshall, Vertue, Vandergucht, Duchange, Miller, Picart, Gravelot, Guernier, Hartland, Holl, Prescott, Bennett, Godefroy, Sawyer, Cooper, Locour, Houbraken, Cochran, Godby, Stow, Charles Turner, Grignion, Kent, Birrell, Porier, Scriven, Girtin, Delattre, Cook, Hall, Trotter, Wright, Swaine, Adlard, Thompson, Sharp, Pass, Knight, Parr, Rothwell, Finden, Armstrong, Warren, Neagle, Dean, and Wivell himself, who prepared some very charming drawings for the book.

The Shakespearian revivals announced to take place at His Majesty's Theatre under the auspices of Mr. Beerbohm Tree are sure to intensify the interest felt in the general question of early "heads" of William Shakespeare. If the reliable contemporary portraits of the Bard of Avon are few, the number of views of his tomb in Stratford-on-Avon church is very great. One collector alone has over forty prints of Shakespeare's monument—all of them later than the time when the "effigy" was whitewashed by Malone, and repaired at the expense of Roger Kemble.

B.

THE ZOUST PORTRAIT OF SHAKESPEARE.

THE GODEFROY ENGRAVING OF SHAKESPEARE.



THE TURNER PORTRAIT OF SHAKESPEARE.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.
JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS
53. SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

THE MISSES
H. & I. WOOLLAN
(Under Royal Patronage)
are showing a
UNIQUE
Collection of
Antiques.
Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.
Showrooms: First Floor.
28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

The GARDEN
The Leading Gardening Newspaper for Amateur and Professional Gardeners.
PRICE 1D. Weekly.
The Flower Garden. The Rose Garden.
The Kitchen Garden. The Fruit Garden.
New and Rare Plants, Orchids, etc., etc.
GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS A SPECIAL FEATURE.
A COLOURED PLATE IS GIVEN WITH ALTERNATE ISSUES.
CONSULT THE ADVERTISEMENT PAGES FOR EVERY REQUISITE FOR THE GARDEN.
To be had of all Newsagents and Bookstalls.
Specimen Copy post free from the Manager, THE GARDEN, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.
Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

DINARD.

HOTEL DES BAINS.—Modern comforts; electric light; moderate charges.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

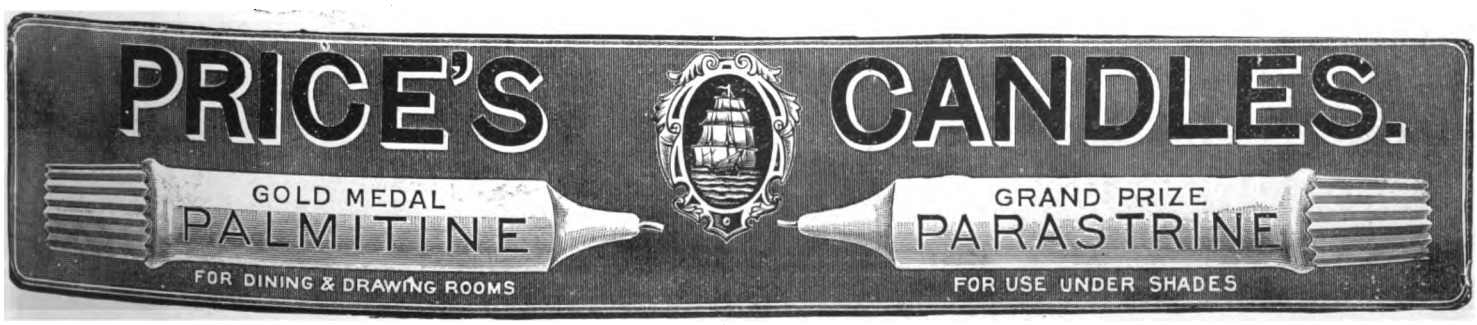
MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.
2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
,, 6 ,, ,, 6 ,, ,,
,, 12 ,, ,, 7 ,, ,,
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.
A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.



Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

ALTHOUGH the British competitors at the Monaco Motor-boat Meeting were very few in number, they rendered so excellent an account of themselves that the alarm which our neighbours across the Channel have recently expressed at the progress of the motor industry in this country, is likely to be still further increased. The most interesting day of the meeting was Tuesday, April 11, on which were decided the events for the 8 to 12 mètres (26·2-ft. to 39·4-ft.) racers, and the 6·5 to 8 mètres (21·3-ft. to 26·2-ft.) cruisers, and the postponed event for the racers under 8-mètres in length, which had proved a fiasco on the preceding Sunday owing to the bad weather.

* * *

Eight boats started in the first race, the course being eight rounds of a 12·500-kilomètre course, or 100-kilomètres in all. "Mercédès-Charley" took the lead for the first two rounds, after which she gave up, owing to heated bearings or a derangement of her magneto. "Napier II.," which has a Yarrow hull fitted with two Napier 75-h.p. motors driving twin screws, then obtained first place, and gradually increasing her lead, won easily in 2-hr. 25-min. 42-sec. "Napier," a Saunders boat with a single 80-h.p. Napier engine, owned by Lord Howard de Walden, was second, 20-min. 36-sec. slower. "C.G.V." was a bad third, and "Suzon-Legru" fourth. "Baby II.," another English boat, built by Messrs. Brooke of Lowestoft, but quite outclassed so far as engine-power is concerned, finished the course, arriving fifth. The remaining competitors broke down hopelessly.

The winner's speed works out at an average of 41·2-kilomètres, or 25½-miles, an hour, or about 4-miles slower than she attained during her recent trials on the Thames. Her fastest round of the course was done in 16-min. 28-sec., equal to a speed of 45·5-kilomètres, or 28·3-miles, an hour. "Mercédès-Charley" showed a higher speed than this in the first two rounds, which were covered in 15-min. 21-sec. and 15-min. 41-sec. respectively, the former representing 48·8-kilomètres, or about 30¼-miles, per hour. A noteworthy feature about the Napier-Saunders boat is her extreme lightness, the weight of hull, engine, and all fittings being under 1-ton. Her length is close on 40-ft. and her beam 4-ft. 6-in. She is built of four thin skins of mahogany, sewn together with phosphor-bronze wire, and the usual framing is entirely absent. On the Monday she collided with "Palaisoto" without suffering any damage, although the latter boat was less fortunate.

* * *

The race for the 26-ft. cruisers to Nice, Mentone, and back to Monaco, was won by the Swiss boat "Excelsior VII.," at an average speed of about 12¾-miles an hour. "Nogentais" (Richard Brasier) was second, and "Bigort-Delahaye" third. Six boats completed the course. The postponed event for the 26-ft. racers resulted in a win for "La Rapière," fitted with a 100-h.p. Panhard motor, with a bore and stroke of 170-m.m. "Billancourt," a Renault-Pitre boat, was second, and "Antoinette I." third. The time of the winner was only 36-sec. longer than that of the larger "Napier II." in her race. She ran, moreover, with remarkable regularity from start to finish, and the performance must be regarded as a very excellent one.

* * *

On the Wednesday, the big racers, of which so much had been expected, made their début. Only two boats put in an appearance, "Le Dubonnet" and "Pi-Ouit IV.," "Panhard-Levassor" being an absentee owing to an injury to her hull. "Pi-Ouit," which is fitted with a 200-h.p. Turcat-Mèry motor, proved an easy winner, covering the 100-kilomètres of the course in 3-hr. 11-min., at the poor speed of 31½-kilomètres, or 19½-miles, an hour. In the race for the 40-ft. cruisers, the Italian "Fiat X.," of which we gave an illustration last week, was first, with "Têtu," a Delahaye-Tellier boat, second, and "Delahaye I." third. The chief event on Thursday was a race for the big cruisers between 40-ft. and 60-ft. in length. "Dietrich II." won by 40-min., "Mercédès-C.P." was second, and "Chantiers D'Antibes" third. A sensational incident occurred during the afternoon. "Trèfle-à-Quatre," the famous Richard Brasier craft, was starting on a trial run in charge of her English owner, Mr. Thubron, when she caught fire. Her crew managed to scramble on board a neighbouring yacht, but it was found necessary to sink "Trèfle" in order to extinguish the flames.

* * *

On Friday was decided the "Championship of the Sea," open to cruisers and racers. The Napiers failed to repeat their previous success, and were unable to finish the course. "Panhard-Levassor" was first, averaging over 30-miles an hour for 200-kilomètres, and "La Rapière" second, nearly an hour behind.

Topical.

THE MOTOR-BOAT REGATTA.
The boats at their moorings in Monaco Bay.

Digitized by Google

IMMEDIATE ARIEL DELIVERY

THE FOLLOWING MODELS OF THE CELEBRATED . .

ALL BRITISH CAR

are ready for immediate delivery.

15-18 h.p. Side Entrance as illustrated,
£550.

18-22 h.p. = £625.

THE NEW 20 H.P. ARIEL.

Particulars should be in your hands.
Can we post them to you?

The favour of your visit to our showrooms will be esteemed. Free trials arranged.

The ARIEL MOTOR CO., Ltd., 127-130, Long Acre, W.C.

HUMBER CYCLES.

"Beeston Humber is synonymous with absolutely the highest design, workmanship, and material possible in a modern bicycle."—The Cyclist.

— TWO SPEED GEARS — FITTED TO ALL MODELS.

Humber Cycles are supreme wherever they are known.

By Royal Warrant Cycle Manufacturers to H.M. King Edward VII.

and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales.

£8 : 8 : 0
— TO —
£18 : 18 : 0

Catalogue with full details sent free on application to

Humber Limited

WORKS:
BEESTON (NOTTS.) and COVENTRY . .

DEPOTS:
LONDON - 32 Holborn Viaduct
LIVERPOOL - 73 Bold Street
MANCHESTER - 5 Deansgate
BIRMINGHAM 4 Victoria Square
NOTTINGHAM - Grey Friargate
SOUTHAMPTON 27 London Road

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR THE PARENT MAKE OF THE GENUINE

ROCHET-SCHNEIDER CARS,

FOR GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

LA LOCOMOTRICE CARS

(LICENCE ROCHET-SCHNEIDER)

AND BELGRAVE CARS.

DONNE & WILLANS, Ltd.

29a, GILLINGHAM ST., SOUTH BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
(200 yards from Victoria Station.)

In choosing for flight the £150 £150

OLDSMOBILE

THE BEST LIGHT CAR.

Look at this reliability record for one year, 4,572 miles covered.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER RECEIVED FROM A MEDICAL MAN.

MESSRS. JARROTT AND LETTS. CORNWALL,
March 8th, 1905.

DEAR SIRS,

"I completed my first year's running on the 5 h.p. OLDSMOBILE I had on Feb. 16th, 1904, and think you may like to hear how I've got on. I had no previous knowledge of cars, and have looked after the car myself. It has been out almost every day, and there has never been a day on which the car was not fit to run. . . . . It has run in all weathers, including frost and snow, over an extremely hilly country; most of my hills have a grade of 1 in 6 (measured) somewhere on them. In the twelve months I have covered 4,572 miles, and have never had a tow. . . . The car has the record of having climbed the worst hill in my district without having to turn out its passengers. The 'Olds' has been such a boon that I cannot say too much in her favour."

Yours very truly,
(Signed) MONTAGUE W. ROE.

This speaks for itself and proves that the

OLDSMOBILE

Accomplishes everything and goes anywhere.

Prices—Two Seated Car, £150. Four Seated Car, 200 Guineas.

For full particulars and catalogue, write—
CHARLES JARROTT & LETTS, LIMITED,
45, Great Marlborough Street, LONDON, W.

Telephone No. 2362 Gerrard. Telegrams "Jemidar," London.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

As usual at these changes of season, we get another spurt of tiny checks, in black and white chiefly, but also in various colours this time. The tempting tourist trips announced everywhere promise to have a greater success than usual, for almost everyone you meet is on shopping intent, getting ready for the Easter exodus to foreign lands. Black and white costumes in every style will be general favourites for these occasions; but plain coloured tailor-mades are much better form, and with the charming toques of every description to be had at the Maison Lewis of Regent Street, the tout ensemble is excellent. They also have the most quaint and picturesque creations in large hats, which are so becoming to young English faces, and give the simplest gown distinction. So many people, especially when travelling, spoil the whole effect of their toilette by inappropriate hats. This can so easily be avoided by a little thought and a judicious visit to the Maison Lewis.

Amongst other materials are some very pretty tweed mixtures, with just a dash of colour, that will prove welcome additions to spring and summer wardrobes; for they are light both in texture and colour, and with our always rather changeable climate, these will be found most useful. Muslin and linen dresses will be universal for summer wear, especially for the coming river season, which looks like being a prosperous one. Dressmakers are unusually busy, I am told, making quantities of these dainty gowns in all varieties. Daintiness and simplicity, but elegant simplicity, are the keynotes for summer apparel, and the daintiness must naturally be carried out in every tiny detail, from the sole of the foot to the crown of the head. I know of some well-cut French-made shirt blouses, with linen collars and cuffs, that look charming and appropriate with the linen coats and skirts. Voile gowns in plain colours, very simply made, with fully shirred skirts at the waist and falling in full graceful folds to the feet, are a most useful and desirable addition to the spring wardrobe. The bodices are drawn full from the shoulder and crossed over, just below the waist, and finished with a handsome steel buckle. Velvet of the same shade is used to soften the neck and wrists, and in some cases narrow ribbon velvet is run in sets of three rows around the bottom of the skirt. In other cases graduated sets of three tucks are made in the voile. This allows the skirt to flare out. Naturally, these gowns are nothing without a good full silk under-skirt, cut to the same shape as the material, with plenty of fulness in the flounces employed on it. One I saw the other day, carried out in a very delicate biscuit shade, with velvet ribbon just a tone or two deeper, was a deliciously-cut garment, almost moulded to the figure, yet with ample flow and voluminous folds. The cut was so admirable that it gave just the requisite line and graceful curves. There was just a touch of fine old lace at the neck and wrists, and the effect was so soft and restful that it made you wish the gown was yours, just ready to slip on when your husband returned, harassed and tired, from his long wearing business day! Poor husbands! How hard they do work, or rather, how they try to make their simple wives believe they do. For house wear the taffetas and many new varieties of silks will be worn. Francis of Grafton Street has a very pleasing and well-cut selection of these, and you always find novel designs in his select and exclusive establishment. It is not everybody who knows of this house, but those who do rather seem to keep their own counsel, on the principle of "When found, make a note of it"; and they do, but the notes are not circulated, even amongst their bosom friends. One very stylish silk gown I saw there was in a nut brown Louisine taffetas, made in the present favourite style for these silks, and eminently suitable for afternoon or visiting gowns. They have also at this house a specialité in motor-coats and all motor requisites. One very smartly-cut kid motor-coat was in a steel grey, with original tab trimmings in a darker tone of the same colour. Evening coats and mantles are another feature here, shown in all materials.

I spoke some time ago of the "Little Beauty" American waists for children of all ages and sizes, and have found out now where these are to be had, as the firm has established an agency for them over here. They really are the prettiest and most practical little garments. They are beautifully made, scientifically cut, and thoroughly well finished. The idea is excellent. They are so constructed as to attach all petticoats and other necessary adjuncts of a child's attire by means of sets of buttons, thereby reducing all unnecessary weight for children, and rendering them neat and pleasing to themselves. For boys, from infancy upwards, there are also all sizes, with suitable straps and buttons, thus avoiding the wearing of braces, and also giving them the necessary support. Americans are so very practical in their mode of dressing their little ones compared to us. They evidently make a greater study of hygiene for them than we do. Do you ever see English men or women with the free, graceful carriage of a well-bred American? This lies quite as much in the healthy clothing of the young, giving them freedom of movement without too much weight to carry, as in the developing exercises practised daily by all. R. D.

A STYLISH GOWN IN NUT BROWN LOUISINE TAFFETAS.
(Francis, 10, Grafton Street, W.)

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

Van Houten's Cocoa

Pure Soluble

The most Delicious of all cocoas.

"A perfect beverage, combining Strength, Purity and Solubility."—

Medical Annual.

A Cocoa you can Enjoy.

Tatcho

Ever since I began to use "Tatcho," and learnt from experience its value, I have recommended it to my friends and acquaintances, and in no case has it failed to meet with unqualified approval.

Zetland House, Maidenhead.

Used "Tatcho" for a short time, the result being that the hair began to grow fast and thick.

18, Ashburn Place, Kensington, W.

I guarantee that this preparation is made according to the formulæ recommended by me, has found "Tatcho" very beneficial, the falling-off of hair having ceased. "Tatcho" is the nicest preparation for the hair.

Torr-Aluinn, Dunoon, N.B.

I find "Tatcho" excellent, and better than anything I have ever tried in the course of a long life.

High Croft, Winchester.

Tatcho

Chemists and Stores.

Now on Sale at all Booksellers

THE

SPORTSMAN'S YEAR-BOOK.

Edited by A. WALLIS MYERS.

Price 3/6 net; post free, 3/10.

The Globe.—"Messrs. George Newnes have removed the reproach that the sportsman who wanted to have in one handy volume a summary of the doings of the year has up to now been ignored. The editor's aim to provide a record of personal achievements in the realm of sport which should possess the value of authenticity has been fully achieved."

The Star.—"Perhaps the most attractive feature of the book is the bijou biographies of leading living personalities in our national sporting life."

The Sportsman.—"One can only feel surprised that a book of this sort has been so long delayed."

GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 3-12, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

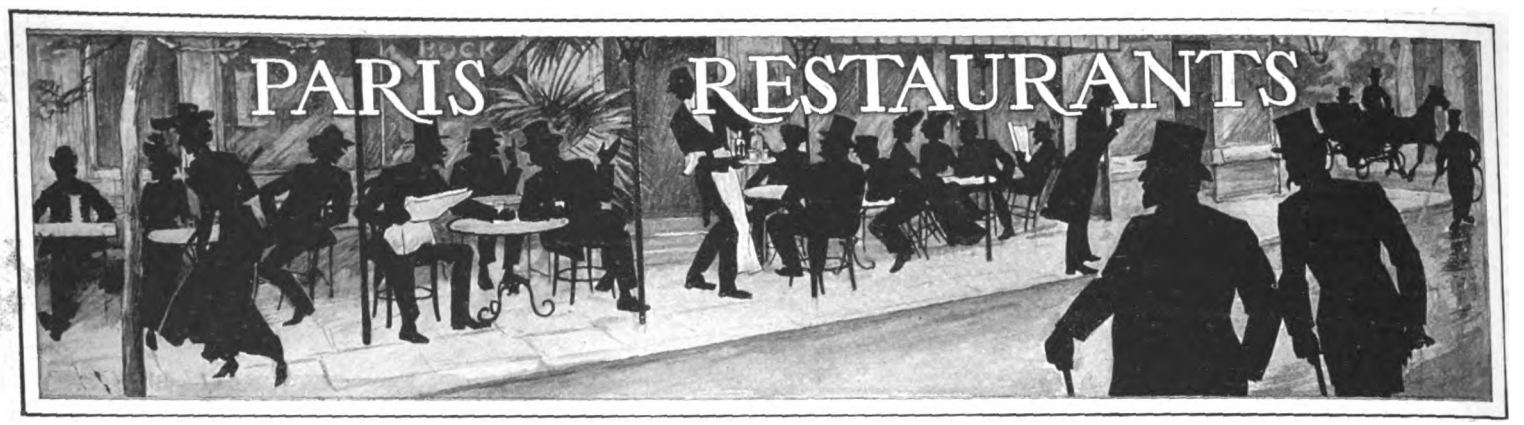
Digitized by Google



NOT long ago I happened to come across a passage in Méry's "Notes on Paris" wherein he says: "We have half-a-dozen establishments in Paris where a few individuals can be seen, cranks, who try to make the world believe that they prefer the sour liquid called 'beer' to the sweet generous wine of France. This 'fad,' I understand, came from the city on the Thames, and will assuredly find its way back again there when the last crank has died from the effects of the new beverage." Thus spoke good Méry in the year 1840, little thinking that in less than half a century an evolution—I might almost say revolution—would sweep over restaurants and cafés and reverse the order of things. If Méry came to life again his surprise would be great to see the "man in the city on the Thames" heartily pledging his new French chum in a bumper of claret, a compliment returned by the latter with enthusiasm—but in beer. And Méry would make nothing out of this exchange of expression of friendship and of national drinks. The fact is that it is somewhat bewildering. How did it really come about? It was the work of democracy, the levelling wave, which respects neither rank, nor title, nor national traditions, and has turned everything upside down. And thus the Brasseries—at one time only the haunt of the student and the stranger—became a national institution. In a measure, the restaurants themselves unconsciously helped to bring about this new state of affairs. They did not watch the change that had come over the Parisian who, after a night's entertainment at the theatre or concert, would have liked to take his wife—or his friend's—to a restaurant to supper, but did not dare to embark upon the venture for fear of the expense. And what an expense! Those who remember the prices charged at some of the well-known houses will shudder. A few among the more intelligent restaurateurs saw that the wind had altogether veered round, and immediately opened Brasseries, where an excellent luncheon, dinner, or supper could be had at a reasonable price. Some restaurateurs even went further, and, like Bignon, turned their aristocratic clientèle into the streets, and transformed their establishment into a beerhouse.

Among those who at once came strongly to the fore ranks undoubtedly La Brasserie Universelle, in the Avenue de l'Opéra. It burst, so to say, upon the public, and has since lost nothing of its popularity. It was here they invented the "hors d'œuvres trick," a flash of genius! As a rule in French restaurants the price of hors d'œuvres does not appear on the bill of fare; it is shrouded in mystery. The Brasserie Universelle, however, came boldly forward and informed the public with a flourish of trumpets that a

MENU DE DEJEUNER.

Hors d'Œuvres.
Merlans en Dauphin.
Filets de Bœuf à la Maintenon.
Chartreuse de Ris de Veau.
Canard Roti.
Salade.
Tourte aux Noix.
Monsieur Fromage.

chromatic scale of hors d'œuvres could be had there for the modest sum of fourpence! Everybody went to see that, and I, of course, among them. "Monsieur et Madame prennent des hors d'œuvres?" asked the waiter. We all replied yes, in unison, and waited in great excitement for the things that were coming. We did not wait long. Out they came. Celery, tomatoes, shrimps—au naturel and in a salad—sardines, smoked salmon, riettes de

"A HORS D'ŒUVRE"
One of the newest Paris menu cards.

tours, anchovies in every variety, herrings in every kind of sauce, olives, pickled cucumbers, etc., and all excellent. I think on every table there were no less than fourteen tempting small dishes; and I heard a gentleman, who had cast envious eyes at his neighbours, upbraid the waiter for having only a selection of thirteen! They promptly brought him half-a-dozen more delicacies, and he grunted his satisfaction. The Brasserie also devotes much attention to its cooking, which, indeed, is first-class, without aspiring to the haute cuisine. The price of the famous hors d'œuvres has gone up; but the smart management have thought of another "number," and this is the "cream." In the whole of France, if you ask for a "pot de cream," you will get about half a coffee-cup full. Not so at the Brasserie. There they place before you a huge jug containing half a gallon. It costs fivepence per person, and you can drink the lot if you like. I was told that a greedy German once took about three shillings worth, but that the mere sight of the appetising cream-jug now sends him into a fit.

And now to give some insight into the popular dishes served at luncheon and dinner to as compact a crowd as any at the witching feeding hours.

Fried Potatoes.—This is a speciality, not because they are better done here than anywhere else, but because it is a favourite vegetable with provincials and strangers. By the word fried I do not mean soufflé. The latter requires not only a special potato, but a special temperature for the hot fat that it is useless to insist upon in private kitchens. Fried potatoes, as they are cooked here, are the simplest things in the world, and when once the system is explained can be prepared by the merest amateur. A large pan full of fresh fat is necessary. It must be heated until it smokes. The potatoes are cut in rounds or sticks and thrown into the boiling liquid, which must not stop boiling. They are removed into a strainer after a few minutes, salted, and served. These potatoes are of a light colour, not browned in the least. The reason why the ordinary fried potato served in England is brown is in consequence of the small quantity of fat generally used, and if this fat has been used more than once.

Veau Niçoise.—This is another of the favourites of the house. The veal, which is an excellent meat in this country, is cut in pieces, rather thick; a good-sized piece of butter is put into a stewing-pan, and when hot about a dozen small onions are browned therein; the veal is then added and allowed to colour on both sides, peppered and salted, sprinkled with flour, and the meat half covered with hot water. The saucepan is then hermetically closed and the contents allowed to cook gently from two hours to two hours and a-half. In the meantime, half-a-dozen heads of salad-chicory as it is called here, endive as it is known in London, are boiled in water and then passed through a sieve, salted, peppered, and mixed with a little milk and a lump of butter. The veal is served in a round dish with its sauce and the cooked salad, which is now in a purée, placed round it. This is an excellent dish for a family luncheon.

Digitized by Google

SPRATT'S PATENT

POST FREE—
1905
Illustrated Catalogue of Game Appliances with Chapters by Practical Men on the Rearing of PHEASANTS, WILD DUCKS, and on the FRENCH SYSTEM
of Hand-Reared
PARTRIDGES.

Samples of Foods for
PHEASANTS, PARTRIDGES, WILD DUCKS or GROUSE, Post Free of
SPRATT'S PATENT LTD.,
24 and 25, Fenchurch Street, LONDON.

GAME FOODS.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE
TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES.
TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.
TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

BORWICK'S
5 GOLD MEDALS
FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY
BAKING POWDER
GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.
Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

TOOTH-ACHE
CURED INSTANTLY BY
BUNTER'S NERVINE
Prevents Decay. Saves Extraction. Sleepless Nights Prevented.
Neuralgic Headaches and all Nerve Pains removed by BUNTER'S NERVINE. All Chemists. 1s. 1½d., or on receipt of Stamps to 13, St. George Street, Norwich.

Preserve your Teeth!
BY USING FRAGRANT
FLORILINE

It imparts a
FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH
that is rare and delightful,
IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR
and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.
IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.
PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.
SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.
"Hydea"
is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.
THE KING WEARS IT,
and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—
APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

MAKE SURE!
Just see that you get
WREN'S BOOT POLISH.
All big regiments use it! Can't be equalled for any kind of leather goods. JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB produces fine, glossy polish.
Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and prove the polish! All Bootshops and Stores.
WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

BIRKBECK BANK
ESTABLISHED 1851.
Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

A WELL-KNOWN and highly-respected merchant is nearly always chosen for the mayoralty of any place, and Deli, Sumatra, is no exception to the rule. Last year Tjong Tong Hian, a Chinese gentleman very popular with everyone, both in his native country and the land of his adoption, was elected to the office, and filled it to the satisfaction of everyone. He had been previously Chinese Consul at Penang, and whilst in that office spared no pains in the interests of his fellow countrymen. In addition he has found time to publish a book, entitled "A Chinaman's Description of Foreign Lands," written, naturally, from the Celestial point of view. During the Chino-Japanese War he advanced large sums of money to the Government, and thrice had the honour of being received in special audience by the Emperor, and as a special mark of Imperial favour the button of a mandarin of the First Rank has been conferred on him. He has latterly been engaged in railway construction, having been charged with the inauguration of a line from Chin Chow to Swatow.

MR. ROBERT ARTHUR, always to the fore in presenting to his patrons the very best attractions, again provides most attractive programmes for this week at his five suburban theatres. At Kennington he has arranged for the first provincial production of Mr. Lewis Waller's successful romantic historical play, "His Majesty's Servant;" and the Coronet is visited by that most charming musical Irish play, "Peggy Machree," to the undoubted success of which those clever artistes Mr. Denis O'Sullivan and Miss Marie Dainton contribute largely.

THE Royal Botanic Gardens Club (Regent's Park) has just been re-decorated in preparation for the coming season. Many important social events are in contemplation. The Army and Navy Co-operative Society have been appointed caterers for 1905.

A USEFUL little device to those roll film workers who prefer to develop their exposures separately instead of in the strip or in the Kodak developing machine is to be found in the Kodak film cutting-board. The spool of exposed film is supported on a wire carrier at one end of the board, and the film is threaded through a slot and unrolled until one of the numbers on the protecting black paper can be seen through a hole in the board corresponding to the red window in the back of the Kodak. The film is then cut with scissors at the edge of the board, with the certainty that the separation has been made in the right place. The cutting-board is made to suit the film used in the various Kodaks at 1s. and 1s. 3d. each.

THE Mermaid Repertory Theatre, under the direction of Mr. Philip Carr, will begin its first season at the Great Queen Street Theatre on Monday evening, April 24, with a revival of Sheridan's "Critic." Performances will be given every evening during the season and on Saturday afternoons. The repertory will include several old plays, such as Webster's "Duchess of Malfi," Massinger's "City Madam," Beaumont and Fletcher's "Scornful Lady," etc., together with one or two new plays and some revivals of works of living authors, such as Mr. W. S. Gilbert, Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, and Mr. Pinero.

Yong Seng, Hong Kong.

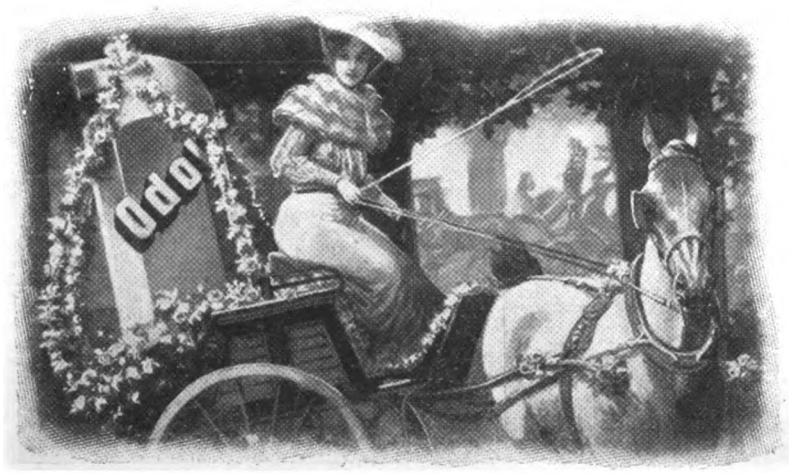
TJONG TONG HIAN

A member of the Chinese Community in Sumatra.

A SERIES of concerts will be given in aid of "The Heritage," the craft and toy-making school of the Guild of the Brave Poor Things, on May 2, 6, 9, 12, and 15, at 5 p.m., under the general direction of Mr. J. E. Borland. Tickets for the series (transferable), price 2 guineas, and full particulars may be obtained of Mrs. C. W. Kimmins, Dame Armstrong House, Harrow-on-the-Hill.

TO enable Lemco customers to profit by experience they have already gained in using Lemco in cooking, and to encourage experiments in working out new ideas, the Lemco Company offers £250 in prizes for the best recipes or suggestions for using Lemco. Preference will be given to dishes in which Lemco is an essential ingredient. Prizes—1 of £50, 5 of £5, 100 of £1, 100 of 10s., and 100 of 5s. Competition remains open until June 30; the result will be published at the end of July.

MESSRS. PERRY AND TURNER, LIMITED, in the course of their century of existence have seen many changes brought into being in the carriage world, and from the building of curricles such as the weird and wonderful turn-out in which "Romeo" Coates dazzled the eyes of the beau-monde in the park in 1812, they have progressed with the advance of knowledge to the construction of motor bodies, the latest expression of the coach-builders' art, and one from which no doubt Messrs. Perry and Turner will, in good time, evolve more graceful and pleasing designs. In their showrooms at Bristol and Cardiff the firm have every conceivable design of carriage, but for those who find it difficult to make the journey to the West there is an admirably produced catalogue from which to make a choice.



THE ODOL CARNIVAL TROPHY.

Odol, representing as it does so much of health, loveliness, and animation, is charmingly symbolised in this dainty Carnival Trophy. Odol always suggests flowers, balmy airs, and sweet odours, and all who use it not only have the sense of these things constantly with them, but secure for their mouth and teeth a continued healthfulness and beauty.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE. MR. TREE.
SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL.
The following Plays will be given during Shakespeare's Birth Week, April 24th to April 29th.
Monday, RICHARD II. Tuesday, THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR. Wednesday Matinee, RICHARD II. Wednesday Evening, TWELFTH NIGHT. Thursday, HAMLET. Friday, MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING. Saturday Matinee, JULIUS CÆSAR. Saturday Evening, JULIUS CÆSAR.
Box Office (Mr. Watts) open 10 to 7.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. George Edwardes' Season.
Every Evening at 8.15.
A New Musical Play entitled
LADY MADCAP.
By Paul Rubens and N. Newnham-Davis.
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.15.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: OTHO STUART.
Every Evening at 8. Saturday Matinee, at 2.
HAMLET.
H. B. Irving, Oscar Asche, Lily Brayton, etc,
Every Wednesday, and Easter Monday, at 2.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
Telephone 2645 Gerrard.

GARRICK THEATRE.
Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh,
To-night, at 8.30, in
THE WALLS OF JERICHO,
By Alfred Sutro.
Matinee every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
Every Evening, at 8 (doors open 7.40),
THE ORCHID.
Box office 10 to 10. Telephone: 2781 Gerrard.
Matinee every Saturday at 2.

SAVOY. DU BARRI
Sole Lessee: Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Managers: Mr. GILBERT HARE and Mrs. BROWN-POTTER.
To-night at 8, and Every Evening,
Christopher St. John's Adaptation of
"DU BARRI,"
By Jean Richepin.
Matinee every Thursday at 2.
Box Office 10 to 10. 'Phone, 2602 Gerrard.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening, at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: CHARLES FROHMAN.
To-night at 8.25.
Charles Frohman presents Miss Ellen Terry in
J. M. Barrie's New Play,
ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE.
Miss Irene Vanbrugh and the Duke of York's Theatre Co.
Preceded, at 8.25 sharp, with PANTALOON,
by J. M. Barrie.
Cast includes Mr. Gerald Du Maurier.
Matinee every Saturday, at 2.25 sharp.
Box Office open 10 to 10.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Magnificent Varieties.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Douglas Bernard Hall | 125 |
| The March of Events | 126 |
| An Historic Event | 129 |
| On the Links | 132 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 137 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 138 |
| The Parisians of Paris—The Immortal Snob on Varnishing Day | 140 |
| Parisian Players | 141 |
| Under the Burgee | 142 |
| Artistic Photography—II.—The Cosway Gallery and the Cosway Picture | 143 |
| At the Cosway Gallery | 145 |
| The Grand Festival of English Freemasons—St. George's Day, 1805—1905 | 146 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the South Western Railway | 150 |
| The Racing Season | 152 |
| Training at Beckhampton | 153 |
| The Services | 154 |
| Plays and Players | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Freemasonry—Its Landmarks, Relics, and Curiosities | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Autograph letter of Admiral Byng.—821, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph letter of Mrs. Thrale or Henry Thrale, dated from Southwark.—822, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Quin's Jest Book.—156, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, Vols. IV. and V.—158, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Gentleman's Magazine for 1865, Vol. II. £1 offered.—159, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Theatre, small 8vo, 1791 Edition, Vol. III.—160, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Song or Music Books before 1783.—161, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Collection of Public Thanksgiving Prayers from 1538.—162, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Army List, 1815 and 1816.—163, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Southwark views before 1750.—240, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picture of Showell's Meeting House, Southwark.—241, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Contemporary engraved portrait of Henry Thrale.—242, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures or rare prints relating to Selina, Countess of Huntingdon.—243, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of Engravings of Old London, especially Covent Garden, The Temple, The Strand, Lincoln's Inn, etc.—246, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Pictures on glass dealing with Naval subjects.—744, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any Valentines before 1815.—745, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Specimen of French Masonic Certificates during the First Empire.—746, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Scarce Arundels, Angelico's Annunciation, Limia St. Catherine, Adoration Trinity, Giorgione, Primavera, Venus rising, etc.—219A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Grand Oil Painting, Venus and Cupid, 69×54 Landscape, Wilson, R.A. Drawings by Alken, Herring, set by Solomon.—220A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Nalte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

New Six Shilling Novels. Price 1s. 6d. and 2s. each. List on application.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals.—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Stamps—Russian War Special Issue, complete set, 1s. 6d.; Indian Native States, 21 varieties, 1s. 1d.; British Colonials, 100 varieties, 1s. 7d.—SMITH, Upper Park Road, Kingston, Surrey.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE
(PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis.

Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,

17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including

2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Charmingly situated Seaside on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Fishing and Golfing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guide sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hote, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the Principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,

Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 18. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29. Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL. — Brinkl-a, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Book.et and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C

Digitized by Google

HUMPHREYS & CROOK

Established over 60 Years.

Naval, Military & Sporting Tailors.

OPPOSITE THE CARLTON.

3, Haymarket, LONDON.

HOMESPUN GOLF SUITS

Equipment Department :
3, SUFFOLK STREET, PALL MALL.

Specialite : CROOK'S PATENT SLEEPING VALISE.
A hold-all in transport and a tent in camp.

The Misses H. & I. WOOLLAN

(UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.)

Telephone: 5467 Gerrard.
Telegrams: "Decoriter."

SQUARE MARKED WORCESTER.

ANTIQUES. FURNITURE, CHINA, LACE, GLASS, etc., etc., etc.

28, Brook Street, Grosvenor Square, W.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,

RHEUMATISM,

Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness

And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.
Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

"LUXURY'S NECESSITY."

THRONE

The Royal Toilet Soap.

Should be used by every Lady who values her complexion, as it enhances the softness and beauty of the most delicate skins.

FRAGRANTLY PERFUMED.

DELICIOUSLY EMOLLIENT.

4d. per Tablet, 10½d. per 3-tab. Box;
of all Chemists and Stores.

Six dainty samples of Cook's Pure Soaps, including "Throne," will be sent post free for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & CO., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, LONDON, E.

Mention THE KING.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

The Coffee of the Epicure.

Price per lb. 2/4 1/10 1/6

ASTOUNDING OFFER.
We will send post free, 3d.,
A PACKET
of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.
THE METATA AGENTS,
17k, Devonshire Square,
LONDON, E.C.

Samples post free 8d. 6d. 4d.

ROUBLE COFFEE

THE SUNNIEST SPOT

SIDMOUTH

ON THE SOUTH COAST.

THE
London & South Western Railway

WILL TAKE YOU | IN ABOUT 4 Hours | FROM LONDON

TO THESE ## CHARMING WEST-COUNTRY RESORTS.

FIRST, SECOND, AND THIRD CLASS
EXPRESS, CORRIDOR, LUNCHEON CAR TRAINS
FROM AND TO WATERLOO STATION.

THE "DORSET" RIVIERA.

LYME REGIS

QUIET, PRETTY RESORT.

LADIES' COMPARTMENTS. LAVATORY ACCOMMODATION. LUGGAGE IN ADVANCE.

CHEAP TOURIST AND WEEK-END TICKETS.

Write Mr. HENRY HOLMES, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, London, S.E., for full particulars.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

Digitized by Google

THE FESTIVAL OF FREEMASONS.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 430. SATURDAY, APRIL 29th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Elliot and Fry.

MR. DOUGLAS BERNARD HALL.

Prospective Conservative Candidate for Penryn and Falmouth.

(See page 137.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 480. Saturday, April 29, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND PARIS.—On his way home from his trip in the Mediterranean King Edward hopes to stay a couple of days in Paris, but his visit will be made strictly incognito, and it is indeed still doubtful if he will be able to arrange it, as his multitudinous duties at home will necessitate his being back in the capital in the early days of May. Apropos of the intended visit, it has just leaked out that on the occasion of the meeting between the King and President Loubet at Pierrefitte Station recently, a very enterprising journalist disguised himself as a porter, and hung about the platform in the hope of getting some exclusive information. He was discovered, however, before the Royal train arrived, and unceremoniously deported from the neighbourhood. More fortunate was the editor of an Italian paper some ten years ago on the occasion of the banquet given by King Humbert to the German Emperor at Rome. This gentleman, determined that his paper should have as accurate a pen picture as could be obtained, managed to get himself employed in the guise of a waiter at the function, and thus secured absolutely first-hand impressions to transmit to his readers. And this he did without any attempt at concealment, confessing the whole story in the next issue. Such enterprise was worthy of a New York sheet.

THE QUEEN AND CIMIEZ.—Since the death of Queen Victoria we have not been accustomed to associate Cimiez with our Royal family, although for a long time before King Edward succeeded to the throne there was scarcely a year passed that the Queen of England was not in the South of France, and once she had discovered Cimiez she never deserted it for Florence, Biarritz, and the other famous towns which had previously attracted her. The two large railway carriages which she had specially constructed for her Continental journeys have travelled many times over the route that leads from the Northern French ports to the holiday grounds of the South. This year, again, there is the possibility of a Queen of England visiting Cimiez, and while King Edward comes to Paris it is expected that Queen Alexandra, with Princess Charles of Denmark and Princess Victoria of Wales, will renew her acquaintance with the town which she first visited as the guest of Queen Victoria nearly a decade ago. There will be many changes to note, for Cimiez has waxed large in the sunshine of prosperity which Queen Victoria brought to it, and the old episcopal town will have much that is fresh for Queen Alexandra to see and admire.

Crtbb.

THE NEW BRITISH SUBMARINE, B1, AT SPITHEAD.

The new submarines, of which the first has been delivered at Portsmouth, differ in many respects from the A type. Their deck when awash, as seen in the illustration, is at considerable height above the water, and in length they approach the dimensions of destroyers.

THE QUEEN AND DENMARK.—It will be a strange springtide for Queen Alexandra if she does not pay a visit to Denmark, and, indeed, there is every indication that she will go there for a short time after the Mediterranean tour. Among the many jewels the Queen possesses there is none she prizes more than the necklace of diamonds given her as a wedding present by King Frederick VII., who, of course, was King of Denmark when she came over here to marry the Prince of Wales. It is made as a replica of the Dagmar Cross, one of the Crown jewels of Denmark, which was originally in the possession of Queen Dagmar, the first Christian Queen of Denmark, and was buried with her. In the time of Christian V. the tomb was opened and the cross taken out, to be placed among the national treasures of the country, and this was copied with great fidelity in the famous year which saw the future Queen Consort of England land on these shores.

Digitized by Google

THE KING IN ALGIERS.

THE KING AND QUEEN LEAVING THE MEDERSA.

Cliche Express, Paris.

King Edward's eight days' visit to Algiers has given considerable pleasure to all classes of residents in that city. The Medersa, or native school, was one of the first places visited by the Royal party. There was on view a collection of Mussulman art of considerable interest.

THE ADMIRALTY QUAY, ALGIERS.

Cliche Express, Paris.

Queen Alexandra disembarking, with the King and Mr. Drummond Haye, the British Vice Consul, standing on the quay. The British residents were gathered in the neighbourhood to welcome the Royal visitors, and both the King and Queen spoke to several prominent members of the community.

Digitized by Google

Abeniacar.

HORSEMANSHIP IN THE ITALIAN CAVALRY.

In the Italian Cavalry regiments the strictest training prevails, and the soldiers are most accomplished horsemen. The photographs from which our illustrations are taken show a too daring jump and the disastrous consequences.

THE QUEEN OF SAXONY.—Like our own Royal family, Queen Carola of Saxony has found the Isle of Wight a very charming holiday resort, and her visit to the Island last week practically terminates her stay in England. From England she will proceed to Belgium, where she will spend a short time with the Comte and Comtesse de Flandre, and the summer she will spend at her magnificent Silesian home, Sybillenort, which was bequeathed to King Albert by the late Duke of Brunswick. It is interesting to note that by order of King Edward the State apartments at Osborne House will be open again this summer on two days in the week.

A PICTURESQUE WEDDING—Never was there a more picturesque wedding than Lady Evelyn Hely-Hutchinson's. Her dress was designed by her mother from a sixteenth century picture, and, in addition to a bevy of tall bridesmaids, she was followed to the altar by a tiny page and two little girls. She wore as ornaments some beautiful diamonds given her by her brother, the Earl of Donoughmore. As she is so fair, in this a striking contrast to her sister, who is very dark, Lady Evelyn has received many turquoises as presents. As she was one of the most beautiful girls in Society, so she will be one of its most beautiful brides. She was married from her brother's new house, where, lately, he had a little daughter born to him. The Dowager-Countess of Donoughmore, looking as handsome and striking as ever, was a noticeable figure at the ceremony.

Head, Eastbourne.

A NAVAL WEDDING AT EASTBOURNE.

The wedding of Mr. John Hooper, B.A., of the Royal Naval College, Osborne, and Miss Margaret Gordon Hooper was celebrated last week at Eastbourne. As the bride was on her way to the church, a detachment of the local division of Naval Volunteers, of which Mr. Horace Hooper, her father is Commanding Officer, took out the horses and pulled the carriage to the church.

Copyright.

WITH THE CHINA FLEET.

(1) An accident to a sam-pan, which capsized alongside a war-ship at Ying-Ching Bay. The boat floated wrong side up for about a quarter of an hour, and when it was finally righted a small child was found in it, very exhausted, but after treatment in the ship's sick-bay was very little the worse for the immersion. (2) Some midshipmen on shore after mining practice at the entrance to Wei Hai Wei Harbour.

Digitized by Google

AN HISTORIC OCCASION.

Crockett.

THE OLD "IMPREGNABLE," WITH THE UNION AT THE MAIN.

The only occasion during the past sixty years that an Admiral of the Fleet has flown his flag afloat was when Sir Edward Seymour was recently in command at the Western Port, and reached the rank of Admiral of the Fleet a month before his tenure of office there expired.

Digitized by Google

Alice Hughes.

MRS. BERTRAM BROOKE

Whose marriage with Mr. Bertram Brooke took place last year, is a daughter of Sir Walter Palmer, Bart., who has been Member for Salisbury since 1900.

THE COMING ROYAL WEDDING.—It would, of course, give considerable pleasure to the English people if the marriage of Prince Adolphus of Sweden and Princess Margaret of Connaught could take place in this country, for there is no doubt that the match is a very popular one, and the good wishes of the whole nation will go with the young Princess to her home in the North. In the event of the ceremony taking place in England, it seems to be a foregone conclusion that it will be at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, where the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were married twenty-six years ago. But since that ceremony St. George's Chapel has undergone some changes, and this wonderful specimen of ecclesiastical architecture, dating as it does from the days of Edward III., will have a different appearance in July of this year, both inside and outside, from that which it presented in March, 1879. St. George's Chapel has been the scene of other historical events than marriages, however, and there lie buried within the chapel of the Order of the Garter, Edward IV., who has sometimes, but wrongly, been spoken of as the founder of the Order, Henry VI., Henry VIII., Jane Seymour, and Charles I., who found there a safe resting-place after the terrible tragedy in Whitehall.

BEAR-LORE.—Ancient encyclopædias, such as that of Bartholomew Anglicanus (a worthy Franciscan friar, whose magnum opus has recently been reprinted more, one imagines, as a curiosity than as a valuable storehouse of learning), contain much that is quaint and crude upon natural history; but one may look long without finding such a wonderful piece of information as that which tells us, "the bear gives birth to a lump of flesh, which it licks into shape." The most interesting point about this is the light it throws upon a modern slang expression much used in describing raw recruits and cubs of the genus homo. Even Shakespeare refers to the belief in making the deformed Gloucester speak of himself as "an unlicked bear whelp that carries no impression like the dam." But bear-lore and bear legends are all amusing. Readers of Congreve will remember Sir Sampson Legend's exclamation in "Love for Love," "Body o' me! why was I not a bear, that my cubs might have lived upon sucking their paws." It was at one time a fully-accepted belief that the bear lived throughout the winter upon nutriment sucked from his paws, and we find it referred to many times in writers of the period. To mediæval Europeans the bear was the king of beasts, and he figures in the most prominent position in all the animal sagas.

BEAUTY PATCHES.—There is another threatened revival of the beauty spot or patch, but whether the practice will ever again become really fashionable is doubtful. That we shall never go the length of wearing a miniature coach and horses on our faces, as a Duchess of Newcastle once did, "because of the pimples about her mouth," or a figure of the devil, with horns, barbed tail, and pitchfork complete, as the most fashionable ladies of the late seventeenth century did, is quite certain. But the reintroduction of the round spot, or even the small star, would not find many opponents, and it is certain that moderation in the use of the spot does tend to a certain enhancing of the natural beauty. It is to be hoped that no crusader against the beauty spot will meet with the fate of Père Massillon, who, preaching one day at Versailles, exclaimed, "You put them on to intensify the whiteness of your skins! Why don't you put them everywhere?" So far from annihilating his hearers however, he had given them a new idea, and the next day they had all acted on the suggestion, and out of gratitude called the new mode "Mouches à la Massillon."

A SINGER'S WEDDING.—Miss Ada Crossley's wedding was a brilliant affair. The most novel feature was the singing of "O Perfect Love" by ten of the bride's Australian girl friends, the setting having been expressly composed for the occasion by Mr. George Clutsam, also an Australian. There were only two bridesmaids, and these carried bouquets of white flowers and mimosa, which, under the name of wattle, is the Australian national flower. Miss Crossley wore an ornament given to her by the bridegroom, and a beautiful diamond lyre, presented to her by the musical ladies of Melbourne on her recent visit home, a visit which, by the way, ended in her engagement. Among those who signed the marriage register was Miss Marie Corelli and Mr. Gye, husband of Mme. Albani, who was unable to be present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Muecke have gone to Venice for the honeymoon. Their friends simply rained presents on them.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.—Lord Monk Bretton's suggestion in the House of Lords the other day is a significant sign of the times. In order to bring the Colonial Office into touch with the Colonies, he would have at least one official on the staff of every Colonial Governor. The proposal is not practical, because it might give rise to the suspicion that the King's representative was merely a puppet of Downing Street, which would be fatal to harmony. A better idea is that set forth at length by an Australian public body. It would have the junior members of the Civil Service exchange, so that Colonials could gain experience in the Mother Country and Englishmen in the Colonies. Even more practical is the proposal made by merchants in New South Wales, that the Board of Trade should have representatives in the Colonies.

Digitized by Google

KINGS AND ADMIRALS.—"The Kaiser on taking leave of Admiral Sir Compton Domvile at Corfu, twice embraced the Admiral cordially." Thus at one bound is the Commander-in-Chief of the British Mediterranean Fleet placed on a level with the mighty rulers of the nations of the world. The Greeks complained, we are told, that the Kaiser made no sensational speech; but surely his action in embracing Sir Compton Domvile was sensational enough to outweigh ten speeches. Hitherto it has been considered etiquette for a sovereign only to embrace another reigning monarch; but presumably that convention is to be allowed to go by the board when a Royal Admiral meets a brother flag officer. And what a large number of Royal admirals there are nowadays! The recent visit of the Kaiser to Greece has been responsible for the creation of two more, for now Wilhelm II. is an Honorary Admiral of the Hellenic Fleet, and King George of Greece holds equal rank in the German Navy. There cannot now be many uniforms, Naval or Military, that the Kaiser has not the right to wear. Japan seems to be the only country which has not done itself the honour of placing some reigning sovereign à la suite of her Navy. And even that the Kaiser may attain to with patience, now that the banner of the Rising Sun floats finally over the embattlements of Port Arthur.

HANSARD.—There has been a deal said about the official compilation of debates in Parliament, popularly known as "Hansard," and it is with some little interest that the public has learned that the speeches set down in that invaluable work are not always exact reproductions of the spoken word. Proofs are submitted to every member whose speeches are included, and some members are most punctilious in revising those proofs. In the days before he became a great power, it was Mr. Gladstone's invariable habit to carefully read all proofs; but during the last decade or so of his career he found that he was so carefully reported that revision had become unnecessary. In the same way Mr. Balfour has given up reading his proofs with anything like the attention he used to devote to them; but Mr. Asquith and Lord George Hamilton are, or were till quite recently, scrupulously careful in their revisions, and Lord Goschen, when he was in the House of Commons, was very painstaking with his proofs. But the majority of the experienced debaters never trouble about Hansard. They know that what they have said has been taken down by the best stenographers of the day, and complaints are rare, considering the number of speeches delivered annually.

LORD LOCH'S ENGAGEMENT.—Congratulations to Lord Loch on his engagement to Lady Margaret Compton will be general. So well-beloved was his mother in Victoria as First Lady, that a famous English statesman said of her that "she is a greater personage than her husband." Indeed, her memory is as green in Australia as Lady Carrington's. In South Africa, too, she and Sir Henry, as he then was, made Government House as popular as it ought to be. Lord Loch, who is only thirty-two years old, is in the Grenadier Guards. He was all through "the River War" up to the fall of Khartoum. It was in connection with this campaign that he got the D.S.O. In the South African War he was severely wounded. Lady Margaret Compton is the only daughter of the Marquess of Northampton. Her mother, who died a few years ago, was a Baring, and a great heiress. She had an American strain in her, for her grandfather was a Philadelphia merchant.

A SOUTH AFRICAN REMINISCENCE.—The death of Lord Chelmsford recalls one of the darkest chapters in South African history, for he was one of those distinguished Englishmen whose reputation loses rather than gains in the Colonies. Not that he was less able than others who were more successful, but, in his case, the national contempt for the enemy worked out badly. Not only was the ground of Isandhlwana unsuited to the conditions of native fighting, but the omission to laager the waggons was a military blunder of the first magnitude. The defeat which followed was the most disastrous event in the annals of Natal up to the South African War. Every incident in the campaign was dramatic. The most striking after Isandhlwana was the tragic death of the Prince Imperial and the defence of Rorke's Drift, one of the heroes of which, Private Hook, died the other day. It was the old story; our officers, full of academic military learning, scorned the advice of men on the spot. It is, however, fair to note that the man who tried to persuade Lord Chelmsford to laager the waggons at Isandhlwana was not a Colonial, but General Clery, then at the beginning of his distinguished career.

EXPULSIONS FROM PARLIAMENT.—Certain absentee members of Parliament are to be called to account for their misdeeds, and may even possibly be expelled from the House; but nothing so extensive as the expulsions in connection with the South Sea Bubble are to be expected. Half-a-dozen members were summoned to attend, and roundly lectured; but the most serious case was that of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Aislabie. So bad was the case considered that the House did not even divide on the question, but ordered him to be taken straight to the Tower and to make restitution. Such a ceremony is always performed with "the doors locked and the keys laid upon the table."

MISS MARION TREFUSIS

Whose engagement to the Hon. Thomas Coke, eldest son of Viscount Coke, is announced. Miss Trefusis is a daughter of Lady Mary Trefusis.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE Prince of Wales has accepted the post of President of the Cinque Ports Golf Club at Deal. Lord George Hamilton, M.P., and Sir Edgar Vincent, M.P., are joining the committee of the club, and Mr. Wanklyn, M.P., has nominated Mr. W. Matthews, of Amateur Championship fame, to succeed him as captain. Mr. Matthews, who is a Man of Kent, took Mr. Maxwell to the twentieth hole at Sandwich last year. In the opinion of Braid there is no fairer course in England than Deal.

* * *

The Prime Minister drove Mr. Wanklyn, M.P., down to the Ranelagh Club at Barnes in his motor-car, and they both managed to do well for the House of Commons team against the Ranelagh Club, relieved, no doubt, by the surrender of the Tariff Reformers on the previous day. In the morning, playing against Mr. Fletcher Jones (five handicap), Mr. Balfour won by 3 and 1. The Prime Minister had the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth holes in an average of 4, which is one under "Bogey"; while from the back tees, Mr. Wanklyn made a record of the green for the first eleven holes, taking them in 44, which is five under "Bogey." He had the ninth (600-yds.) in 5 with three long shots and a putt off the approach. Mr. Wanklyn managed to beat his opponent by 9 and 8, "a thing that he has never done before," but his opponent went out in 44 for the first nine holes, and took the bye in an average of 4. In the afternoon, the Prime Minister and Mr. Wanklyn defeated their opponents in an ordinary foursome, after a very tight match. They were dormy 2, but the Prime Minister overran his approach into the rough at the seventeenth. However, between them, they had a nice 4 at the eighteenth. The golf course at Ranelagh is enormously improved by the acquisition of a third polo ground on the far side of the Beverly Brook, and it is now as long as Sandwich. The ground is all meadow-land, but the bunkers have been filled with sea sand, and in dry weather there is no better inland course, barring such sand courses as Woking and Sunningdale. Colonel Cawley of the Life Guards is captain for the coming year, in succession to Lord Dufferin.

A BUSY SECRETARY.

Mr. J. H. Neat, the secretary of the Ranelagh Club, spent a busy couple of days at his table starting the competitors in the recent Ladies' Competitions.

* * *

The annual spring meeting of the Tantallon Club at North Berwick was played in mild weather, tempered by a light easterly breeze. There were about fifty competitors, but Mr. Robert Maxwell and Mr. J. E. Laidlay were absent. The honours of the meeting were carried off by Mr. J. R. Gairdner, an old Mid-Surrey player, who, playing a consistently strong game throughout, returned the winning score of 80 for the Brodie Scratch Medal. Mr. A. Mackenzie Ross and Mr. H. M. Rush were next with 86.

* * *

On the neighbouring green of Gullane the annual spring meeting of the Gullane Golf Club was held. One of the rare innovations

Balmain, Edinburgh.

THE INTER-CLUB TOURNAMENT AT EDINBURGH.

The two foursomes that played in the City Inter-club Tournament at Murrayfield, Edinburgh, on April 12. The players are representative of the Insurance and Banking Club and the Burgess Golfing Society, the first-named winning the final by 9 and 7 to play. The players standing are Mr. A. G. Archibald (Burgess), and Messrs. Clark, Reith, Rose, and Johnston (Insurance and Banking). Seated: Mr. Graham Walker, Mr. H. H. Harley, and Mr. J. M. Williamson.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

in Scottish golf was a "Bogey" competition, and it has become so popular, even among golfers who were at first disposed to pooh-pooh the system, that it will now take a permanent place in the club fixture card. The "Bogey" score for Gullane has been fixed at 78, and last year this score was easily beaten by Mr. J. A. Robertson-Durham, jun., by 4 holes. Seventy-four competitors left the tee, and once again Mr. J. A. Robertson-Durham won the "Bogey" prize by 4 holes up. His score was 77, and he had a handicap of two strokes.

* * *

One of the features of the Garden City movement is that opportunities should be provided for the playing of golf among the residents on the estates. The Garden City at Letchworth, near Hitchin, includes a golf course among its attractions for the residents, and the course of nine holes was formally opened a week ago, when the regular service of trains between King's Cross and Letchworth was inaugurated by the Great Northern Railway Company. At present the club numbers 125 original members, and houses are being rapidly built on the estate. The old manor house of Letchworth Hall has been converted into a residential hotel. Though the golf course is at present only nine holes, there is varied ground enough to extend the round to eighteen holes.

* * *

Miss May Hezlet continued her scoring success at Ranelagh by winning the prize of the local club for the best scratch score at the open meeting of the Ladies' Golf Union held last week at Lytham and St. Anne's. Over the long course she went round in 85, despite a strong east wind, though in the afternoon, when not scoring formally for a competition, she improved four strokes upon these figures. Miss Buckley came next with a stroke more. The Challenge Cup, open to the members of the Ladies' Union, and played for under handicap, was won by Miss Muirhead of Lytham and St. Anne's. There was a large number of spectators present to see the play.

* * *

The Tooting Bec Golf Club, which is now running out the last year of its lease at Furzedown, is engaged in completing a new scheme whereby in the future the members of the club may play their game without any fear of landlord's rights. The committee of the club, anxious to keep its corporate existence intact, have been prospecting for a long time to get a new and accessible golf course near enough to London to suit business men as well as men of ample leisure. Such a new course they have now found at South Farm Lodge, skirting Mitcham Common. The ground consists of 100 acres, and it lies between Mitcham Common and Pollard's Hill, in the direction of Norbury, on the main Croydon Road. Taylor has examined the ground very carefully, and he advises the committee that it will, when drained and put in playing order, prove to be an admirable golf course. In this opinion Willie Park, who is at present laying out the holes, concurs, so that the Tooting golfers will find a new home about a couple of miles away from the old course, which they have made one of the best-kept courses round London during their fourteen years' tenancy of Furzedown.

MRS. EGGAR, THE HON. SECRETARY OF THE FARNHAM LADIES' CLUB, SCRUTINISING THE LIE OF HER BALL AT RANELAGH.

"HE COMETH NOT."

A lady waiting for her partner, who insists, through sentiments of ingrained economy, upon her waiting patiently while he hunts for a battered Haskell in the bents.

The Tooting golfers are making arrangements to buy the freehold of the land, together with the old farmhouse of South Lodge, which will make a cosy club-house with a little expansion and alteration. The purchase of the freehold will cost £15,500, and an additional sum of £4,500 is needed to meet the expenses of drainage and preparation of the course for play early next year. The whole sum of £20,000 is being raised by a mortgage on the land of £10,000, and by debentures of £100 each among the members; and it is expected, judging by the support already accorded to the scheme, that there will be no difficulty in raising the money. It is quite clear, from what is taking place in respect of golf around London, where the game is being played on public commons or on land held on short leases, that the only solution of the future is for golfers to band themselves together on a private course to which the public have no access, and, preferably, to adopt the policy now being carried out by Tooting of buying the freehold of the links. Apart altogether from the security of the game from outside interruption, there is the added advantage of a sound business investment.

MRS. BROWN IN THE FINAL OF THE PUTTING TOURNAMENT AT RANELAGH.

* * *

There was last week a more than usually large crowd of golfers at Biarritz for the Easter holidays, one authority giving it as his opinion that the players were twice as numerous as at the same period last year. The weather, however, was chilly. The Ladies' "Bogey" Medal for April was won by Miss Rita Grant-Suttie, who, with a handicap of plus 5, won after a tie with Miss Mary Stuart (scratch), Miss Granville being third.

* * *

There are some critics of the game who have always looked upon the introduction of the rubber-core ball mainly as its use affected the better play of the men golfers. But what about the ladies? If the ordinary mediocre player can add 20-yds. or 30-yds. to his drive with the rubber-core as compared with the old gutta, it is quite certain that very many lady golfers have the highest reason to welcome with joy the introduction of the rubber-core ball. It has made the game all through less fatiguing to the ladies, and probably because the jealousy of men does not lead them to go to the length of denying that, as a rule, the ladies show a more delicate touch in the use of the club, they are consequently more likely to find the use of the new ball more beneficial all round the game. It would, from recent examples at any rate, seem to be the case that the American ball has led to an increase in the number of lady players, mainly on the ground that the game has been made more easy, and less a test of endurance. Nearly 250 entries of lady competitors for the Ranelagh Open Competition a week ago would seem to augur the certainty of higher figures in the way of entries, not only at the Ladies' Championship, but at all the open tournaments for lady players this summer.

* * *

Not only has the new ball revolutionised the game both for men and women, but it has got rid of the old cry that a shorter course than that which the men played over was an absolute necessity for the ladies' competitions. The new ball has so equalised the game that the ladies can play without fear of comparison to their discredit over all the long courses laid out for the men. And look at the average scores of the best lady players as compared with those of the men. Miss May Hezlet's 76 at Ranelagh will take a good many trials on the part of good scratch players among the men to beat. Then the average drives of the lady players are treading closely upon the length attained by the men. Miss Hezlet and Miss Glover drove a series of shots in the driving competition at Barnehurst which averaged more than 171-yds.—an average distance with which the bulk of those golfers among the sterner sex who criticise ladies' golf adversely might be very well pleased to rest content.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

GOLF IN IRELAND.

THE LINKS AT GALWAY.

A VISIT to Galway, Spanish old Galway, one of the quaintest and most picturesque spots in all the fair Green Isle, is a unique experience. Something like putting the clock back about a hundred years.

"Here all things in their place remain, as all were ordered ages since!" It is verily "a land of afternoon," for except during the Race Week or Pig Fair, when existence is made hideous by the wail of protesting "rint payers," the inhabitants—who might have stepped straight from Lever's novels—appear half asleep. Perhaps the character is due to some inherited strain of indolence from a Spanish ancestry, or perhaps, like the "mild-eyed, melancholy lotos-eaters," realising that "slumber is more sweet than toil," it has been acquired in the course of centuries. Certainly no one ever dreams of hurrying or bustling himself. The old-world glamour and charm of the quaint old place makes a sojourn there better than any "rest cure" to the jaded and brain-weary, and constitutes not the least of Galway's many attractions to the stranger fresh from the noise and turmoil of strenuous living. "The Citie of the Tribes," as the town was first called by Cromwell's soldiers after its capture by the English under De Burgho, has a history, though veiled, in tales of siege and bloodshed. Taken and retaken by rival clans, it became first noted in the days of King Connor of Munster. It is supposed, indeed, by some to be Ptolmey's "Magnata," its Gaelic name, "Cuan-na-guatic" (or "Port of the Small Islands"), giving colour doubtless to the theory. Galway became later—in English hands—a famous seaport. The natives did a thriving trade with Spain, and adopted many Spanish customs. They also took unto themselves Spanish wives, for traces of Spanish architecture still linger in the curious arched gateways and courtyards, and the wide entries and stairs of the derelict queer old buildings of the once-proud merchants. These relics take one back in fancy to an age of chivalrous deeds and daring, knight errants and romance, the effect being heightened by the dark-haired olive-skinned beauty of the peasantry. The women go about in their vivid scarlet petticoats and Claddagh cloaks, worn mantilla-fashion over head and shoulders, the costume making a burning patch of colour against the soft grey Irish skies. These unlooked-for survivals of Oriental influence support the theory of their Spanish ancestry through intermarriage.

A FISHER OF GOLF BALLS

The water hazard in front of the 16th green at Ranelagh, where the man in the punt was stationed all day to retrieve the balls foozled by the lady competitors into the pond.

The Claddagh adjoins the harbour, a most quaint and interesting district, the abode of a strange, almost gipsy, race of fishermen who, until late years, had no intercourse with the inhabitants of the town, being governed by a king of their own, annually elected amidst singular customs and rejoicings on St. John's Eve.

The visitor to Galway should arrange a trip to the Aran Isles, which is a pleasant sail in bright weather. These isles are full of fascination for the "foreigner," as a visitor from the mainland is regarded thereon. Weirdly beautiful scenery, wonderful air, (America is their nearest next-door neighbour) and primitive customs make them an ideal

THE GALWAY LINKS.

The 3rd putting green, with a fine prospect of the country and sea beyond.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

BAR v. ACTORS AT WALTON HEATH.

(A) Mr. Herbert Ross, who played against Mr. H. W. Beveridge and beat him. (B) Mr. Oscar Asche, the King Claudius of the Adelphi "Hamlet," putting in his unique style at the 11th green in his game against Mr. Stephens. (C) Mr. D. Stephens of the Bar Society, Mr. Asche's opponent and conqueror. (D) Mr. Gerald du Maurier, fresh from his triumph in "Pan aloon" at the Duke of York's Theatre, playing against Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., M.P., who won the game. (E) Mr. H. W. Beveridge of the Bar Society driving from the 5th tee. (F) Mr. Fred Terry, whose season at the New Theatre has just closed, driving from the 12th tee, watched by his opponent, Mr. H. Terrell, who halved the match with him.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE GALWAY LINKS.
A view of the 2nd green, with a bird's-eye view of the country beyond.

THE GALWAY LINKS.
Two of the lady players on one of the putting greens.

GOLF AT GALWAY.
The private club-house of Mr. Nolan on Gentian Hill; Hackett, the greenkeeper, and a few of the caddies.

holiday haunt on "off days" for the golfer interested in archæology, botany, or photography. Many of the ancient fortresses remaining (including the famous "Dun Ængus," the most remarkable of European stone forts), date from 1,000 B.C. Maidenhair fern grows wild like a weed in Aran, and good simple accommodation is to be had, "Anything your Honour plazes" being the usual tariff.

The golf links, some two miles from Galway, are exquisitely situated on a picturesque promontory overlooking the bay, known as "Gentian Hill," from the sapphire glory of the gentian bloom, which turns the emerald turf a glowing blue in early summer. The views are beautiful. Across the broad blue bay is the range of rugged Burren hills, silver and amethyst shadowed, which rise steep and bold, guarding the coast of Clare, while hard by the sombre Barna Woods lie, hugging the still white limestone shore.

The course, a nine-hole one, has been judiciously laid out. Natural hazards abound, chiefly stone walls (typical of the country), quarry, and gorse, for though Galway's links are seaside in many respects, their aspects are more of an inland character. The lies are good, and the greens smooth and excellently kept. Straight driving is, however, everywhere essential, or the player is badly punished.

The tiny club-house (once a primitive thatched Irish cabin) is now, through the liberality of the owner, and landlord of the links (Mr. Sebastin Nolan), greatly enlarged, its bright red walls making a warm glint of colour in the surrounding landscape.

Mr. Nolan also most generously allows his friends to play over the links without charge, and maintains them entirely at his own expense. He also gives prizes for competition. The club was dissolved last year, so the open meetings formerly held there do not now take place. Otherwise there is no change, and all golfers are permitted to play there, through the courtesy of the owner, who entertains them at the club-house with proverbial Irish hospitality. Michael Hackett, the professional and greenkeeper (a typically-fine specimen of the Spanish-Celtic race), is a good player, coach, and clubmaker.

Galway is a true "sportsman's paradise." for besides hunting with the "Blazers'" pack, there is good rough shooting in abundance, yachting, boating, bathing, in addition to the salmon-fishing at low water. The fish are to be seen packed like sardines at the bottom of the river, under the Fishery Bridge, literally jostling for room. There is also excellent trout-fishing, and still more excellent hotel accommodation, including that of the Royal Hotel kept by Mrs. Kerin.

GERTRUDE CROWE.

FIXTURES.

April 29.—Huntercombe Spring Meeting.
April 29.—New Luffness, Spring Meeting.
May 1.—Hanger Hill, Foursome Competition.
May 3.—Royal and Ancient, Silver Cross and Bombay Medal.
May 3.—Warwickshire Spring Meeting.
May 4-6.—Sussex County Union, Annual Meeting at Rye.
May 5-6.—Hanger Hill, Spring Meeting.
May 6.—Sundridge Park Single Tournament and Foursomes.
May 6.—Glasgow Spring Meeting.
May 8.—Royal Blackheath Ladies' Spring Meeting.
May 8.—Hanger Hill, Mixed Foursome Competition.
May 8-12.—Irish Ladies' Championship, at Portsalon.
May 10-11.—Lytham and St. Anne's Professional Tournament.
May 12-14.—Le Touquet, Solicitors' Golfing Society v. Le Touquet.
May 13.—Parliamentary Tournament at Deal.
May 13.—Hanger Hill, Medal and Magistrate's Bowl.
May 16-17.—Midland Ladies' Championship, at Nottingham.
May 20.—England v. Scotland (Amateurs), at Prestwick.
May 20.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal (Stroke).
May 20.—Hanger Hill, Monthly "Bogey" Winners.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XL.—Mr. Douglas Bernard Hall, Prospective Conservative Candidate for Penryn and Falmouth.

THE county—shall we say the ancient kingdom?—of Cornwall once returned no less than forty members to Parliament. Nowhere are disfranchised constituencies so plentiful. Grampound, where five electors chose their representative at Westminster, St. Mawes-in-Roseland, one of the smallest and most charming villages in the Cornish Riviera, St. Ives, home of artists, and ever so many more quaint, old-time places bewail the loss of their political importance. Some of them have been absorbed in other areas, and Penryn and Falmouth, each of which possessed two members before the Act of 1832, must now be content with one between them, and united they form one of the smallest constituencies in the country. But small constituencies have memorable histories. Did not the glorious Chatham and his illustrious son, William Pitt, enter Parliament through their suffrages? Did not Disraeli woo the electors of High Wycombe and Taunton before Maidstone gratified his ambition? Penryn and Falmouth have been no exception to the rule, though of late years Lord Northbrook alone among statesmen traced his career to the Cornish port, and Mr. George Cavendish Bentinck, the constant entertainer of Royalty, was one of its best-known representatives. Still, it is safe to assume that great interest will attach to the coming political struggle in the united boroughs, an interest not diminished by the recent remarkable rise in popular favour of the Cornish Riviera as a playground in summer, and as a balmy health resort in winter. The pride of all Cornwall is the beautiful and historic port of Falmouth, with its magnificent land-locked harbour, its rugged seafront from Pendennis to the Manacles, its river scenery, and its associations with Sir Walter Raleigh and the Civil Wars.

Alice Hughes.

MRS. DOUGLAS BERNARD HALL
Wife of the Prospective Conservative Candidate for Penryn and Falmouth.

This interest is strengthened by the attractive personality of the Conservative candidate, who is 6-ft. 4½-in. in height, possesses a singularly winning manner, and above all is accompanied by his wife, who combines the kindliest attributes of an English grande dame with all the indescribable fascination for which the ladies of cultured Boston, the "hub of the universe," are traditionally famous. Among other advantages, they enjoy the active assistance of Mr. L. H. Hayter, for some years a member of the London County Council, and now a busy agent in the Conservative interest in the West of England.

Mr. Douglas Bernard Hall is a son of Mr. Bernard Hall, J.P., by Margaret, daughter of William Culrow, J.P., D.L., of Walton Lodge, Walton-le-Dale, Lancashire. Mr. Hall was born in 1867, and was educated at Charterhouse and Christ Church, Oxford. He married in 1890 Caroline, only daughter of Mr. T. J. Montgomery of Larchmont Manor, New York State, U.S.A. They have one son, Douglas Montgomery Bernard, who was born in 1891, and is now at Eton. Mr. Hall has been a great traveller, having visited almost every country in Europe. He is familiar with Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Austro-Hungary, Herzegovina, Bosnia, Servia, Roumania, Greece, Turkey, and France. He will be remembered as the only man who has taken his steamer across Europe by water, steaming by way of the Rhine and the Maine, thence by canal to the upper reaches of the Danube, and, after shooting the rapids, through the lower Danube to the Black Sea. He has visited the principal provinces of the Far West, the cities of Canada, and the great centres of the United States and Mexico. He is passionately fond of yachting, and once shared a delightful adventure with Lord Albert Osborne. The two chartered a schooner in Tahiti, in the South Sea Islands, made famous by the historical mutiny of the "Bounty," and sailed to some of the most remote islands of the Pacific, including the Marquesas, the Paumautus, and the Cook Islands, returning by way of the Hawaiian Islands and Fiji. A man with such love for the sea must be an ideal member for seafaring folk.

Another sport in which Mr. Hall excels is that of shooting. He has been a good shot from his boyhood, indeed, when at Charterhouse he won the Public Schools Cadets' Trophy, one of the most keenly-contested competitions at Wimbledon. He has shot reindeer in Scandinavia, chamois in the Engadine, and equipped and travelled with a caravan for shooting in the Sahara Desert.

At home, Mr. Douglas Hall is a considerable landowner in a most picturesque part of Sussex, having acquired some years ago the Burton Park Estates, once the property of the well-known "Squire" Biddulph, and surrounded by the estates of such landowners as the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the Earl of Leconfield, and the Earl of Winterton, whose youthful heir was recently returned to represent the county in Parliament. Mr. Hall is lord of the manor of Burton and Barlavington, the old feudal customs of which still obtain, and is patron of the livings of Barlavington, Burton, and Coates. Burton Park is of considerable size, and the house is approached by a really beautiful drive from Petworth Station, its sylvan beauties heightened by herds of noble deer. Here Mr. Hall takes a close interest in the public work of the locality, and contrives to serve the Barlavington Parish Council, the Petworth District Council, the Commission of the Peace for West Sussex, and even the interests of the parish schools of Duncton.

When Mr. Douglas Hall visits that beautiful corner of England, which he has very rosy chances of representing in Parliament, he finds old-time electioneering customs still in vogue. A brass band serenades him at dinner, or marches with him to the meeting-place at Penryn Town Hall, or a procession of boats escorts him across the harbour to Flushing, where the patriotic drums and fifes await him on the further shore. But Mr. Douglas Hall gives his close attention, as his speeches imply, to stern business. He advocates the imposition of a substantial duty on foreign granite, which is underselling the Cornish material, and the use of British granite only in all Government contracts. He considers that the strategic position of Falmouth and the advantages of its great harbour render it a desirable depôt for a torpedo flotilla, and a centre for recruiting the Navy, although this statement is traversed by his opponents. Mr. Hall has offered to take an active part in forming a Naval Volunteer Corps there as a means of encouraging lads to join the King's Navy. One of the grievances of Naval pensioners is the delay they experience in receiving the augmentation grant, which is limited by the Greenwich Hospital Scheme to 7,500 men, and Mr. Hall has pledged himself to endeavour to remove that limit. There are other local questions which have enlisted his sympathetic attention and made him as strong a supporter of the best interests of Penryn and Falmouth as the staunchest local patriot could desire. In Imperial politics he is an admirer of Lord Beaconsfield, an avowed supporter of Mr. Balfour, and (in the interests of the British working man) an advocate of fair play for British industry and British trade, and for our Colonists beyond the seas.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

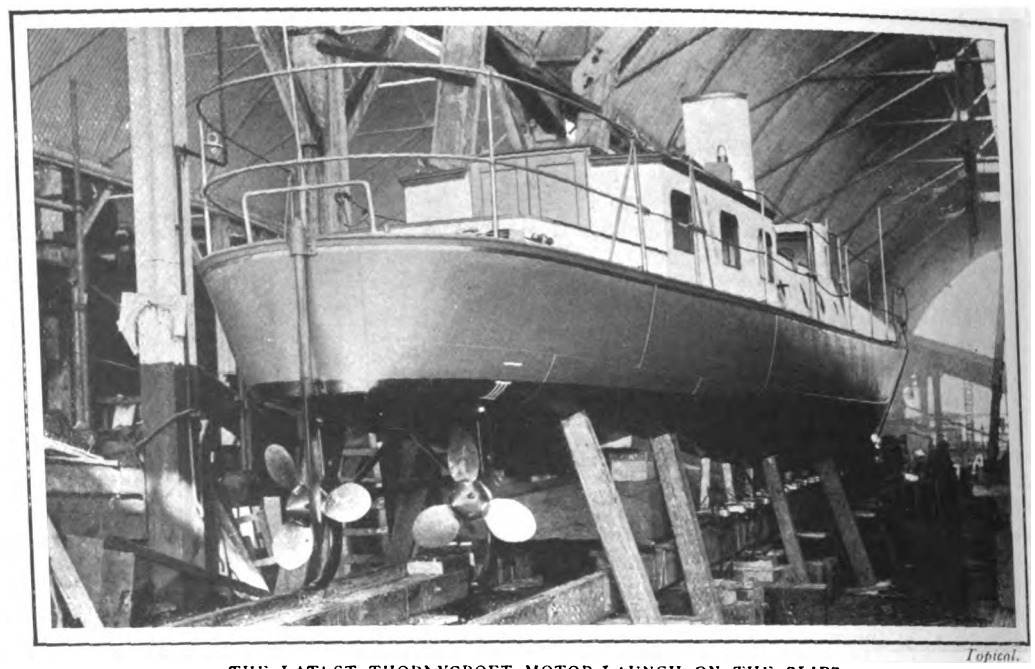
IF one can judge from the results of the Monaco Meeting, motor-boat racing is almost as exciting for the participants as a big road event, such as the Gordon Bennett, although a good cork-jacket and a reasonable promptness in taking to the water in an emergency apparently reduce the personal risk to a minimum. Fire, collision, wreck, and sudden collapse of hull were among the causes which led to a sad reduction in the numbers of the motor fleet, and it almost seemed as if another week's racing would have seen the great majority of the competitors temporarily hors de combat, or at the bottom of the sea. I am afraid that the sensational incidents that marked the Monaco races will create a somewhat unfavourable impression, as to the value of the motor-boat, in the minds of the general public, which does not study the subject very closely, and probably hardly realises that a flimsy and often ill-built shell, fitted with a 200, 300, or even 400 horse-power engine, is even further removed from the motor-boat constructed for purposes of utility than is the Gordon Bennett leviathan from the prosaic touring car of to-day. The Monaco racers were admittedly experiments of a very daring type, and reliability, safety, and seaworthiness were freely sacrificed to possible speed, pure and simple. The result was perhaps inevitable in these early days of the fast motor-boat, as the employment of the light but powerful petrol motor for marine purposes offers problems to the builder of both hull and engine which can only be solved in the light of mature experience. Each mishap will doubtless convey its own lesson to the makers, just as the breakdowns and accidents on the earlier racing cars did much to hasten the evolution of the modern touring carriage. The attainment of high speed on the water, moreover, is a perfectly legitimate object to pursue, as the future of the motor-boat, so far as certain spheres of utility are concerned, will largely depend on its being proved to be considerably faster than its steam-driven rival, and at the same time its equal in reliability.

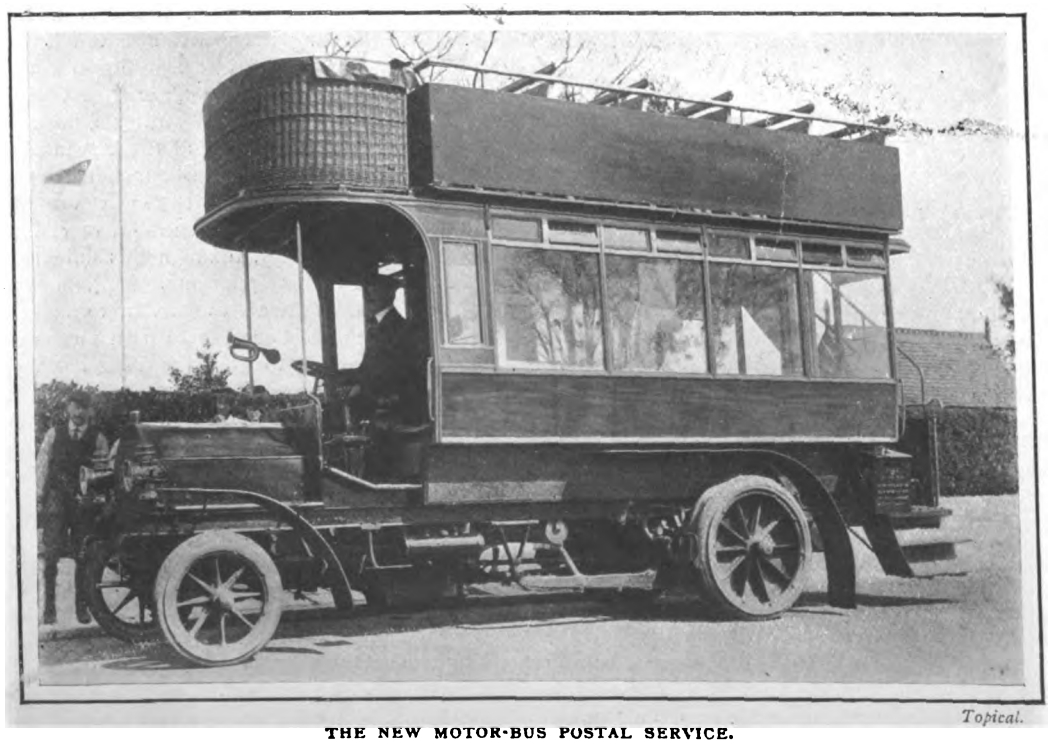


Topical.

THE LATEST THORNYCROFT MOTOR-LAUNCH ON THE SLIPS.
A twin-screw boat, driven by two sets of petrol engines, each developing 120-h.p.

As to the latter quality there was little cause for criticism of the genuine cruisers at Monaco, when regard is had to the fact that the distances were long, and that each boat was naturally pressed throughout to the limit of its power. The racers, however, were terribly uncertain in their behaviour, and no boat showed anything like consistent form for the entire week. The chief defect appears to have been the weakness of the hulls, and it is evident that the builders have yet to learn that to place from 150-h.p. to 400-h.p. in 30-ft. to 50-ft. launches calls for new methods of construction, or at least a sober appreciation of the novel conditions under which they are working. Even "Napier II.," built by the famous firm of Yarrow, is said to have shown structural weakness, although her retirement from the championship race is also attributed to an accident in launching on the morning of that event. Many of the boats arrived at Monaco direct from the building slips, and the bad weather of the early days of the meeting prevented anything like a proper "tuning up," which would doubtless have enabled many minor defects to be remedied. A frequent cause of breakdown, and one that seems to argue an extraordinary ignorance of sea-going conditions on the part of the engine-builders, was the swamping of the ignition mechanism by spray and seas. Many a boat had its "fire" put out in this manner, and the absence of proper protection to this vital portion of the motor was mainly responsible for the wreck of "La Marguerite" on the first day.

So far as speed is concerned, the meeting may be regarded as somewhat disappointing as the phenomenal records so freely anticipated were conspicuous by their absence. In the long-distance events, "La Rapière," "Napier II.," and "Panhard Levassor" proved to be the fastest boats in their respective classes. The first-named, I believe, is one of last year's craft with larger engines, and in the 26-ft. class she covered 100 kilomètres at an average speed of about 25½-miles per hour, or 22·1-knots. "Napier II.," in the race for the 40-ft. boats, was only 36-sec. faster for the whole distance, but her best lap (12·5-kilomètres) was 1¼-min. quicker than "La Rapière's." "Panhard Levassor," which had two 100-h.p. engines coupled in tandem, was absent from the event for the large racers, and the only starters, "Dubonnet" and "Pi-Ouit IV.," made a very poor display. In the Championship of the Sea, the big Panhard boat, however, made an excellent record, covering sixteen rounds of the pentagonal course, or 200-kilomètres in all, with wonderful regularity, and achieving an average speed of 28·4-miles an hour, or 24·6-knots. It is worthy of note that "Mercédès-Charley," which has a 12 mètre (39·4-ft.) Pitre hull, driven by two 90-h.p. Mercédès motors, coupled, made the fastest round (15-min. 21-sec.) recorded during the meeting. This was equivalent to 30·3-miles per hour, or 26·3-knots. She had no staying power, however, and was always in difficulties from heated bearings after running a few kilomètres. "Napier II.'s" best



Topical.

THE NEW MOTOR-BUS POSTAL SERVICE.
One of the Milnes-Daimler cars now running in the Isle of Wight. The letter-box may be seen at the rear of the vehicle.

Digitized by Google

round was done in 16-min. 28-sec., "Panhard Levassor's" in 15-min. 35-sec., and "La Rapière's" in 15-min. 42-sec., so that there would not appear to be a very wide difference between the extreme speed of these boats.

So much for the long-distance events. The sprint races at the termination of the meeting provided a very great surprise. "Dubonnet," of which much had been expected, showed such poor form in her class race, that she was apparently regarded as out of the running. She has a 49-ft. (15-mètre) Pitre hull, and is remarkable for being fitted with a four-cylinder Delahaye engine, reputed to give 400-h.p. In the race for the Prince of Monaco's Cup, over a course consisting of a nautical mile, timed with a standing start, followed by a "flying" kilomètre, she beat, by a long margin, all existing records. Her time for the nautical mile was 2-min. 30 sec., which is equivalent to 24-miles, or 20·8-knots. This, however, was a mere bagatelle to her speed over the flying kilomètre, which immediately followed. Presumably the huge 400-h.p. motor for once was driving its hardest, for the "sprint" was accomplished in 1-min. 9-sec., which works out at 52·17-kilometres or 32-miles per hour, or 27·8-knots.

It is interesting to compare the speeds accomplished at Monaco with those recorded in 1904. At last year's meeting the famous "Trèfle-à-Quatre," of which nothing now remains, as the old engine had been replaced by a more powerful one, and the original hull was irretrievably damaged in the recent fire which necessitated her being scuttled, carried all before her. Her best long-distance performance was 200-kilomètres at an average speed of 23⅜-miles an hour, or 20½-knots. In the Prince of Monaco's Cup the middle mark-boat shifted, so that the time for the standing start nautical mile was not recorded. "Trèfle's" time for the nautical mile, plus the kilomètre, was 4-min. 17 3-5-sec., or 38 3-5-sec. slower than "Dubonnet." It will thus be seen that the recent meeting marked a substantial advance in motor-boat speed, but that, except in one solitary instance, the improvement was not of a sensational character. Possibly, as the season advances and the boats are got into thorough racing trim, better results may be obtained.

RADIATOR.

Lafayette.

A NEW PORTRAIT OF LADY DE GREY, WITH HER NAPIER LANDAULETTE.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE IMMORTAL SNOB ON VARNISHING DAY.

VARNISHING DAY! They still retain the name for the private view of the Salon, although there is neither privacy nor varnishing. But it as good as another, and, after all, what's in a name? It is the artists' day—the day when they are sure to see their friends, when invitations are distributed by the thousand and every one accepted; a kind of dress rehearsal to the play, the only day the authors are sure of a full house. There are, of course, a few strangers and provincials who pay the ten francs entrance fee for the pleasure of mixing with painters, poets, and actresses, and pointing them out in audible whispers, and you recognise them by their interested stare and their beautiful clothes; but they are in the minority.

All Paris comes "varnishing" in the morning; the afternoon belongs to the crowd. Before twelve o'clock you can circulate freely, see the paintings, and compliment the artists; in the afternoon you are one of a mass of hot, cross individuals trying to push your way back into the fresh air. In the morning a few see the pictures, in the afternoon nobody does. Why do they come? you may ask. It is the same thing year after year. It is, indeed, but they would not miss the crush and the heat and the dust, not for the sweetest breath of spring that blows through the wood.

"JEUNESSE EN ROSE," BY ALFRED-PHILLIPE ROLL.
One of the finest paintings in this year's Salon.

Here is Carolus-Duran, the president of the National Society of Fine Arts — the "Beaux Arts," as this Salon is called—looking a little tired from his journeys to and from the Villa Medicis, but brilliantly surrounded as usual by his satellites, men and women. Here also comes Helleu, with the lady with the distorted hand, Boldini's model for the portrait in black. Has she really a hand like the artist paints it? Who knows? And here is "Willy," with his hat in the same angle as in his portrait, and his cane and gloves in the recognised position. They say he sat so many times in this Boldinisque pose that it will require a rest cure to make him himself again. But who is this handsome man with the black moustache and the touch of red on his coat? He stands at the head of the staircase, hat in hand, receiving whom? The President, Mme. Loubet? Not yet. Nearly all the pretty actresses shake hands, he is delighted to see them. Who is he? Yes. No. How stupid. I did not recognise him. He is our immortal dressmaker saluting his models!

In every room is a small crowd before one or two canvases. The Carrière, the Lavery, the Guthrie, the Roll, is attracting them, no doubt. This you would think if you were a stranger. A Parisian knows that Mlle. A. or la petite B. is holding her court before her portrait, and you distinguish the class of society to which these ladies belong by the words they use to express their admiration. In one group you hear nothing but "ma chère," in the other, "exquis," the formulæ of the insincere.

Before Sargent's Duchess of Sutherland, the beautiful figure in an English park, rising like a flower from the ground, a party of Americans remark, in nasal French, that she is much prettier than that, "bocou plou jolie que celà." Why in French? It is not difficult to understand. If they had said it in English nobody would have known they knew her. A serious-looking couple stand in front of Carrière's work. They have brought their morning paper to guide them; they only stop before the paintings their favourite critic describes. "Carrière's mother and father, how interesting," says he. "Isn't he like his papa?" says she. It was impossible to smother everybody's laughter. But it was the critic's fault. Why did he call Desrillz, the sculptor, Carrière's old friend, his father? He is a charming man, but he does not always know what he is talking about.

Varnishing Day is a family day. Men bring their wives and give them a "bit of luncheon." It is the thing to be seen in legitimate company at the beginning of the season, people remember it to your credit. Who said the So-and-so's were going to divorce? They were lunching together at the opening of the Salon. And this lasts for a long time. He points out his club acquaintances and tells her how much was lost by young C. at baccarat last night; she shows him her milliner, a smart little woman, who bustles from one room to another, seeing nothing but the hats.

Nobody talks painting. If you had not seen the Rodin figure in the entrance you would forget where you were. Rodin everybody talks about. Some, because he is there—he rarely moves from the ground floor. Others, because they think he is taking matters a little too easily. He gives us a torse, a bust without arms or head, a knee, a back and hip; he breaks off at the difficulty. He considers, perhaps, that he has done enough for his reputation, and as long as he reminds people that he is still there, that is surely sufficient. He is a great man, nevertheless, and although he only exhibits a portion of a figure squatted on a low pedestal, he still manages to dwarf the colossal and complete Adam and Eve behind it.

Slowly the crowd draws in one direction. It is nearing midday, and the galleries empty into the restaurant. Waiters rush from one side to the other, carrying eggs in jelly and prawns; everybody is anxious to be seated after the fatigues of the morning; the luncheon hour has arrived. It is useless to make a menu of the food you would like to eat, you must take what the waiter offers, or you will be still waiting for your fish while your neighbour is lighting his cigarette. A Varnishing Day luncheon consists of the hors d'œuvre you see, sole au vin blanc, a cutlet and cold asparagus. If you have made the mistake of ordering a luncheon you will remember this, that it may serve you for next time. At the official opening of the May Salon the fare is varied with the traditional salmon and green sauce, for strangers like the Bougeaureaus in the exhibition. But let us eat and be merry, for the day is but half through.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

MLLE. PRINCE, OF THE ATHENÉE.

(From a photograph by Manuel, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

THE Mediterranean season concludes this week with the regatta at San Remo, and yachts will soon be returning. A great change has come over the aspect of these regattas during the past few years, and from that point of view whence enthusiasts judge of the success of a fixture—the racing—there has been little to interest Englishmen in the season just drawing to a conclusion.

In seasons when the 90-footers, Britannia, Ailsa, etc., commenced their year's racing at these regattas, the Riviera contests were watched as keenly as the sport in home waters. The last occasion on which any big yachts took part in the racing was in 1902, when Sybarita, then owned by Mr. M. B. Kennedy, and Mr. Kenneth Clark's cutter Kariad competed at all the chief regattas, the latter returning with a string of twenty prize flags.

This year, the only two boats familiar to yachtsmen in this country that have taken part in the racing are Caprice, the old 20-rater which flew Sir H. Seymour King's flag a few years ago, and Magdalen, the 52-footer built for Baron de Forest in 1901, and which made a remarkable record in that season, winning no less than thirty-eight races out of forty-two starts. No particular interest has attached to the meeting of these two boats, as they were built under different rating rules in this country, and have recently, of course, been sailing under the French rule, which neither boat exactly fits.

In 1901 Magdalen was regarded as a possible defender of the Coupe de France. The trophy had been successfully defended on two occasions by Mr. E. Hore's Laurea, and in that year another challenge was forwarded, and Quand Même was built specially. As time went on, and no one was forthcoming to give battle to the French boat, it was hoped that Magdalen would defend the trophy; but she slightly exceeded the 20-tons under the French rule of measurement, so the trophy was forfeited. A couple of races were, however, sailed between the pair at Weymouth, and in both instances Magdalen won decisively.

There has been no dearth of valuable prizes offered at the different regattas. Magdalen won the second heat for the cup presented by King Edward for yachts of 20-tons and upwards at the Cannes Regatta, and at the same fixture the third heat for the Coupe Tsarevitch was won by St. Honorat. This was for yachts between 2½-tons and 20-tons. St. Honorat also won the Coupe Nahma, but was beaten by Leda for Baron Alphonse de Rothschild's prize.

Turning to the approaching season at home, some reticence has quite naturally been observed in regard to the design of Sonya, the American 52-footer which arrived during the month; but now that she is afloat it is possible to make some sort of comparison between her and the vessels against which she will be sailing during the season. It has, of course, to be borne in mind that Herreshoff has had to produce a boat under the English rating rule. Nevertheless, she has many distinctive features, which will go to prove—more particularly if she turns out a success—that the possibilities in the matter of evolution under our rule of measurement are not yet exhausted.

Sonya is stated to be about a foot shorter on the water-line than Maymon, last year's champion. Her overhangs appear to be less extravagant than in many modern boats, and she looks decidedly shorter over-all than any of the British craft. Her lead keel has been stated to weigh about 20-tons. This on comparison with any of the existing boats in the class would appear a considerable exaggeration; but judging from the measurement of her spars, she will spread a huge area of canvas, and consequently must obtain increased stability by some means. The length of her mast is given as 80-ft., which is 10-ft. in excess of Moyana's stick. She will have a main boom 54-ft. in length. With a bowsprit some few feet longer than we have been accustomed to see on our own boats in recent years, the base of her fore triangle will be nearly 40-ft. From bowsprit end to the end of main boom will be 94-ft. Taking into consideration the extra hoist, as indicated by the lofty mast, it will be seen she is intended to carry an abnormally large spread of canvas.

In construction the vessel is extremely light. One usually looks for some innovation in the matter of rigging and gear on board an up-to-date American racer, and the new vessel will be found to be no exception to the rule in this respect. Her spars, notwithstanding their length, appear to be smaller in girth than those which do duty on the English boats of similar rating. Of course they are hollow, and are beautiful examples of workmanship. She has a duplicate set, with the exception of a mast. Experience teaches us, however, that this is the stick most likely to require renewing. Camellia had five masts in her first season. The loss of a hollow mast is a serious matter, as the stepping of a solid spar, with its extra weight, alters a boat's sailing trim very considerably.

Against this, however, it has to be borne in mind that the American hollow spars have proved highly satisfactory. Magdalen was the first boat of any size in this country to be fitted with a complete set of these spars, and she carried them throughout the whole of her first season, and used the same in fitting out for the following year. As, however, Sonya has already a duplicate set of other spars, wisdom will probably suggest the expediency of having another mast in readiness in case of mishap. Any accident to the American boat which would result in her withdrawal from racing, even temporarily, would rob the 52-ft. class of its chief interest.

The new vessel will be in charge of Captain Stokes, who is now superintending her fitting out at Tollesbury, where one of her opponents, Mr. Leuchars' Moyana, is also undergoing preparation for the approaching season.

CORINTHIAN.

Stuart.

START OF A HANDICAP.

The vessel on the left is Irex, which carried Mr. Jameson's flag in the eighties. She has now been broken up. The white yawl is Navahoe, a Herreshoff design. She came across to this country in 1892, and raced with Britannia, Satanita, Calluna, and Iverna. She is now owned by Herr Wätjen. The cutter on the right is Tutty, the 65-footer originally owned by Herr Carl von Siemens. She was raced in handicaps by Messrs. Connell, and has now been purchased by Dr. Inglis, a Clyde yachtsman.

Digitized by Google

Artistic Photography.

II.—THE COSWAY GALLERY AND THE COSWAY PICTURE.

PERHAPS the most beautiful of all the modern styles of photography is the Cosway picture. It claims its origin from the old and highly-prized mezzotint engravings of J. R. Smith. To the Cosway gallery in New Bond Street belongs the distinction of having adapted the style and methods of the mezzotint to photography, and creating a new photographic process.

It has taken years of actual experience to bring the Cosway to the perfection which it has attained. The posing and composition of the picture generally follows closely on the lines of the old engravings. The process of printing gives the pictures a delicious mellow tone, heightening that old-world appearance which age merely intensifies. Their delicate colouring greatly adds to their charm. Another important branch of Messrs. Esmé Collings's art is the revival of the "Stayned" drawings. Richard Cosway introduced these portraits and called them "Stayned" drawings. The draperies and background are very lightly drawn in with pencil in cool grey tones, and the face, hands, and hair are most delicately and finely painted in water-colour. The combination of the pencil and water-colour gives a most beautifully delicate and artistic effect. At the Cosway Gallery in Bond Street, which, by the way, are fitted up in the most exquisite taste, there are some really fine specimens of the Cosway work. A public exhibition of their work would be a liberal education, and would certainly have a distinctive value in showing the vast strides that have been made in the artistic development of photography. On their walls are hung beautiful studies of many distinguished people, particularly noticeable being a striking head study of Princess Westchersky, one of the Ladies-in-Waiting to the Czarina. The soft tones and delicate colour effects bring out all the beauty of the subject. Some others are the Hon. Mrs. Charles Forester, Lady Violet Wingfield, Princess of Monaco, and Countess Erdódy.

THE HON. MRS. CHARLES FORESTER

One of the new "Pearl" pictures produced at the Cosway Gallery, New Bond Street, W.

A beautiful life-size painting of the Countess of Tankerville in her Coronation robes is a conspicuous feature of the gallery. Of rather melancholy interest are some striking Cosway pictures of the late Marquess of Anglesey as Henry V. of France. That unfortunate nobleman ordered pictures to the value of £600 from Messrs. Esmé Collings, and it is noteworthy that at Christie's the pictures brought more than their cost price. The "Pearl" pictures, which are the firm's latest idea, are a dainty style of photograph enclosed in a photographic pearl rim. It is designed, of course, for ladies, and is certain to be popular. For the men there is a new platinotype photograph, strikingly artistic, with Rembrandtesque effects. A very noticeable feature of the firm is the rapidity and facility with which their printing is done. Hitherto the photographer and his clients have been much at the mercy of the weather. The Cosway Gallery can afford to scorn fogs. They have installed a special "blue ray" light, which enables them to print any style of photograph in from 17-sec. to 25-sec. Only the photographic expert can appreciate what this really means. Under the old system it sometimes, when the climatic conditions were unfavourable, took a single working day to get off a platinotype print. Now the operator holds the frame before the light, and in a fraction of a minute the work is done. Needless to say, the new method comes from America.

All the work of the Cosway Gallery achieves a high standard of artistic excellence.

Mr. Richard B. Hope, the managing director of the business, was formerly an Army officer, but he early abandoned the profession of arms for art. The success which has attended his efforts and the artistic progress of the work of the firm is the best evidence of the earnestness with which he has taken up his new work. He has been one of the pioneers of really artistic photography for before the advent of the Cosway picture there were few successful attempts made to raise photography from the level of an ordinary mechanical process.

The average photographic operator was generally a man without any artistic education, beyond the manipulation of his blinds to regulate light and shade. He talked glibly of "composition," and sought inspiration in a velvet jacket. His idea of a really effective picture was to cram into the picture all the studio furniture. He was also something of a symbolist. If his sitter belonged to one of the learned professions, he was invariably made to sit before an eccentric-looking table with a book in one hand, the other hand held under the chin in that reflective manner indicative of great minds. All that has been changed; the modern operator is thoroughly conversant with the work of the great masters. He has studied their methods of lighting, posing, and draping. If one might use the paradox, photography is becoming less "photographic." The Cosway picture is a genuine attempt to produce an artistic photograph, and the Cosway Gallery deserve all the success which has crowned their work.

Digitized by Google

ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHY.

TWO COSWAY "PEARL" PICTURES.

A STUDY OF A CHILD'S HEAD. THE DAUGHTER OF MRS. H. HANNEN.

TWO COSWAY PORTRAITS.

THE COUNTESS ZICHY. MISS MARSH.

Digitized by Google

AT THE COSWAY GALLERY.

MRS. WEBSTER.

One of the latest studies produced at the Cosway Gallery.

Digitized by Google

The Grand Festival of English Freemasons.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY, 1805—1905.

LORD DONOUGHMORE
Grand Master of Ireland in 1805.

MR. WILLIAM WHITE
Grand Secretary of Freemasons ("Moderns") in 1805.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER
A prominent Freemason in 1805.

DESPITE the many changes which have taken place since 1805, Great Queen Street is still the headquarters of English Freemasonry. The very hall where the Grand Officers of 1905 received their collars of purple and gold, is the same in which their predecessors of 1805 foregathered under the presidency of the Earl of Moira, or his "deputy" Sir Peter Parker. The "Tavern" hard by, however, has been twice rebuilt since then, and nothing now remains of the long and narrow room in which Henderson the actor read "John Gilpin" in the presence of admiring crowds, and of its somewhat more ornate successor, the scene of the farewell banquet to John Philip Kemble, and the charity dinners (masonic and otherwise) at which one or other of the Royal Dukes frequently filled the chair, with never-failing geniality. Those who wish to learn something of the early history of Freemasons' Hall and its dependencies should consult the admirable accounts of the "Globe" Lodge, and the "Emulation Lodge of Improvement," both of which can claim a general interest quite outside the annals of the particular bodies to which they immediately relate, compiled by the erudite Grand Tyler, Mr. Henry Sadler. When speaking of Freemasonry as it existed in the days of Trafalgar (and Nelson himself became a member of the confraternity during one of his many voyages), it is necessary to remember that prior to 1813 two "Grand Lodges" flourished side by side, frequently distinguished from each other by the names of their respective Grand Masters. Those enrolled under the banner of the Great Queen Street body, which originated in 1717, were known as "Prince of Wales" Masons or "Moderns," while their rivals, who met at the Crown and Anchor Tavern in the Strand, were dubbed "Atholl" Masons or "Ancients," although they could go no further back than 1753. The Royal patronage of the craft dates from 1782, when the Duke of Cumberland became Grand Master of the "Moderns," to be succeeded eight years later by George Prince of Wales, who held the office until 1813, when the Duke of Sussex was elected to the post. In 1805, the Earl of Moira held the rank of "Acting" Grand Master under the Prince of Wales. The principal Grand Officers of that year amongst the "Moderns" were Sir Peter Parker, Deputy Grand Master; Mr. Sherborne Stewart and Dr. John Cooke, Grand Wardens; James Hesseltine, Grand Treasurer; Mr. W. White, Grand Secretary; Rev. Lucius Coglan, D.D., Grand Chaplain; Rev. W. Peters, R.A., Grand Portrait Painter; and the Chevalier Bartholomew Ruspini (Court Dentist), Grand Sword Bearer. "The Freemason's Calendar" had already become an institution in 1805, and has been issued without intermission ever since, although in a somewhat more portable form. It was then published "for the benefit of the Charity Fund under the sanction of the Grand Master." The fund in question related to the Royal Cumberland School (for girls) in St. George's Fields, the centenary of which was celebrated in 1888. In the Calendar for 1805 we are told that the Duchess of Cumberland was the Patroness, and that it also enjoyed the patronage of their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of York and Gloucester (whose portrait is now reproduced), as well as that of his Serene Highness Prince Frederick of Orange. Amongst the Provincial Grand Lodges figuring in the Calendar of 1805 were those of South Carolina, "the Creek, Cherokee, Chickesaw and Chactaw Nations in North America," Frankfort-on-Maine, Georgia, Hanover, Naples, and Sicily and St. Helena. The Lodges numbered 597, beginning with the "Lodge of Antiquity," No. 1, and ending with the "Lodge of the Crowned Serpent" at Gorlitz in Germany. The first-named is as popular in 1905 as it was in 1805, and for at least half a century before that.

The "Atholl" Grand Lodge had no Calendar of its own, but a series of annual printed reports concerning its affairs are still preserved in the archives of Great Queen Strect.

JOHN, FOURTH DUKE OF ATHOLL
Grand Master of the Atholl Grand Lodge, or "Ancients" in 1805. He continued to hold office until the union of the two Grand Lodges in 1813.

FRANCIS, EARL OF MOIRA
Afterwards Marquis of Hastings, K.G., "Acting" Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the 'Prince of Wales' Masons or "Moderns" in 1805.

Digitized by Google

Elliott and Fry.

EARL AMHURST

Pro-Grand Master of England, 1905.

Downey.

THE EARL OF MALMESBURY

Grand Senior Warden of England, 1904-5 and 1905-6.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. F. T. HALSEY, M.P.

Deputy Grand Master of England, 1905.

Barclay Bros.

MR. J. MORRISON McLEOD

The popular and successful Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institute for Boys.

Copyright.

THE EARL OF CORK

Provincial Grand Master of Somerset, Chairman of the coming Festival of the R.M.I.B.A.

Haxell.

COLONEL LONG, C.M.G.

Deputy Grand Master of Somerset, and Provincial Grand Master of the Mark Degree.

Elite Company.

MR. STANLEY J. ATTENBOROUGH

Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of England, 1905.

Ellis and Walery.

MR. CHARLES FITZGERALD MATIER

Grand Secretary of the Mark Grand Lodge of England.

Russell.

MR. C. E. KEYSER

Trustee of Royal Masonic Institute for Boys.

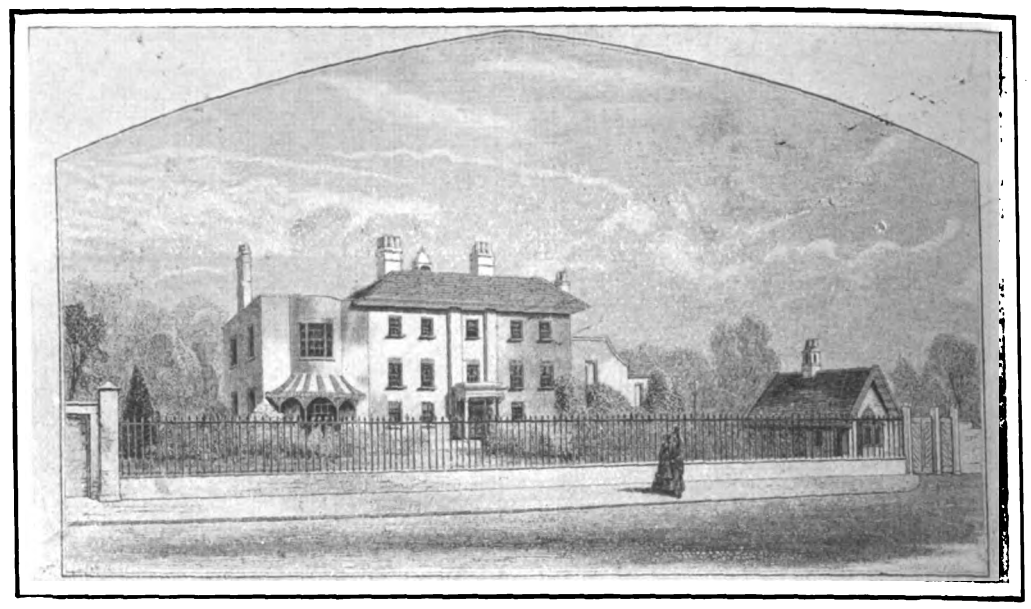
Digitized by Google

The Crown and Anchor, however, has vanished as completely as the symposia which took place within its walls, and those who enjoyed them. One "Royal Mason" could at this time be claimed by the "Ancients," viz., the Duke of Kent, who became a Freemason at Geneva in 1790, and now held office as "Atholl" Provincial Grand Master of Canada. Some 334 Lodges figured on the muster-roll of the "Ancients" in 1805, but scarcely half of them appear to have made regular returns and reports, and many became either dormant or extinct. John, Duke of Atholl, was Grand Master, with Mr. Thomas Harper as Deputy. Robert Leslie was Grand Secretary, Mr. Edward Harper being Deputy. In 1805 Lord Donoughmore (whose portrait is given) was Grand Master of Ireland. His descendant, the present Earl of Donoughmore, was Senior Grand Warden of the United Grand Lodge of England in 1902. In 1805 the Royal Masonic School for Boys was just beginning to flourish under the ægis of the "Atholl" Masons. The unification of "Moderns" and "Ancients" was already discussed in 1805. Eight years later the Duke of Sussex became Grand Master of the former, while the Duke of Kent accepted the same high office in the other. Under their auspices the long-desired amalgamation of the two supreme bodies was happily accomplished, and the Duke of Sussex ruled over "Moderns" and "Ancients" alike down to 1843. In 1874 King Edward VII. became Grand Master. On his accession to the throne in 1901 his place was taken by the Duke of Connaught, who has just been re-elected. In the course of the century which has intervened between 1805 and 1905 the number of Lodges has risen from 931 to 3,079, while the two Masonic Schools are now deservedly numbered amongst the most important and prosperous educational establishments of the United Kingdom.

The Earl of Malmesbury, Grand Senior Warden of England in 1904, receives in 1905 the signal distinction of reappointment to the same high office. In 1805, his ancestor James, Lord Malmesbury, the celebrated diplomatist of the Napoleonic epoch, and the stirring times which preceded it, was still alive. His still youthful successor has already shown himself one of the ablest exponents of Masonic ritual. Distinction doubtless awaits him as one of our hereditary legislators. By a happy coincidence the Grand Warden's Collar comes to him a second time literally on the eve of his marriage—a circumstance which will certainly form the subject of many congratulations on the part of his Masonic brethren.

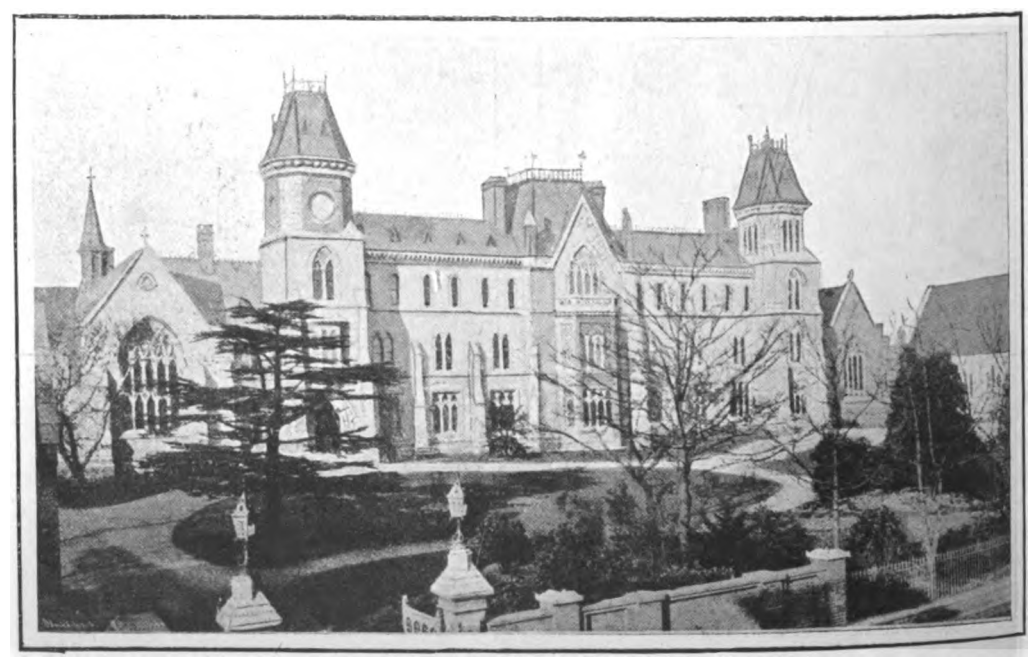
The Grand Junior Wardenship of 1905 goes, as it has often done before, to the City, not to the Lord Mayor, however, but to one of its representatives in Parliament, Mr. Alban Gibbs. The Grand Chaplains of 1905 are the Rev. S. T. Saunders and the Rev. V. P. Wyatt. The Senior Grand Deacons are Colonel Gerald C. Ricardo, Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Ward (Mayor of Harwich in 1885), and Mr. Frederick Phillips, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Monmouthshire. The Junior Grand Deacons are Dr. Ernest Clarke, Mr. Alfred Louis Reynolds, and Mr. Walter H. Jessop of Harley Street. Mr. John Strahan, K.C., is reappointed Grand Registrar, with Judge Lumley Smith as Deputy. Sir Arthur Collins, K.C., will again hold office as President of the Board of General Purposes, while, by an overwhelming majority of votes, Mr. Stanley J. Attenborough, treasurer of the Boys' School, has been elected to the coveted post of Grand Treasurer.

On June 28 next, the 107th anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys will be held under the presidency of the Earl of Cork and Orrery, who, when Lord Dungarvan, was reputed to be one of the most ardent and successful "workers" in the craft. Lord Cork is receiving the loyal support of the whole of his Province of Somersetshire, including the City of Bath, where the Freemasons are possessors of the ancient theatre, the walls of which in the latter half of the eighteenth century re-echoed the applause bestowed by the most fashionable audience in England on the efforts of a Henderson,



THE FIRST MASONIC SCHOOL FOR BOYS AT WOOD GREEN.

THE SECOND MASONIC SCHOOL AT WOOD GREEN.



THE PRESENT SCHOOL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTE FOR BOYS AT BUSHEY.

Digitized by Google

Elite Co.

MR. W. LAKE

Assistant Grand Secretary for English Freemasons.

an Edwin, a Siddons, and a George Frederick Cooke. Along with the portrait of Lord Cork is given that of Colonel Long, C.M.G., his energetic and popular deputy, who is, of course, one of the prominent stewards at the festival. With the history of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys in the eleventh decade of its existence will always be respectfully associated the names of its trustee and chairman of the board of management, Mr. Charles Edward Keyser; its treasurer, Mr. Stanley J. Attenborough; and last, but not least, its indefatigable secretary, Mr. J. Morrison McLeod, whose eloquence is now exciting so much enthusiasm in the country of the Mendips and the Quantocks. It is satisfactory to note that the income of the Institution during the last year was the second highest—other than the centenary—in its existence. From the official report it also resulted that the efficiency of the school (the whole of which for the eleventh successive year had been examined by the Cambridge University Syndicate) was well maintained. The amount of invested funds, as stated in the balance sheet, is £133,208 7s. 6d. The number of boys on the books in 1904 was 326, and for the current year 338, being an increase of 78 since 1890. This constant enlargement of its sphere of usefulness, together with the necessity of retaining a larger number of boys at the school for higher education after the age of fifteen, fully justifies the strong appeal of the board for a large measure of support in order to provide the necessary funds "for the maintenance and education of sons of Freemasons whose circumstances require the benefits of the school."

The illustrations given in these columns show the three successive stages through which the Masonic Boys' School has passed until it attained its present proud position. Two years ago, on the occasion of the inauguration of the new and magnificent school buildings at Bushey, the annual festival took place there under the presidency of the late Viscount Ridley, then Provincial Grand Master of Northumberland, when the contributions of the stewards beat all former records, except that of the ever-memorable centenary of 1898. In a booklet published in 1903 the small beginnings from which the Institution originally sprang were effectively recalled.

It was during the summer of 1798 that Mr. William Burwood, with other members of the United Mariners' Lodge, now No. 30 on the roll of United Grand Lodge, but then No. 23 on that of the Grand Lodge of "Ancient" or "Atholl" Masons, established the "Institution for Clothing and Educating the Sons of Indigent Freemasons," the number of children that were shortly admitted to its benefits being six. In 1801 his Grace the Duke of Atholl, Grand Master, became its patron while a few years later his Grand Lodge took it under its immediate protection, generously voting from time to time considerable sums of money towards its support, and for the last eighteen months of its separate existence contributing regularly a certain proportion of the fees received for the initiation of candidates. In 1809 it voted a sum of £210 to enable the Governors to commemorate the jubilee of George III.'s accession to the throne by increasing the number of children to 50, and the number was accordingly augmented to that figure the year following. In 1814, after the union of the rival societies had been accomplished, and all distinction between "Ancient" and "Modern" Freemasons had been effaced, the benefits of the Institution were extended to the children of all poor or deceased English Freemasons; while in 1817 a similar institution, which had been established by Mr. F. Colombine Daniel and other members of the "Modern" Royal Naval Lodge of Independence, No. 57—now Royal Naval Lodge, No. 59—was amalgamated with the original charity. In 1832, his Majesty King William IV. graciously consented to become patron, and the prefix "Royal" was inserted in the title of the institution, while the Duke of Sussex accepted the office of president, and the grade, at first honorary, of vice-president was instituted. In 1838, the varying payments annually made by Grand Lodge out of initiation fees were commuted into a fixed annual subvention of £150. In 1841, the number of children, which had been fixed at 70 in 1818, but which, for lack of funds, had been reduced in the interim—in 1826 it stood as low as 43—was once more restored to 70.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. ALBAN GIBBS

Member of Parliament for the City of London, and Junior Grand Warden of England for 1905-6.

It is exactly forty years since the school at Wood Green was formally opened by the Marquess of Ripon, still happily alive. Eighteen years later the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, ever to the fore in all good works, laid the foundation-stone of the old hall. This was in 1883. Thirteen years later it was finally resolved to dispose of the premises, which had become inadequate, and erect a new school on a more suitable site at Bushey. The success of the Centenary Festival of 1898 provided the sinews of war, and on May 12, 1900, the Duke of Connaught—acting for the then Grand Master—laid the foundation-stone of the existing Institution, now a legitimate source of pride to every Freemason of the Anglo-Saxon race. "May its prosperity be continued" is the ardent wish of all those who know and realise the measure of good which is being accomplished by the powerful organisation of which the symbol is the "Lewis," and the motto "Audi, Vide, Tace."

In another portion of this journal will be found a brief account of some of the most remarkable curiosities of Freemasonry, including illustrations of antique chairs and inscribed pottery, preserved with reverent care by the members of the "All Souls'" Lodge, Weymouth, and the "Brotherly Love" Lodge, Yeovil, two of the most flourishing Masonic bodies in the West of England. A. M. B.

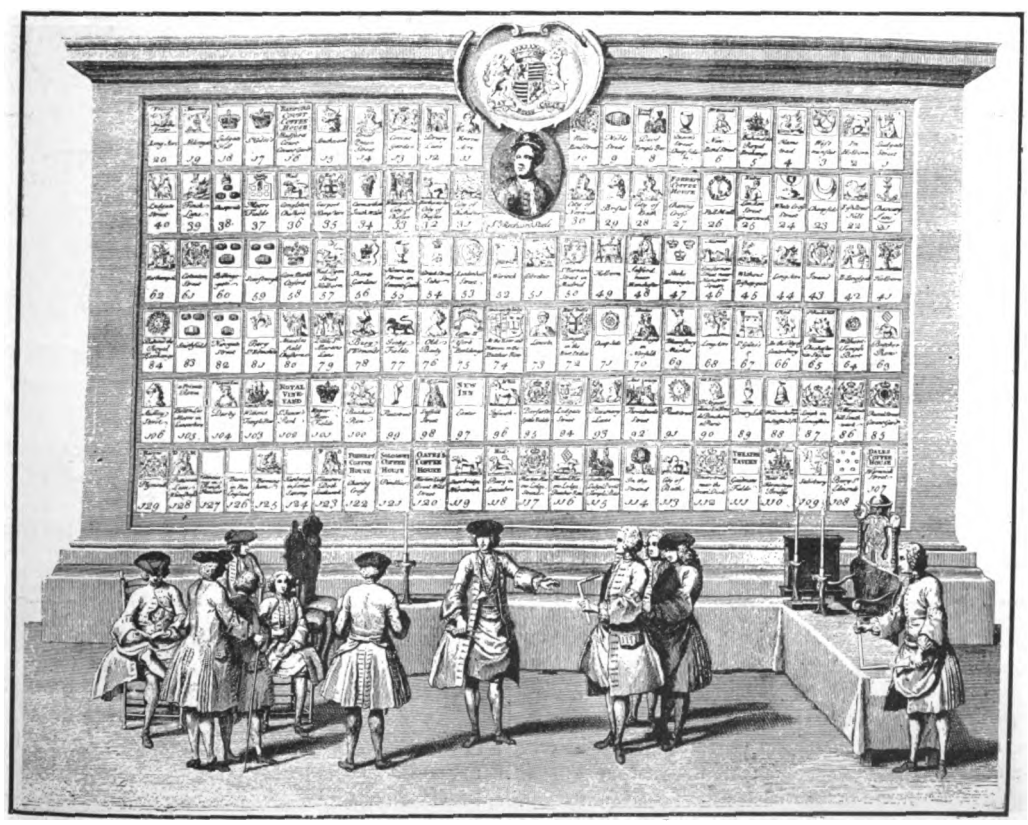

TABLE SHOWING PORTRAIT OF SIR RICHARD STEELE, AND A LIST OF ENGLISH LODGES THEN IN EXISTENCE.

Published in Picard's "Religious Ceremonies," 1741 Many of them still exist.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

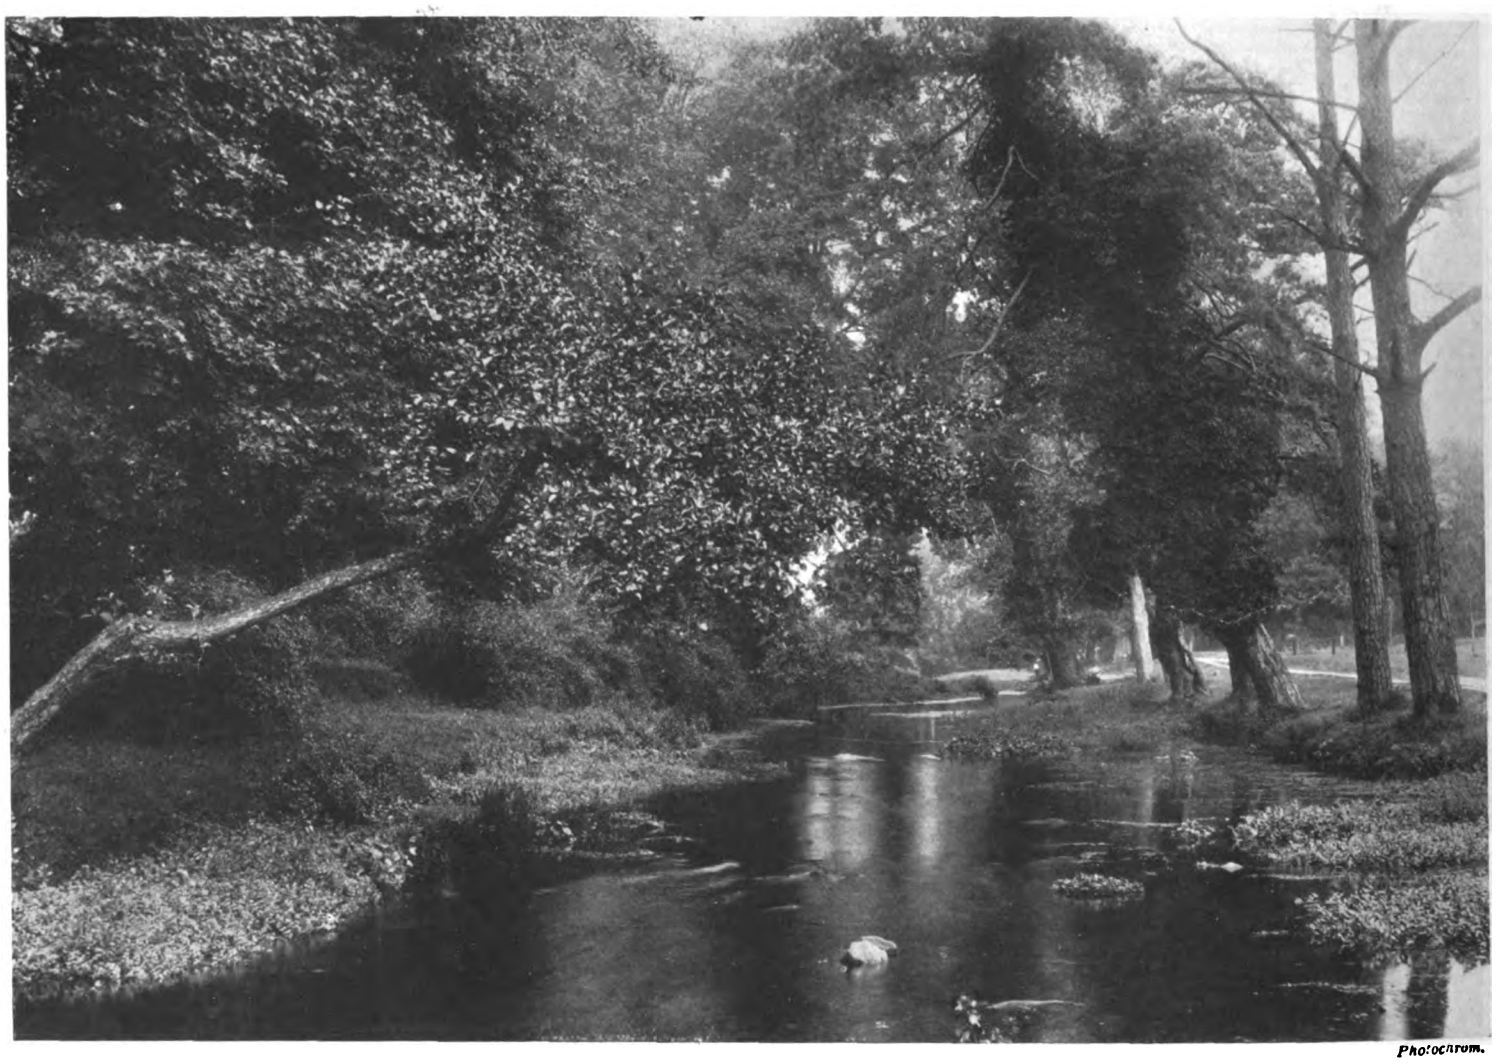
DEVONSHIRE, the land of cream and junket, not to mention the many other good things which "the soul of man loveth," needs but little recommendation as a resort for health or pleasure. It is at once a playground for the healthy and a sanatorium for the sick. The holiday-maker has long since discovered its charms, which lie for the most part in the picturesque old-world villages to be found dotted along the South Coast. Inland the scenery may be, perhaps, even more beautiful, though there one misses the rich, red-coloured cliffs which form so attractive a feature of the coast scenery. One of the most picturesque stretches of the coast-line lies between Exmouth and Lyme Regis, the latter situated on the borders of Devon and Dorset. Here, at intervals of a few miles only, are to be found such pleasant watering-places as Sidmouth, Seaton, Budleigh Salterton, and the quaint old-world village of Beer. Thus the traveller has a fairly wide choice of places among which to choose his temporary quarters.

Almost needless to say, accommodation, whether it be in a boarding-house or in an hotel, is somewhat restricted, especially during the height of the season. Then rooms of almost any kind, unless engaged some time in advance, are practically unobtainable. In the larger towns, such as Sidmouth or Seaton, there are several quite first-class hotels, not to mention numerous boarding establishments. But the more enjoyable way of holiday-making in this rural corner of England is to obtain the use of a cottage, though even these are by no means easy to obtain unless booked quite early in the season. The cottage should, if possible, be near to the seashore, thereby effecting a considerable saving in bathing-machine hire! In Sidmouth a fine new hotel—called the Victoria, in remembrance of our late Queen's visit to Sidmouth as an infant—has recently been opened. It occupies a most favourable site overlooking the sea, and we understand is most comfortable in every way.

From London the South Western Company provide a first-rate service of trains, including many of the West of England expresses. Recently the company have accelerated their service by the addition of a convenient train, to which a dining-car is attached, leaving Waterloo at 11.10 a.m.

Lyme Regis is what one might aptly term a cosy little town, picturesque and sheltered, or, as Leland puts it, "a praty market town sette in the nooks of an high rokky hille, leading down to the hard shore." Hitherto, Axminster, on the South Western main line, was the nearest station to Lyme, the last six miles of the journey being performed by coach. The drive was certainly a delightful one, affording the most beautiful views practically all the way; but now that the South Western Company have completed their new line into Lyme, passengers can travel through from Waterloo without change of carriage. Probably few people are aware of the great historic interest which attaches to Lyme Regis. As early as the fourteenth century it was an important seaport, and for over 500 years regularly returned two members to Parliament. In 1644, during the Civil War, it was besieged for seven weeks by the Royalists, who were at last compelled to retreat. Again, in the year 1685, Lyme came into prominence, when the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth landed, hoping to meet with an enthusiastic reception. In less than a month his hopes were defeated on the fatal field of Sedgemoor. One of the most interesting and remarkable events which happened off the little seaport was the defeat of the Spanish Armada, which, the local records say, was fought within a few cables' length of the shore. Concerning its more recent history, it is interesting to note that Lyme, as far back as the year 1750, was a strong rival of Bath, at which time there was a large and regular influx of fashionable visitors. The cliff scenery is particularly fine, and scarcely equalled in either Devon or Dorset. Some remarkable fossils have been discovered among the cliffs, which form a happy hunting ground for those of a geological turn of mind. The front is remarkable, in a sense, for its quaint old stone pier, known as the Cobb.



Photochrom.

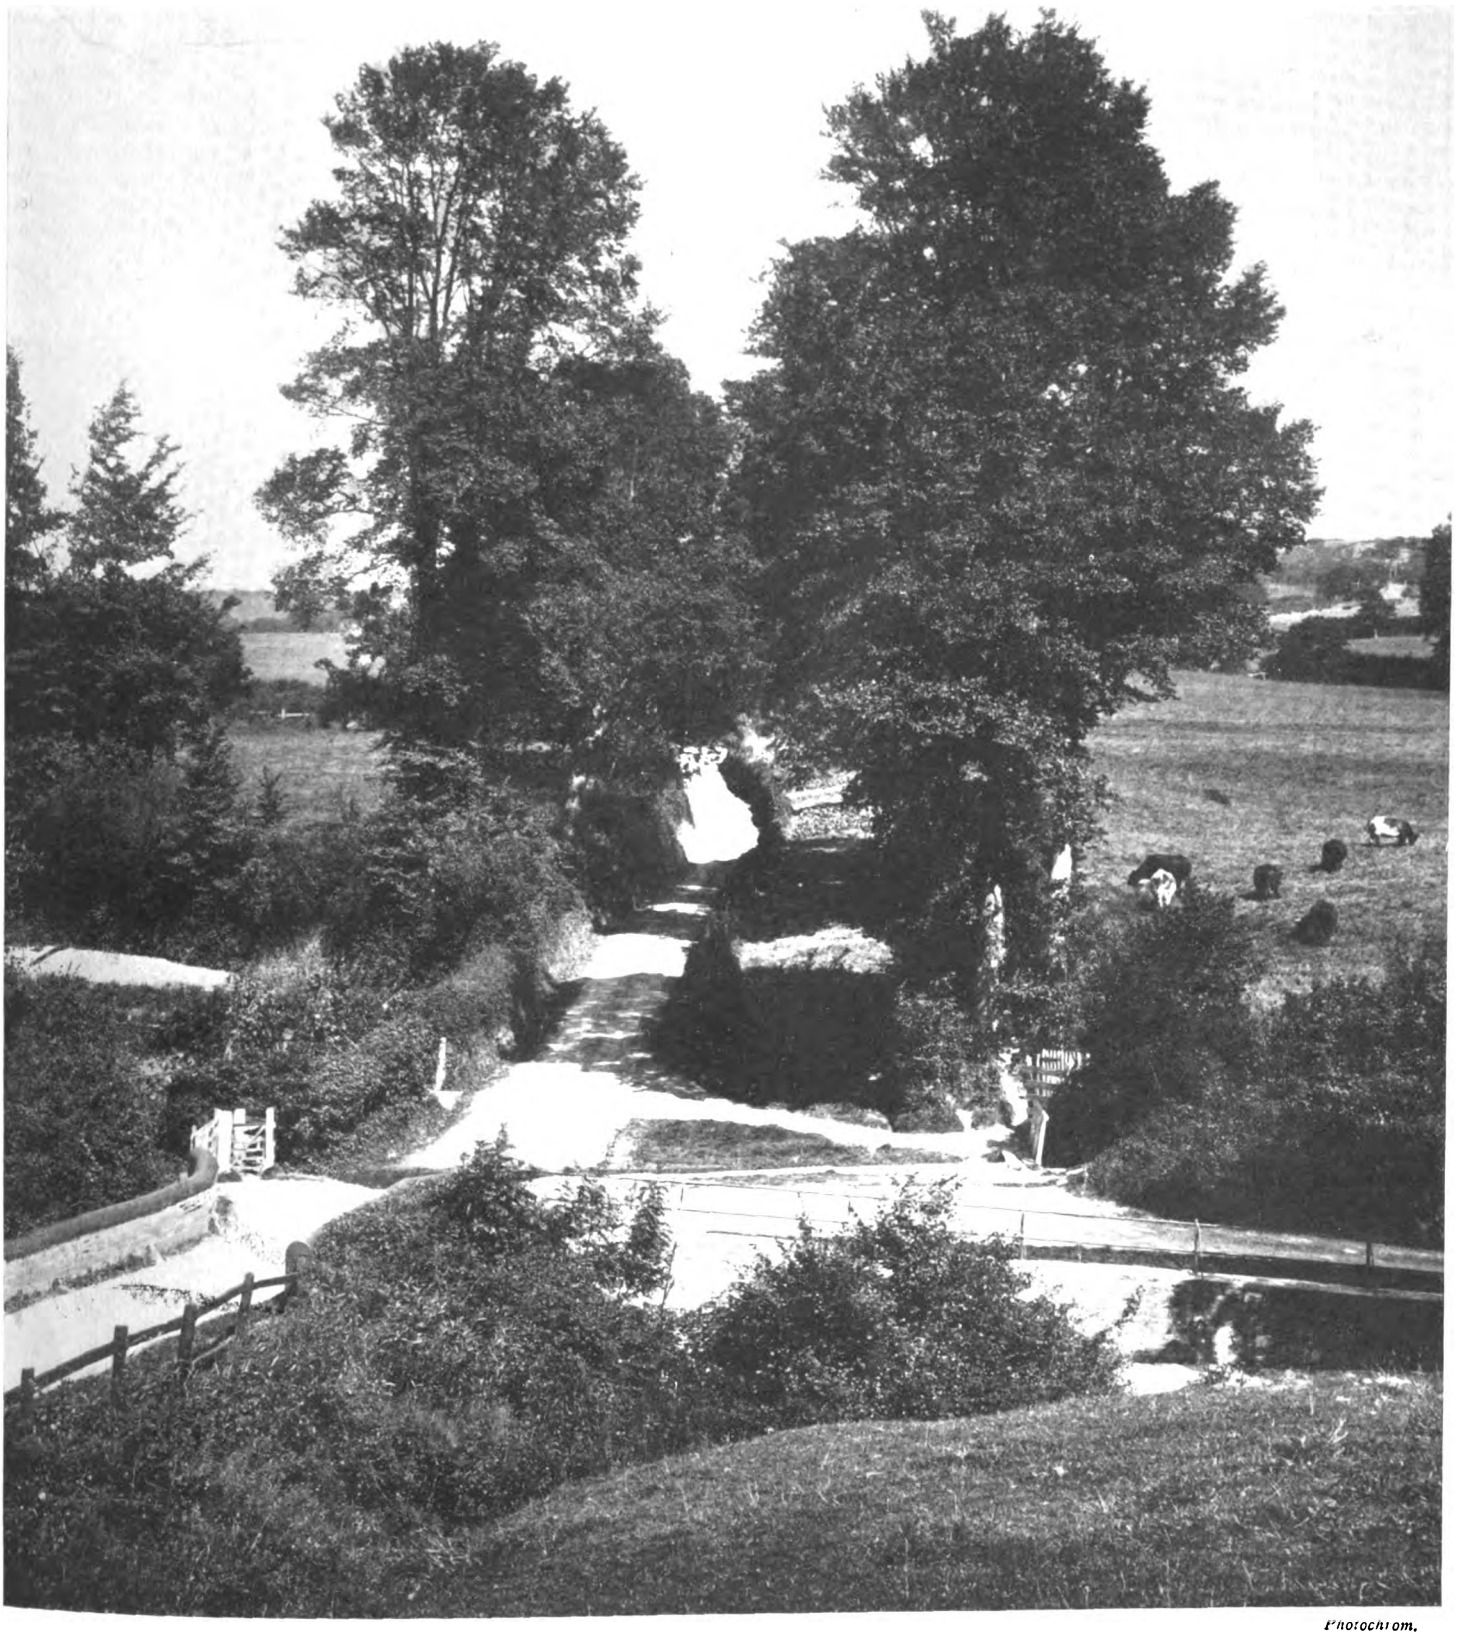
ON THE RIVER SID.

Sidmouth is a centre from which some of the most picturesque parts of South Devon may be visited. Among other interesting places, special mention should be made of Budleigh Salterton, Seaton and the old-world fishing village of Beer, a favourite resort of artists.

Digitized by Google

erected in the reign of Edward I. In a way it is quite unique, being the only promenade of its kind that exists in the county. Several interesting coaching excursions can be made from Lyme, to the Landslip, to Charmouth, to Bridport, and by steamer to Weymouth and Dartmouth.

To reach Seaton from Lyme it is nearer to go by coach than by train. Seaton is situated in the Axe Valley, and surrounded by hills and great cliffs. There are good golf links of nine holes on Haven Cliff, and some comfortable hotels. The little village of Axmouth, about a mile and a quarter from Seaton, affords perhaps one of the most pleasing examples of a Devonshire village. Beer is another delightful little retreat, distant about two miles. Here will be seen the imposing white chalk promontory of Beer Head, 446-ft. in height. At the summit is a Coastguard station, while in the valley below nestles the little village, once famous as a smuggling haunt of Jack Rattenbury, the notorious smuggler. At the present day Beer is better known as a resort of artists, numbers of whom make their home there in the summer. Those who choose Sidmouth for their summer quarters will find a most convenient centre for all kinds of excursions by coach and steamer. East Budleigh, and Budleigh Salterton, the headquarters of the East Devon Golf Links, can be conveniently reached from this point.



Photochrom.

A DEVONSHIRE LANE.

The scenery is typical of the beautiful South Devon country. Lyme Regis, in the neighbourhood of which the picture was taken, is situated on the borders of Devon and Dorset. The coast scenery in the district is particularly fine.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

OWING to the Easter Holidays and the exigencies of going to press considerably earlier than usual, it is impossible to deal satisfactorily either with the racing of the past week or with that of the immediate future; but there are so many interesting anecdotes concerning some of the past races for the City and Suburban Handicap that it may not be uninteresting to recall some few of them. Lord Rosebery won this race in 1874 with a horse called Aldrich, and in the same race was an animal named Curate, who was strongly supported in the betting. I think it was Sir George Chetwynd who had a most extraordinary dream, in which he distinctly saw Curate win the race, but run up a bank a little beyond the winning-post, and disappear Mr. Samuda, "and The Teacher has won!" So vivid and lasting was the impression left by the dream that Lord Vivian searched all the papers to see at what price The Teacher stood in the betting, but could not discover any horse of the name amongst the entries. By a most extraordinary coincidence the first person Lord Vivian met at Waterloo Station was Mr. Samuda, who, on hearing the story of the dream, cleared up the mystery by explaining that, in order to distinguish him from a filly of the same age, The Teacher had been renamed as Aldrich. Lord Vivian at once made up his mind to put £100 on Aldrich, and told Lord Rosebery, but was advised not to do so, as the horse had been beaten in his trials. On this account he contented himself with taking the nice little bet of £1,000 to £30. estimated when it is remembered that in the same year Foxhall won both the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire, in the latter of which races he carried 9-st. and defeated a field of thirty-four runners, amongst which were horses of the very highest class.

We have now had some experience of the races over short distances, which became legalised under the régime of Lord Durham as Senior Steward of the Jockey Club. It is difficult to understand what benefit can accrue to either horses or owners from their return to a state of affairs which obtained in less enlightened days. It is patent to onlookers that instead of lessening the strain enforced upon two year olds by early racing, still greater efforts are demanded from them under the present system. After all, it is the pace that so completely that he never returned to weigh in, and consequently the race was awarded to Mr. Lefèvre's Minister, who came in second. The curious part of the dream was that, although the betting foreshadowed the victory of Curate, he was scratched shortly before the race, and Minister did actually finish second. "Thormanby's" account of Lord Vivian's dream concerning the same race is even more remarkable. It appears that his lordship fell asleep again after waking early on the morning of the race, and in his sleeping vision saw himself in the weighing-room at Epsom, and that his friend, Mr. Samuda, came into the room remarking as he entered, "That was a fine race; only won by a neck, I should think." Still in his dream, Lord Vivian answered, "You don't mean to say that the City and Suburban is over?" "Yes it is," replied But many other people, including Mr. Somerville, the owner of Oxford Mixture, who was then fourth favourite for the race, backed Aldrich on the strength of Lord Vivian's dream, and he started at 40 to 1, and the satisfaction of his backers must have been great when they saw him come out and win by a neck from Minister.

W. A. Rouch.

THE BECKHAMPTON STRING.

Early morning exercise—a critical inspection by the trainer.

Weight does not seem to stop a really good horse in the City and Suburban, and not a few of us can remember seeing Thunder, the bay son of Thunderbolt, carrying 9-st. 4-lb. and romping home with Fred Archer in the saddle. Imagine the magnificent spectacle the race presented when Bend Or, ridden by the same brilliant horseman, made light of his 9-st. of weight, and strode home in front of his field, giving no less than 34-lb. to Foxhall, a performance the magnitude of which may be kills, and from start to finish the youngsters are driven home at the very top of their speed. The opinion of many of our most eminent trainers is completely against sprint racing which takes place under the new regulations, and it is sincerely to be hoped that it will not be long before some weight is given to the expression of their views.

Hidden away in the heart of the Wiltshire Downs are the famous Beckhampton training stables, presided over by Mr. S. Darling, whose kindly nature and sterling qualities have endeared him to all who know him. With Beckhampton will always be associated the names of Galtee More and Ard Patrick, and it may not be long before we shall once more see their clever trainer saddling yet another classic winner for the fray.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

TRAINING AT BECKHAMPTON

W. A. Rouch.

BECKHAMPTON HOUSE, THE RESIDENCE OF MR. S. DARLING.

W. A. Rouch.

AFTER WORK: HEADS TOWARDS HOME.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

THE appointment of Major J. K. Watson, C.M.G., D.S.O., to be Resident A.D.C. to the Khedive is of many-sided interest. Much might be said on the subject from the personal standpoint, for "Bimbashi" Watson has helped in the making of a good deal of history, and has been prominent in a good many important connections since he entered the old 60th Rifles twenty years ago. The mere fact of his having served continuously as Lord Kitchener's A.D.C. during the strenuous years in which the latter was engaged in carrying his great work in the Soudan to a triumphant conclusion, would be sufficient to give Major Watson's record a peculiar distinction. But the appointment has a political and historical as well as a personal significance. It is not unreasonable to regard it as remotely connected with l'entente cordiale, since in the days before England and France came to an understanding about Egypt and Morocco, the last-named nation might conceivably have protested against the appointment of a British officer to the Khedive's Personal Staff, as carrying the "influence" into unduly intimate quarters. Historically, the appointment sets the crown upon the association of the King's Army with that of the Khedive, and is a fresh reminder of the old pre-Kitchener days when Evelyn Wood first, and after him Grenfell, tackled the apparently hopeless task of converting the wretched "Gippy" into a real fighting soldier.

THE authorities have acted wisely in setting Major-General Hutchinson, the Director of Staff Duties, to act as chairman of the committee appointed to report on the shortage of officers in the cavalry, and on the steps necessary to restore the popularity of the arm. General Hutchinson is not a cavalry officer himself—if the writer remembers rightly, he was regimentally connected with one of the Gurkha battalions of the Indian Army—but he is a man of strong common-sense and wide experience, which is almost more to the point in the present instance than an affectionate regard for cavalry traditions. Moreover, General Hutchinson, who was formerly Assistant Military Secretary for Indian Affairs, and knows the Indian Army from roof to basement, can, if necessary, give the three cavalry members of the committee a quantity of useful and àpropos information.

REVERTING for a moment to what was said recently in these notes, as to the Imperial lessons to be learnt from the voyage of the Baltic Fleet to the Far East, it is interesting to remember that a few years ago our most remote Colonies would doubtless have trusted implicitly to the British Navy to render improbable, if not impossible, the advent of a hostile war-ship. But nowadays special steps must be taken to prevent the wholesale adventuring of "auxiliary cruisers" attended by colliers on Colony-wrecking raids. It is not the province of the writer of these notes to discuss large Naval questions closely. But it appears to him that the present is a favourable juncture at which to deprecate the almost contemptuous criticism often levelled against those who uphold the cruiser-battle-ship of the "Terrible" class as no compromise, but as possessing qualities of distinct and very up-to-date significance. A system of patrolling carried out by half-a-dozen "Terribles" would be extraordinarily effective, and would probably result in time of war in the snapping up of a score or two of auxiliary cruisers, and other second-class war vessels with attendant colliers, whose sole object was to inflict damage upon the nooks and corners of a scattered Empire.

THE appointment of Colonel F. F. Johnson, C.B., to be Major-General in charge of Administration in the Eastern Command, although nominally temporary, is a pretty clear indication that, whatever happens, this admirable officer is marked out for future advancement. Colonel Johnson won his C.B. for the good work he did as Assistant Director of Supplies for South Africa, and, as A.A.G. at York from 1900-1903, he was greatly liked and respected throughout the North-Eastern District. He is an old Cheltonian, afterwards studying at Trinity College, Dublin, as became a native of the Irish capital, and the son of an Irish Archdeacon. A good sportsman, he is a member of the Sandown Park Club, and in his younger days was a capital cricketer and footballer, belonging to the Cheltenham and T.C.D. elevens, and the Trinity College Rugby team.

THE new commander of the "London," Commander A. E. B. Greville, has recently been employed at the Royal Naval College, and previously had seen a good deal of service. He was on board the "Alexandra" at the bombardment of Alexandria, and in 1890 was serving on the East Indies Station, when it fell to his lot to tackle a slave-dhow, which he captured with fifty slaves aboard after a sharp fight. In the same year he took part in Sir E. R. Fremantle's expedition against the Sultan of Vitu, landing with the Naval Brigade, which the Admiral, it will be remembered, led in person.

COLONEL C. E. HEATH of the Army Service Corps, who has just been appointed Brigadier-General in charge of Administration at Aldershot, in succession to the late Brigadier-General Crabbe, is an instance of the possibility of advancement in the Army without war experience even in these post-South African War days. Colonel Heath has been in the A.S.C. since 1888, but he was previously a Deputy-Assistant Commissary General of the old Commissariat and Transport Staff for seven years, having given up the Adjutancy of the old 32nd in order to take up that appointment. During the last fifteen years Colonel Heath has been D.A.A.G. at Malta and Portsmouth, and since 1901 has been at Army Headquarters as A.Q.M.G.

Bosanquet.

THE 3RD DRAGOON GUARDS' FOOTBALL TEAM
Who recently won the Cavalry Cup at Fulham.

Digitized by Google

SCENES IN THE "SHINY EAST."

AGRA, THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF THE MOGUL SOVEREIGNS.

(1) An "ekka" outside the Delhi gate of Agra Fort. (2) A bullock-cart near the Taj-Mahal. (3) A scene in Kinari bazaar. (4) "Ekkas" at a trough in the city. (5) "Ekkas" near the Jumma Musjid, facing the Delhi gate. (6) Scene in the Mall, Agra.

(From photographs by Lady Lawson.)

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

MISS MAUDE FEALY

Who is playing Rosamund in Sir Henry Irving's revival of "Becket" at Drury Lane Theatre. Mrs. Cecil Raleigh is appearing as Eleanor, and Sir Henry Irving will repeat his wonderful performance of the martyr monk. The revival is for two weeks only, and will be followed by other plays from Sir Henry's repertoire.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Messrs. Johnston and Hoffmann, 31, Devonshire Street, Portland Place, W.)

Digitized by Google

Poor Memory

means poorly fed

Brain

The sure, safe way to a strong active money-making brain is to feed it on

Grape-Nuts

10 days' use will tell you some facts.

Makes the Skin as soft as Velvet

BEETHAM'S

LAROLA

REG.

PRESERVES the SKIN from the effects of the SUN, COLD WINDS, and HARD WATER. Entirely removes and prevents all REDNESS, ROUGHNESS, CHAPS, IRRITATION, TAN, etc., and KEEPS THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH & WHITE AT ALL SEASONS.

DELIGHTFULLY SOOTHING AND REFRESHING AFTER CYCLING, MOTORING, GOLFING, WALKING, ETC.

INVALUABLE FOR THE COMPLEXION.

Bottles, 1/-, 1/9 and 2/6 each, of all Chemists and Stores, M. BEETHAM & SON, Cheltenham.

'DAREN' BREAD

Awarded 32 HONOURS for Excellence of Quality.

TRY A LOAF.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray postage.

S. SMITH & SON, LTD.,

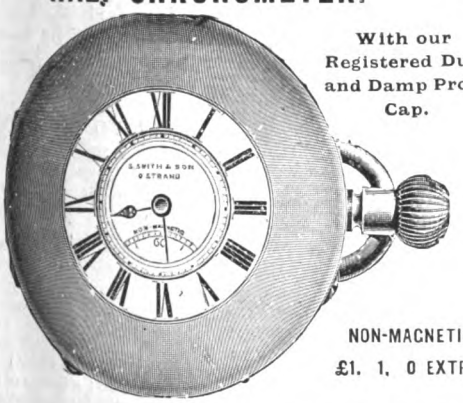
Watchmakers to the Admiralty. CLOCK and CHRONOMETER MAKERS.

THE "STRAND" HALF-CHRONOMETER. 9, STRAND, W.C. WATCHES from £1 1 0 to £900.



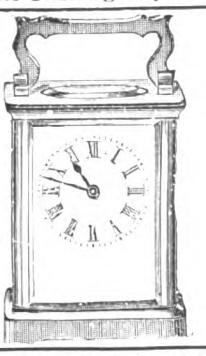
With our Registered Dust and Damp Proof Cap.

NON-MAGNETIC £1. 1. 0 EXTRA.

OUR "STRAND" All English. 18-ct. Gold Full or Half Hunter Cases, £16. 10s.; Silver Full Hunting Cases, £6. 6s., Half Hunting Cases, £6. 15s.
Crystal Glass, Open Face, 18-ct. Gold, £13. 15s., Silver, £5. 5s.

OUR ALL ENGLISH "STRAND" WATCHES AR THE BEST VALUE EVER PRODUCED.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—All our Watches, Clocks, and Jewellery can be purchased on "The Times" SYSTEM of MONTHLY PAYMENTS at Catalogue prices.



8-day Keyless Carriage Timepiece in Ormolu. Gilt and Bevelled Glass Cases, including Leather Case, £1. 1s.
Lever Escapement, £1. 15s.
Striking on Gong hours and half-hours, £3. 15s.
With Repeating Action, £4. 4s.
Every Clock Guaranteed.

Our Illustrated Catalogue or "Guide to the Purchase of a Watch," Book F., 135 pages, 350 illustrations, free by post. Ditto Clocks, F. Ditto Jewellery, F.

NON-MAGNETIC £1. 1. 0 EXTRA.

SPECIALITY: With Dial as below, indicating Railway Speed up to 100 miles, 10s. extra.

"STRAND" CHRONOGRAPH. Our Own Special Make, Strong 18-ct. Gold Cases £21. Steel or Silver Cases £8. 8s. With 30-Minute Recorder, £5. 5s.; 18-ct. Gold £15 15s.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

"THE first edition," says Mr. Philip Geen, in the preface to the second edition of his book, "sold so quickly, that only half of the kindly Press notices were in time to aid in its sale." We congratulate the genial president of the Anglers' Association, but are not in the least surprised. His fat book, "What I have Seen while Fishing, and How I have Caught my Fish," of which Mr. Unwin has just sent us the second impression, is not a bit too fat. Mr. Geen has fished in Ireland for pollack, salmon, and trout; for salmon in Scotland; for barbel, bream, gudgeon, and all sorts of things in the Home Counties, and he talks about it at length as fishermen like to do, but very practically, and with many a good story and telling description. Fishing in good hands is not a selfish sport, and Mr. Geen has no churlish way of keeping his wrinkles to himself; he confesses, in fact, that many of his own lines and traces have been given away as samples. He gives his knowledge away with the same free-handedness. And, moreover, his fishing book is one that will not interest fishermen only. It is lavishly illustrated from photographs, mostly by Mr. W. K. Geen, some of which show very beautiful scenes.

A Fishing Book.

* * *

MISS MARIE CORELLI has chosen the correct title for her new book, "Free Opinions," which has just been published by Messrs. Constable. It might surprise Miss Corelli to hear that she is at heart a rebel. Her freedom, we profoundly believe, is really the freedom of lawlessness. By this we do not mean that there is nothing which Miss Marie Corelli reverences. She is full of reverence; but a strong personality, powerful emotions, and a keen eye disqualify her for reverencing anything that other people reverence. She sees weak spots with fatal clearness; and, having seen them, will be satisfied with nothing but having at them, hip and thigh. She is unable to accept the evil which must, of necessity, in the present scheme of things, be found hand in hand with all that is good in our human efforts after the best; and, therefore, she must inevitably fail to win the sympathy of a number of people who ask for a little more patience, a little more urbanity, a rather wider outlook on our chequered nature. The worst of it is that such people, generally without much justice, regard Miss Corelli and her hot-headed counsels as something of a joke. Miss Corelli is no joke; she is very much in earnest, and we say without hesitation that there are many things in this book of essays—some of them reprinted from periodicals—which are full of wisdom, and go straight to the point. If the proofs had been passed through the hands of some sober and sympathetic person, with full power to use his blue pencil, the public and Miss Corelli would have gained.

Free Opinions.

* * *

WE have received from Messrs. Bemrose the announcement of a book called "Garden Cities in Theory and Practice," which promises to be a very splendid work. The author is Mr. A. R. Sennett, who has been throughout of the greatest value to the garden city movement. It is generally known that the beginnings of a garden city have been made in Hertfordshire, and it is devoutly to be hoped that the admirable schemes of the association may find sufficient support from the public, who, assuredly, in the end, will receive back ten-fold every guinea they subscribe. No doubt Mr. Sennett's handsome and exhaustive treatise will help to rouse wide interest, and bring in a pleasant form increased knowledge of its aim. The book is to be handsomely illustrated, and will be issued to subscribers at one guinea net.

Garden Cities.

* * *

MR. JOHN FOSTER FRASER, who has already lifted the veil from Siberia, and in a measure also from America, has turned his attention to Canada, and written a vivid and vigorous study of "Canada as it is" (Cassell and Co.). Mr. Foster Fraser is a plain speaker; he tells the truth as he sees it, and tells it with remarkable power and force in a style that clearly has gathered something of its hammerlike qualities from the continent of which he writes. He has travelled all over Canada, studied its men and women, its constitution, its patriotism, its education, its sport, its trade and manufactures, and its agriculture; and his book is delightful reading, and will unquestionably do much to increase the public knowledge of a country and a people whom we appear persistently to misunderstand. The work is illustrated with photographs, and should not be neglected by anyone who is interested either in the "new English" or in the Empire.

Canada as it is.

Sutcliffe.

MR. PHILIP GEEN

Author of "What I have Seen while Fishing, and How I have Caught my Fish." (T. Fisher Unwin.)

* * *

WHEN a society comes to be talked about by its initials it may regard itself as "established," as the French would say. We have several times lately heard the National Art Collections Fund referred to by its initials, and have lately received the report of the work it has done during the first year of its existence. A very creditable record it is. A Watteau for the Dublin Gallery, a Greek bronze relief for the British Museum, and a Madonna and Child, by Lazzaro Sebastiani, for the National Gallery, are only three out of a number of important purchases which this fund has made for the nation in its first year. The report, which is handsomely illustrated with reproductions of the principal acquisitions, may be had at 47, Victoria Street, Westminster; and should certainly stir up art-lovers to support an admirable institution. While we are on the subject, may we suggest that the Fund would earn the gratitude of very many people if it would join hands with Mr. Frank Rutter to secure the purchase for the nation of a picture by one of the French Impressionists?

The "N.F."

* * *

"TORN LACE," by Charlotte Mansfield (Walter Scott), is not a book that can be recommended to the young person. Given a girl of surpassing beauty, a wicked old grandmother, who practically sells her in the modern slave market, and an author who has no intention of mincing matters in the description of that girl's subsequent career, it is obvious that the white flower (apparently of a blameless life) which appears on the cover is not entirely appropriate to the character of the heroine, except perhaps at the very close, where, after a feverish life of what is commonly known as gaiety, she finds death and rehabilitation in the same moment. "The Secret Passage" (John Long) is another of Mr. Fergus Hume's thrilling stories of mystery. Mr. Hume, to our thinking, has never equalled "The Mystery of a Hansom Cab"; but he is a master of the art of putting you off the scent, and no one who picks up "The Secret Passage" will put it down until they know exactly who did commit that murder. Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Co. have some good novels in their list, among them "A Courier of Fortune," by Arthur W. Marchmont; "The Crimson Blind," by Fred M. White; "Roger Trewinion," by Joseph Hocking; and "The Jackal," by Coulson Kernahan.

Two Novels.

BOOKS TO READ.

Art.

The Royal Academy and its Members, 1768-1830, by the late J. E. Hodgson, R.A., and F. A. Eaton. (Murray.)

Giotto, by Basil de Sélincourt. (Duckworth.)

Biography.

Italian Letters of a Diplomat's Wife; January-May, 1880, February-April, 1904, by Mary King Waddington. (Smith, Elder.)

A Mother of Czars; a Sketch of the Life of Marie Feodorowna, wife of Paul I. and Nicholas I., by Mrs. Colquhoun Grant. (Murray.)

Fiction.

Hearts of Wales, by Allen Raine. (Hutchinson.)

The Disciple's Wife, by Vincent Brown. (Duckworth.)

Seth of the Cross, by Alphonse Courlander. (Nash.)

A Courier of Fortune, by A. W. Marchmont. (Ward, Lock.)

The White Terror and the Red, by A. Cahan. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

The Millionaire Baby, by Anna Katharine Green. (Chatto and Windus.)

Miscellaneous.

Change for a Halfpenny; Being the Prospectus of the Napolio Syndicate, by the Authors of "Wisdom While You Wait." Illustrated by George Morrow. (Alston Rivers.)

Sociology.

A Modern Utopia, by H. G. Wells. (Chapman and Hall.)

Travel.

Rome. Painted by Alberto Pisa; text by M. A. R. Tuker and Hope Malleson. (Black.)

Digitized by Google

The Correct Method OF Feeding

The old idea of trying to make a young infant adapt itself to an unsuitable food is wrong. Every sensible mother knows that a farinaceous food which nourishes a child of 12 months would make a baby of one month ill. Never give a starchy food to children under five or six months of age, as young infants cannot digest starch, and the giving of such foods has much to do with the illness and malnutrition amongst young children.

The only sensible and rational plan is to give suitable foods adapted to the age and growing needs of the child, and this is provided by

The 'Allenburys' Foods.

Milk Food No. 1.

For Infants from birth to three months of age. So like mother's milk that it can be given alternately with the breast with perfect comfort to the child.

The 'Allenburys'

Milk Food No. 2.

For babies between the ages of three and six months. Simply No. 1 strengthened to meet the increasing wants of the baby. It stimulates and strengthens the digestive organs.

The 'Allenburys'

Malted Food No. 3.

For children of six months and upwards. The best food for developing the digestive powers of the child. It promotes the formation of firm flesh and strong bone.

A Pamphlet on Infant Feeding and Management sent free on request.

ALLEN & HANBURYS Ltd., 37, Lombard St., LONDON, E.C.

U.S.A.: Niagara Falls. Australia: Sydney. Canada: Toronto. S. Africa: Cape Town.

---

A Bissell Carpet Sweeper

saves time for better work than sweeping.

All Stores and Ironmongers sell the Bissell at 10/6 11/3 14/- 15/6 & 18/- Same price everywhere.

---

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

---

RHEUMATISM. BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box.

---

TURKISH The only Genuine Turkish Cigarettes.

REGIE Cigarettes.

Of all tobacconists and Stores, and at 169, Piccadilly, London, W.

---

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

---

REPRODUCTION OF ANTIQUE PENDANTS, etc.

Price £3 3 0

A Charming and Varied Selection.

NEW ILLUSTRATED LIST POST FREE.

Jewels bought, exchanged, or sold on commission.

MACMICHAEL,
42, SOUTH AUDLEY ST., LONDON, W.

To their Majesties the King and Queen.

---

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

---

HANSEN'S UNKET TABLETS.

For summer weather the ideal food is Junket. Besides having a high dietetic value and being easily assimilated, it is a charming addition to your table. Hansen's Junket Tablets make the best Junket in the quickest way. They are double the value of the next best, so be sure you get Hansen's.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each of which is sufficient to make a quart of milk into a dish of junket. Sample Tube and Book of Delightful Junket Recipes, 6d., post free, from HANSEN'S DEPOT, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

---

THE GARDEN

ONE PENNY WEEKLY.

Coloured Supplements.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS A SPECIAL FEATURE.

Specimen copy post free.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

---

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., 33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

---

The "Angelus" World-Famed Piano-Player

AS PURCHASED BY ROYALTY AND THE WORLD'S GREATEST MUSICIANS.
The most Perfect, Artistic, and Human-like. The most Musicianly in its Aim. The SIMPLICITY and COMPLETENESS of the "ANGELUS" EXPRESSION DEVICES are unique. DEFERRED PAYMENTS arranged if desired. DISCOUNT FOR CASH.
You are invited to call or write for Art Catalogue 41.
J. HERBERT MARSHALL, Dept. 41, Angelus Hall, Regent House, 233, Regent St., LONDON, W.

---

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

NOW READY.

IN ENGLISH HOMES.

Price £2 2 0 Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

FREEMASONRY—ITS LANDMARKS, RELICS, AND CURIOSITIES.

THE collecting of Masonic curiosities of every description — books, Bibles, pictures, music, mezzotint and other portraits, regalia, jewels, plate, china, earthenware, glass, diplomas, furniture, and even caricatures—is far more extensively in vogue and keenly pursued than the uninitiated bric-à-brac hunter possibly imagines. Although the bicentenary of English Symbolical Freemasonry is still twelve years ahead of us (it is due in 1917), several museums of its treasures and antiquities have been formed, both in America and England, while some Lodges, like the "Royal Cumberland" at Bath, the "Eboracum" at York, and the "Windsor Castle" at Windsor, occupy buildings of both architectural and historic interest. The Freemasons' Hall Collection in London (thanks to the combined energy of Sir Edward Letchworth and Mr. Henry Sadler) is, probably, by far the finest and most complete in the world, but there is a great deal that is both interesting and important to be seen both at Mark Masters' Hall, Great Queen Street (also the headquarters of the Masonic Knights Templar), and at 33, Golden Square, the official centre of another powerful and prosperous Masonic body—the Supreme Grand Council of the Thirty-third Degree.

As a matter of fact, very few Lodges are without a cherished relic of some sort, while others devote special attention either to the pictures on their walls, their ancient Staffordshire jugs, or "firing glasses," or the mementoes of deceased "brethren" carefully preserved in glass cases.

COLLECTION OF OLD ENGLISH MASONIC POTTERY
Belonging to the "All Souls'" Lodge, Weymouth, Dorset.

The accumulation of Masonic antiquities is as ardently pursued in France and Germany as it is in England and the United States. Only last November the dispersal of the Le'once Coblentz Collection in Paris attracted buyers from all parts of Europe, while the publication of Dr. W. J. Chetwode Crawley's work on the connection of the Chevalier d'Eon with English Freemasonry afforded ample evidence of the richness of his own store of Masonic prints and caricatures. Few private Lodges, probably, possess a more representative assortment of "Craft" relics than "All Souls'," Weymouth, at present under the able rule of Mr. Henry Cox of Radipole Manor, who is as popular amongst his Dorset "brethren" as he is in London. By his courtesy the ancient "Master's Chair," together with the unique array of old-world "inscribed" earthenware, have been photographed by Mr. Walter J. Dovey for reproduction in the pages of THE KING. The chair bears the date of 1571, and an inscription on it attests the fact that it once belonged to the "Arimathea" Lodge, which three-quarters of a century ago was amalgamated with the "All Souls'" Lodge, the warrant of which dates as far back as 1767. Scarcely less interesting are the exceedingly beautiful chairs belonging to the "Lodge of Brotherly Love" at Yeovil in Somersetshire. As works of art they are doubtless of great value, but, unfortunately, their origin is unknown. They are now illustrated in this journal by permission of the present energetic Master, Mr. L. Goodman, from photographs by Mr. Witcomb.

B.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY CHAIR
In the "Lodge of Brotherly Love," Yeovil, Somerset.

SIXTEENTH CENTURY CHAIR
In the "All Souls'" Lodge, Weymouth, Dorset.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY CHAIR
In the "Lodge of Brotherly Love," Yeovil, Somerset.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS

(AT MODERATE PRICES)

SPINK & SON LTD.

17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL. HAND FORGED.

'I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS. GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

GEO. JACKSON & SONS,

49, RATHBONE PLACE, LONDON, W. (Established 1780.)

OLD PLASTER CEILINGS,

Cornices, Friezes, & Ornaments exactly reproduced in Fibrous Plaster or Carton Pierre.

OLD CARVED CHIMNEY PIECES,

reproduced in Wood and Carton Pierre.

Messrs. GEO. JACKSON & SONS possess the largest collection of old moulds and models of every period of ornament, and they can therefore reproduce copies of old work at a moderate cost.

A large number of examples of Chimney Pieces, Ceilings, Friezes, etc., can be seen at the above address.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

DINARD.

HOTEL DES BAINS.—Modern comforts; electric light; moderate charges.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz, the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava. All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870. 119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C. and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
,, 6 ,, ,, 6 ,, ,,
,, 12 ,, ,, 7 ,, ,,

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S

The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA

The Most Nutritious and Economical.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE report of the Industrial Alcohol Committee will doubtless cause some disappointment among those who regard spirit as the coming fuel for all motor-vehicles. The unanimous report of the committee on this subject says that alcohol is not employed for motor-vehicles to any great extent either in Germany or France, in spite of the fact that both these countries are most desirous of encouraging the use of a material that is indigenous in preference to a material like petrol, which has to be imported. Where spirit is used for the generation of power it is almost entirely for agricultural engines. For motor-cars spirit presents certain special difficulties, the principal being its behaviour in very cold weather, and the tendency of the acids generated by its combustion to cause corrosion of the metal surfaces with which they come in contact.

* * *

The recommendations of the committee, however, if adopted by Parliament, will have the effect of materially reducing the price of methylated spirit, which in itself may serve to encourage experiments with a view to overcoming the objections to its use as a fuel for motor-vehicles. The subject is one of considerable importance to motorists, as, although petrol is extremely cheap at the present time, a combination between the various petroleum interests, or even, which is less probable, a shortage in the supply, might conceivably result in a serious enhancement of the price, which would have a very detrimental effect on the motor industry unless an alternative fuel were available.

* * *

It was recently stated in the House of Commons, in answer to a question by a member, that the number of accidents in the metropolitan district during 1904 which arose directly or indirectly from motor-cars was 1,624. This return caused some astonishment, and the accuracy of the figures was freely questioned. It would be interesting to know, for instance, exactly what amounts to an "accident" in the eyes of the police, and how close must be the connection between the accident and a motor-car for the latter to be saddled with the responsibility. Another return has now been prepared by the Home Office at the request of the Hon. John Scott-Montagu, M.P., and some preliminary figures were published last week in the Car. During the same period, and in the same area, there were accidents arising directly from horses, 699; caused by horse-drawn vehicles, 21,761; from horse-drawn tramcars, 1,299; from mechanically-propelled tramcars, 2,292—making a total of 26,051 in one year. Without any figures as to the numbers of horse-drawn vehicles and motor-cars respectively, it is impossible to draw any conclusion from the total of accidents due to each class, but in justice to the motor it must be remembered that its annual mileage is infinitely greater than that of the horse.

* * *

The Automobile Club has suffered a serious loss in the retirement from the committee of Mr. Claude Johnson, who was for so many years the able and energetic secretary of the club, and more lately a prominent member of the committee itself. Mr. Johnson recently joined the firm of C. S. Rolls and Co., and the demands upon his time that the carrying on of the business entails have compelled him to sever his active connection with the club for a time.

* * *

We illustrate on another page one of the new motor-omnibuses which are about to work a revolution in the passenger traffic in the Isle of Wight. All the important towns and villages are served, and the omnibuses will carry parcels as well as passengers, and act as travelling post-offices. The authorities of the island have not been particularly well disposed to motorists in the past, but doubtless the new service, which was recently inaugurated by Lady Adela Cochrane, the wife of the Deputy-Governor, will open their eyes to the advantages which mechanical road traction can confer on a sparsely populated district ill served by railways.

* * *

The Motor Union have obtained permission from the Duke of Portland to hold the inter-club meet, fixed for Saturday, May 20, in Welbeck Park, which is usually closed to motorists. In addition, by the kindness of the owner, the famous underground rooms will be shown to the visitors. In the evening a dinner, at which ladies will be welcome, will be held at the Victoria Station Hotel, Nottingham.

A ROUGH SEA AT MONACO.
Motor-boats sheltering behind the new mole.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 and 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.: 3171 & 1849 GERRARD.

MONACO MOTOR RACES.

Extract from the "New York Herald," April 13th 1905.

"A MAGNIFICENT MOTOR,"

"She cut over the surface of the water with delightful ease, and left but a trifling ripple behind her. Her motor is magnificent, and a true example of the brilliant workmanship of which the Italian firm is capable. It ran as smoothly as could be desired . . . The performance was most brilliant, and the constructors deserve sincere praise. . . . ."

Launch F.I.A.T. "X." fitted with 24-h.p. Fiat Motor wins Cruiser Race, 3rd Series.

Full particulars and Prices of Motor Launches and Motor Cars on application.

BRIGHTON DEPOT:—Brighton & South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James' St., Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland—

FIAT MOTORS, LTD., 37 & 38, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Agents for Yorkshire: H. Johnson & Co., 28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate. | Sole Agents for the New Pirelli (Italian) Motor Tyres. | Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire: Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

A TRIUMPH FOR THE SWIFT CAR

OVER AUSTRALIAN ROADS.

FIRST: Read this extract from the "Referee," April 9th, 1905:—

"Only those who know the nature of Australian tracks—the word road would be a misnomer—can properly appreciate the performances of the various cars which competed in the reliability run organised by the Dunlop Tyre Company between Sydney and Melbourne. The route, according to the official programme, comprised 343 miles of good road, 140 miles of second-rate road, and 89 miles of bad road. Presumably this estimate was made by a Colonial. It was my fortune once to travel over the self-same country, and I must confess I failed to notice the 343 miles of 'good' road."

THEN: Consider the excellence of the performance of the

7-h.p. SWIFT,

which carried three passengers over the 572 miles without an involuntary stop, and obtained the maximum number of 2,500 marks.

The SWIFT is a Car on which you can rely.

New Models—8-10 H.P.—on View at London Showrooms.

Booklet on Request.

THE SWIFT MOTOR CO.,
127-130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Trials by Appointment.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

I HAVE been making the round of the shops this week and revelling in all the pretty and charming things to be seen. Of course, all the buyers are still in Paris and Vienna, and coming back after Easter to startle us with the very latest of modes and fancies. As is generally the case, these models have to undergo certain modifications and alterations, but it is a very interesting time none the less, and we then can collect all our well-stored laces and old-world possessions and entrust them to our pet dressmaker to work them up and give our evening gowns a certain chic that not all the elaborate trimmings, embroideries, etc., can rival. Lucky those who have their grandmothers' and great-grandmothers' old oak chests full of such treasures. Anything old-world this season will be quite "the thing." For instance, the old three-cornered lace shawls in fine Chantilly lace make delightful gowns, but there is a great art in the manner these things are adapted, and it also takes a grande dame to carry off these gowns successfully. One of these artistic creations I was lucky enough to get a private view of the other day, but as the gown is specially dedicated to a very special event, I dare not for the moment give any description of it. Messrs. Dickins and Jones of Regent Street have always a most elaborate and choice selection of lace gowns, and some I saw there were really dreams of beauty. A very pretty idea for young girls who are well proportioned and can afford to show every curve and line of their figure is a robe en princesse in heavy white guipure, and moulded to the figure. The under-skirt is of silk and several layers of chiffon, both of which are very fully flounced at the bottom, thus holding the gown well out around the feet. The bodice part is simply draped, and caught at one side with large paste buckles, full loops and ends of velvet ribbon fall almost to the end of the robe the neck of this is made transparent, and the sleeves are wide and full to the elbow, showing the outline of the arms. For afternoon and house wear nothing is more suitable for the present modes than the new shades in crêpe de soie and voiles. One of these is here shown at Dickins and Jones's in a biscuit-coloured voile. The skirt is full at the bottom and well set out by means of three tiny corded frills and prettily shirred beading. The bodice has a quaint frilled chemisette and a swathed silk band, fastened with paste buttons to correspond with the bodice fastening; the sleeves are also prettily finished. The hat is a most becoming shape in the same delicate colouring, and has a cluster of ostrich plumes in a slightly deeper tone. The other gown, in one of the newest tweeds and tastefully braided, is a very useful gown for this season of the year, as the probable showers of rain won't take off the freshness. The charming moss green toque, with the palest of blue ospreys, is a most comfortable shape on the head, and decidedly one of the sweetest models shown so far. I hear from Paris that the bell, or umbrella-shaped, skirt is quite the dernier cri. Some of these are being cut fully eight yards wide at the hem. These, I can imagine, will be very pretty in light summery materials and short skirts, but I don't quite fancy them for cloth or serge; the weight would be rather too much to be convenient or healthy.

A CHARMING COSTUME IN BRAIDED TWEED.
(Messrs. Dickins and Jones, Regent Street, W.)

A TASTEFUL GOWN IN BISCUIT-COLOURED VOILE.
(Messrs. Dickins and Jones, Regent Street, W.)

As I mentioned before, boots and shoes will play a leading part this season—one newly-married lady had two pairs of boots and shoes to each gown in her elaborate trousseau. I am afraid to say the number of these articles purchased, for really it did seem a trifle ridiculous; one large trunk, specially made, was but sufficien to contain little more than half of them, although the space was so practically portioned off. Under-skirts are particularly elaborate just now, and with the fashionable short skirts they certainly are not so ruinous as when street dresses were allowed to trail and pick up all the dust and microbes.

By the by, for Easter presents, I heard of a very novel one that was given to a gentleman by a great former admirer of his. Unfortunately the said gentleman was getting uncomfortably stout, and losing all his elegance, so this admirer managed to get his measurements below the belt, from his valet, presumably, and had him a health support and reducer made. This was specially made, and enclosed in an Easter egg, which was very greatly appreciated. He is now one of the most enthusiastic supporters of this health belt, and feels and looks ten years younger, so the story goes. Of course, I do not guarantee the truth of this statement, but I really was told this by somebody who knew!

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lommitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

ARGYLL MOTOR CARS

Built in the world's greatest engineering centre.

A MOTOR EXPERT'S OPINION
OF THE
ARGYLL
MOTOR CARS.

HENRY NORMAN, M.P., who has made Motor Cars a special study, and is one of our best authorities on the subject, writing in "The World's Work" for February, says:—

The Argyll does "credit to British Workmanship, being constructed with both knowledge and conscience"; and speaks of its body: "of graceful shape and great strength."

SILENT IN RUNNING.
EASY TO CONTROL.
ELEGANT IN APPEARANCE.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue B for 1905 forwarded post free.

London Agents:
THE FARMAN AUTOMOBILE CO., LD., 100, Long Acre, London, W.C.

ARGYLL MOTORS, LTD.,
Argyll Works, Bridgeton, Glasgow.

FOLLY SHOWS WISDOM

in choosing for flight the £150 £150

THE BEST LIGHT CAR.

Look at this reliability record for one year, 4,572 miles covered.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER RECEIVED FROM A MEDICAL MAN.

MESSRS. JARROTT AND LETTS. CORNWALL,
DEAR SIRS, March 8th, 1905.

"I completed my first year's running on the 5 h.p. OLDSMOBILE I had on Feb. 16th, 1904, and think you may like to hear how I've got on. I had no previous knowledge of cars, and have looked after the car myself. It has been out almost every day, and there has never been a day on which the car was not fit to run. . . . . It has run in all weathers, including frost and snow, over an extremely hilly country; most of my hills have a grade of 1 in 6 (measured) somewhere on them. In the twelve months I have covered 4,572 miles, and have never had a tow. . . . The car has the record of having climbed the worst hill in my district without having to turn out its passengers. The 'Olds' has been such a boon that I cannot say too much in her favour."

Yours very truly,
(Signed) MONTAGUE W. ROE.

This speaks for itself and proves that the

OLDSMOBILE

Accomplishes everything and goes anywhere.

Prices—Two Seated Car, £150. Four Seated Car, 200 Guineas.

For full particulars and catalogue, write—
CHARLES JARROTT & LETTS, LIMITED,
45, Great Marlborough Street, LONDON, W.
Telephone No. 2362 Gerrard. Telegrams "Jemidar," London.

HUMBER CYCLES.

"Beeston Humber is synonymous with absolutely the highest design, workmanship, and material possible in a modern bicycle."—The Cyclist.

— TWO SPEED GEARS — FITTED TO ALL MODELS.

Humber Cycles are supreme wherever they are known.

By Royal Warrant Cycle Manufacturers to H.M. King Edward VII.

and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales.

£8 : 8 : 0
— TO —
£18 : 18 : 0

Catalogue with full details sent free on application to

Humber Limited

WORKS:
BEESTON (NOTTS.) and COVENTRY . .

DEPOTS:
LONDON - 32 Holborn Viaduct
LIVERPOOL - 73 Bold Street
MANCHESTER - 5 Deansgate
BIRMINGHAM 4 Victoria Square
NOTTINGHAM - Grey Friargate
SOUTHAMPTON 27 London Road

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR THE PARENT MAKE OF THE GENUINE

ROCHET-SCHNEIDER CARS,

FOR GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

LA LOCOMOTRICE CARS

(LICENCE ROCHET-SCHNEIDER)

AND BELGRAVE CARS.

DONNE & WILLANS, Ltd.

29a, GILLINGHAM ST., SOUTH BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
(200 yards from Victoria Station.)

DOES NOT APPRECIATE THE WONDERFUL PURCHASING POWER OF ONE PENNY UNTIL ONE BUYS A

FLOR DE DINDIGUL
CIGARETTE

(ALL TOBACCO LEAF. NO PAPER.)

The very thing when there's no time for a Cigar. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for purity and excellence. Sample one of these delightful whiffs, the experiment costs but One Penny. On sale at all good Tobacconists, 1d. each; 8/- per 100, in cedar wood box; or Carriage Paid from the Importer, BEWLAY, 49, STRAND.

ESTABLISHED 1780.

THEY TOUCH THE LIVER

FOR HEADACHE
DIZZINESS
BILIOUSNESS
TORPID LIVER
CONSTIPATION
SALLOW SKIN
THE COMPLEXION

SMALL PILL. DOSE. PRICE.

Be sure they are Genuine
Carter's Little Liver Pills, in blue and white wrapper.
Look for signature—

All Chemists, 1/1½. Send for Booklet "Character Reading by Handwriting."
British Depot 46 Holborn Viaduct, London.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

HOW THE TRAVELLER FARES ON THE ORIENT PACIFIC LINE.

NOW that public taste in the choice and service of food has become so much more critical than of yore, it is the excellence of the commissariat that helps to fill our floating hotels, and ensures those that cater for this a full complement of passengers on each trip.

The Orient Pacific Line has been foremost in recognising and meeting this present-day demand for first-rate catering in all their boats, and to this up-to-date policy, no doubt, much of this line's success and popularity are due. For several years past, the service of meals à la carte has been a much-appreciated feature in its vessels, there being, from the passengers' point of view, a very great improvement on the usual rule aboard of table d'hôte meals at a fixed hour only. Instead of being obliged to conform to this, passengers in this line's boats can breakfast at any time they like between 8.30 a.m. and 10 a.m. The specimen menu of this meal given to-day, and which was culled at random from those entered in the chief steward's books during a recent voyage of the steam-ship "Orient," shows how varied is the choice of dishes, all admirably cooked and served, while the materials are the best obtainable.

Luncheon goes on from 12.30 p.m. to 2 p.m., and at this meal there are always some fifteen different plates, followed by dessert. It is the choice of a dinner hour from 6.30 p.m. to 8 p.m., though, that the average traveller most appreciates. As Major Younghusband once put it, in "The Philippines and Round About," if I remember aright, a grievance all properly-constituted minds have against sea-customs is that of having dinner at an hour unheard of on land. As he pointed out, the magnates of the shipping world do not themselves dine, probably, before 7.30 p.m. at the earliest; why then do they usually condemn their passengers, who, after all, are human, if not shipowners, to dine at 5.30 p.m. or 6 p.m.?

Major Younghusband suggested that as no attention had been paid to the humble petition of thousands of passengers, Parliamentary action should be taken, and a law passed compelling all shipowners and directors of shipping companies to themselves dine at 5 p.m. until reform was promised. Perhaps it was a latent fear of public opinion ultimately insisting on this that made the directorate of the Orient Pacific Line set such a good example to other lines in this matter of providing a choice of dinner hour to their passengers.

The store-list of the steam-ship "Orient" during a recent cruise comprised 1,500 head of poultry, 1,000 head of game, without counting under this head 250 hares and rabbits, together with enormous quantities of fresh beef, mutton, veal, lamb, pork, sheep's kidneys, ham, sausages, dried and fresh fish, vegetables, and the usual groceries. Then the wine-list comprised 1,000 bottles of champagne, with a lavish stock of still white wines, Burgundy, claret, port, sherry, spirits, liqueurs, ale, stout, and aerated waters. It is interesting to note that the Orient Pacific Line Company have secured, for future use in their boats, considerable reserves of Heidsieck, dry Monopole, and Perrier Jouet's extra quality of the 1898 vintage. As this was an excellent year, coming next in connoisseurs' opinion to that of the famous 1893, this is a piece of forethought for which passengers should be particularly grateful, for as time goes on and the price continues to rise, the supply of this 1898 vintage will, like that of 1893, be far below the demand. It is only one more proof, if such were needed, that no detail affecting the comfort and welfare of their passengers is ever overlooked by the management of the Orient Pacific Line Company.

A RECENT TABLE D'HOTE BREAKFAST IN THE S.S. "ORIENT."

8.30 to 10 a.m.

PORRIDGE.

JOHN DORY. SALMON CAKES.

EGGS:

FRIED. POACHED. BUTTERED ON TOAST.

GRILLED CUMBERLAND HAM AND TOMATOES.

MINCED CHICKEN AND TONGUE.

SHEEP'S KIDNEYS A LA BROCHETTE.

GRILLED CHOPS AND STEAKS.

CURRY AND RICE.

COLD ROAST LAMB. POTTED MEATS.

STEWED PRUNES AND RICE.

BANANAS. APPLES.

A RECENT TABLE D'HOTE DINNER IN THE S.S. "ORIENT."

6.30 to 8 p.m.

CONSOMME AUX MACEDOINES.

POTAGE MULLIGATAWNY.

FILETS OF SOLE A LA COLBERT.

ASPARAGUS A L'HOLLANDAISE.

LAMB CUTLETS A LA REFORME.

ROAST RIBS BEEF.

CORNED OX TONGUE.

ROAST CHICKEN. BREAD SAUCE.

NEPAUL CURRY.

CABINET PUDDING. SHORTBREAD.

CANAPES AUX ANCHOIS.

DESSERT.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

COFFEE SPONGE (Pierrette).—To succeed with this it is essential to use really good coffee with a full rich aroma and flavour. I can specially recommend the "Pybal Kope" coffee (freshly roasted and ready ground), sent out, post free, in most convenient little canisters for 4d., 6d., or 8d. apiece (the latter is so much the nicest that it is worth the extra money, as a little of it goes a long way), by the Melata Agents, 17, Devonshire Square, London, E.C. When you have it, put four ounces of it into a delicately clean enamelled pan, pour on a pint of boiling single cream or new milk, or equal parts of milk and cream if you cannot afford the latter alone. Cover the pan down closely, and let the coffee infuse ten or twelve minutes. The infusion is then strained off, being careful to get it clear of the coffee grounds, and sweeten to taste with from six to eight ounces of castor sugar. Have ready a full ounce of the finest leaf gelatine dissolved in a little milk, mix this with the coffee-flavoured cream, then mix in the well-beaten yolks of three eggs. The resulting custard is then put in a double pan with boiling water in the outer one, and stirred over the fire for a few minutes till it thickens. Now lift the pan off the fire and set aside till the custard has cooled, stirring it while it does so, then before it reaches setting point flavour with a spoonful or two of fine brandy or Maraschino (either the liqueur or the Maraschino syrup, of which a good-sized bottle can be bought for a shilling), and whisk in thoroughly the stiffly-whipped whites of the eggs. The cream is then put in a freshly-wetted mould and set aside, preferably on ice, till firm. For a rich sweet whipped cream can take the place of the whites of the eggs in this recipe, but if you use cream for the infusion of coffee these are good enough for most occasions. It makes a prettier sweet if you line the mould, before putting in the cream, with a little bright clear jelly, a strawberry-flavoured one being very nice with this coffee cream. A very nice coffee bavarois is also made by following these directions exactly till you come to the egg whites, which are omitted, and the stiffened coffee-flavoured custard simply moulded plain as it is.

MAITRE D'HOTEL BUTTER, ETC. (Reform).—Blanch some parsley for two minutes in boiling water, rinse it in cold water, dry very carefully in a clean cloth, taking care not to squeeze it, then mince very finely, and work a tablespoonful of this and a tablespoonful of fresh lemon juice into every three or four ounces of fresh butter, seasoning with white pepper and salt to taste. Some people like rather less than this quantity of lemon juice when the three ounces only of butter is used. If two ounces of butter is sufficient (as it often is when simply required to finish off a sauce) use a dessertspoonful of lemon juice and a good heaped one of the minced parsley. Do not work the butter more than is absolutely necessary to blend the parsley, etc., with it. When maître d'hôtel sauce is required, make half a pint of béchamel maigre (that is, flavoured milk only, thickened with white roux, instead of half milk and half stock, as for ordinary béchamel), then just at the very last, when about to serve it, add an ounce of the maître d'hôtel butter with, if liked, an extra teaspoonful of freshly-minced parsley, a squeeze of lemon juice, with salt and white pepper if required. For the Raifort butter pound three or four tablespoonfuls of very finely-grated horseradish with four ounces of fresh butter, rub through a sieve, and add a few drops of the Escoffier Chilli vinegar. It is then delicious served with broiled or grilled steak, little beef entrées, on to which it is often piped just as they are going to table, while it makes even cold beef tempting. Whenever possible this butter should be iced before serving, and, of course, with steak, etc., pats of it are only put on just as it is going to table. Some cooks beat the butter to a cream, then mix in the finely-grated horseradish, while stiffly-whipped cream is delicious when flavoured with the Escoffier Chilli vinegar and grated horseradish mixed with it.

CHICKEN AND MACARONI (Sans Atout).—There are two or three forms of this, all good. I wonder which it is you want? For poulet à la Napolitaine, truss the bird as for boiling, then stuff the crop with the following: Mince the fowl's liver very finely, and add to it, for a large fowl, three ounces of fine white bread-crumbs, two ounces each of finely-shredded suet and grated ham or tongue, the grated rind of a lemon, a teaspoonful of powdered rosemary, salt and pepper to taste, and bind the mixture with beaten egg. Sew up the crop, put one onion wrapped in bacon and stuck with a clove in the interior of the bird, and lard the breast with bacon. Have ready a pan of boiling white stock, or water will do, put the fowl in this, together with its giblets, a blade of celery, a sliced onion, carrot, and half a turnip. Bring to the boil again after putting in the fowl, then simmer very gently till it is tender, from fifty to sixty minutes probably, or less for a chicken. Meantime put four ounces of ribbon macaroni (on no account washing it, as so many English cooks do, before cooking it, and also be careful that it is fresh, and not stale with long storing in either your storeroom or your grocer's) in plenty of fast-boiling lightly salted water, and cook till tender, but still crisp when tested with a fork. It must then be drained immediately (and it takes about fifteen minutes to boil, by the way), after which it is returned to the hot dry pan it was cooked in, with an ounce of butter and two ounces of finely-grated dry cheese. Toss the macaroni with these over the fire till the cheese has melted, season with salt and freshly-ground black pepper, and serve at once arranged round the fowl, coated with a good Supreme sauce. You must time the cooking of the macaroni so that it will not have to wait a minute for the fowl, once it is ready. If this is not the recipe you want, let me know by describing the dish as well as you can. SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

THOS. WALL & SONS
LIMITED

HAVE HELD THE ROYAL APPOINTMENT THROUGHOUT THE LAST CENTURY.

DIEU ET MON DROIT

THOS. WALL & SONS
LTD.

DELICACIES IN GLASS

FOR INVALIDS.

Chicken Breasts, Real Beef Essence, Calf's Foot Jelly.

THOS. WALL & SONS
LTD.

SPECIALITIES IN GLASS.

Ox Tongues, Lunch Tongues, Boar's Head, Collard Head, Brawn.

The above Goods can be had from most Stores throughout the Kingdom.

DEVONSHIRE'S GREAT PRODUCT.

WHITEWAY'S
WHIMPLE
CYDERS.

A delicious healthful drink, in bottle and cask.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Supplied to many Members of Royalty, House of Lords exclusively, Savoy, Trocadero, Berkeley, Prince's, Claridge's, and all the leading London High-Class Hotels and Restaurants.

MEDICALLY RECOMMENDED FOR

GOUT, RHEUMATISM, etc.

PRICE LISTS:

Whiteway's, The Orchards, Whimple, Devon,
and 22 & 23, Albert Embankment, S.W.

"Loved of all Ladies."

The Outdoor Girl,

the Athletic Girl, aye, every Girl who aspires to a healthy, vigorous body, should drink

Fry's PURE CONCENTRATED Cocoa.

It imparts that delightful feeling of youthful energy so necessary to the full enjoyment of a strenuous life.

"Her grace of motion and of look,
The smooth and swimming majesty of step and tread,
The symmetry of form and feature
Set the soul afloat,
Even like delicious airs of flute and harp."
—Dean Milman.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

THE present season at Spa is likely to beat the record, for the opening of the grand new Kursaal coincides, very happily, with the Industrial Exhibition at Liege, and the energetic Burgomaster and his Council have devised a lengthy programme of concerts and fêtes of every description. Spa possesses the finest bathing establishment in Europe, and as London and Paris doctors are again freely prescribing a course of Spa waters in cases of weakness and anæmia, the beautiful little town in the Ardennes is likely to soon again become as popular as it was a hundred years ago. The hotels at Spa are both good and cheap, and the abolition of the gaming tables has much increased the popularity of the town with all but a very limited circle. The secretary of the Communal Council will welcome communications from intending visitors.

THE recent case in which a well-known motor company was fined for having a large number of tins of petrol stored in an inner office contrary to the London County Council regulations, has led to a considerable amount of criticism, which is only natural in view of the recent disastrous fire in Long Acre. It is very clear, however, that the Swift and Ariel Motor Companies, both of which suffered enormously by the conflagrations, cannot be accused of carelessly storing their petrol, for last week the Ariel Motor Company's tank, containing 40-gal. stored on the ground floor of the premises, but away from the offices and show-rooms, was opened. It was found to be filled with water, but each of the twenty 2-gal. hermetically-sealed tins was intact. This is very interesting and highly important, for it establishes beyond all doubt that petrol, properly stored and isolated, in accordance with the regulations, presents no overwhelming dangers, even in the most thickly-populated centres. As a matter of fact, in the recent fire the Ariel Company's petrol was all that was left intact of £30,000 worth of property.

THE premier place of family amusement in London is undoubtedly the Royal Italian Circus, Oxford Circus Tube. A visit to this palatial place of entertainment, formerly Hengler's, combines the attractions of a high-class variety theatre with a day at the Zoo. Children and adults alike revel in the magnificent nature of the entertainment provided by Messrs. Livermore and Volpi. There are over 200 performing animals, including Jumbo Junior, the smallest elephant in Europe. Mme. Batavia, the renowned Malay bear, resplendent in new silks and satins, Fasolin the wonderful trapeze monkey, goats that walk tight ropes and fire cannon, ponies that do everything but speak, and dogs that rival human performers for sagacity are part of the programme.

THE presentation to the armoured cruiser "Antrim" from the County of Antrim owes its initiation and satisfactory completion to the energy and executive ability of Colonel James M'Calmont, M.P. for South Antrim. It consists of three massive Irish-designed, Irish-made, and Irish hall-marked loving cups, copied from originals in the Royal Irish Academy in Dublin. The cups are intended for periodical competition among the guns crews of the ship, and to ornament the captain's and officer's mess rooms. Appropriate mottoes are engraved on each cup, and the shields round the base are intended to take the names of the various winners. The cups and plinths stand 16-in. high, and are enclosed in a strong oak iron-bound chest. The whole presentation has been designed and manufactured by Sharman D. Neill, the King's silversmith, Donegall Place, Belfast.

MR. BURTON HOLMES

Whose season begins at Bechstein Hall on Monday, May 8.

THE musical prodigies of to-day are taking the world by storm. The latest violinist, Mischa Elman, has induced Mr. Daniel Mayer, Paderewski's first agent, to come from his retirement and undertake the management of his London and provincial concerts. Mr. Mayer has successfully piloted some of the greatest artistes of to-day through their early struggles, and young Mischa Elman is lucky in having won Mr. Mayer's confidence.

THE Tivoli has an exceptionally fine programme for Easter, in fact, it could hardly be stronger, as nearly all the London stars are in the bill. Miss Marie Lloyd makes her reappearance in the West End with new songs, George Robey, Harry Randall, The Poluskis, Joe O'Gorman, The M'Naughtons, and last, but not least, R. G. Knowles, with songs of the river and pins, and instructive stories.

THE travelogues of Mr. Burton Holmes, the magnificently illustrated "Travel Talks" made popular by this young American at Queen's Hall last season, are soon to return to London, where he will be heard every day for three weeks at Bechstein Hall. His subjects will be "In London," "Round about London," "Ireland," "Russia," "Japan," and "The Yosemite Valley," as one of the favourite subjects of last year's series. He will devote half a week to each subject, giving four matinées and two evening performances each week.

Copyright.

THE TANK ON THE PREMISES OF THE ARIEL MOTOR COMPANY.

This was opened after the great fire in Long Acre, when the sealed tins were found intact.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
MONDAY NEXT, May 1st (one week only), at 8,
JULIUS CÆSAR.
SPECIAL MATINEE, SATURDAY NEXT, May 6th, at 2,
HAMLET.
Box Office (Mr. Watts) open 10 to 10. HIS MAJESTY'S.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
Saturday, April 22nd, at 8.15., and Every Evening.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
Mr. George Edwardes' Season.
Every Evening at 8.15.
A New Musical Play entitled
LADY MADCAP.
By Paul Rubens and N. Newnham-Davis.
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.15.

ADELPHI.
Lessee and Manager: OTHO STUART.
Every Evening at 8. Saturday Matinee, at 2.
HAMLET.
H. B. Irving, Oscar Asche, Lily Brayton, etc.
Every Wednesday at 2.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.
Telephone 2645 Gerrard.

GAIETY THEATRE.
Manager: Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES.
Every Evening, at 8 (doors open 7.40),
THE ORCHID.
Box office 10 to 10. Telephone: 2781 Gerrard.
Matinee every Saturday at 2.

SAVOY. DU BARRI
Sole Lessee: Mr. J. H. LEIGH.
Managers: Mr. GILBERT HARE and Mrs. BROWN-POTTER.
To-night at 8, and Every Evening,
Christopher St. John's Adaptation of
"DU BARRI,"
By Jean Richepin.
Matinee every Thursday at 2.
Box Office 10 to 10. 'Phone, 2602 Gerrard.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening, at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.
Sole Lessee and Manager: CHARLES FROHMAN.
To-night at 8.25.
Charles Frohman presents Miss Ellen Terry in
J. M. Barrie's New Play,
ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE.
Miss Irene Vanbrugh and the Duke of York's Theatre Co.
Preceded, at 8.25 sharp, with PANTALOON,
by J. M. Barrie.
Cast includes Mr. Gerald Du Maurier.
Matinee every Saturday, at 2.25 sharp.
Box Office open 10 to 10.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Magnificent Varieties.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Robert Whyte | 155 |
| The March of Events | 156 |
| On the Links | 162 |
| The Styles of Eminent Players—VIII.—Mr. Mansfield Hunter | 166 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 167 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 168 |
| The Parisians of Paris | 170 |
| Parisian Players | 171 |
| Under the Burgee | 172 |
| The Royal Academy, 1905 | 173 |
| Some Pictures of the Year | 175 |
| Royal Academy Pictures | 176 |
| More Green-room Gossips—XXIII.—With Mr. Denis O'Sullivan | 177 |
| The Services | 178 |
| Plays and Players | 179 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the South Western Railway | 180 |
| Minstrels and Rondeaux | 182 |
| The Racing Season | 184 |
| The City and Suburban | 186 |
| Literary Notes | viii. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Burslem Busts | x. |
| Motoring Notes | xii. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xiv. |
| The King's Menu | xvi. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xviii. |

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Autograph letter of Admiral Byng.—821, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Autograph letter of Mrs. Thrale or Henry Thrale, dated from Southwark.—822, THE KING'S EXCHANGE

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Quin's Jest Book.—156, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, Vols. IV. and V.—158, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Gentleman's Magazine for 1865, Vol. II. £1 offered.—159, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Bell's British Theatre, small 8vo, 1791 Edition, Vol. III.—160, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Masonic Song or Music Books before 1783.—161, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

A Collection of Public Thanksgiving Prayers from 1588.—162, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Army List, 1815 and 1816.—163, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Southwark views before 1750.—240, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Picture of Showell's Meeting House, Southwark.—241, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Contemporary engraved portrait of Henry Thrale.—242, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures or rare prints relating to Selina, Countess of Huntingdon.—243, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of Engravings of Old London, especially Covent Garden, The Temple, The Strand, Lincoln's Inn, etc.—246, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Pictures on glass dealing with Naval subjects.—744, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Any Valentines before 1815.—745, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Specimen of French Masonic Certificates during the First Empire.—746, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Scarce Arundels, Angelico's Annunciation, Limia St. Catherine, Adoration Trinity, Giorgione, Primavera, Venus rising, etc.—219A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Grand Oil Painting, Venus and Cupid, 69×54. Landscape, Wilson, R.A. Drawings by Alken, Herring, set by Solomon.—220A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Nalte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

New Six Shilling Novels. Price 1s. 6d. and 2s. each. List on application.—130A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals.—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Stamps—Russian War Special Issue, complete set, 1s. 6d.; Indian Native States, 21 varieties, 1s. 1d.; British Colonials, 100 varieties, 1s. 7d.—SMITH, Upper Park Road, Kingston, Surrey.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE (PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,

17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Charmingly situated Seaside on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Fishing and Golfing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guide sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

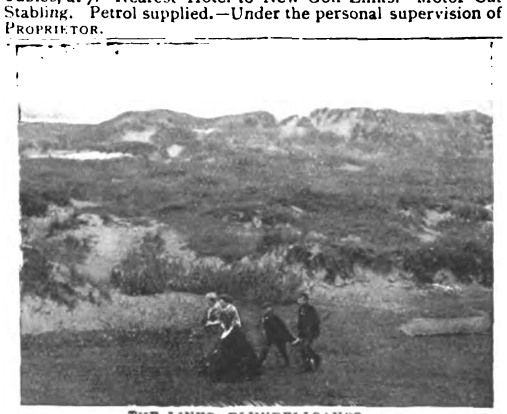
Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.



THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,
Within easy access of London.

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"Is it a Private House or an Hotel?" is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL. — Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Book.et and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method). – Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL

LOVELY COLOURS,
BRILLIANT GLOSS.

A Necessity in Every Household during the Spring Cleaning season.

SPECIAL ENAMEL FOR BATHS
to stand Hot Water.

Seasonable Table Delicacies!

BIRD'S CUSTARD POWDER

May & June.
BIRD'S CUSTARD & FRUIT.
Dishes for these Months.
Stewed Gooseberries & Custard.
Stewed Cherries & Custard.
Stewed Rhubarb & Custard.
Sliced Bananas & Custard.
All Tinned and Bottled Fruits and Custard.

Completely supersedes the use of Eggs in the preparation of High-Class Custard—Greatly increases the popularity of all Sweet Dishes—The unfailing resource of every successful hostess.

Rich in Nutriment—Delicate in Flavor.

NO EGGS! NO RISK! NO TROUBLE!

Digitized by Google

MINSTRELS AND RONDEAUX.

By JOHN BLOUNDELLE-BURTON.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

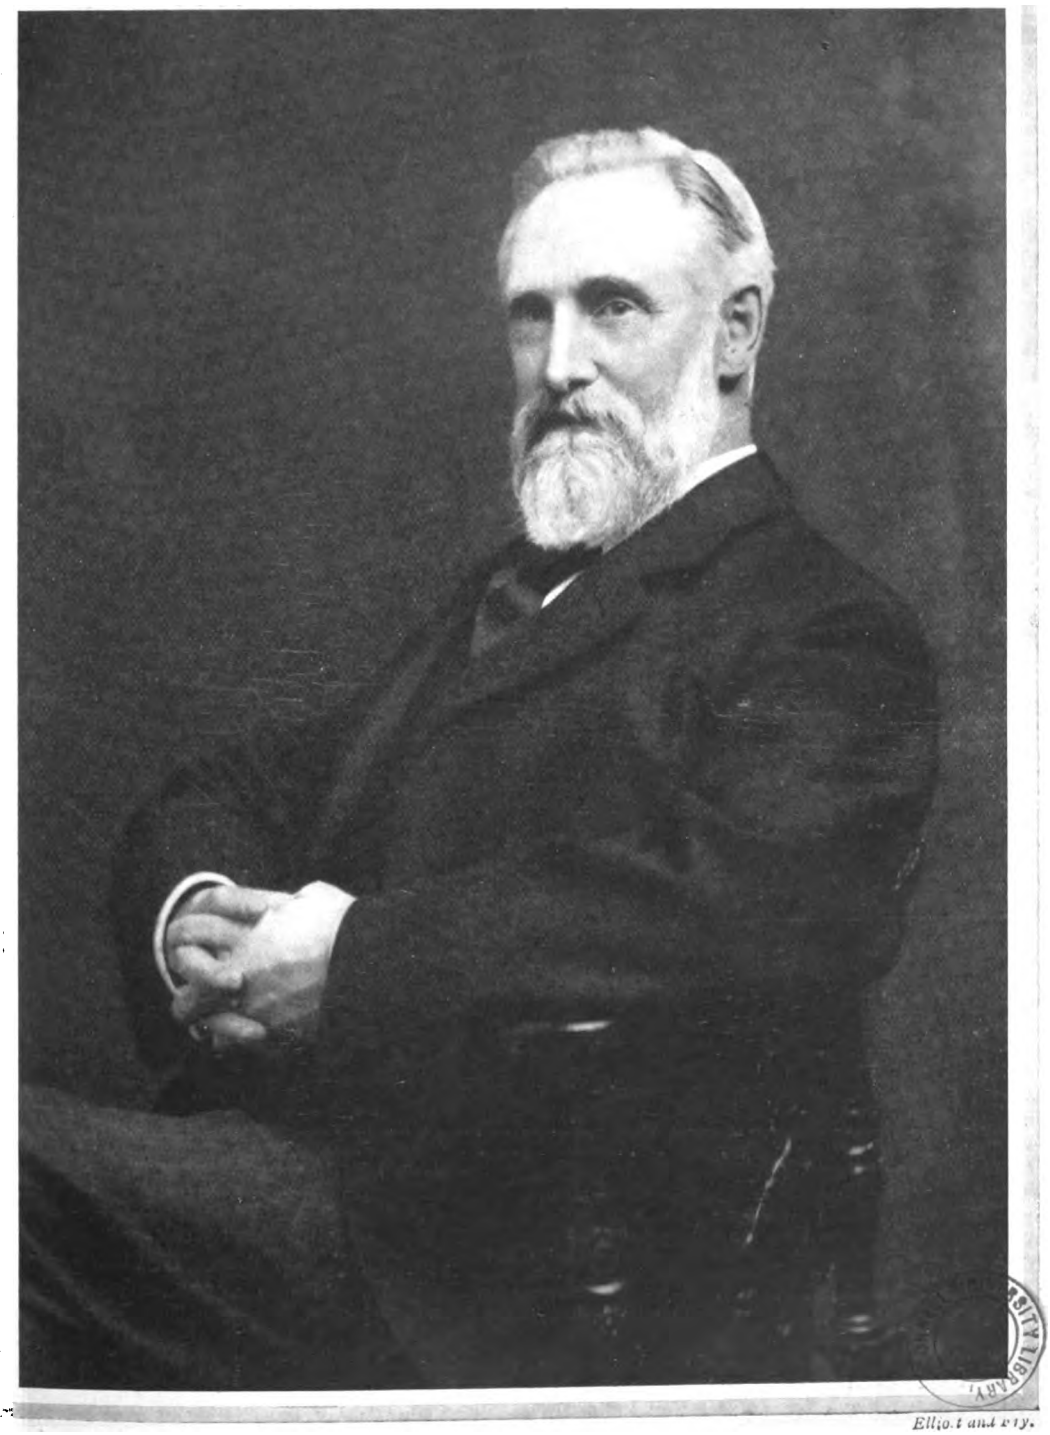
Vol. XX. No. 431. SATURDAY, MAY 6th, 1905. PRICE 6d.



Elliott and Fry.

MR. ROBERT WHYTE.

Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Kingston Division of Surrey.

(See page 167.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 431. Saturday, May 6, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING'S RETURN.—The end of his holiday has come, and King Edward is back among his subjects, ready to take up the round of social duties which at this time of the year crowd upon the other toil that falls to the lot of the reigning monarch. The London season is now in full swing—the crowded Row and the string of carriages in Piccadilly every afternoon attest the fact—the opera season has commenced, and receptions and dinners at the houses of the political leaders of the country crowd upon one another's heels. For the results of King Edward's tour, apart from the benefit to his health, it is yet early to look; but some of them lie near the surface, and the tightening of the bonds of friendship between this country and France is one of the most satisfactory. That the good relations between us will have their effect when the time comes for peace to be declared in the Far East is certain, and they are, moreover, a guarantee that the peace of Europe is not likely to be disturbed by causes which in the absence of such friendship would be a serious menace to lasting tranquillity.

THE QUEEN AND [illegible] the extension of her Mediterranean tour to include a visit to Greece, brings Queen Alexandra back to a part of the world which she first visited over three decades ago. That was at the time of "The Eastern Tour," when the then Prince and Princess of Wales visited Cairo, Constantinople, and Sebastopol, and on their way home stayed in Athens. And a second time when they were in the Grecian capital together was on the occasion of the marriage of the Duke of Sparta, in the presence of as large a concourse of Royalty as has ever gathered in modern times in Athens. The late Empress Frederick, as mother of the bride, was naturally present, and the Kaiser, Kaiserin, and the then Tsarevitch also attended, in addition to scions of many Royal houses, who were present as the representatives of the reigning monarchs. This year will see many Royal weddings also, and it is more than probable that both King Edward and Queen Alexandra may elect to be present at the marriage of the young Duke of Saxe-Coburg.

Bunnett.

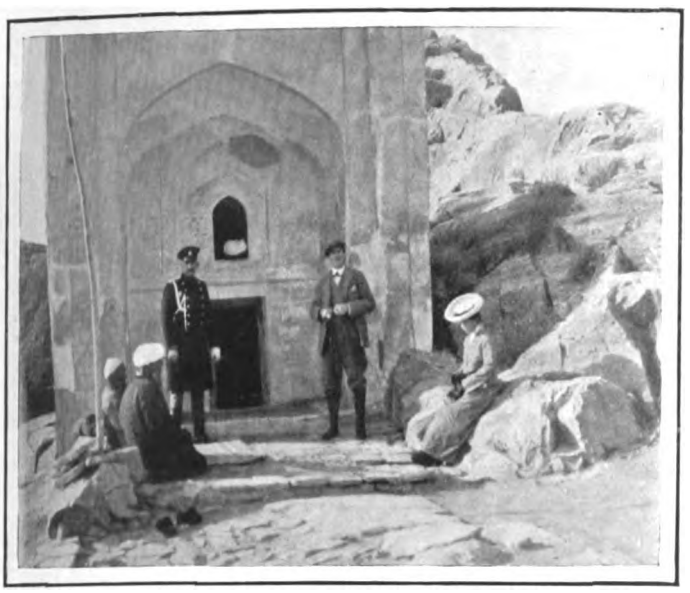
THE DOYEN OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY—MR. W. P. FRITH, R.A., IN HIS STUDIO.

Mr. Frith, the painter of "The Derby Day," is in excellent health and spirits, and, though he does not exhibit this year, he is very busy on a replica of the well-known "Ramsgate Sands," which was purchased by Queen Victoria. Mr. Frith, who was 86 in January last, and has been a member of the Academy for sixty-one years, was present at the annual dinner at Burlington House on Saturday last, and has probably not missed one of these functions since his election. The photograph was taken a short time since in his painting room at St. John's Wood, where the veteran artist devotes most of his time to what he calls his two favourite recreations, painting and whist.

THE KING AND THE M.G.—The Order of St. Michael and St. George, which is most familiar to the reader by the initials M.G., has had a new Grand Master, or Principal Knight Grand Cross, appointed in the person of the Prince of Wales, who is already a Knight Grand Cross of the Order, as he is of almost every other Order, of which the Sovereign is the head. The Order of St. Michael and St. George has not yet celebrated its centenary, having only been instituted to commemorate the placing of the Ionian Islands under the protectorate of Great Britain, and it was at first limited to natives of those islands, and of Malta, and persons of note serving in the Mediterranean. It is now assignable, however, to any person who has rendered valuable services in either Colonial or foreign affairs, and there are a number of foreign Princes and persons of distinction who are honorary members, in the same way that they are admirals à la suite of the Navy. The badge of the Order is remarkable for being a Maltese Cross with seven arms instead of four, and the colours of the ribbon are Saxon blue with a scarlet stripe. As Grand Master, the Prince of Wales will naturally rank in the list of officers of the Order next to the Sovereign.

Digitized by Google



Copyright.

Copyright.

THE SITUATION IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. Angus Hamilton is at present touring in Turkestan and gathering material for a new work on the lines of the book on Korea that he recently published. Our illustrations are supplied by him, and show: (1) The gateway of Osh, midway between Kashgar and Khokhand. (2) Mr. George Macartney, C.I.E., the British Consul at Kashgar, and members of the Consulate.

Elliott and Fry.

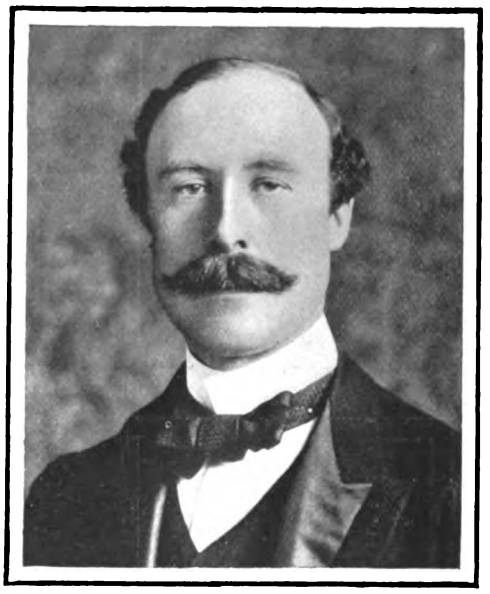
MR. JOSEPH CHOATE

The retiring American Ambassador to the Court of St. James', who leaves England at the end of the month.

Lallie Charles.

LADY EVELYN FARQUHAR

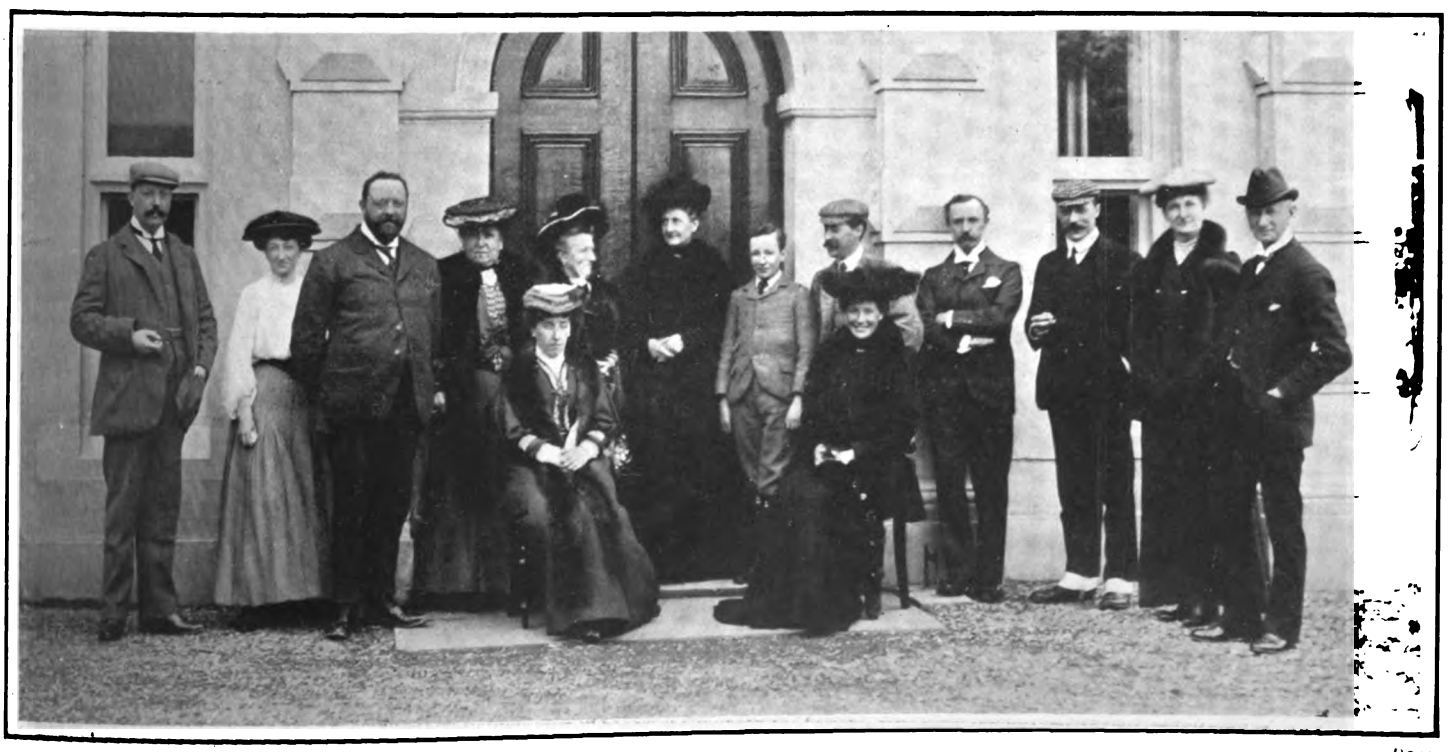
Who was married last week to Captain Francis Farquhar of the Coldstream Guards.



Elliott and Fry.

LORD GRIMTHORPE

Who has just succeeded to the title on the death of his father, the first Baron.



Dawson.

PRINCESS CHRISTIAN IN WALES.

The house party at Edwinsford last week. The names of those in the group are, from left to right, Mr. Dudley Drummond, the Hon. Mrs. Cumming-Bruce, Sir James Drummond, Bart., Princess Christian, Princess Victoria, Lady Drummond, Miss Loch, Master James Drummond, Lord Emlyn, and Lady Edith St. Aubyn.

Digitized by Google

THE MODERN NAVY.

Cribb, Southsea.

ONE OF THE RIVER DESTROYERS.

Six of these vessels, which were evolved as a consequence of the outcry about the weakness of our destroyers at the time of the "Cobra" disaster, have been ordered to join the China Squadron. A feature about these vessels is the height of their bows, and the speed, which in the earlier types was 30-knots, is reduced to 25-knots.

Cribb, Southsea.

COALING EXPERIMENTS IN PORTSMOUTH HARBOUR.

Last week a series of experiments in coaling war-ships by means of the Temperley Transporter were carried out at Portsmouth, with the result that 3,000 tons of coal were embarked in six hours without shovels being used. Our illustration shows the deck of the 12,000-ton coal depôt crowded with men engaged in the operation. The transporters are worked by electric motors, can discharge about 600-tons of coal per hour, while two battle-ships can be simultaneously berthed alongside at the same time.

Digitized by Google

SOME OF THE NELSON RELICS AT THE ROYAL UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION.

(1) Lord Nelson's gold seal, with compass set in the top. (2) Foul-weather cocked hat worn by Lord Nelson during his last service in the "Victory." (3) A dirk worn by Lord Nelson when a midshipman in the "Sea-horse." (4) A gold enamelled watch, given by Nelson to his sister on the occasion of her marriage. A pair of shoe-buckles, worn by Nelson when he was killed. (5) The coat worn by Lord Nelson when he received his death wound at Trafalgar. (6) Portion of the mainmast of the "Victory," lent by his Majesty the King. (7) A small gold watch, studded with pearls, made by order of Lord Nelson for his daughter. Small miniature portrait of Nelson in early life. Small copy of De Koster's portrait of Nelson (in square case). A small blue silk net purse (on the left) which Nelson had on his person when he met his death. A purse of silver lace and yellow silk, belonging to Captain Hardy. A gold compass, carried by Lieutenant William Clements at the Battle of Trafalgar.

(From copyright photographs, J. J. Keliher and Co., Limited, by permission of the Council of the Royal United Service Institution and the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.)

Digitized by Google

THE ATHLETIC GIRL.—We are exclaiming once more against the awful renascence of sport for girls. That is to say, some people are. Terrifying descriptions of the "hockey girl" with "shoulders rounded," "arms swinging," and "toes turned out" meet the eye in many places, and we are told that the athletic girl has an amble which is neither wholly awkward nor wholly graceful, but a sort of medium which is more unpleasant to behold than either extreme. Conceivably it is. That which is neither awkward nor graceful must be something odd, not to say weird. But the truth of it all is that the campaign against the athletic girl is a fad. There are, perhaps, girls who carry their craze for outdoor sports to an extreme, which is dangerous both for their healths and for their looks. But generally it will be allowed that the average girl of to-day is a far healthier and far more prepossessing animal than were the misses of the early Victorian era, with their interminable needlework, their trashy novels, and high-flown ideas of romance and chivalry. Perhaps one might wish that the latter-day girl were a little more domesticated, that she did not loathe, as in most cases she does, the homely occupations of dusting and bed-making; but girls, like boys, will never be perfect, and as the shopkeeper says, "the present article is far superior to anything we have been stocking."

A RUSH OF WEDDINGS.—Between Easter and the last days of April there was such a galaxy of weddings that the ladies' papers will have difficulty in finding space for them all unless they bring out special wedding supplements. At a rough computation seventy weddings took place in the week which began with Easter Monday, in that sphere of life which a Gaiety favourite has called "'Igh Sercierty." The happy Benedicks represented all the professions and arts; barristers, Army men, Naval men, poets, peers, peers' sons, clergymen, all led blushing brides to the altar, and the ceremonies were performed in many and various places, from the Guards' Chapel, Wellington Barracks, to the quaint little church at Cannes. The husbands and brides in a few cases were natives of the same country, but in the majority of instances it was North meeting South, Sutherlandshire marrying with Sussex, and Devonshire mating with Dublin.

"THE CRITIC."—How wonderfully appropriate are Sheridan's allusions to journalism, the Army, the stage, and the advertising agent! Watching the performance by the Mermaid Repertory Theatre the other night, one had difficulty in remembering that it was in the year of David Garrick's death that this brilliant comedy of manners first saw the light, the newly-imported footlights, if one may say so. There are not in the whole range of English dramatic literature more preposterously droll figures than those which make up the dramatis personæ of Mr. Puff's tragedy of "The Spanish Armada," and the rehearsal of that play as written by Sheridan is one of the most genuinely funny scenes the English stage has presented. Generations of comic actors have accumulated around it so much gag and extraneous business, however, that those who have only seen it at benefit performances will hardly recognise it at the Great Queen Street Theatre, where it is given shorn of all encumbrances and as nearly as possible in the style in which Sheridan himself produced the piece. Don Ferolo no longer plays such antics as make "the unskilful laugh, and cannot but make the judicious grieve." Lord Burleigh's solemn (and solitary) shake of the head no longer plentifully besprinkles his surroundings with thick white powder. Clowning is not allowed in the Mermaid Repertory Theatre, and the laughter which the play arouses is the wholesome tribute of those who have appreciated wit, and do not guffaw at foolery. Mr. Carr has gathered together a good company, and one young actor at least has reason to be grateful for the production of "The Critic." Mr. Michael Sherbrooke's Puff is as fine a character study as can be seen in any London theatre to-day. Mr. Frank Lascelles' Sir Fretful Plagiary is also good.

Barnett.

MISS EVELYN FRANCES BUTLER

Eldest daughter of Lord James and Lady Butler. Miss Butler is a niece of the present Marquess of Ormonde.

THE EASTER VACATION.—For the average man the Easter vacation ended with midnight on Bank Holiday; but that favoured being the British schoolboy is only just wending his weary and unwilling way back to the abode of learning which he honours with his presence during the few months in the year which are not devoted to holidays. In the wonderful days of old, when learning was rather rarer than it is now, the Easter holiday-time was the occasion of a Naval tourney on the Thames in which boys took part. A target was fixed in the middle of the stream, and at this small boats were vigorously propelled. Standing in the prow of each were boys armed with small lances, and the one who succeeded in breaking his lance and maintaining his balance was the winner. The other was dragged out of the water amid the jeers of the onlookers, or, as the oft-quoted FitzStephen has it, "multum ridere parati." Strange how much more polite these remarks sound in a tongue which is not that in everyday use!

Digitized by Google

THE DIRECTOR OF REMOUNTS.—Major-General F. W. Benson, Director of Transport and Remounts at the War Office, is at present in Canada in connection with the establishment of a Remount Depôt. In his honour a big luncheon-party was given lately, at which eighty of the leading men of the Dominion, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier, were present. Much was made of the fact that General Benson is a Canadian by birth, descent, and education. He saw very little active service until the South African War, most of his time having been spent in administrative work. He was for a time in command of the Egyptian cavalry, had a varied career in India, and, since his return home, has filled many responsible posts in these islands. He speaks Hindustani, Persian, and Arabic. He is singularly handsome, and hates publicity. His rise in the Army is due solely to his earnestness and ability. In this he resembles another Canadian soldier, Sir Percy Girouard. At present General Benson is the guest of that sturdy Imperialist, Colonel Hughes, who in his youth was one of the Pope's zouaves.

A COLONIAL GRIEVANCE. — Lord Northcote has thoroughly aired a Colonial grievance in a recent despatch to Mr. Lyttelton. As things now are, marriage with a deceased wife's sister is legal in the Colonies but illegal in the Mother Country; hence, when they come home, husband and wife are in an awkward position—their children more so. What Colonials want is not an alteration of the English law, but an amendment of it, so that a legal marriage in the Colonies shall be legal throughout the Empire. This should be done for the sake of justice. But it is more likely that the Bill to legalise the marriage of a deceased wife's sister will become law in England. It is curious to recall that its originator was a Colonial, Lord Lyndhurst, and last Session the member who took charge of it on its periodical passage through the House was also a Colonial—Sir Gilbert Parker.

A SOUTH AFRICAN IN SCOTLAND.—Mr. John Stroyan has bought Lanrick Castle, near Doune, from the trustees of the late Sir Robert Jardine. It is a fine old place, and the sport on the estate is excellent. At present Mr. Stroyan is the tenant of Ochtertyre, the historical home of the Murrays. He began life as a clerk in the Liverpool office of a Bombay firm, but it was not until he went to South Africa that he made money. In eight years he had amassed a fortune, with which he returned home, and took a big house in Scotland. He was already a Scottish landowner in a small way, for he inherited a small estate from his father, the late Mr. John Stroyan of Kirkchrist. Mrs. Stroyan is a South African, fair and sweet and gentle. She and her husband entertain largely both in London and Scotland.

Barnett.

THE HON. MRS. RUPERT GWYNNE

Who was married this week to Mr. Rupert Gwynne, at St. Margaret's, Westminster, is a niece of the Countess of Aberdeen.

RETIREMENT OF A COLONIAL MINISTER.—Sir Lewis Michell has announced his intention of retiring from the Jameson Cabinet at the end of the present Session. He intends to return home, and, it is said, will represent the Chartered Company in London. He is a Cornishman, whose mother was the daughter of a long line of West Indian planters. He himself has made his career in South Africa, where his financial ability and integrity have received ample recognition. Not only is he the chairman of De Beers, a director of the South African Company, and trustee of the Rhodes Trust, but he is general manager of the Standard Bank of South Africa. Though he is a Progressive, Sir Lewis is singularly moderate in his views. As chairman of the Martial Law Board during the Transvaal War he was the right man in the right place, and he was equally successful as treasurer of the Refugee Fund. He will be very much missed by Dr. Jameson, who has not too many followers of Sir Lewis Michell's weight and judgment.

"RACE SUICIDE IN CANADA."—What President Roosevelt calls "race suicide" in the United States is not unknown elsewhere. In Australia, for instance, the birth-rate is steadily falling, and now comes a similar tale from Ontario, the strength of British Canada. In no European country, except France, is the birth-rate so low. With physical deterioration a question of the hour at the heart, and a falling birth-rate on the frontier, the British Empire is by no means as healthy as it ought to be. That all other Western Countries are suffering in the same way, gives one no comfort, neither does the fact that Russia alone of European peoples is free from the general complaint.

A DISTINGUISHED ANGLO-AMERICAN.—Captain A. M'Evoy, who has just died in the United States, "in spite of every temptation remained an Englishman" during the forty years he lived under the Stars and Stripes. He fought through the Civil War on the Confederate side, and it was as an officer of the Bureau of Ordnance at Richmond that he first attracted notice in connection with torpedo construction. From that time onward he was regarded as an authority on Naval ordnance, and an inventor of some distinction. It is curious to note that, in addition to Captain M'Evoy, the United States Ordnance Department is indebted to England for another of its ornaments, Admiral O'Neil. Another British subject who contributed to its glory was Gatling, the inventor of the gun which bears his name. He was a Nova Scotian.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE annual match between Oxford and Cambridge Universities, played last week at Sunningdale, resulted in a very decisive victory for Cambridge. It was the twenty-seventh golf match played between two representative sides of each University, and up to the present Oxford have won fourteen times against twelve times by Cambridge, one match having been drawn. The match is one of 36 holes, which, with good match players, ought to leave a fairly good chance for any player slightly out of form in the morning round to recover himself before the day's work is gathered in. Oxford, however, seem to have been outplayed from the beginning to the end of the match, for only one member of the team scored a win. He was the last player on the list, and therefore presumably the weakest of the band. The day's play resulted in Cambridge scoring a total of 52 holes to 3 by Oxford.

* * *

At the close of the morning round Cambridge had a lead of 23 holes to 1. Mr. G. B. Rathbone (Oriel) led Mr. O. Martin-Smith (Trinity) by 4 holes at the close of the morning round, but in the afternoon this substantial lead was wholly dropped. Mr. Martin-Smith, a powerful driver, played an admirably accurate game all through the afternoon round, and at the turn he had wiped three holes off Mr. Rathbone's lead. Getting the lead at the 13th hole, he eventually won the match by 3 holes. The highest scorer on the Cambridge side was Mr. W. N. Potter (Pembroke), who beat Lord Maidstone by 15 holes. In the morning round Mr. Potter led by 7 holes. He played a very steady game, while Lord Maidstone apparently found himself in one of those days when it is impossible, for some reason not easy to explain, to refrain from topping the tee shots. This was the part of the game in which Lord Maidstone was deficient, and it accounts mainly for his crushing defeat.

CAMBRIDGE v. OXFORD AT SUNNINGDALE.
Mr. G. Hoffmann, the Cambridge captain, driving from the 9th tee.

* * *

The next highest scorer was Mr. H. C. McDonell (Corpus), who beat the Hon. C. H. Bruce (New) by 13 holes. Mr. McDonell early in the match asserted his superiority, and never lost command of it. At the end of the morning round he was only 5 up, but as in some of the other Oxford matches the afternoon play was disastrous to the side as a whole, Mr. Bruce shared in the misfortunes of his companions by losing a string of holes rather easily. The two captains played together, and Mr. Hoffmann (Caius) only led by a hole in the morning round from Mr. A. J. Graham. Mr. Hoffmann's afternoon round of 76 was a brilliant performance, a score which was equalled by Mr. Martin-Smith. The end of the captains' match was that Mr. Graham lost by 10 holes to the Cambridge captain. The Hon. A. J. Gordon (Balliol), though three holes down at the end of the morning round against Mr. M. T. Allen (Trinity), played a fine game in the afternoon, his opponent not keeping up the form shown by him earlier in the day. The end of this match was that Mr. Gordon credited his side with the only win of the day, and thus saved his side from a complete and universal rout.

* * *

The other matches were more evenly contested. One of the incidents of the day was a tee shot by Mr. Brownlee at the fourteenth hole in the morning round. The ball after it left the club hit a bird in flight, with the result that not only was the bird killed, but Mr. Brownlee lost the hole to Mr. Gillies. The Sunningdale course was in fine playing order, and the weather was, on the whole, well suited for an enjoyable game.

CAMBRIDGE v. OXFORD AT SUNNINGDALE: A PICTURESQUE CORNER OF THE LINKS.
Mr. C. E. Stuart putting at the 8th green. He beat Mr. G. E. Grundy by 2 holes to 0. The match resulted in a victory for Cambridge by 52 holes to 3.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Despite the cold weather which prevailed during the Easter holidays, there was very little diminution in the volume of the exodus to the seaside. Nearly all the South Coast links had a large gathering of golfers, and the keen north-easterly wind which swept over the majority of them with unabated edge was powerless to damp enthusiasm. Fortunately, the weather was dry, and the nipping air had the effect of bracing players up and making their bodies less susceptible to the fatigue of a hard day's play on a long seaside course. At Sandwich and Deal, for example, there was a large turn-out of players, and the usual Easter competitions by match play were carried through, with the customary keenness of spirit always noteworthy at these important gatherings. Mr. Cecil Hutchison won the scratch trophy on Saturday with a score of 77, Mr. J. Robertson-Walker being the winner of the handicap prize with the same net score, while the Earl of Dudley was second with 78.

* * *

One of the interesting features of the Easter week competitions was the visit of members of

GOLF AT SUNNINGDALE.
Mr. A. J. Graham, the Oxford captain, driving the first ball of the match.

pictures of the match played at Rochford on April 15 by White, Vardon, Braid, and A. Toogood. They are extremely interesting, especially to that part of the audience familiar with the players and the game. This is a new feature in musichall entertainment, and a welcome one. Everyone knows a good deal about golf nowadays, even if all classes constituting the public do not play it.

* * *

As a good deal of interest is being shown in the pneumatic ball, it may be of interest to record that one of the recent low scores returned is that of Professor R. G. McAndrew, of the Wallaston Club, Boston, U.S.A., who went round the eighteen holes in 74 with a pneumatic ball.

* * *

The members of the Lahinch Golf Club are subscribing to raise a memorial to the late Mr. Richard Plummer, who was hon. secretary to the club from its formation in 1892 until his death in November of last year. It is not yet decided what form the memorial shall take, but the members' wishes will be consulted by the committee at the annual general meeting. No doubt the most acceptable memorial to the majority would be a memento cup, to be played for annually at Lahinch, as it was mainly owing to Mr. Plummer's great popularity, courtesy, and exertions on its behalf that the club now occupies its present high position in the golfing world.

THE CINQUE PORTS GOLF CLUB—DEAL.

THE Parliamentary Tournament is fixed to be played over the fine links at Deal on Saturday, May 13. This will be the second visit of the Parliamentary golfers to the Deal course, and no better test could be forthcoming than a well-fought match over it.

The Cinque Ports Golf Club was founded in 1892, the first captain of the club being Major-General S. M. Graham. It is an unwritten rule that the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports be asked to accept the presidency of the club, and this office was held last year by Lord Curzon of Kedleston, Viceroy of India. Among the list of persons who have had the honour to be elected captain are the Prime Minister, Mr. A. J. Balfour, M.P., in 1898, Mr. R. A. McCall, K.C., in 1899, whilst Mr. J. Leslie Wanklyn, M.P., was the last captain. The club, which is in a flourishing condition, has 600 members, exclusive of life, provisional, honorary, and temporary members, and members resident abroad, the entrance fee being £15 15s., and the annual subscription £3 3s. Facilities to become honorary members are offered to the officers of his Majesty's Army or Navy, and curates, pro tem., of the parishes of Deal and Walmer, on paying the yearly (or half-yearly) subscription without entrance fee, whilst sons (between fifteen and eighteen years of age) of members are admitted on nominal terms.

GOLF AT SUNNINGDALE.
Mr. L. D. Brownlow driving from the 10th tee.

GOLF AT SUNNINGDALE.
Mr. H. D. Gillies driving from the 10th tee.

the Bar Golfing Society to Dublin in order to play a match with the members of the Irish Bar. This is the second annual match which teams of the English and Irish Bars have played. In the single matches the English Bar won by 5¼ matches to 3¾, but in the afternoon the English team lost all the foursomes, with the exception of a bye secured by Mr. Beveridge and Mr. Rand. Among those who won their matches in the singles were Mr. Rand, Mr. Inman, Mr. C. J. Parton, and Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C. Mr. H. W. Beveridge, the leading player on the English side, halved his match with Mr. W. H. Boyd, the same result being secured by Mr. Crabb Watt against the Hon. E. Gibson.

* * *

The championship of the Nice Club has been won for the second year in succession by Mr. J. R. Hay-Gordon, who beat Mr. Hetley in the final by one hole.

* * *

There was produced at the Alhambra on Easter Monday evening a series of Bioscope

GOLF AT SUNNINGDALE.
The Hon. C. H. Bruce driving from the 9th tee.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE DEAL LINKS.

Mr. G. Struthers in the bent at the 3rd hole. This grass forms an important hazard all through the links.

Ladies have their own links, but have a room reserved for their use at the club-house. They are permitted to play on the gentlemen's links if accompanied by a member, except on certain days in the summer months.

Golf is played on Sundays, but the caddies must be eighteen years of age. The course has lately been extended from 6,012-yds. to 6,300-yds., and in consequence old records can no longer hold good. Last summer, however, in the Professional Tournament, Willie Fernie went round in 76; and in September last, playing a friendly match from the shorter tees, Mr. H. B. Hayman, the Middlesex cricketer, succeeded in accomplishing the fine score of 71.

The greens reflect the highest credit on H. Hunter, the local professional and green-keeper. When I visited the links at the end of October the condition of the greens was perfect, in spite of the heavy play all summer.

The links afford a most excellent test of the golfer's skill. A really good shot finds its deserts in a good lie, but the badly-played ball finds, almost invariably, a snug resting-place in either bunker or "bent." Though there is no bunker of the height of the "Maiden" at Sandwich (which is plainly seen from these links), or of the extent of some of the bunkers at Prestwick, there is no lack of them. There are two and three at every hole, cunningly placed to catch the unwary.

The first hole is played back towards Deal, and the second at right angles to the first, towards the sea. The next eight holes then run parallel to the sea, towards Sandwich, which is only some ten minutes' walk from the far hole.

The fourth hole is the shortest hole on the course—154-yds.—but it is carefully guarded by the famous "Sandy Parlour" bunker, which is shown at the back of our illustration of the third putting green. From the tee here Ramsgate is seen very plainly standing out to sea on its high chalk cliffs. The homeward course lies slightly more inland, but is almost as sporting to play. The "Bogey" score outwards reads—4, 5, 5, 3, 6, 4, 5, 6, 4=42; homewards—4, 5, 3, 5, 3, 5, 5, 5, 5=40. Total, 82 for the round.

A. V. D. RINTOUL.

THE DEAL LINKS.

Mr. H. Fisher Smith, the best left-handed player in the club, driving from the 4th tee over the "Sandy Parlour" bunker. To the right across the sea lies Ramsgate.

GOLF AT DEAL.

The tee at the 3rd hole; Mr. G. Struthers driving and Mr. W. Bradshaw waiting his turn.

FIXTURES.

May 4-6.—Sussex County Union, Annual Meeting at Rye.
May 5-6.—Hanger Hill, Spring Meeting.
May 6.—Sundridge Park Single Tournament and Foursomes.
May 6.—Glasgow Spring Meeting.
May 8.—Royal Blackheath Ladies' Spring Meeting.
May 8.—Hanger Hill, Mixed Foursome Competition.
May 8-12.—Irish Ladies Championship, at Portsalon.
May 10-11.—Lytham and St. Anne's Professional Tournament.
May 12-14.—Le Touquet, Solicitors' Golfing Society v. Le Touquet.
May 13.—Parliamentary Tournament at Deal.
May 13.—Hanger Hill, Medal and Magistrate's Bowl.
May 16-17.—Midland Ladies' Championship, at Nottingham.
May 20.—England v. Scotland (Amateurs), at Prestwick.
May 20.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal (Stroke).
May 20.—Hanger Hill, Monthly "Bogey" Winners.
May 22.—The Amateur Championship, at Prestwick.
May 27.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal Prize.
May 27.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
May 27-28.—Bar Golfing Society v. Le Touquet; Compiègne v. Le Touquet.
May 29.—Ladies Championship, at Cromer.
June 3.—England v. Scotland (Professionals), at St. Andrews.
June 7-8.—Open Championship, at St. Andrews.
June 10.—New Luffness, Trayner Cup.
June 15-17.—Bar Golfing Society, Annual Tournament, at Sandwich.
June 19.—St. George's Challenge Cup, at Sandwich.
June 19.—Scottish Ladies' Championship, at North Berwick.
June 19-24.—Yorkshire Union Championship Meeting, at Redcar.
July 31.—Irish Open Amateur Championship, at Dollymount.
October 7.—New Luffness Autumn Meeting.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE SEACROFT GOLF CLUB, NEAR SKEGNESS.

(1) Mrs. Apstone takes a brassie towards the 16th green. (2) Approaching the 18th green. (3) Mr. Frederick Acton, promoter of the club, and chairman of the company. (4) Mrs. Lowe driving from the 18th tee. (5) Dr. B. Sweeten, the hon. secretary. (6) Miss Hawson and Miss Hancock at the home green. The club-house is in the background.

Digitized by Google

The Styles of Eminent Players.

VIII.—Mr. MANSFIELD HUNTER.

THE FINISH OF THE SWING.

FINISH OF THE BRASSIE SHOT.

FINISH OF THE IRON SHOT.

IT is curious to note how totally at variance is the style of the two Hunter brothers. They were both brought up together at golf, played day in and day out together, were taught by the same player, and yet they have not one stroke in common. Style at golf is, indeed, an exemplification of the old saying, "Every man must work out his own salvation."

Mr. Mansfield Hunter has a very pretty style. In fact, "neat" is the word that expresses it. There is no lashing out at the ball, no abandon in the follow through; there is reserve in all the shots. He also plays "with his heid," as the caddies say up North. How few golfers do this; and yet it is half the battle in tight matches, and of these Mr. Hunter has had many. One is not a mainstay of the Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society, nor captain of the London Match Club, without having to play hard games.

In watching golf, good, bad, and indifferent, how often one sees matches thrown away for the want of a little common-sense. There is the player who risks doubtful carries, so as to win the hole, if the opponent does not get over, and playing too neat approaches when the opponent has played a stroke more. Championships have been won and lost through the same policy time and again.

Mr. Hunter is known and appreciated wherever golfers gather together. He has played on more courses than most golfers, but the course he knows best, and I think likes best, is North Berwick. I should think there is not a blade of grass on that course which he does not know. St. Andrews knows him well, and when South he plays mostly at Woking. A goodly toll of medals is his, North and South, and though he has not yet gone far to obtain the highest honours, he is a player to be reckoned with.

In photograph No. 1 it will be noticed that the finish of the swing is quite orthodox. Mr. Hunter has a good full swing, and brings the club well through; the hands also come well through and are high. Mr. Hunter has two curious habits in all his full shots. He leans his head right away to the right, at the moment of striking the ball, just as if he was afraid of his hands hitting it when they come up; and the other habit is to throw himself back on his right leg after hitting the ball. This last, of course, is a fault from the "ideal" golfer's point of view, but it does not seem to matter much to him, and I think he does it more to get his wrists in than for any other reason, for he is essentially a wrist player. He drives a nice low, long ball with a slight pull. The grip is usual.

No. 2 is a brassie shot. It will be noticed here that the head and the arms are far out from the body.

No. 3. Mr. Hunter is very good with his iron clubs, and he also knows how to choose them; he has the best collection I know. The photograph shows the finish of an iron shot. Notice in this how far out the hands finish, also the short swing, and how the wrists have been brought into play. He plays the ball high with a great amount of cut.

No. 4 is the finish of a run-up shot. He plays those shots very low, with not much drag. Notice how close the feet are together, and how the thumbs are held down the shaft of the club.

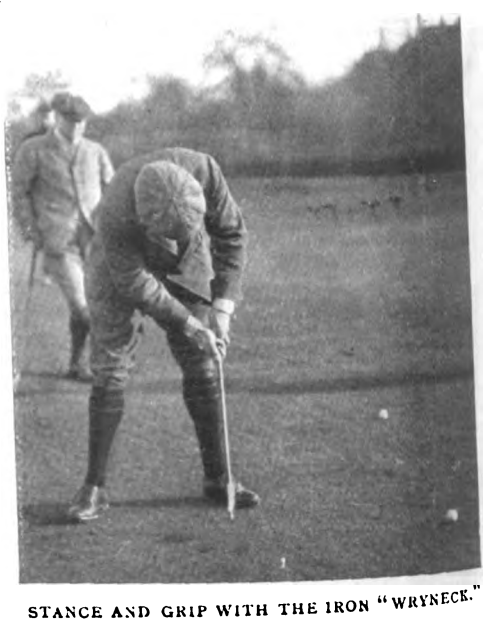
Nos. 5 and 6, putting. Mr. Hunter uses two putters—one the old "Musselburgh iron," and the other the wrynecked. Mr. Hunter has but lately taken to the wooden putter, but he is very good indeed with it. He plays shots with it a long way from the hole, right off the green in the rough, and he generally puts the ball somewhere near the hole—sometimes they disappear altogether, which is horrible. He is the possessor of a wooden putter which may well be described as "a beauty." How difficult it is to find a really good wooden putter! They are as rare as the golfer who never grumbles. Notice the entire difference in stance in Nos. 5 and 6, feet close together with wood, and wide apart with the iron. Mr. Hunter is also very good with his iron putter. He hits the ball with a hard tap, hardly ever trickles it, always gives it a chance, follows through fairly well, though high, and stops it with a jerk by using the wrists.

Mr. Hunter is a member of golf clubs innumerable. He it was who practically ran the team out in America when the Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society paid its visit there last year, and of which he is the secretary. He was one of the foundations of its successful tour.

H. Ferrier-Kerr.

FINISH OF THE RUN-UP SHOT.

STANCE AND GRIP WITH THE WOODEN PUTTER.



STANCE AND GRIP WITH THE IRON "WRYNECK."

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLI.—Mr. Robert Whyte, Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Kingston Division of Surrey.

FEW English Parliamentary districts can vie with the Kingston Division of Surrey in the matter of historic interest, for it includes within its limits not only the ancient crowning-place of our early kings, but Richmond, the much-loved residence of both Tudor and Stuart sovereigns, and Kew, the favourite summer palace of George III. and Queen Charlotte, to say nothing of the old-world associations closely connected with Mortlake, Ham, and Petersham. If Whig traditions linger fitfully at Twickenham, erstwhile the abode of Pope, Horace Walpole, and Mr. Henry Labouchere, the Kingston Division has been generally regarded as an almost impregnable citadel of Conservatism ever since the far-off days of 1886, when it sent ex-Lord Mayor Sir Whittaker Ellis to Westminster without even a show of opposition — a condition of things which repeated itself at the last General Election in the case of its present sitting member, Mr. Skewes-Cox. During the past two years, however, the Surrey Liberals in general, and those of the Kingston Division in particular, have awakened from their slumbers, and, whenever the opportunity may arise, are prepared for battle, with every hope of success. In the person of Mr. Robert Whyte, the Liberals of the Kingston Division have fortunately secured a candidate whose past record, both as regards public and private life, peculiarly fits him for an encounter at long odds, while his depth of feeling, strength of character, purity of purpose, and intensity of conviction have won him many friends and sympathisers, even in the ranks of his political opponents. The almost magnetic influence exercised for good by Robert Whyte in London during the past thirty years has made itself felt in every part of the world through the young men who have been members of his class in Regent Square, and it is difficult to talk to him for half-an-hour on any of the great and urgent social problems of the day without realising the important work he may yet accomplish in the House of Commons, where his presence is eagerly looked for by those with whom his name has long been a household word.

Although by accident of birth a "Warwickshire lad," Robert Whyte is every inch a Scotchman by right of descent. His mother was a Duncan, and Robert Whytes may be found in the muster-rolls of the citizens of Falkirk and Edinburgh for many generations. Mr. Whyte's grandfather and namesake was a notable Town Councillor of the Scotch capital and Governor of Heriot's Hospital, and by a strange accident his own birthday almost exactly coincides with that of the Free Church of Scotland. Robert Whyte learned the rudiments from the lips of an excellent mother, whose memory he always reverences, and at the age of fourteen left the private school where he had proved himself an apt and eager pupil, to gain his first business experience in an Edinburgh office. His evenings were, however, given up to close study, and this practice he continued five years later, when he migrated to London, and laid the foundation of the flourishing wholesale business still carried on by the firm of Whyte, Ridsdale, and Co. Robert Whyte, however, was not a man to devote the whole of his constitutional energy to commercial enterprise and personal aggrandisement. His dealings with the Colonies soon kindled in him an active interest in all that concerns the prosperity of Greater Britain, while, almost from the moment he set foot in the metropolis, he was content to devote the greater part of his leisure moments to promoting the welfare of the young and the poor. He now ranks amongst the conscript fathers of the City Liberal Club; but, although the part he has played in the religious, social, educational, and political work of the last quarter of a century has been both prominent and useful, it was not till the autumn of 1903 that he at last consented to allow himself to be nominated as a prospective candidate for a seat in Parliament. Possibly the Kingston Division offered peculiar attractions to him, because he knew full well that the compact phalanx of Surrey Conservatism was hard to break, and that at the last contested election his good friend and loyal supporter, Mr. Charles Burt, found himself face to face with a Tory majority of over 2,000. "I warn you," he said, while making his first speech in the constituency, "this seat is not to be won hands down. I do not mean to spare myself, and I ask you to do the same." These words have, as it were, given the keynote to all that has happened ever since. Throughout the whole Kingston Division energy and activity have been the order of the day. Everybody has worked with a will, from Lord Crewe, the president, Sir Richard Tangye, Messrs. Burt, Currie, and Radford, the vice-presidents, Mr. Allard, the chairman, and Mr. T. L. Banks, the vice-chairman of the Kingston Division Liberal Association, down to its humblest members, while wonderful results have been achieved by the untiring exertions of the Richmond Liberal Women's Association, of which Mrs. J. H. Yoxall is president, with Mrs. Purchese and Miss Davis as secretaries, and the Kingston Liberal Women's Association, under the able guidance of Mrs. Stuart Black. The energy of Mr. Whyte is equalled, if not surpassed, by that of his popular wife, who for many years has been president of the Ladies' Committee of the London Missionary Society. The daughter of the late Sir J. Risdon Bennett, President of the Royal College of Physicians, she is an organiser of more than ordinary capacity. It was from her father that David Livingstone learned what he knew of medical science, and their friendship only ended with the death of the pupil in "Darkest Africa." Mrs. Whyte shares to the fullest extent her husband's broad and enlightened views on social, religious, and political subjects. Mr. Whyte's eldest son, who bears the same name as his father, hurried home from abroad to volunteer for service in South Africa with the London Scottish; his second son, George, after University honours, went out to China two years ago as a Medical Missionary, while his only daughter is a member of the staff of London University. Five years ago the life of Mr. Whyte was clouded by a great sorrow. His two younger sons were accidentally drowned while bathing on the Scotch Coast near Aberdeen.

Mr. Robert Whyte has for many years past done splendid work as an elder of the well-known English Presbyterian Church in Regent Square, of which Carlyle's early friend, Edward Irving, was once pastor. He is a strong Free Trader by conviction and experience, and takes the keenest interest in all questions relating to education and the improvement of the condition of the poor. For the weak and oppressed Mr. Whyte's active sympathy is always enlisted. He was the first to call the attention of the King of the Belgians to the massacres and other iniquities perpetrated by the Congo officials in the name of civilisation. Although himself a strong advocate of total abstinence, he may fairly be described as a tolerant teetotaler, and notwithstanding his rooted dislike to the Education Act, he fully admits the value of the good work now being accomplished under the ægis of the Surrey County Council, and would rather see the whole question fought out at the poll than in the police-courts. While ready to sacrifice anything for the furtherance of what he believes to be right, Mr. Whyte would always concede to others that liberty of thought which he claims for himself. It is precisely this spirit of moderation which is likely to stand Mr. Whyte in good stead when his voice is heard at Westminster, as well as in the councils of the Free Churches and the Synod of English Presbyterianism.

Window and Grove.

MRS. ROBERT WHYTE

President of the Ladies' Committee of the London Missionary Society, and wife of the Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Kingston Division of Surrey.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

THE report of the Departmental Committee appointed to enquire into the use of industrial, or duty-free, alcohol in this country, dismisses the question of its employment as a fuel for motor-cars, in a somewhat summary fashion. In fact, one's curiosity is aroused to try to discover the reason for such an almost contemptuous treatment of a problem which many have been led to regard as the chief object of the committee's investigations. For the last year or two the merits of alcohol have been so constantly urged in the motor papers that one had almost come to regard it as an ideal fuel which must inevitably replace petrol when a few difficulties, including the question of price, had been overcome. The campaign of the alcohol enthusiasts has been widespread and persistent, and, curiously enough, no one came forward to present the other side of the question. The unanimous report of the committee, which includes the names of many eminent scientists, appears to dispose of many of the fallacies in regard to industrial alcohol, which have received a wide currency of late.

It will come somewhat as a shock to motorists to learn that in Germany, where the alcohol-driven engine and the alcohol-driven car are supposed to flourish, it has been found that all the running parts of the mechanism are very quickly corroded, owing to the formation of acetic acid in the cylinder, and that in very cold weather any alcohol motor "which they have at present had occasion to use is almost unworkable," on account of the difficulty of starting, and of running for some time after the starting has been accomplished. These are weighty indictments of the alcohol engine, but the evidence taken in Germany, upon which they are founded, seems to have been unhesitatingly accepted by the committee.

I am afraid that the report will not tend to encourage those painstaking experiments by which alone the present difficulties in the way of the adoption of alcohol for motor-cars might possibly be overcome. Alcohol has several important advantages over petrol, and the substantial decrease in the price of the former, which will result if the committee's proposals are adopted by the Government, and the increase in the price of the latter, which will certainly take place when the present keen competition between the various petroleum interests ceases, might easily bring the prices of the two fuels sufficiently close together for the alcohol car to come within the range of practical politics. The fact that there was an alternative fuel, which could, if necessary, take the place of petrol, would exercise a restraining influence upon the great oil companies, who may at any moment arrive at a working agreement, which would result in a large, and possibly serious, increase in the retail price of petroleum spirit. On this account it is to be hoped that the report of the committee will not be taken as conclusively disposing of the claims of alcohol.

In connection with the Brighton and Blackpool Meetings a new system of classification is being considered, which, if adopted, should infuse a little life and excitement into what is, generally speaking, a very dull spectacle. Hitherto at events of this description it has been usual to classify the competing cars according to price, with the result that close finishes have been the exception, and the majority of the races have been mere processions. Even the attraction of high speed has been wanting, except in the racing classes, as it is a curious fact that a touring car running at forty miles an hour on a cleared track conveys no impression of fast movement to the spectator. In order to provide better sport it has been suggested that the cars should be divided according to make and the different types of that make. There would, therefore, be classes and sub-classes for the cars of those manufacturers who are most popular in this country, with, possibly, miscellaneous classes for the less well-known firms. In order to create a still greater interest, it is further suggested that after the races for the sub-classes have been run, all the winners of a given make should compete together in a final handicap for a cup. I believe this method of classification would result in some excellent sport, and would very probably attract genuine amateur entries, which, as a rule, are conspicuous by their absence from the big race-meetings. The manufacturers have been sounded as to their views in the matter, and as the majority have signified their approval, a trial of the new system of classification will doubtless be made at the Brighton races in July.

To enumerate all the races, trials, and competitions that have been arranged for the present season, would take up far more space than I have at my command. It may be of interest, however, to give the dates of a few of the more important and interesting events. To-morrow (Saturday) or on Monday—at the time of writing the exact date is uncertain—Londoners will have an opportunity of seeing the May Day Parade of motor-waggons on the Embankment at 2.30 p.m. This has now become an annual fixture, which should help to encourage the men to take a pride in the appearance and running of their charges. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the future of the commercial motor depends almost entirely on the supply of careful and intelligent drivers. On May 6th, Haslemere will be the centre of several motor fixtures in the Southern Counties. The Auto-Cycle Club has a hill-climbing competition at Fernhurst, which is in the neighbourhood; the run of the West Surrey Automobile Club passes through the town in the afternoon; and the Southern Automobile Club make the White Horse their rendezvous for the week-end. The Scottish Trials, which start and end at Glasgow, and in the course of a four-days' tour embrace some

Lafayette

LADY JULIET DUFF AND MR. DUFF
On their Napier touring car.

Digitized by Google

of the finest and also some of the ugliest scenery in Scotland, commence on May 10. Saturday, May 20, is fixed for the Motor Union meeting at Nottingham, which will include a visit to Welbeck, by invitation of the Duke of Portland. The following Saturday, May 27, will witness a number of hill-climbing competitions in various parts of the country, including the Derby Automobile Club's meeting at Leicester, and the ascent of the famous Sunrising Hill under the organisation of the Midland Club.

On Monday, May 29, the Isle of Man contests commence with the weighing-in of the competing cars and motor-cycles. The Eliminating Trials for the Gordon Bennett Race will take place on the following day, Wednesday being reserved for the Motor Cup Race and the Selection Trials for the International Race for motor-cycles. The first of the coast-town race-meetings is at Bexhill on June 3. A week later, on Saturday, June 10, is the South Harting Hill Climb, confined to members of the Automobile Club. The only other important event in June is the French Selection Trials, which are fixed for the 16th. July will be a very busy month in the automobile world. The motor-boats Reliability Trials commence on Monday, July 3, the actual running days being the Tuesday and Wednesday following. The latter is also the date of the great race of the year, the Gordon Bennett Cup. The Calais to Dover Race will take place on July 15, and on the following Wednesday, July 19, the Brighton Meeting commences, and lasts till the end of the week. This event promises to be a great success, as the whole length of the Madeira Road is being specially laid with tarmac, and should give an excellent track. The Blackpool Meeting is fixed for July 27—29, and should also witness good sport, as the famous parade is nearly two miles in length, and has an excellent surface. Other important events, later in the year, are the Circuit of the Ardennes on August 6 and 7, the International Cup for motor-boats, August 12, the Van Trials, August 19, the Tourist Trophy in the Isle of Man, September 14, and the Reliability Trials of the Automobile Club, September 18 to October 4. The entries for the Tourist Trophy now number fifty-two, and the success of the event is therefore assured. The foreign entries are sufficiently numerous and representative in character to make the victory of a British car of immense value to the home industry

RADIATOR.

Bassano.

MISS VICTORIA GODWIN

The famous lady motor expert, with her 30—40-h.p. Daimler motor-car.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

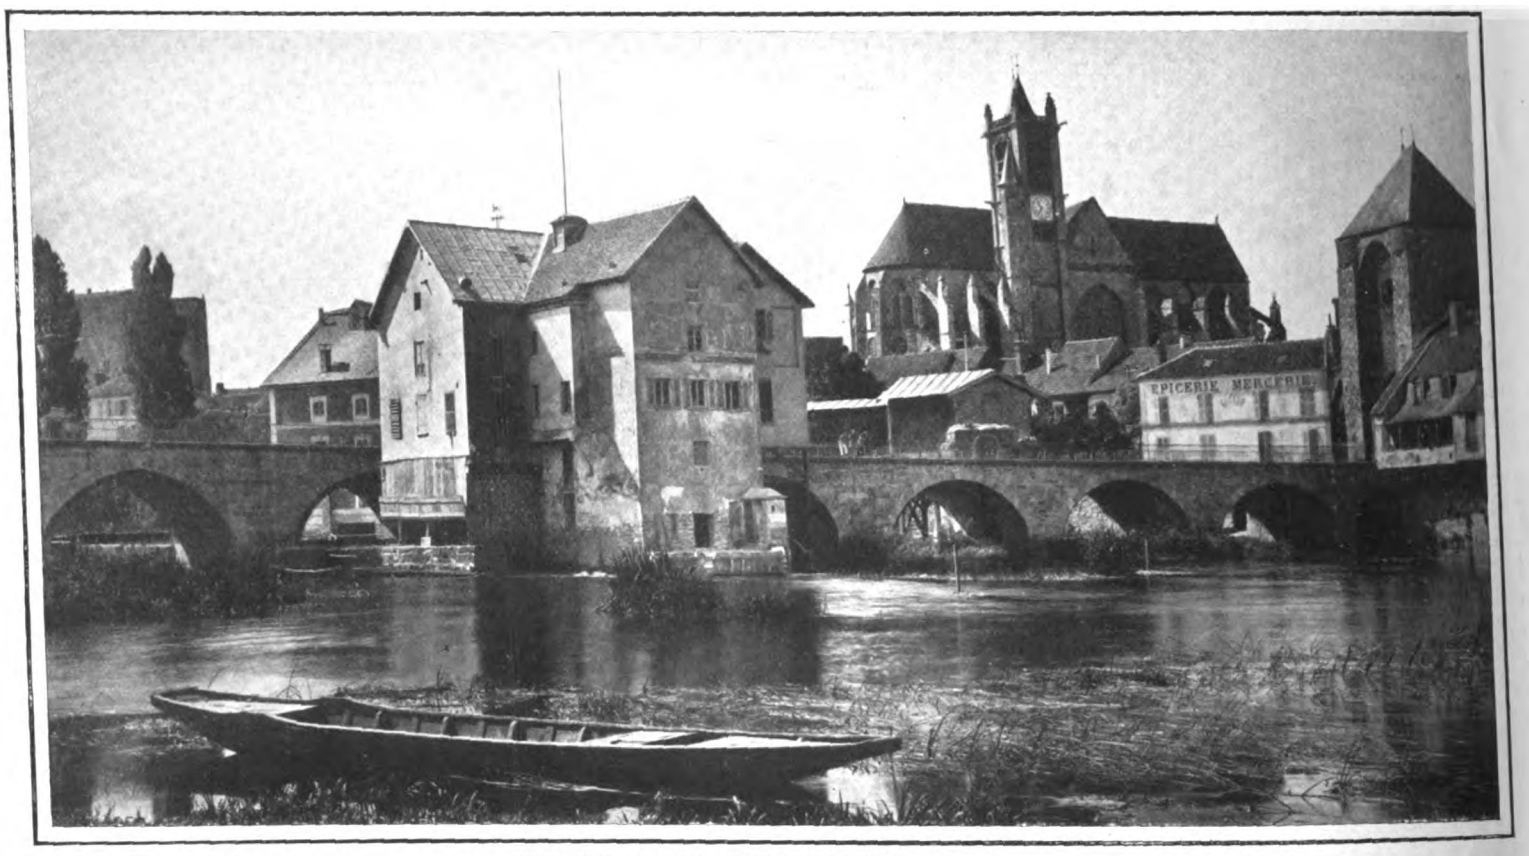
THE millionaire on his latest motor who takes his wife where fashion calls, who spends his days in the dust and his evenings in the most luxurious of up-to-date hotels, is the same all over the world, the same in all countries. And the hotels are identical. The foreign waiters, Swiss or German, the winter garden, the billiard-room, the musicians in the hall, everything has the same character, on the mountain, by the sea, in the valley. But the Parisian of the middle classes, the man who takes his few days at Easter or Whitsuntide, is a special study. He is interesting to watch as the time approaches for his holiday. He starts by studying the illustrated catalogues that pour into every respectable home at the change of the seasons; he compares prices and shapes of the ready-made clothes and caps that each important magasin de nouveautés sends forth. In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to a cycling suit.

To this class of Parisian a Norfolk jacket and leggings are as much an indication of spring as the cowslips in the woods, and within an hour's run from the city they are almost as plentiful. Hundreds arrive at the country hotels on the borders of the Fontainebleau forest. They come, as a rule, in couples, a male and a female; sometimes they bring a child. But for one, two, or three, the luggage is invariably unimportant. A collar, a piece of soap, the ordinary night apparel, a brush and comb, and the family tooth-brushes, are thrown into a handbag fastened to one of the bicycles, and Monsieur, Madame, and Bébé are prepared to spend a merry time, lasting sometimes two, sometimes three, days. In this part of the country there are no palatial buildings known as first-class hotels. They have no room for them, as the Americans say. The best accommodation is to be found at a roadside inn, a house of undoubted respectability, as the proprietress tells you as she politely refuses hospitality to a painted lady.

Do you know Moret-on-the-Loing? A little village surrounded by forest, river, and plain; a village with historical associations, old gates, a dungeon, cobbled ways, and white houses, a beautiful church of the twelfth century, and the most picturesque of old women washing linen by the ramparts. A spot that Sisley painted, and that artists of all nationalities delight in. Here I chanced to meet the Parisian on his Easter holiday. The Hotel du Cheval Noir, as the little inn is called, is scrupulously clean, without and within; the blue-painted tables on the path, behind a row of laurel bushes, invite you to rest and "consume"; the chef, in white cap and apron, towering above a basket of freshly-culled asparagus and a small mountain of eggshells, hints at an appetising luncheon, and small wonder if the attractions prove great to the weary cyclist. At twelve o'clock the bell rings, and the guests make for the dining-room. A spin through the forest in the morning, along the river in the afternoon, with the blossoming cherry trees raising their snowy heads above the white-walled gardens, and a well-prepared meal after each, are the features of the holiday. They feed you well at the sign of the Black Horse. An egg in a dainty pan, a dish of veal in a rich brown sauce, mauve-tipped asparagus, roasted chicken and a lettuce salad, cream cheese and little cakes, are brought in, one after the other, by a rosy-cheeked maid, handed round, and disappear.

And now let us look at the people as they watch the dish in its course. They have all bowed as they came in, but bowing does not constitute a desire for conversation. Beyond the request to pass the bread or cruet nobody addresses his neighbour. Here are the chief clerks of the branch establishment of a big city bank—they live at Moret and are regular boarders—they make the conversation for the table, give the tit-bits from the morning papers, and talk of "running up to see Duse." A bald-headed professor and his son, and various couples. Married or single? Nobody knows, but nobody believes they are married. I was almost going to say nobody cares, but I was forgetting a respectable middle-class English family, who, father, mother, son, and daughter, looked as if they would have liked a police regulation forcing the display of marriage certificates. All the women were quietly dressed, they behaved in the accepted ladylike fashion: but there were two about whom there was no deception, a schoolboy could not have been mistaken. One giggled at every word she said, and rolled her handkerchief in a ball over her mouth and laughed, while her companion looked as sober as the proverbial judge; the other might have passed unobserved if her friend had not told her his family history loud enough to be heard by everybody. In one respect, however, men and women at these tables d'hôte behave alike. They all wipe their glass, plate, and fork with their table napkin, and then tuck one corner of the said napkin into their collar. Then the business of the day begins. They eat fairly well, and only occasionally do you see someone serve himself to asparagus with his fingers, or put his knife in his mouth; the majority know better. But they all clean their plates with a piece of bread; they never leave a drop of gravy—it is too good to be wasted. And as in this class of hotel the knives and forks are not changed during the courses, it is well to notice how the habitué manages to get the taste of the last dish off the blade and prongs. We may smile at this custom of one man one knife and fork, but when we consider it calmly, why should we require fresh cutlery for the different dishes? From the point of view of cleanliness we are better off to keep our knives and forks than have them washed and returned in the so-called civilised fashion. I begin to think I would rather wipe my fork on a piece of bread than have it dipped in a bucket of greasy water and dried on the common cloth, as must occur oftener than we know.

FRANCES KEYZER.



THE OLD CHURCH AND MILL AT MORET-SUR-LOING.

The quaint little village, with its historical associations, old gates, and cobbled ways, is a favourite Easter resort of the Parisian middle-class holiday-maker.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

MLLE. MITZY DALTI

Who is now appearing at the Théâtre Français. She is a pupil of M. Worms and Mme. Favart, and made her début at the Ambigu Theatre in "Les Deux Gosses." Subsequently she appeared at the Théâtre de l'Œuvre and at the Odéon, where she created a number of parts, notably Flora in "Les Truands," and La Baronne in "Point de Lendemain."

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

MUCH has been heard during the last few years about the expense attendant upon yachting, and the decline of certain branches of the sport has been attributed thereto. Within the past month or so the matter has come forward again prominently, but in a form which, it may be hoped, will tend to dispel certain exaggerated notions of the expenditure one must be prepared to face in taking up the sport.

The prominence which the question has recently assumed would be sufficient explanation, if any were needed, for referring to it in these columns, apart from the fact that I have often had a direct question put to me upon the subject.

I have always failed to understand why yachting should have been selected as the one sport at which to hurl indiscriminately the charge of excessive expense. Like every other pastime, it is a luxury, and as such one must expect it to be to a certain degree costly; but the stress that has been laid upon the matter of expense has undoubtedly acted in a great measure as a deterrent with many who might otherwise have been inclined to take it up. This is, to say the least, unfortunate, as there are possibly many who, without the opportunity of verifying statements which they may have heard or read, determine off-hand that the expense is prohibitory, and so perhaps, instead of developing into enthusiastic sailors, have turned to other pastimes.

Those having a long acquaintance with the sport know full well how difficult it is to give any estimate of what the outlay for a season should be. The yearly bills of two owners of vessels similar in dimensions will differ widely, so much depending upon the individual tastes or requirements. This refers more particularly to cruising. In any racing class it is possible to make a fairly accurate estimate of expenditure, liable, of course, to be exceeded in the event of any serious accident happening during the season's racing. Then, so far as sailing craft are concerned, racers are admittedly and necessarily the most costly. There is, however, no reason why a man who has a liking for sailing should be prevented from doing so because he cannot afford a racer. Many a good horseman indulges in his favourite pastime without ever contemplating the ownership of a race-horse. In like manner it is possible to obtain the fullest enjoyment out of a season's sailing at a much less cost than is necessary to keep going a racing craft in any of the classes.

The cry of expense followed the great boom which the sport enjoyed when Y.R.A. classes were adopted for local racing. Let us take, for example, the Solent. Until about twenty years ago the racing in that district was taken part in by vessels differing in type and dimensions. In many instances the boats were sailed for several seasons by the same owners, who were content to try the effect of some trifling alterations during the winter, with the object of improving the speed of the craft for the following summer's racing. Oftentimes owners took an active part in fitting out their little craft, which were sailed without the assistance of paid hands. With the advent of the classes, however, a change soon came over the scene. The actual racing undoubtedly improved, as boats in the various classes were sailing upon even terms, and everyone admits that what is understood as pure class racing is the highest form of the sport. Wealthy owners were attracted by the sport thus offered in these small classes; paid crews became the rule, new boats were built every year, but the enthusiast of moderate means was driven out of the racing. The types of boats built for several seasons were useless for any other purpose after their racing career had finished; hence, a man of small means, unable to indulge in racing, found considerable difficulty in picking up old vessels which could be turned to account as cruisers.

Matters have now considerably improved. Under the existing rating rule, vessels of a more healthy type are produced—boats which make useful cruisers after their first youth is past.

The impression in regard to excessive expense still appears to exist, however, in many quarters. This may be due, perhaps, in a great measure to the fact that nearly all that finds its way into newspapers relative to yachting, touches upon the racing side only, and the uninitiated who may not have friends actively engaging in the pastime, have but little opportunity of learning much about its other branches. In such cases it is not to be wondered at if a young aspirant to the sport hesitates about adopting a pastime which has come to be regarded as a sport for millionaires.

It should not, however, be very difficult to dispel these notions. A man of moderate means, and with sufficient time at his disposal, should be able to indulge his taste, if he has any, for sailing. It is essential, however, that he should have some idea of the type and size of craft he requires before purchasing, as yachts are no exception to that rule wherein there is a considerable difference between the buying and selling prices.

Having determined upon a type of craft, an absolute novice cannot go far wrong in making enquiries at any one of the many yards of repute. The assistance of a friend is, of course, always helpful. It is preferable to engage a skipper through the yard at which the purchase is effected. If a craft has been carefully selected, and the owner sets himself to acquire a thorough knowledge of his boat, he will probably find that his outlay will fall considerably short of some of the estimates he may have heard hazarded by those with an imperfect knowledge of yachting.

A novice, desirous of taking upon himself the cares of ownership, is often undecided upon the size of craft to begin with. Let it be borne in mind that if one is anxious to become a practical yachtsman the best experience is obtained in the smaller craft. In the earlier days of ownership the small vessels have many obvious advantages, not the least of which is that, if they have been well kept up, they are more easily disposed of when the owner aspires to a larger yacht.

CORINTHIAN.

Debenham, Ryde.

SEAWEED

An 18-ft. linear rater, built for Captain E. T. Dixon. She sailed regularly in her class in the Solent last season, when this and the 24-ft. class were the only two Y.R.A. classes of the season.

Digitized by Google

The Royal Academy, 1905.

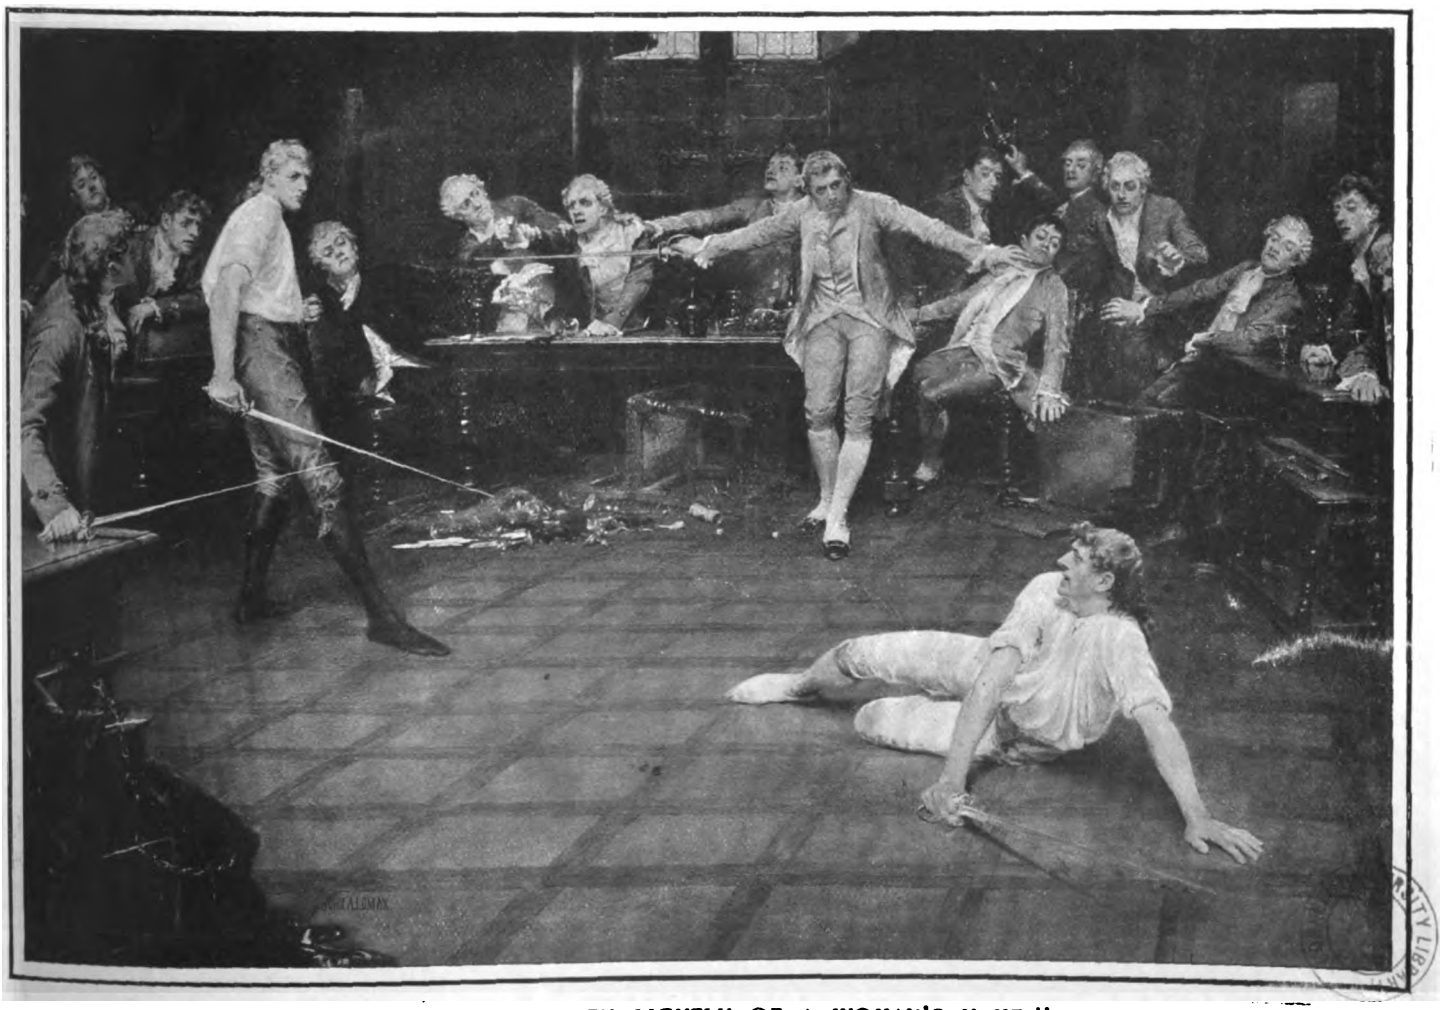
"ADOPTED."

By WALTER HUNT.

(Copyright reserved.)



"FOR HE HAD SPOKEN LIGHTLY OF A WOMAN'S NAME."

By J. A. LOMAX.

Digitized by Google

The Royal Academy, 1905.

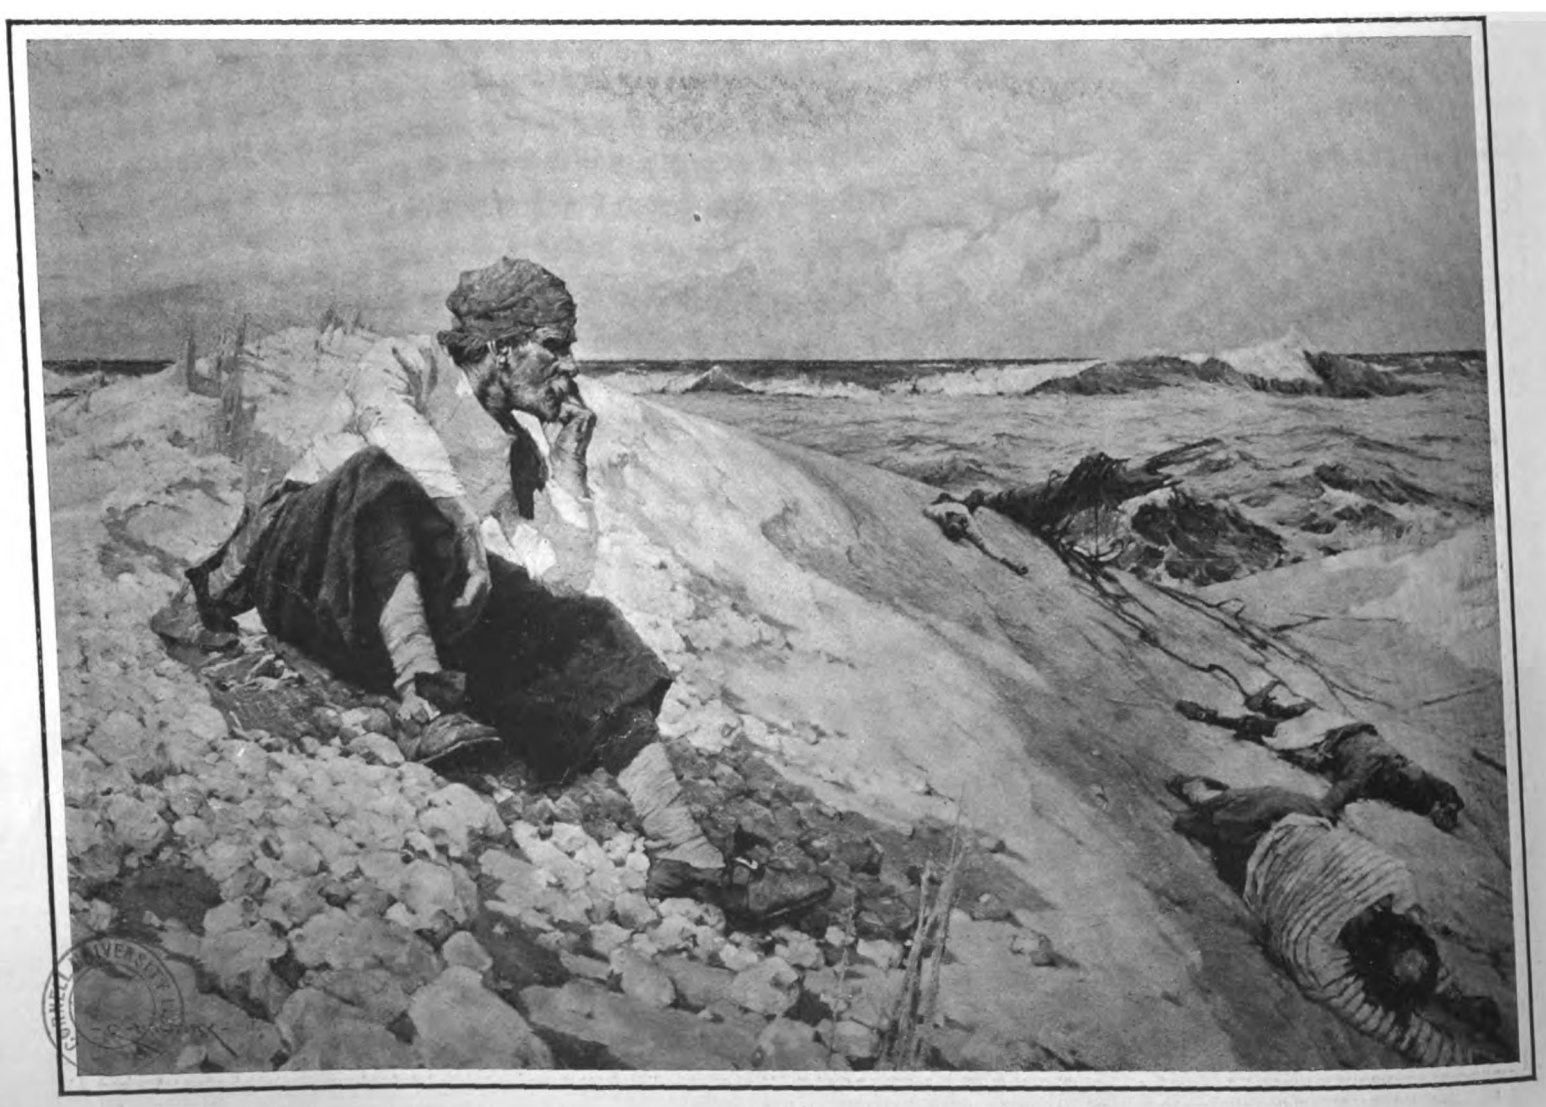
"THE FARM GATE."
By H. W. B. DAVIS, R.A.



"ALONE."
By C. M. PADDAY.

Digitized by Google

Some Pictures of the Year.

"TRAFALGAR."
By W. L. WYLLIE, A.R.A.
(By permission of the Art Union of London.)

"TENERIFFE."
By T. SOMERSCALES.

Digitized by Google

Royal Academy Pictures.

"THE EVENING HOUR."
By B. W. LEADER, R.A.

"A FOUNDLING."
By E. BLAIR LEIGHTON.

"UNE MÉSALLIANCE."
By A. C. COOKE.

Digitized by Google

More Green-room Gossips.

XXIII.—WITH MR. DENIS O'SULLIVAN.

"Of the Stage Irishman."

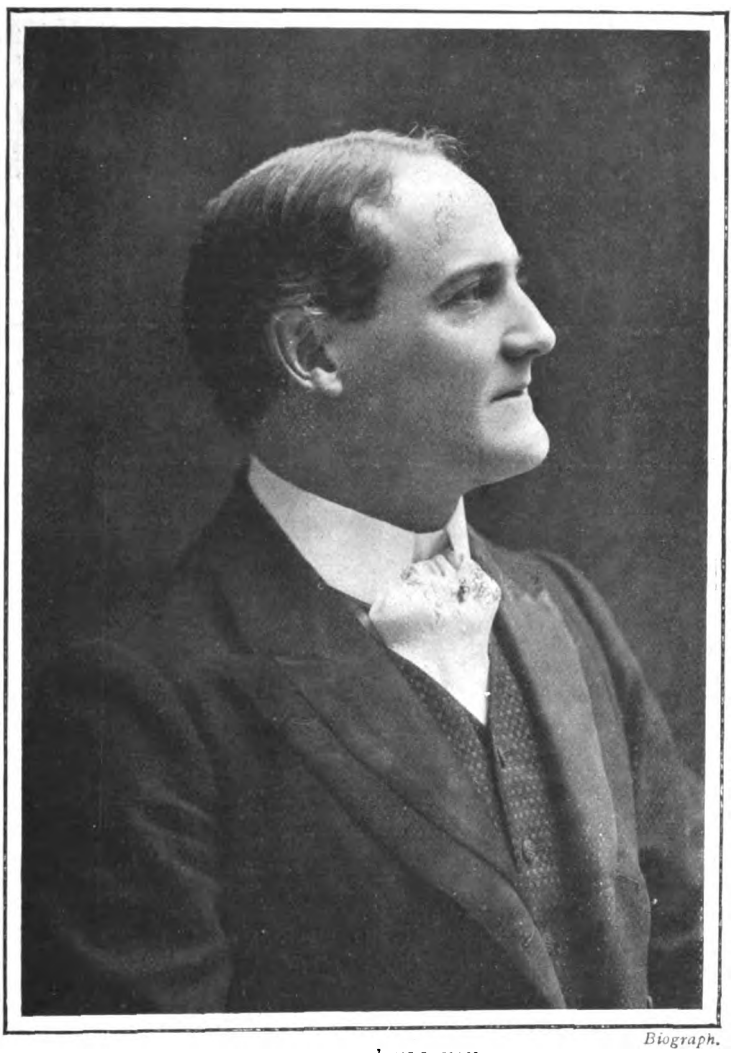
WE are hearing a great deal about Ireland and the Irish to-day, and even Smith minor has been joining in the discussion, remarking in a recent essay that "the conquest of Ireland was begun in 1170, and is still going on." "The Gaelic language in Ireland" is a frequent headline in the newspapers, and all aspects of the subject have been submitted to the consideration of experts. Even the question of the Irishman on the stage has not escaped notice, and the connection of Mr. Denis O'Sullivan with some notable productions of Irish pieces, and as an exponent of some famous Irish parts, suggested to me the possibility of an interview with him on the question.

When I first broached the subject he shook his head rather doubtfully.

"It is a subject on which I have very decided views," he said, "and if once I get talking about it, you will find it difficult to stop me. Like the revivalists, I have the courage of my—aberrations let us call them, and I feel very strongly about it. I am not a real Irishman. My father and mother both came from near Cork, but I was born in San Francisco, and spent the greater part of my youth in America, so that perhaps I ought to view the problem dispassionately. But, to be quite frank with you, I do not. The general type of stage Irishman disgusts me. He is no more a type or a symbol than is the fat man with red cheeks, a large pipe, and a Hebraic accent a type of the German nation. But I do not think anyone is called upon openly to resent this kind of thing. It is beneath contempt, and to start an active campaign would be to turn one's deeper feelings into ridicule. It is too absurd—no one takes it seriously; it can be no real discredit, and, therefore, it is best ignored. This sort of stage Irishman is rapidly falling into contempt, and only needs to be let severely alone to pass almost entirely into oblivion.



Biograph.

MR. DENIS O'SULLIVAN

Who is at present touring with Mr. C. E. Hamilton's Company in the pretty Irish comic opera, "Peggy Machree."

"But, on the contrary, I do not range myself with those who consider it derogatory to the Irish nation for a representative of the race to appear on the stage in anything but a frock-coat and a top-hat, and to speak with an Oxford accent, very slightly tinged with brogue. They quite forget that the most picturesque part of Ireland is its peasant life, is the dégagé costume, the frank buoyancy of disposition, the outspokenness and delicious inconsistency.

"It was in 'Shamus O'Brien' that I first put my knowledge of, and sympathy with, Irish life to a practical use. I did not believe there was money in it; I did it for the love of the thing, because, in a word, I was possessed by those aberrations, as I called them just now. For nearly a year I played Shamus, from London to San Francisco, and I think I may safely say the play never gave offence to any Irishman, even those of the most fervid and intolerant ideals. It was a long cry back to Boucicault and his Irish plays, Shamus was something new, and it was something pleasing. It appealed to all sorts of people, as one little adventure I had shows. I drove up to the theatre one night in a cab (it was the old Opera Comique), and when I proffered his fare, the driver looked at me and said, 'Don't you play Shamus O'Brien?' 'I do,' I replied. 'Then I won't take a penny. It's pleased I am to drive you.' 'Then you'll take a drink, instead,' said I, and he, like Barkis, being quite willing, we adjourned to the little tavern in Wych Street, and over a glass pledged the health of the Irish drama."

"I suppose you are an admirer of the Irish National Theatre?"

"A fervent admirer. The performances I saw a little while back suggested more robust vitality than any phase of the drama I have seen for some time past. More intense, and more true to life than Ibsen, and more convincing by the very reason of the naïveté of the actors, who were not fresh from a school of acting, and who played as if they felt interested in what they were doing, and not as if they had learnt how to make use of all the little tricks and subterfuges of the trade. There was a great Irish statesman who once said, 'You shall not laugh at us, nor with us, nor laugh at all until we have achieved what we want.' From his point of view no doubt that was all right, but the most serious statesman, the most idealistic reformer, cannot subdue the sportiveness, if I may call it so, of the Irishman. Half consciously he will perpetrate bulls to hear people laugh, whatever place he may be in he will enliven, whatever comes under his eye he will treat gaily, while all the time he is carefully, ever-studiously, noticing the salient points. The Irishman, despite his lightness of heart and his seeming inconsequence, is of a very observing nature, and for that very reason it seems to me the Irishman should make a good dramatist. But these characteristics were brought out by the actors whom I saw at the performances by the Irish National Theatre, and they were true pictures of Irishmen.

"By the way, people have told me that my portraiture of the Irish fiddler in 'Peggy Machree' is exaggerated. As a matter of fact, it is an exact copy of the actions and manners of an old man with whom I was once in friendly rivalry at a musical competition. I was one of the adjudicators, and in the violin-playing contest there was only one competitor who dared to face the judges' bench. I suppose we looked too much like magistrates to please the others, who were mostly country fiddlers, and who had doubtless had experience of local J.P.'s. Anyway, only this one man came up to the scratch, and to make a bit of a fight for him, I was prevailed upon to take a fiddle and play against him. He played first, and I followed, copying his manner, his tune, his jerk of the bow, everything. One old Irish jig after another we played, until at last, worn out with laughing, the other judges stopped the contest, and awarded him the prize, disqualifying me for some little irregularity or other. I think it was that I hadn't paid the entrance fee! But it is that old man that I still copy, as I did seven or eight years ago, and the copy is founded on one of the best types of country fiddlers I know."

In reply to a last question, Mr. O'Sullivan confessed that he was a student of Erse.

"But quite a beginner; I have to sit in a class with little boys of ten and twelve, and unfortunately it is only occasionally that I am able to attend. I am learning for two reasons: first, for my own satisfaction, and to get a bare knowledge of the language for use in my researches after old Irish folk-songs, and, secondly, to give a moral impetus to the movement, be it said humbly!"

I came away from the interview feeling refreshed and invigorated. A chat with a man like Mr. O'Sullivan is one of those pleasures of life which one would wish to prolong indefinitely, for he has something to say, and knows how to say it, which is more than some members of his profession do. F. E. R.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

IT is impossible to exaggerate the significance of the preparations for according the right kind of welcome to the French Fleet. Apart, too, from the numerous political considerations more directly involved, the sentimental and professional aspects of this magnificent example of International hospitality will repay the closest study. Such questions cannot be dealt with at any length in the brief space here available, but it seems desirable to emphasise in these notes the sound basis of genuine good feeling and solid mutual respect which underlies the occasional intercourse of British with French sailors, and which certainly does much to promote real friendliness between the officers of the two great Navies in question. Perhaps it is not too much to say that much of this is due to the marked exhibition on both sides of those "sea manners" which in themselves have a powerful binding influence, and the absence of which on more than one historical occasion has had unfortunate results. The right sort of gallant enemies, again, often make the best of friends, and, with so many causes of diplomatic friction removed, and so many fresh reasons for smooth co-operation continually arising, it is as probable as it is desirable that these foregatherings of the British and French Fleets will herald quite a new departure in the relations between the neighbours on either side of the "Silver Streak."

INCIDENTALLY it is an interesting historical fact that the war in the Far East should have brought the British and French Navies if anything into more friendly touch, instead of accentuating points of difference. The extraordinary friendliness and tact with which Admiral Fournier presided over the North Sea Enquiry will never be forgotten on this side of the Channel, and most Frenchmen will acknowledge the discretion and fairness with which British Naval officers have discussed, even informally, the very difficult position of France in regard to Russian ideas of a convenient neutrality. To sum up the whole position in a few words, the world has been, and is still being, treated to an exhibition of "sea manners" on the very largest scale, and all the more impressive because the demonstrators belong to Fleets which fought and foregathered and fought again centuries before some of the most pushing of modern Navies were born or thought of.

IN many circles outside the Navy itself the new issue of "Brassey's Naval Annual," which should be generally in evidence by the time these notes appear, will be attentively studied. When Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge relinquished the China Command, we pointed out how advantageous it was for the country to have such men occasionally at liberty to speak and write freely on Naval matters, and already that observation has been clearly justified by Sir Cyprian Bridge's signed letters to The Times and other valuable expressions of opinion. But his article on the war and its lessons is on another plane altogether, and will surely rank as one of the most important contributions made to Naval literature for many a long day.

Debenham.

THE OFFICERS AND MASTERS AT OSBORNE COLLEGE.

From a photograph taken just prior to the breaking up for the Easter holiday at the Royal Naval College, Osborne.

THE Canadian Government is very fortunate in having secured the services of Major-General P. H. N. Lake, C.B., as Chief of the Staff of the Canadian Militia. It may be remarked that General Lake, apart from his having previously served temporarily as Quartermaster-General of the Force to which he is returning in a still more important capacity, has a family connection with the Dominion, his father, the late Colonel P. G. B. Lake, having belonged to the old 100th, or Prince of Wales's Royal Canadians, now the 1st P.W.O. Leinster Regiment. General Lake himself is an old Uppingham boy, and served regimentally in the old 59th. He has the Afghan War and Suakin, 1885, to his credit, and graduated with honours at the Staff College. He has held several high Staff appointments with much credit, and will be emphatically the right man in the right place in Canada, where military progress is now being made at such a rapid rate, that men of great capacity and experience are urgently required to keep it in the right grooves.

RARELY, if ever, has any army been so excellently represented by Military Attachés in an "outside war" as ours has been in the Far East. The two Attachés last appointed both belong to the Scientific Corps, and are both men of experience and distinction. Especially is this the case with Colonel Bannatine-Allason, C.B., R.A., and formerly A.A.G. under the Director of Personal Services in the Adjutant-General's Department. Colonel Bannatine-Allason has served in Afghanistan, the Soudan, and in South Africa, and in all three campaigns he has earned a mention in despatches. The other recently-appointed Attaché with the Japanese forces in Manchuria is Major Fowke, who, himself a Sapper, bears a name which the Fowke Medal invests with special interest for the Royal Engineers. He served in the defence of Ladysmith, and was mentioned in Sir George White's despatches, subsequently receiving a brevet-majority. These appointments scarcely seem to indicate any confidence on the part of the War Office in the early conclusion of peace, and by some will be regarded as the most significant pointer in an opposite direction which we have had up to the present.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL E. P. LEACH, V.C., C.B., R.E., who has just relinquished the command of the Belfast District, and been given promotion from Major-General by selection, must be a very uncommon instance of a General Officer of Royal Engineers who, while holding that rank, has been contemporary with his father, the latter being a retired colonel of the same corps. Sir George Leach was in the Ordnance Survey in the fifties, and subsequently entered the Civil Service, from which he retired in 1892. General Edward Pemberton Leach entered the Royal Engineers in 1866, and has seen a quantity of service, including the Afghan War, in which he won his Victoria Cross, and the Soudan Expedition of 1885, for which he was given the C.B. His brother officer, the late Sir Gerald Graham, spoke highly of the very important services rendered by Captain and Brevet-Colonel Leach, who, with other R.E. officers, worked under the command of Colonel, afterwards Sir James, Bevan Edwards in the Suakin operations.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

MISS IDA RENÉ

The popular and versatile music-hall artiste, who has recently been appearing with considerable success in her musical recitations at the Palace, Pavilion, Oxford, and other variety theatres.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Messrs. Johnston and Hoffmann, 31, Devonshire Street, Portland Place, W.)

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

"THERE is one county in which human springs are braced up better than in any other, and that is Cornwall. There is a charm in the Cornish Coast which belongs to no other coast in the world. The air you breathe has never been vitiated by human beings since it left the Yankees; and the Atlantic is wide enough to have filtered it since then. The whole seaboard is a succession of lofty cliffs and of sandy coves, known as porths, with a cosy little inn in almost every one, where one can feed and sleep at prices ludicrously small. From the green and scarlet of the serpentine at the Lizard, round by the quaint granite promontories of the 'West Country,' and thence to the magnificent group of slate cliffs, stretching from Newquay to Trevose Head, and thence again up to Hartland Point, there is not a bluff that is not a study for form and colour." Thus wrote Dean Alford, whose knowledge of Cornish matters is incontestable.

Like its next-door neighbour, Devonshire, Cornwall is an ideal spot in which to spend a summer holiday. The coast, particularly on the north side facing the Atlantic, simply abounds in quiet out-of-the-way retreats, most of which can now be easily reached within six or seven hours from town by the South Western system. As a glance at the map will show, the shape of the county, taken together with that of Devonshire, very closely resembles the form of a foot, the instep of which, extending from Bude to Padstow, takes in Boscastle, Tintagel, Port Isaac, and innumerable and quaint little villages inland.

Bude itself is a delightful spot to sojourn at, and it is only within quite recent years that the South Western Company have completed the extension of their line from Halwell. The coast scenery is particularly fine, the tall, rugged, variegated cliffs jutting far out to sea. The air of Bude has the reputation of being the most bracing on the Cornish Coast, a claim that is no doubt justified by the fact that a clear stretch of 3,000 miles of ocean separates it from the nearest point of land. The chief attractions are the golf links of eighteen holes, belonging to the Bude and North Cornwall Golf Club, acknowledged to be the best in the West of England. The links, which include a nine-hole ladies' course, occupy a large portion of the cliff down on Summerlease, on the north side of the town. By payment of a small subscription fee visitors can become temporary members. Sea bathing and fresh-water fishing are also largely indulged in. There is a pretty little sandy bay where ladies and children can bathe in perfect safety. Tamar Lake, which has for many years been stocked with Loch Leven trout and carefully preserved, has lately been thrown open to the public, and a limited number of tickets are available for visitors to the district. The hotel accommodation, however, is very limited. The old Falcon offers homelike and comfortable accommodation, while there are scores of houses which let apartments. It is always advisable to book one's rooms well in advance, for the town fills rapidly during the summer months.

Bude will be found as convenient a centre as any for coaching and train excursions to the surrounding country. It is situated just mid way between Clovelly and Boscastle and Tintagel. Excursions may also be made by coach to Hartland, the Coombe Valley, Widemouth Bay, Launceston, Kilkhampton, etc. Those who make the excursion to Boscastle and Tintagel from Bude will probably find it quicker to take the coach. By train the route is rather roundabout, although one is afforded an opportunity of visiting the interesting old town of Launceston, with its fine old ruined castle. Boscastle is almost as celebrated in its way as Clovelly in Devonshire. The quaint little harbour, flanked by gigantic cliffs of slate, is a sight well worth seeing. The heights on either side may be climbed by means of a steep footpath. Inland there is the little Minster church, the Valency Valley, and the picturesque scenery of St. Knighton's Kieve flowing through a glen, aptly called the Rocky Valley. Quite close to the sea is the Wellington Hotel, which can be highly recommended. Tintagel, also reached by coach from Bude or Camelford, affords a striking example of the wild romantic coast scenery for which the Duchy is famous. Tintagel is a spot of national interest, for

Photochrom.

TINTAGEL AND KING ARTHUR'S CASTLE.

A typical view of the rugged scenery of the Cornish Coast. The ruin on the right of the picture is that of the castle associated with the legends of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table.

Digitized by Google

round it centre the legends of King Arthur and the gallant Knights of the Round Table. King Arthur's land, with those grey old ruins perched on a headland 300-ft. above the sea, is enchanted ground. The action of the sea has made the headland almost an island. The ascent to the castle can easily be made, a series of stone steps having been roughly hewn out of the solid rock. From the summit we get a splendid view of the wild rugged coast-line of steep rocks broken every now and again by small bays.

Padstow is another favourite haunt of the holiday-maker on the north coast of Cornwall. A writer who knew the place many years ago points to a remarkable change which has taken place in the front. The approaches to the quays have been raised, the old market-place with its shambles is a thing of the past, and the butchers no longer are "driven from their stalls by the tide while they see their chopping-blocks floating about, the sport of the waves." The little town is of great age, claiming as its founder St. Patrick. Trevose Head, 243-ft. high, situated about six miles along the cliffs, is one of the highest cliffs in the neighbourhood.

Padstow is very centrally situated, and a first-rate excursion centre. Tintagel and Boscastle can be reached by train, while a cross-country drive takes us to Bedruthan Steps. Golf is played a good deal in the neighbourhood. The links are situated at Rock, reached by crossing to the other side of the river.

Photochrom.

IN THE LAND OF TRE, POL, AND PEN.

A view of the Cornish capital from St. Stephen's Hill. The town of Launceston, consisting as it does of practically one long steep street, is very picturesquely situated on the side of Dunneheved Hill. The fine old ruin which crowns the hill is Launceston Castle, where George Fox, the founder of the Society of Friends, was imprisoned in 1656 for distributing religious publications in Cornwall.

Digitized by Google

Minstrels and Rondeaux.

BY JOHN BLOUNDELLE-BURTON.

IT is conceded that Provence was the home, the nest, so to speak, of the original ballad-mongers, among whom may be classed the singers of madrigals, rondeaux, chansons de gestes, and roundelays, as well as the jongleurs and all the tribes of wandering singers, male and female. What is, however, not so clear is the manner in which the efforts of these nomads gradually became imitated by a higher, a better-clad, a better-born, and, in several cases, a royal class, while still retaining amongst its members some of the wastrels and scum of the lower classes, of whom Villon ruffler, brawler, fighter in taverns, thief (he was sentenced to be hanged for robbing a church), and, withal, one of the sweetest of singers, stands forth as a conspicuous example.

To dispose at once, however, of those who, from about the time of the Norman Conquest of England, figured amongst the royal singers, William, Duke of Guienne, gave forth much poetry àpropos of the disasters that attended his expedition to the Holy Land. Eleanor of Guienne (Aquitaine), and the divorced wife of Louis VII. of France, was herself a composer of love songs, rondeaux, and ballads (if her lover, the minstrel Bertrand de Ventadour, did not write all, or part, of them), and this in spite of the fact that she had grown old and fat, was the mother of ten children, and so vain that she was fond of arraying herself as a page. To her, in this capacity, succeeded her eldest surviving son by Henry II. of England, Richard Cœur de Lion, who, had he been in truth the romantic hero it pleased Sir Walter Scott to portray him, would have been the very pearl and flower of knightly troubadours. As, however, he was little better, if any, than an immoral, savage aggressor, and, as Dr. Stubbs, Bishop of Oxford, properly described him, "a bad son, a bad husband, and a bad King," the poet's crown was but ill-fitted to his brows.

NINON DE L'ENCLOS.
From the rare engraving by Allais, after the painting by McColin.

Passing to the professional singers and the jongleurs, who lived by their sweet lays, this Bertrand de Ventadour stands forth early in the category, since, although he was no starving minstrel—shivering under hedgerows, sleeping in the garths of monasteries, sometimes well fed when happening on wedding festivities, the homecomings of soldiers from the wars, or the births of heirs to titles and lands, and sometimes stealing a fowl or an egg from a lonely farmyard—he was little better. His very name was borrowed from the Vicomte de Ventadour who had succoured him, and to whose wife he instantly made love by way of return; after which, fleeing from the outraged nobleman, he found refuge in the arms of the Queen of England and Duchess of Aquitaine. By this time Eleanor had become coarse and more than forty, and, perhaps, the poetic afflatus, if she ever possessed it, had now deserted her. It was, consequently, Ventadour's part to sing of her youth and beauty and grace, and to feed high in return.

I turn now to those singers of rondeaux of whose productions we have some specimens, and give as a curiosity a portion of a rondeau by Hugues de Saint-Maard, Vicomte de Blosseville, who was indeed a wandering singer, since he of his own free will accompanied Charles, Duc d'Orlèans, into captivity in England. The words of this rondeau are addressed either to Valentine de Milan, mother of the Duke, or Marguerite, Queen of Scotland. The curiosity is the way he makes his words count by writing "lame" (a blade) to rhyme with aime (love) and âme (soul), whereby we who come long after him discover the mediæval pronunciation, l'M being undoubtedly pronounced to rhyme as is here suggested. Beyond this the sentiment is beautiful, and the lilt of the words exquisite:

" Celle pour qui je porte l'M
Je vous asseure que je l'ame
Tant fort qu'a peu que n'en desvye
Ne jamais d'aultre amer envye
N'auray, ne que de rendre l'ame.

. . . . . .

Je l'ay choysie pour ma dame
Dont je ne crains reprouche d'ame
Car de tous biens est assouvye
Celle pour qui je porte l'M."

If we grant that which is not truly the case, that a rondeau is so-called because of the repetition (le rond), then Blosseville, Marot, Martin Le Franc, and Villon are the greatest masters of it in the past, and Voiture in days nearer to our own. But such is not the meaning of the word. The song was originally an accompaniment to a dance, then termed Ronde and Rondel—a thing to which the wandering minstrels would undoubtedly hasten as being persons whose services would be required and well rewarded: the very names serve to show its origin. Doubtless, however, the music suitable to dances more or less grave and stately struck the earlier singers as strains to which soft, dreamy words, words of love, of sorrow, of hopelessness and death might be fittingly suited. In our own days the music of the waltz is used for the same purpose.

Martin Le Franc was not only one of the sweetest singers of his time, but, in his wandering habits, fitly accorded with all actions that have been supposed to be the habits of the minstrels, as well as known to be. He was born at Aumale, he studied in Paris, he wandered into Savoy, followed Pope Felix V. (Duke Amadeus of Savoy, Anti-Pope) to Lausanne, where he became a prevost of the cathedral, and died at Susa. Here is a rondeau by him, one of the rare ones that he wrote amongst many other pieces. The ideas were new when he uttered them, they have since been browsed on by hundreds. In this, as all the early rondeaux, no accents are used, as is visible in the MSS. at the Bibliothèque Nationale.

" Le jour m'est nuit,
Joye me nuit,
Repos ne me sont que labours
Brief j'embrace tout le rebours
De ce qu'aux aultres plaist et duit.
Espoir me fuit,
Deuil me conduit,
Je despite contre Secours
Le jour m'est nuit.

. . . . . .

J'ay nom sans bruit
Fœulle sans fruit
Durez espinez me sont flours
Ainsi me gouvernent Amours
Sans avoir aultre sauf conduit
Le jour m'est nuit."

I think in this we see the base, the foundation of almost all songs of melancholy, of many romantic heroes, of plays and novels. Have we not all heard some such words and lines delivered in sentences as the curtain is falling; have they not closed many a moving story? But, even if this be not so, of one thing I am sure, namely, that, with this rondeau of Maistre Martin Le Franc, the first poem of regret and broken hopes had been written, the first true note of despair sounded.

" J'ay nom sans bruit
Fœulle sans fruit."

I ask you to read these words over and over again, to repeat them to yourselves in some quiet moment of meditation, to muse upon them. To muse also upon those whom you have known; those who, full once of aspirations to do something that should give them one little moment of remembrance in the future, have perforce had to utter at last, no matter in what tongue those thoughts were uttered, the words, "J'ay nom sans bruit." I would ask you also, if I may presume so far, to look round on those you have well loved, those from whose future you have hoped and expected much, and to recognise that "Fœulle sans fruit" are words as applicable to them now (or were as applicable when they trod this earth) as they were to any man—to himself—when Martin Le Franc wrote his rondeau.

Digitized by Google

Soft, tender, regretful as Villon's "Où sont les neiges d'antan?" or "Regrets de la Belle Heaulmière," may be, they do not surpass this; actually there is not in them the soft ring and cadence of these words. Personally, and only while venturing an opinion that may be worth little or nothing, I count this rondeau, "Le jour m'est nuit," above all the hundreds of rondeaux written in the passage of centuries. And as I place this solitary specimen above all others, so I venture to place De Blosseville's vast garland of rondeaux above the collected numbers of any other minstrel. But space is brief in these columns, therefore I may but snatch one more specimen from this master hand. In it you get the flavour, the aroma, half sweet, half bitter, that love brings to its votaries; he who, reading this rondeau, does not feel the bound, the catch of the lines, the spring of joy and regret that bubbles through them, can surely have never loved.

"J'en ay la dueil et vous la joye,
J'en ay la guerre, et vous la paiz,
J'en cours et vous allez
en paiz.

J'en ay courroux,
qui vous resjoye,
Vous en riez, et
j'en lermoye,
Vous en parlez et je
m'en tais.
J'en ay, etc.

Vous vous bangnez, et je me noye
Voux vous taictez, je me deffais,
Vous me blasmez, dont ne (je?) puis mais,
Vous ne voulez, que g'y pourvoye.
J'en ay, etc."

The man who wrote these lines lived in the fifteenth century; Martin Le Franc almost came into the fourteenth. Who shall ever dare to say that the chords of the human heart did not then vibrate as strongly as those of the human heart in the twentieth century, after reading their thoughts?

There lies a gulf between these gentle singers of the Middle Ages and Vincent Voiture of the reign of Louis XIII., the man who was called "Le Dieu de l'Hôtel Rambouillet," the man whose memory has been insulted by posterity by his being termed a writer of Vers de Société, and who was undoubtedly the last of the rondeaux bards. Voiture's own existence and surroundings, though they could not give him his mind, may have influenced his ideas. He was well made, good-looking, comfortable in his means; women were apt to love him, if Ninon de l'Enclos and others may be trusted.

VINCENT VOITURE
The famous seventeenth century composer of rondeaux.
(From the engraving by Lubin.)

Personally, I have sometimes been led to think that Mlle. Julie d'Angennes, daughter of the Marquis and Marquise de Rambouillet—for whom the celebrated poetical garland was composed and whose prudery was such that she refused to marry any man, and did not do so until she was almost old—may have loved him secretly. Be this so or not, his poems might well have won him the heart of any woman.

His rondeaux number thirty and are embedded in a mass of chansons, vers-burlesques, stanzas, innumerable letters, etc.; while, incredible to relate, he wrote an adventure story about a princess captured by a Barbary pirate that might make many a modern writer of boys' books jealous.

One of his most famous rondeaux deals with the rondeau itself, and is considered the most perfect specimen of what such a thing should be. The opening lines are world-wide known amongst persons of taste:

"Ma foi, c'est fait de moi, car Isabeau M'a conjuré de lui faire un rondeau."

The line that follows, "Quoi! treize vers, huit en eau, cinq en éme," describes the task of a rondeau writer, and describes this rondeau in particular. If, however, I were asked to state the best of all he wrote, I should select that of which I give a portion below:

"Tout beau corps,
toute belle image,
Sont grossiers auprès du visage
Que Philis a reçû des Cieux.
Sa bouche, son ris
et ses yeux
Mettent tous les
cœurs au pillage,
Sa gorge est un divin
ouvrage
Rien n'est si droit que son corsage
Enfin elle a, pour dire
mieux,
Tout beau."

When Voiture wrote those exquisite lines he had done something he, doubtless, never dreamt of doing. He never imagined that in his graceful, early seventeenth century French, and, above all, in the light, sweet soufflet he had composed, he had pointed out to all of us who have come after him the wide gap that the passing of three centuries had caused to yawn between the poets. For they of the past spoke of their love while their hearts beat strongly, if sadly; of their wasted lives and shattered aspirations, o women lost to them, and of neglected opportunities. But he—himself a king of poets, though a king of a different realm; this singer beloved of women, thought not so much of his adored one's heart as of the neck and bosom which covered that heart. The sweetness of her mouth and face was more to him than any tender love he might win from her.

The distance of the old from the new was now extreme, and Voiture marked it—unknowingly or, perhaps, unheedingly.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

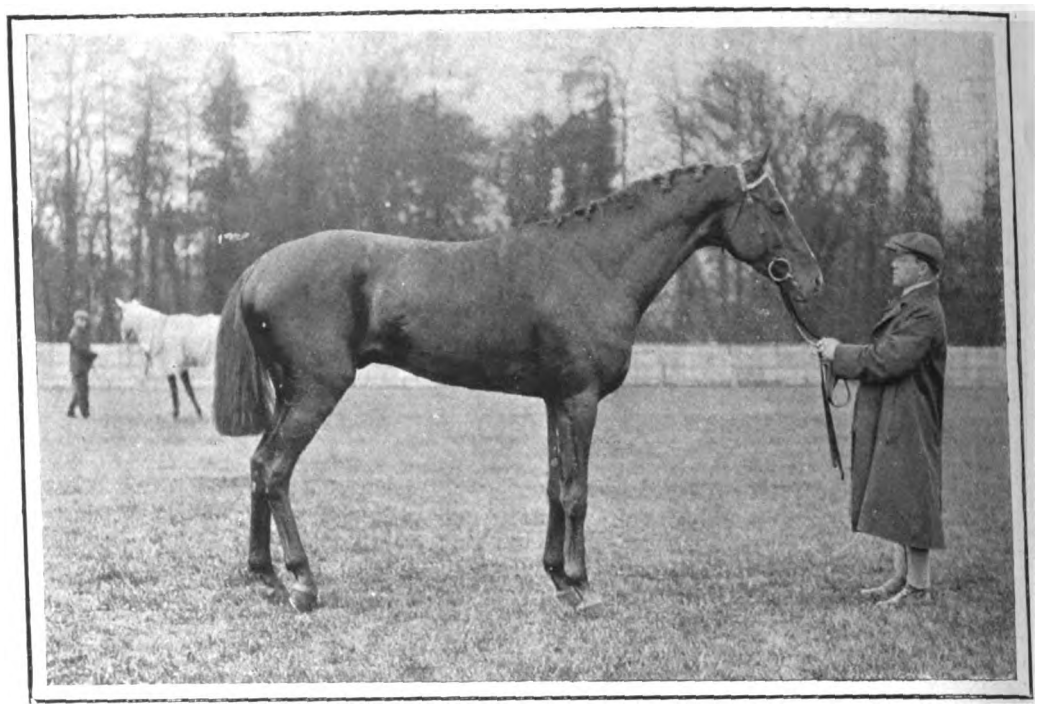
THE very busy and interesting week's racing which commenced on Easter Monday came to a conclusion at Sandown Park on Saturday, the 29th ult. The race for the Queen's Prize proved a source of attraction to the huge crowd assembled at Kempton Park on the Monday, when for the first time in its history the distance over which the race is run was reduced to one mile. Twelve exceptionally good-looking specimens of the thorough-bred went down to the post. Sansovino made a gallant effort to win, but his 14-lb. penalty proved too much for him, and Glenamoy (7-st. 10-lb.), a chestnut son of Gallinule, eventually won cleverly by a length and a-half from Sansovino (8-st. 8-lb.), who was barely half a length in front of Lady Yatesbury (6-st. 5-lb.).

At Manchester, on the same day, that brilliant young steeplechase horse, Seisdon Prince, scored a very popular victory in the Lancashire Handicap Steeplechase, in which he was beautifully ridden by F. Mason, who rode four other winners the same afternoon, and it is a very remarkable fact that all five of them were trained by Coulthwaite at Hednesford, and that in the course of his five winning rides Mason rode seven miles and a-half over a country and four miles over hurdles.

The weather surroundings were anything but pleasant on Tuesday, the opening day of the Epsom Spring Meeting, but there were plenty of people present to see the decision of the race for the Great Metropolitan Stakes, which is run over a distance of two miles and a-quarter. There was very little delay at the post, and the twelve runners were sent off on their journey on very level terms. Long Tom, however, always had the measure of his field, and once fairly in the line for home, took up the running and strode along, to win by four lengths from Karakoul; Caro was third, about three lengths away. The winner is a very well-bred horse by Ladas out of Fuse, and he has had a somewhat chequered career. He was drafted out of the powerful Kingsclere stables, and after passing through several hands at varying prices, was put to hurdle-racing, in the course of which he won the Tyro Selling Hurdle Race at Gatwick in March, 1904, and was then bought by E. Woodland for 113-guineas, and again passed on to his present owner, H. Escott, for a profit of £10.



SIR JAMES MILLER'S PHARISEE: THE SAILOR PRINCE—PERFECTION.
Winner of the City and Suburban.

Terrible grief overtook the backers of that good horse Imperial II. in the Great Surrey Handicap. Weight will tell, and he could only finish third to Pansy Masters and Melayr; but he was attempting to give 34-lb. to the winner, and 8-lb. to the second, in addition to which the Epsom course is hardly the most suitable for that powerful, far-striding French-bred son of Clairon and Immortelle.

Wednesday must certainly be written down as a damp and unpleasant day on which to go racing, but the sport throughout the afternoon was excellent, and the race for the City and Suburban Handicap alone made ample amends for any discomfort, and the paddock inspection of the candidates was full of interest. Dean Swift looked fit and businesslike, but he has quite an unusual amount of hair about his heels, which detracts not a little from his appearance, and he is altogether a plainish-looking animal; the white-footed Vril seemed to have come on since last year as far as looks are concerned, but he never seemed to be going kindly in the race; the French horse Ob is a hardy, active sort, and was full of muscle, and apparently in the best of health and condition; that beautiful mare Palmy Days was, perhaps, still a little backward; and undoubtedly the pick of the lot, as far as condition and general appearance went, was Pharisee. I have never seen this chestnut son of Sailor Prince and Perfection looking anything like as well as he did on this occasion, and his condition reflected the greatest credit on Blackwell, his trainer, who laughingly remarked, when congratulated on the success of his horse, "Yes, but you see he has not had Rock Sand to worry him lately," and no light task it must have been for Pharisee to have to lead such a glutton for work as Rock Sand in his daily exercise. The race itself was a very pretty sight, and although some people would have it that Pharisee won very comfortably, it seemed to me that he owed not a little of his success to the able riding of Maher. Practically speaking, the whole of the running was made by Ambition, and Maher bided his time until close on the distance, when he challenged, and, forging ahead, won by three-quarters of a length, with a length dividing Ambition from Dean Swift, who was third. The victory was a very popular one, and most enthusiastic cheering greeted Sir James Miller's horse as he passed the post.

PARADING FOR THE CITY AND SUBURBAN.
The winner can be seen on the right hand of the picture.

Much has been said and written of late concerning the supposed decadence of the English thorough-bred; but it often escapes the notice of casual observers that in many parts of the world exported descendants of English sires and dams maintain the reputation of their ancestry. In America, for instance, some seventeen or eighteen British-bred two year olds were returned as winners of races last year, and as recently as last month Lady Savoy, by Morion out of Lady Ayr, by Ayrshire, started at 5 to 3 on for the Tennessee Oaks, which she won easily by a couple of lengths, the value of the stakes being 3,980-dol. CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

BENGER'S FOOD FOR INFANTS, INVALIDS, AND THE AGED.

BENGER's FOOD can be enjoyed and assimilated when other foods disagree. It forms a delicate and highly nutritive cream, rich in all the elements necessary to maintain vigorous health, but entirely free from rough and indigestible particles, which often produce irritation in delicate stomachs.

To Messrs. Benger's Food, Ltd.
Gentlemen, March 3rd, 1904.

I notice you advertise your food for 'Infants, Invalids, and the Aged.' I do not come under any of these classes, yet I always use it for my last meal at night. I find it as useful in health as I did four years ago in diphtheria. It is so easily digested that having naturally a not too strong digestion I ensure a good night's rest. The Rev. H——

Benger's Food is sold in tins by chemists, etc., everywhere.

"AN OLD FORMULA REVIVED"

Carlin's 'Calross' Mixture

A Blend of the choicest tobaccos.
Exquisite flavour & delicate aroma.
Exceptionally cool smoking.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Sold by leading tobacconists, & Sole Proprietors.

C.A. CARLIN & Co. 177 PICCADILLY

1/4 LB. SAMPLE TIN 2/6 POST FREE

CORNWALL

LONDON TO PENZANCE & BACK, 40/-

What the celebrated author, Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, says about CORNWALL:—

"I was delighted with the place and the people, and I can quite see the numerous possibilities of Cornwall as a Pleasure Resort both for Winter and Summer. Cornwall astounded and delighted me."

Thousands of delighted travellers acknowledge it to be the ideal home

WINTER, HEALTH, & PLEASURE RESORT.

Why incur the trouble and expense of a long Foreign Journey when the

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY

can take you in a few hours to the DELIGHTFUL

| PADDINGTON to | | |
|---|---|---|
| Falmouth | 7 Hrs. | 10 Min. |
| St. Ives | 8 ,, | — ,, |
| Penzance | 7 ,, | 40 ,, |

Cornish Riviera?

Fast and Luxurious Trains. Cheap Fares.

G.W.R. Co.'s Tregenna Castle Hotel at St. Ives.

Write to SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, PADDINGTON STATION, W., for Illustrated Booklet Free. JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

The ROUTE from LONDON

FOR HEALTH. FOR PLEASURE.

EXPRESS CORRIDOR TRAINS.

TO BRACING

BUDE

AND THE BEAUTIFUL, ROMANTIC

NORTH CORNWALL COAST

INCLUDING

CAMELFORD, BOSCASTLE, AND TINTAGEL, WADEBRIDGE, NEWQUAY, AND

PADSTOW.

SPLENDID GOLF LINKS.

LUNCHEON AND DINING CARS.

From WATERLOO STATION.

TOURIST, WEEK-END, and CIRCULAR TOUR TICKETS.

Ladies' Compartments. Lavatory Accommodation.

FREE!! The Official Illustrated Guide and List of Hotels, Lodgings, Golf Links, etc., 180 pages, printed on art paper, 100 illustrations, will shortly be ready. Write for copy and full particulars of train service, cheap tickets, etc., to Mr. HENRY HOLMES, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, S.E.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent

GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET

be SURE that you get

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE, UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S's Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

Digitized by Google

THE CITY AND SUBURBAN.

Copyright.

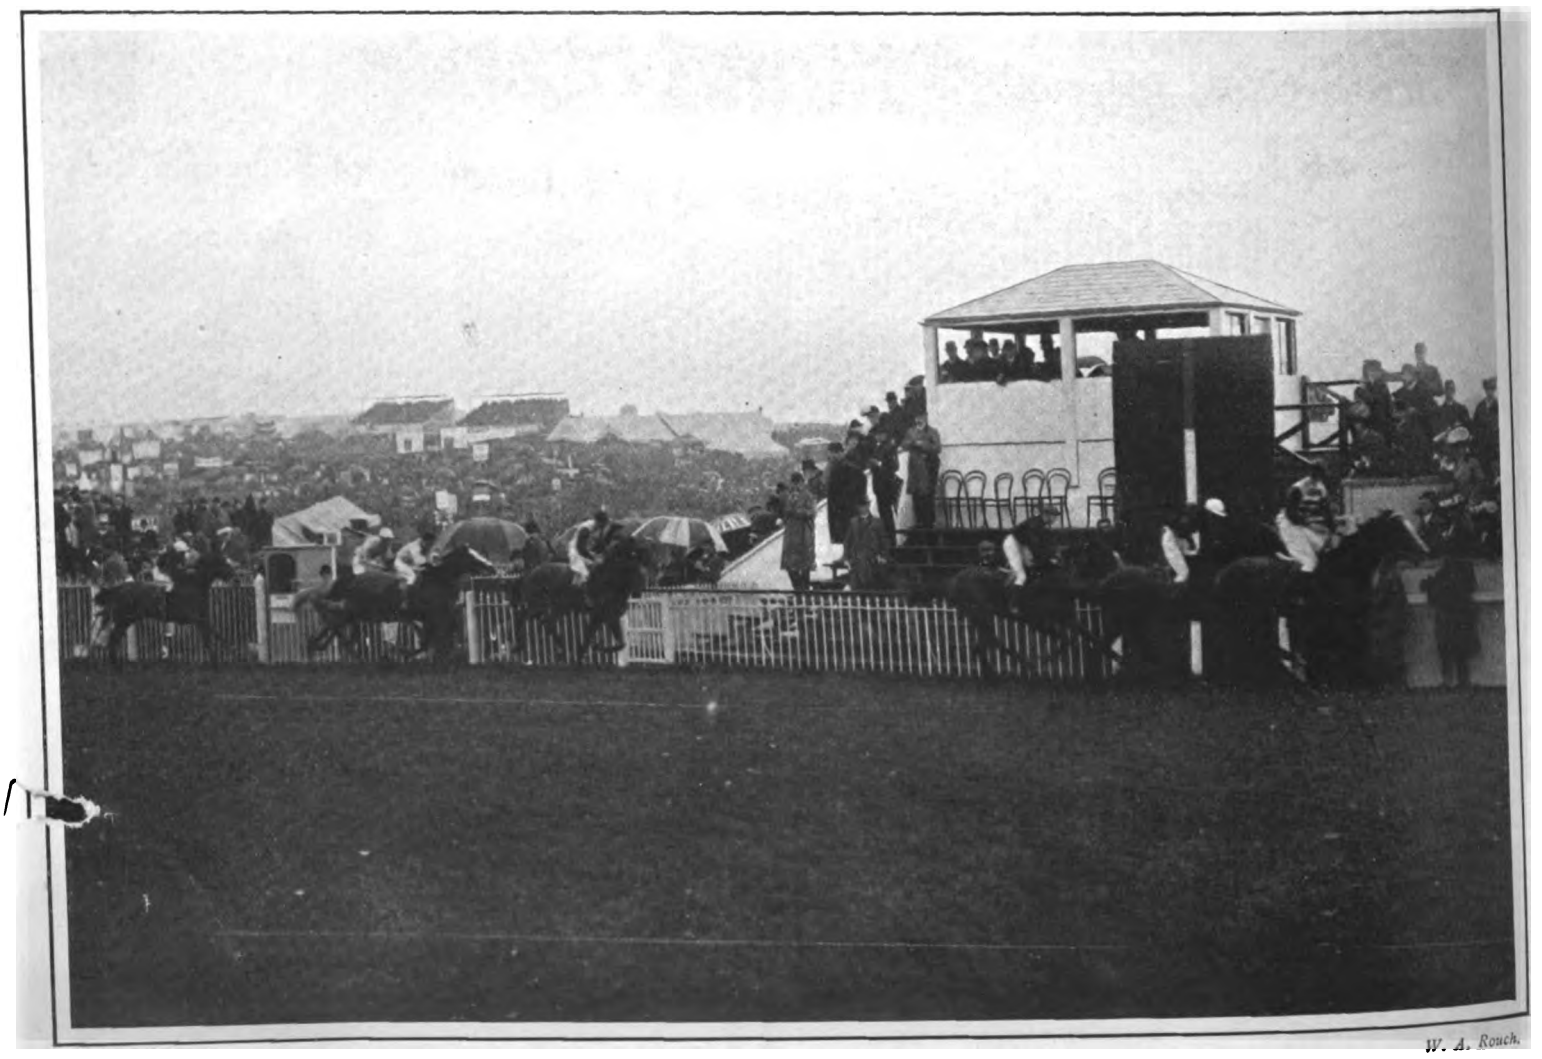
NEARING HOME—THE STRUGGLE BEGINS.



W. A. Rouch.

PHARISEE, AMBITION, AND DEAN SWIFT PASSING THE POST.

Digitized by Google

ONCE ENOUGH!

If you use it once, you will understand! JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB, and you have a brilliant polish!

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

are thought a lot of; they're honest—that's why!

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

All Bootshops and Stores.
WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(12 HOURS FROM LONDON.)

THE FINEST KURSAAL AND BATHING ESTABLISHMENT IN EUROPE.

Concerts, Theatre, Balls, Golf, Tennis, &c. Within an hour of the Liege Exhibition. Fine Hotels, moderate tariffs.—For Programme, etc., apply to Secretary, Conseil Communal, Spa.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.

Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

At the Sea-side

Would You BE FREE

from the inkstand, the nib that is always wearing, the ink that is choked with dust? Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen is freedom.

Would you be free from the hotel, the waiting room, the boarding house, and the post office pen? Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen is freedom.

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen.

THE BEST YET.

From 10/6 upwards, of Stationers and Jewellers, etc. In Silver and Gold for presentation. Dainty Illustrated Booklet on Pen, post free from L. & C. HARDTMUTH, 12, Golden Lane, London, E.C. (173, Broadway, New York.)

THE CHARING CROSS BANK.

ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

The ## Crown Stopper
on a ## bottle of scent speaks volumes.

The ## Crown Perfumery
Co.'s
Perfumes

are all of a unique delicacy and distinguished for their sweet fragrance.

Crab Apple Blossom

is a delicious perfume that can be taken into any company, pleases all educated tastes, and has just that suspicion of originality which gives its owner a sense of distinction.

UNIVERSAL EXHIBITION AT LIEGE.

CHEAP RETURN TICKETS from LONDON (Liverpool Street Station)

1st Class, 41s. 0d.; 2nd Class, 27s. 6d.;
3rd Class Rail and 2nd Class Steamer, 22s. 9d.

CHEAP CONTINENTAL HOLIDAYS IN BELGIUM including Brussels for Waterloo and the Ardennes, &c., via Harwich & Antwerp every Week-day.

Send post-card to the Continental Manager, G.E. Ry., Liverpool Street Station, London, E.C., for descriptive illustrated pamphlet (free).

DOES NOT APPRECIATE THE WONDERFUL PURCHASING POWER OF ONE PENNY UNTIL ONE BUYS A

FLOR DE DINDIGUL
CIGARETTE

(ALL TOBACCO LEAF. NO PAPER.)

The very thing when there's no time or a Cigar. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for purity and excellence. Sample one of these delightful whiffs, the experiment costs but One Penny. On sale at all good Tobacconists, 1d. each; 8/- per 100, in cedar wood box; or Carriage Paid from the Importer, BEWLAY, 49, STRAND.

ESTABLISHED 1780.

HUMPHREYS & CROOK

Established over 60 Years.

Naval, Military & Sporting Tailors.

OPPOSITE THE CARLTON.

3, Haymarket, LONDON.

HOMESPUN GOLF SUITS

Equipment Department:
3, SUFFOLK STREET, PALL MALL.

Specialite: CROOK'S PATENT SLEEPING VALISE,
A hold-all in transport and a tent in camp.

FIELD'S CANDLES.

NIGHT LIGHTS.

TOILET SOAPS.

LIGHT. LIGHTFUL. DELIGHTFUL.

Grand Prize, St. Louis, 1904.

J. C. & J. FIELD, Ltd., LAMBETH, S.E. Established 1642.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

MESSRS. GEORGE NEWNES have just added to their Library of the Applied Arts a volume on "English Table Glass," by Mr. Percy Bate. To most people it will come as something of a surprise to hear that there is any English table glass worth writing a book about; but one glance at the illustrations to this volume will show that though not so elaborate or delicate as Venetian glass, nor—thank goodness!—so florid and heavily gilded as German glass, English glass, particularly of the eighteenth century, is well worthy of the enthusiasm of Mr. Bate, and the production of so handsome a volume as the present. In his bright and amusing introduction Mr. Bate tells how he became a collector, and, indeed, how he married the basis of his collection; and in the body of his work he traces the history of English glass from the few examples of sixteenth century work downwards. Hitherto there has been no book on the subject except the monumental volume by Mr. Albert Hartshorne, and Mr. Bate's book is doubly welcome, first, for the accuracy and completeness of the information which he contrives to include in 120 pages, and, next, for the very interesting, and often amusing, manner in which he tells the story. The illustrations—of which there are no less than sixty-seven full pages—are marvels of clever photography and skilful reproduction; and the book is one which would unquestionably bring into favour a too much neglected but beautiful and still cheap form of objects of art.

English Table Glass.

* * *

MR. E. V. LUCAS and Mr. Graves, who have long stood confessed as the authors of "Wisdom While You Wait," have published with Mr. Alston Rivers something of the same sort in "Change for a Halfpenny." They are tilting this time at a famous newspaper publishing syndicate, which they call the Napolio Syndicate, or the Auto-Carmelite Brotherhood. When we say that "Nap" stands for the Man of Destiny, and "olio" for oil, the whole word meaning "the oil of destiny," we need go no further towards revealing the obvious secret of their mark. The whole book is capital fooling—a little too much inclined, perhaps, to repeat the same joke in different forms, but rising now and then, especially in the parodies, to the delightful wit of the former production of these two clever authors. "Change for a Halfpenny" hits a good deal more than it appears to aim at. It is not only the so-called Napolio Syndicate, but the whole modern system of bounce and advertisement and blatant mediocrity, that they attack with deft and dashing strokes.

Change for a Halfpenny.

* * *

UNDER the title of "Letters to a Débutante," Lady Jephson has published with Mr. Eveleigh Nash an unpretentious, but very wise and sound, little volume of advice on all sorts of subjects to girls. Her instructions are not surprisingly new nor deterrently deep, but there is an air of kindly and experienced wisdom in all she has to say that makes the book attractive, not only to those for whom it is specially intended, but to the general reader. It matters not whether Lady Jephson is writing on the "neglected art" of cooking, on the need of controlling the tongue, on elopements, wit, or "L'Art de Tenir Salon," she has always something interesting to say, and says it with charm, and her wide reading and knowledge of the world in more countries than her own make her an excellent guide.

Letters to a Debutante.

MR. FRANCIS GRIFFITHS is publishing a new book, called "East Africa and Uganda," by Mr. J. Cathcart Wason, M.P., to which Sir Harry Johnston has written an introduction. Mr. Wason's book is illustrated with photographs taken during his recent travels in the country, which he is anxious to see retained for the use of our own settlers, instead of being handed over to foreign and Jewish speculators. Mr. Wason has had an eventful life, much of which was spent in doing excellent work both in public and private for New Zealand.

East Africa and Uganda.

* * *

THERE seems to be no limit to the public demand for Messrs. Black's colour books, nor to the readiness of the publishers in supplying them. The two new ones of the moment are "Ireland," which has appropriately been entrusted to two Irishmen, the letterpress being from the pen of Mr. Frank Mathew, and the illustrations being the work of the well-known painter and etcher, Mr. Francis S. Walker; and "The West Indian Islands," about which Mr. John Henderson writes his impressions, while Mr. C. S. Forrest illustrates the book with drawings made on the spot. Jamaica is said to be the most beautiful spot in the world, and the book should be one of the handsomest in the series.

Picture Books.

IN THE PLAYING FIELDS AT NAPOLIO COLLEGE: A RUGBY MATCH.
From "Change for a Halfpenny," by the authors of "Wisdom While You Wait," published by Alston Rivers.

* * *

IN a little pamphlet called "The True Account of Nelson's Famous Signal," Lieutenant-Colonel T. H. Baylis attempts to prick one or two bubbles connected with Nelson. In 1846 Colonel Baylis met John Pasco, who was senior and signal officer of the "Victory" in the battle of Trafalgar. Pasco wrote him a letter, stating that it was he, Pasco, who had suggested to Nelson the substitution of the word "expects" for "confides" in the famous signal, because the latter word, not being in the vocabulary, would have taken more time to spell than could have been spared when the fleet was so close to the enemy. Colonel Baylis goes on, by means of references to The Times of that day and to certain manuscripts in the British Museum, to attempt a refutation of the common belief that Nelson was blind in one eye, and at the battle of Copenhagen wilfully put his telescope to the useless member. Nelson, according to Colonel Baylis and his authorities, was not blind in one eye, and could see better with the injured than with the uninjured orb; and instead of making any pretence confined himself to "damning that signal." The pamphlet, which is interesting to all students of Nelson's career, is published by Mr. George Allen.

Nelson's Famous Signal.

* * *

WE have received from the office of Cage Birds the "'Cage Birds' Annual and Year Book of the Bird World for 1905." The writer of these notes cannot speak with authority on the subject of caged birds, but the annual (which is now in its third year) seems to be full of most useful information, and is well illustrated. It is clearly the fashion this year for canaries to be very long and thin. The frontispiece, which represents a Southern Yorkshire canary that has won a first prize at the Crystal Palace for its owner, Mr. C. W. Mabey, is as different as possible from the stout and comfortable-looking songsters of one's childhood.

Cage Birds.

* * *

AT the present moment Mrs. Colquhoun Grant's "A Mother of Czars" (London, John Murray) will certainly commend itself to all those who are interested in the past as well as the future of Russia. The story of the life of the beautiful and clever Princess of Würtemberg, who became one of the most successful and amiable Czarinas of Russian history, is told principally by the aid of her own letters, and one cannot help regretting that the volume is not prefaced by a reproduction of the beautiful portrait of her by Mme. Le Brun. The book gives the world some quite novel information as to the state of French society in the earlier and joyous years of the reign of Louis XVI., when the Grand Duchess and her Consort made the Grand Tour, in happy unconsciousness that a violent death awaited both monarchs. In 1825 The Times undeservedly stigmatised "the Mother of Czars" as "able, artful, and ambitious." Napoleon is credited with the epigram: "Scratch a Russian and you will find a Tartar." He also described Alexander I.—one of the two handsome sons of Marie Feodorowna—as "a Greek of the Lower Empire." In view of passing events one may recall another prophetic Napoleonic bon mot: "Malheur à l'Empire de Russie si jamais il s'élève un Czar qui porte une barbe!" The book abounds in trite sayings. Even the dull Paul indulged in epigrams. He used to say after his visit to Paris in 1781 that Louis received him as a friend, Philippe Egalité as a commoner, and the Prince de Condé (at Chantilly) as a sovereign.

A Mother of Czars.

BOOKS TO READ.

Biography.

Life and Letters of J. H. Shorthouse, edited by his Wife. (Macmillan.)
Dr. Momerie; His Life and Work, by his Wife. (Blackwood.)
The Wild Marquis, by E. A. Vizetelly. (Chatto and Windus.)
Memories, by Walter Macfarren, F.R.A.M. (Walter Scott Company.)

Fiction.

Hay Fever, by W. H. and G. C. Pollock. (Longmans.)
Jörn Uhl, by Gustav Frenssen. Translated by F. S. Delmer. (Constable.)
In the Arena; Stories of Political Life, by Booth Tarkington. (Murray.)
Lucie and I, by Henriette Corkran. (Unwin.)
Fond Adventures, by Maurice Hewlett. (Macmillan.)
The House of Barnkirk, by Amy McLaren. (Duckworth.)

Miscellaneous.

Letters to a Débutante, by Lady Jephson. (Nash.)
Misrepresentative Men, by Henry Graham ("Colonel D. Streamer") Illustrated by F. Strothmann. (Gay and Bird.)

Digitized by Google

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE
TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES.
TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.
TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

S&H·HARRIS'
SADDLE SOAP.

In 1lb. Tins. Price 1/-
IT CLEANS THE LEATHER, AND RENDERS IT SOFT AND PLIABLE.
ALL SADDLERS KEEP IT.
Manufactory: MANSELL STREET, LONDON, E.

Beauty.
Icilma Fluor Cream prevents the skin from shining when warm, checks the growth of superfluous hair, and suppresses the abuse of powder. No woman can hope to preserve free from lines a delicate transparent complexion without Nature's marvellous skin tonic Icilma. Send 2d. stamps for two samples (different scents). ICILMA CO., Ltd. (Dept. 43), 142, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

Preserve your Teeth!
BY USING FRAGRANT
FLORILINE

It imparts a
FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH
that is rare and delightful,
IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR
and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.
IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.
PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.
SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

BORWICK'S
5 GOLD MEDALS
FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY
BAKING POWDER
GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.
Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS
For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.
INVALUABLE FOR LADIES
8, 14, and 33 stamps.
G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY.
The whole Treatment for 3/-, Ointment, Tablets, and Soap.

HERE IT IS. TRY IT.
ECZEMA, RASHES,
Pimples, Spots, Sores, Ringworm, Chaps, Chilblains, Rough Skin, BAD LEGS.
CURED by the
ECZOLINE TREATMENT.
STOPS ALL IRRITATION AT ONCE.
WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.
A Gentleman writes: "My sister was troubled for 20 years with Eczema; she only used half a pot when she was absolutely cured." A Lady states: "Your pots are worth 20/- each. I was cured when I had been sent home from the hospital as incurable." Ointment, 1/1½, 2/9, 4/6. Tablets same price. Soap, 6d. per cake; Shaving Stick, 6d. Of any Chemist, or HUNTER, Regent Street, Swindon, Wilts, Eng. Animal Eczoline same price, but Soap, 1/- per lb. Book, "How Eczema is Cured," 1d.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641.
Kensington.
Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.
By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.
Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

BURSLEM BUSTS.

IT has been reserved for Mr. William Burton to do anything like adequate justice to the Burslem busts, a form of statuary in Staffordshire ware which gives Enoch Wood and his associates something like undying fame in the annals of "potting." Joseph Marryat ignores the subject altogether; Mr. Jewitt, in his anxiety to chronicle the minute details of early specimens and perpetuate the glories of the florid productions of the middle part of the nineteenth century, limits his remarks to a few brief sentences and a couple of wholly insufficient illustrations, which reappear in the pages of Mr. Downman, with a wholesome warning concerning modern imitations and impudent forgeries of these interesting memorials of the past, of which no less than 700 varieties are known to exist. At the present moment the market is flooded with sham Wesleys, Whitefields, and Shakespeares; but the careful study of the genuine article either at the School of Mines, in the Willett collection, or at South Kensington will enable even the embryo collector to safely defy the wiles of the fraudulent imitator, who either buries the sham article in the ground to give it a fictitious appearance of antiquity, covers it with some adhesive substance likely to attract the dust, or rubs down the sharp corners with sand-paper or a file to give it an air of respectable old age. The dust-collecting trick is often so much overdone that detection is made a matter of the greatest ease. In the "duffer" or "schlenter" busts the insides are usually concealed from view, while they are generally much heavier than the genuine article, which is fast becoming a rara avis. Genuine Wesley busts are still to be found in Cornwall, whence came the two quite different specimens shown in the illustrations. Varieties in black ware also exist, two very fine specimens of which are in the collection of Mr. Alderman Wakerley of Leicester. The large bust of Neptune, now illustrated, is a splendid example of the best kind of Burslem busts, and was for a long time in possession of a very indefatigable collector, Mr. R. Elliott of Camberwell. It bears on the pedestal in large bold letters the mark G. R. and the date 1811. The other illustrations speak for themselves. The skill displayed in the execution of the heads of Newton and Shakespeare is worthy of either Wedgwood or the best workmen at Leeds or Liverpool. All lovers of the beautiful, quaint, and often artistic pottery of Staffordshire, should carefully master the concluding chapter of Mr. Burton's interesting book, which contains several reproductions of Enoch Wood's best work, a typical Wesley bust, and a reproduction in colours of the often-imitated "Vicar and Moses."

A BUST OF NEPTUNE.

A fine specimen of Burslem ware, executed in 1811.

It is not generally known that Wood was an ardent collector as well as a potter, and that he left to posterity a unique series of busts and figures in the ware of his beloved Staffordshire. Aaron and Ralph Wood were well-known modellers who flourished about 1750. They were the sons of one Ralph Wood, a Burslem miller. Aaron Wood's son William was apprenticed to Josiah Wedgwood in 1762. His younger brother Enoch (having served his time with Henry Palmer of Henley Green) set up in business on his own account in 1782 at Burslem, where his uncle Ralph and a cousin with the same name were turning out figures "marked by a vein of true, if somewhat bucolic humour." The elder Ralph died in 1772, the younger in 1797. The earlier pieces are distinguishable by the quiet tones of the glazes—olive green, purple, yellow, and grey-blue. It is the younger Ralph Wood who is responsible for the busts of Milton, Handel, and Washington, familiar to all collectors. Possibly Enoch Wood, who entertained Wesley on his preaching tours about 1781, and lived till three years after the accession of Queen Victoria, was the most talented of his race. It is to be regretted that he never made a catalogue of the specimens he collected, and that one must now go to Dresden to see in the Museum nearly 200 of his finest pieces which he sent to the King of Saxony in 1835. Enoch Wood has left behind him a fine bust of himself in black basalt, so it is possible that Mr. Wakerley's busts of Wesley and Whitefield are, after all, his handiwork. The busts of Alexander I. and Newton are good examples of his skill. His favourite colours are far brighter than those employed by Ralph Wood prior to 1797.

TWO BURSLEM BUSTS OF JOHN WESLEY.

The great preacher was Enoch Wood's favourite subject. The larger bust bears Wood's mark and inscription, but the execution of the smaller is far finer.

He indulged in vivid greens and dark blues, but had also a weakness for black basalt and jasper ware. He was a modeller of quite extraordinary ability, and many of his portrait-busts are admirable likenesses. A superb and undoubtedly genuine Burslem bust of Shakespeare, nearly 1½-ft. high, showing all Enoch Wood's good points, was lately in possession of Mr. George Mackey of Birmingham.

Except when purchasing of well-known and reliable dealers, like Mr. Mallett of Bath, and others, the acquisition of Staffordshire ware of all sorts, and Burslem busts in particular, requires a discreet application of the motto, Caveat emptor.

B.

THREE FINE BURSLEM BUSTS.

Alexander I. of Russia is in the centre, with Sir Isaac Newton on the right and Shakespeare on the left.

Digitized by Google

A Concentrated Tobacco for Pipe Smokers
Delightfully Cool.

Sold everywhere in 1, 2, & 4 oz. Tins.

GALLAHER, Ltd.,
The
Independent
Firm.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS
& MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

MALLETT
& SON
hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.
EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
(Two hours from Paddington.)

The Misses H. & I. WOOLLAN
(UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.)
Telephone: 5167 Gerrard.
Telegrams: "Decoriter."

SQUARE MARKED WORCESTER.
ANTIQUES. FURNITURE. CHINA. LACE, GLASS, etc., etc., etc.
28, Brook Street, Grosvenor Square, W.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

NOW READY. Price £2 2 0 Nett.

IN ENGLISH HOMES.

THE INTERNAL CHARACTER, FURNITURE, AND ADORNMENTS OF SOME OF THE MOST NOTABLE HOUSES OF ENGLAND HISTORICALLY DEPICTED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS SPECIALLY TAKEN BY

CHARLES LATHAM.

This large and handsome volume measures 16in. by 11¼in., and contains about 200 full-page plates and 150 smaller plates, illustrating "Our goodly English Dwelling-places, those houses which have been sanctified by the passing of centuries."

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

WHIPPED CREAM.
Plasmon makes the most Delicious Whipped Cream for tea, coffee, stewed fruits, etc.

PLASMON PREPARATIONS.
Special Box containing
9d. packet of Plasmon,
5d. tin Plasmon Cocoa,
1 packet Creamy Plasmon Oats,
2 bars Plasmon Chocolate,
Assorted Plasmon Biscuits,
A packet of Plasmon Tea, and Plasmon Cookery Book, Post Free, 1s. 6d.

All Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or
PLASMON, 108, DUKE STREET, W.
Paris: 12, RUE LE PELETIER.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

WE have already announced in this column that the production of the popular Argyll cars would be largely increased in the near future as a result of the successful flotation of Argyll Motors Limited, the new company which has succeeded the old Hozier Engineering firm. We are now informed that a large tract of ground, over sixty acres in extent, has recently been purchased, and that the new works are in course of erection. The site chosen is just outside the burgh of Alexandria, near Glasgow, and lies between the river Leven and the railway, and close to the main road to the Western Highlands. Within three-quarters of a mile is Loch Lomond, which will afford excellent opportunities for motor-launch trials. It would, therefore, appear that the position is not merely excellent from an industrial point of view, but also one of great natural beauty. It is hoped that the necessary machinery will be installed in the first of the workshops within three months, and that by next season factories will be completed and in full operation.

* * *

A British-built car which has won an excellent name for itself among motorists is the Ariel, and we have pleasure in reproducing a photograph of a handsome specimen of the 18—22-h.p. type. The faith of the makers in the quality of their materials and workmanship is shown by the fact that they guarantee the bevel drive on the rear live axle for two years and the driving gear for 50,000-miles. The engine of the 18—22-h.p. model has its four cylinders cast in one, the heads alone being separated. The inlet valves are mechanically operated by rocking levers according to the latest practice in motor construction, and the ignition is of the high-tension type, the current being derived either from a magneto or accumulators.

* * *

The transmission mechanism consists of a large leather-faced clutch; a gear-box giving four speeds and a "reverse," the drive being direct on the highest gear; a propeller shaft with universal joints; and a live rear axle. The latter is designed on the best lines, the wheels revolving on extensions of the axle casing, so that the driving shafts are relieved from the weight of the car. The new Ariels are excellent specimens of up-to-date automobile construction, and should still further enhance the reputation of their makers.

* * *

We are informed that a 24—40-h.p. Fiat has been purchased by the Duke de Genes, brother of the Queen of Italy, Commander-in-Chief of the Italian Navy, and President of the Automobile Club of Italy.

* * *

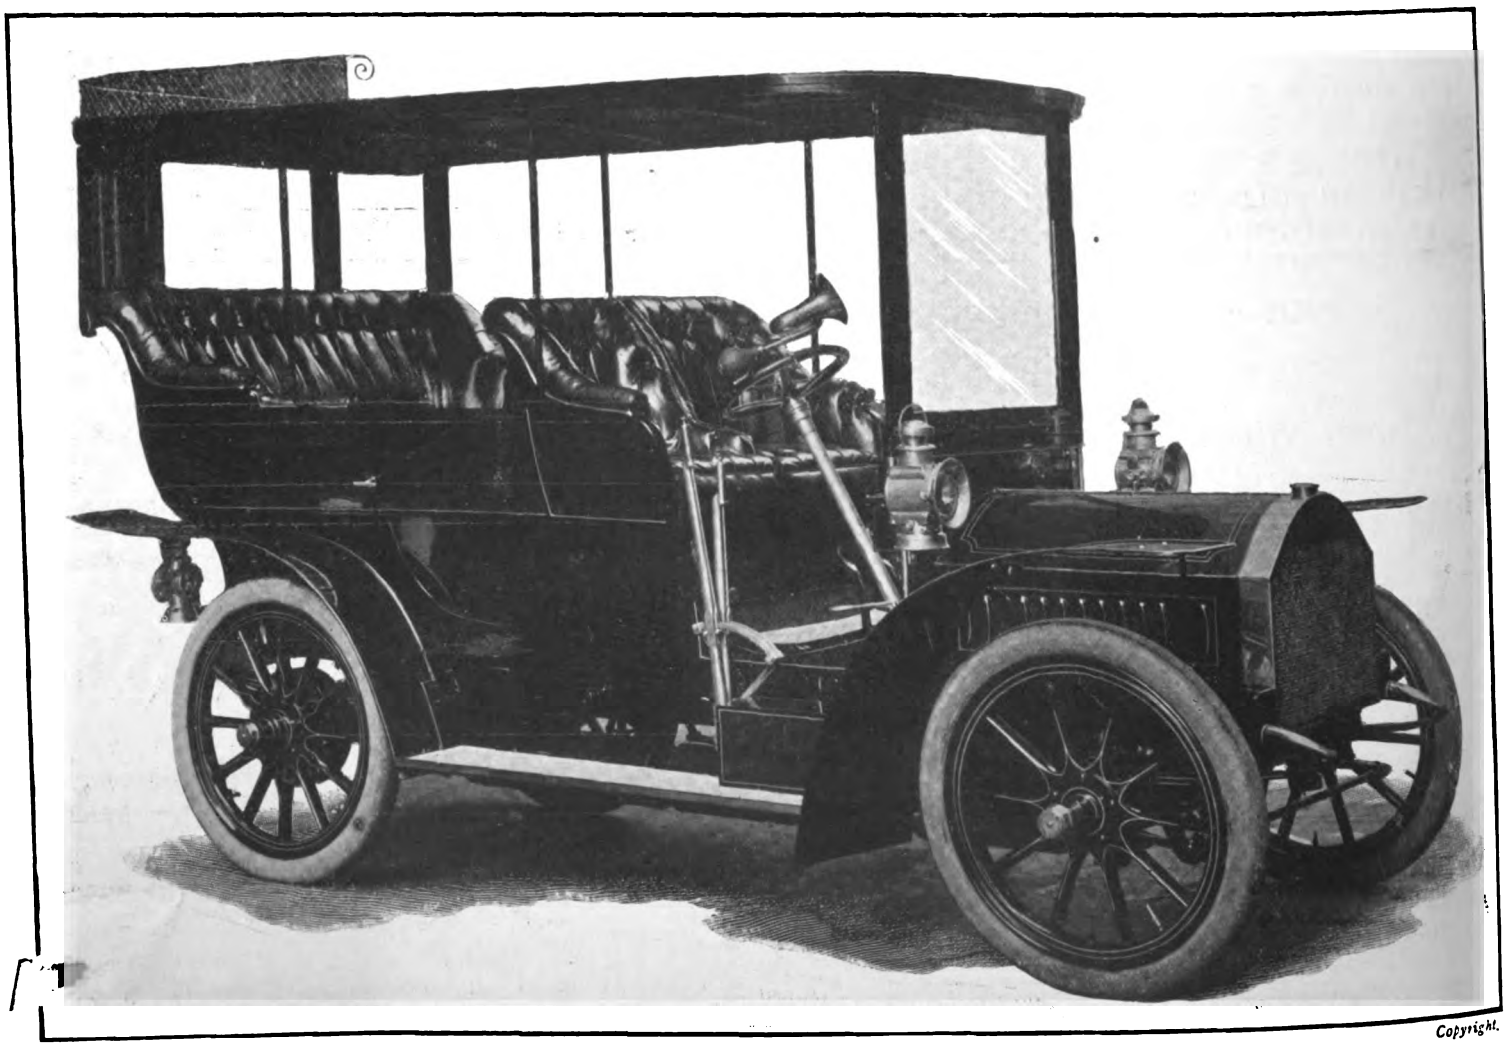
The Automobile Club has promptly punished two of the drivers nominated for the forthcoming Eliminating Trials in the Isle of Man, who had been convicted for driving racing cars at an excessive speed on the public roads. The case of Mr. Lisle, the driver of a Star car, has been widely reported in the papers. He caused a serious accident near Wolverhampton, which resulted in injuries to several persons. After considering the case and hearing Mr. Lisle's explanation, the club excluded him from the competitors' register, pending the hearing of an appeal which he has lodged against his conviction. The case of Bianchi, one of the drivers of the Wolseley racers, was evidently regarded in a less serious light. No previous complaint had been recorded against him, and although convicted of driving at a high speed, there was no suggestion that anyone had been endangered by his conduct. He was called before the committee and severely reprimanded, and suspended for a month.

* * *

The result of these two sentences is that Mr. Lisle will be debarred from competing in the Isle of Man, while Bianchi's suspension will expire before the date fixed for the trials. Another and a more important outcome of the club's action, from the public point of view, is that in future no manufacturer will dare to allow his racing cars to be "tuned up" on the highway. It is rumoured that an excellent stretch of sand has been discovered on the east coast of Yorkshire, which will be used as a site for the necessary preliminary trials of the cars.

* * *

In this connection it is interesting to note that motorists are discovering that America has by no means a monopoly of seabeach racing tracks. On Whit-Monday next the Yorkshire Automobile Club will hold a meeting on the sands at Filey. The course is over a mile in length, and an ample distance is available for getting up speed and stopping again. The surface of the sands is said to be hard and smooth at low water, and an elaborate programme has been arranged.



Copyright.

AN 18—22-H.P. ARIEL WITH LUXURIOUS COACH-WORK.
This finely-fitted car was recently sent by the Ariel Company to South Africa.

Digitized by Google

A TRIUMPH FOR THE SWIFT CAR

OVER AUSTRALIAN ROADS.

FIRST: Read this extract from the "Referee," April 9th, 1905:—

"Only those who know the nature of Australian tracks—the word road would be a misnomer—can properly appreciate the performances of the various cars which competed in the reliability run organised by the Dunlop Tyre Company between Sydney and Melbourne. The route, according to the official programme, comprised 343 miles of good road, 140 miles of second-rate road, and 89 miles of bad road. Presumably this estimate was made by a Colonial. It was my fortune once to travel over the self-same country, and I must confess I failed to notice the 343 miles of 'good' road."

THEN: Consider the excellence of the performance of the

7-h.p. SWIFT,

which carried three passengers over the 572 miles without an involuntary stop, and obtained the maximum number of 2,500 marks.

The SWIFT is a Car on which you can rely.

New Models—8-10 H.P.—on View at London Showrooms.

Booklet on Request.

THE SWIFT MOTOR CO.,
127-130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Trials by Appointment.

FOLLY SHOWS WISDOM

in choosing for flight the £150 £150

OLDSMOBILE

THE BEST LIGHT CAR.

Look at this reliability record for one year, 4,572 miles covered.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER RECEIVED FROM A MEDICAL MAN.

Messrs. Jarrott and Letts. Cornwall,
March 8th, 1905.

Dear Sirs,

"I completed my first year's running on the 5 h.p. OLDSMOBILE I had on Feb. 16th, 1904, and think you may like to hear how I've got on. I had no previous knowledge of cars, and have looked after the car myself. It has been out almost every day, and there has never been a day on which the car was not fit for use. . . . It has run in all weathers, including frost and snow, over extremely hilly country; most of my hills have a grade of 1 in 6 somewhere on them. In the twelve months I have covered 4,572 miles never had a tow. . . . The car has the record of having climbed every hill in my district without having to turn out its passengers. She has been such a boon that I cannot say too much in her favour."

Yours very truly,
(Signed) MONTAGUE W. ROE.

speaks for itself and proves that the

OLDSMOBILE

climbs everything and goes anywhere.

Two Seated Car, £180. Four Seated Car, 200 Guineas.

Prices and catalogue, write—

MESSRS. JARROTT & LETTS, LIMITED,
Marlborough Street, LONDON, W.

Telegrams "Jemidar," London.

— LIGHT EXERCISE —

Can best be obtained by riding a bicycle which combines lightness with strength, and easy running with comfort. Such a machine is the

Beeston Humber

Price Complete with Two-Speed Gear, £16:16:0.

AS SUPPLIED TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS ARRANGED.
CATALOGUES FREE.

HUMBER LTD., Works, Beeston (Notts.) and Coventry.

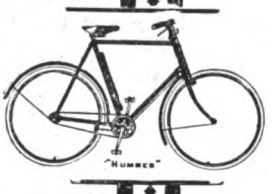
LONDON—32, Holborn Viaduct.
LIVERPOOL—73, Bold Street.
MANCHESTER—5, Deansgate.
BIRMINGHAM—4, Victoria Square.
NOTTINGHAM—Grey Friargate.
SOUTHAMPTON—27, London Road.

AGENTS EVERYWHERE.



EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR THE PARENT MAKE OF THE GENUINE

ROCHET-SCHNEIDER CARS,

FOR GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

LA LOCOMOTRICE CARS

(LICENCE ROCHET-SCHNEIDER)

AND BELGRAVE CARS.

DONNE & WILLANS, Ltd.

29a, GILLINGHAM ST., SOUTH BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.

(200 yards from Victoria Station.)

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

ARE we returning to the old hideous fashion of hoops and crinolines? That is the disturbing question that is troubling us at the moment. Paris, by whose verdict we generally abide, seems decidedly in favour of it, although at the present in a somewhat modified form, but alas! once the thin end of the wedge inserted, and we shall soon find we are destined to follow suit, and develop by degrees into the grotesque figures so ably illustrated by Leech and Cruikshank. Already in our corsets we are adopting the effect of Queen Elizabeth's corset board, although it is more scientifically arranged, and a bit more comfortable, I imagine, so I suppose the hoops will inevitably follow unless we make a stand against them, and show our independence of Dame Fashion. The stiffening and wiring and other resources that modistes are resorting to lately to make the skirt clear the feet, rather point to the fact that we are like a flock of sheep or playing the game of "Follow my leader." Let us trust our good sense will step in and draw the line shortly.

A CHARMING DINNER-GOWN IN WHITE MOUSSELINE DE SOIE.
(Messrs. Fenwick, New Bond Street, W.)

Naturally the all-round skirt so universally worn now, unless perfectly cut, is not very graceful, and yet how infinitely more healthy and convenient. Still, I have seen plenty of these skirts without an atom of stiffening, which flare out perfectly. The great secret is in the correct cut of this garment, and in the silk underskirt, which, with its abundant fulness and frills, has the desired effect. Boots and shoes are getting more and more fantastic. One lady I noticed at a large social gathering the other day, who wore a pretty dahlia-coloured cloth gown, a very short skirt, and her boots and stockings were of the same shade. I should not think it a becoming mode for those who have not perfectly proportioned extremities, as it attracts attention, and certainly makes the foot look larger.

Some of the new hats and toques that Easter inaugurated are very charming, the floral decorations are perfect, and really some of the matinée hats are so sensibly small, and pretty at the same time, that they do not interfere with the view of the stage at all. If only they were more universally adopted. The innovations for the neck, taking the place of the feather stoles, are very dainty and much more becoming. The Pierrot style particularly so, and, whilst we are still subject to cold winds, are most acceptable for comfort also. The new elbow sleeve is one of the successful novelties, and in the warmer weather will be most gratefully appreciated. At the moment it is a little too cool for this out of doors, but for home wear and visiting it is a very pretty fashion. The glove manufacturers will appreciate this, and the long Mousquetaire suède gloves are being made in every variety of shade imaginable.

I was at Fenwick's of New Bond Street the other day, and was once more impressed with the style and cut of their model gowns—both for the streets and for evening wear. Two of their latest Paris models are here illustrated. The one a visiting gown of pale grey de Nînon. The skirt, with its voluminous folds, has corded pipings at intervals, which help to stiffen and hold it out. The handsome trimmings of plaited silk and lace motives, that run lengthways from the waist to the end of the skirt in the front, give length to the figure and the requisite line. The bodice is particularly becoming and well cut. The waist line is well defined by a shaped belt, and the upper portion falls slightly full over the top of this. The graceful elbow sleeve gives an elegant finish to the whole. The dainty hat is in prune fine straw, with the palest of blush pink roses in a large cluster at one side. Another charming gown is the dinner or evening dress in white mousseline de soie. The skirt is very fully pleated in flat pleats from the waist, three parts down. It has then a very handsome and effective insertion, shaped at the top in wide curves. Narrow bands of white satin ribbon form a novel and pretty connecting link. Graduated flat folds of the mousseline de soie again intervene and finish the skirt at the hem. The square-cut bodice is correspondingly trimmed, and has a very becoming full elbow sleeve. This gown is one of the latest French models, and has been much admired by those who have seen it. There were so many delightful new creations in day and evening coats, also in Fenwick's noted tailor-mades, that it is well worth a visit before your spring outfit is completed.

R. D.

A DAINTY VISITING GOWN IN PALE GREY DE NINON.
(Messrs. Fenwick, New Bond Street, W.)

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lonnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

WILLIAMS' SHAVING SOAP

College Students

are pretty good judges of "what's what," and usually manage to have about the best of everything.

The fact that nine out of ten use Williams' Shaving Soap, is convincing evidence of its superiority.

Sold by Chemists, Hairdressers and Perfumers, all over the world, or mailed to any address on receipt of price in stamps.

Williams' Shaving Sticks, 1s. Williams' Luxury Tablets, 1s.
Williams' American Shaving Tablets, 6d.

(Trial Size) of Williams' Shaving Stick, 4d. Trial Tablet Williams' Shaving Soap for 1d. stamp by addressing

THE J. B. WILLIAMS CO., 65 Great Russell St., LONDON, W. C.; 161 Clarence St., SYDNEY Main Office and Factories, GLASTONBURY, CONN., U. S. A.

BY ROYAL WARRANT TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING

DEWAR'S "White Label"

Pure JAEGER Wool

EVERY ARTICLE OF ATTIRE FOR LADIES MEN & CHILDREN AT FIXED MODERATE PRICES

The JAEGER PURE WOOL NATURAL UNDERWEAR IS GUARANTEED AGAINST SHRINKAGE AND IS DURABLE SOFT AND COMFORTABLE

Write for PRICE LIST (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations, post free.

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffeta," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

SHIRTS ... ... from 8s. 9d.
PYJAMA SUITS ... 15s. 9d.
NIGHT SHIRTS ... 12s. 9d.

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria St., S.W.
85 & 86, Cheapside, E.C.

BATH— 10, New Bond Street.
BRIGHTON— 59, East Street.
EDINBURGH— 119a, Princes Street.
EASTBOURNE— 6, Grove Road.
GLASGOW— 16, Buchanan Street.
LEEDS— 23, Commercial Street.
LIVERPOOL— 58, Church Street, and 4, Castle Street.
MANCHESTER— 18, King Street.
NEWCASTLE— 6, Northumberland St.
PLYMOUTH— 9, George Street.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as "JAEGER" on invoice.

THEY TOUCH THE LIVER

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS FOR

HEADACHE
DIZZINESS
BILIOUSNESS
TORPID LIVER
CONSTIPATION
SALLOW SKIN
THE COMPLEXION

SMALL PILL. DOSE. PRICE.

Be sure they are Genuine
Carter's Little Liver Pills, in blue and white wrapper.
Look for signature—

Alfred Good

All Chemists, 1/1½. Send for Booklet "Character Reading by Handwriting."
British Depot 46 Holborn Viaduct, London.

The GARDEN

The Leading Gardening Newspaper for Amateur and Professional Gardeners.

PRICE 1D. Weekly.

The Flower Garden. The Rose Garden.
The Kitchen Garden. The Fruit Garden.
New and Rare Plants, Orchids, etc., etc.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS A SPECIAL FEATURE.

A COLOURED PLATE IS GIVEN WITH ALTERNATE ISSUES.

CONSULT THE ADVERTISEMENT PAGES FOR EVERY REQUISITE FOR THE GARDEN.

To be had of all Newsagents and Bookstalls.

Specimen Copy post free from the Manager, THE GARDEN, 20, Tavistock Stree Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Shrimp Sauce

Lobster Sauce, Anchovy, Oyster, Egg, and Parsley Sauces for Fish should be made with

Brown & Polson's

"Patent" Corn Flour

as thickening instead of ordinary wheat flour. In this way you get Fish Sauces that are of much finer flavour and altogether more dainty and delicious.

Now Ready. Send 1d. stamp to Brown & Polson, Paisley, for their New Booklet "Simple Fish and Vegetable Sauces."

LAZENBY'S Sauce.

The only sauce in the market which is the old Harvey's Sauce and not a copy, bears the signature of Elizabeth Lazenby in Red Ink across he label. It is now called Lazenby's Sauce.

CHEF Sauce.

A rich fruity sauce for Hot and Cold Joints, Curries, Stews, &c. It improves the meal and aids the digestion.

PREPARED BY
E. LAZENBY & SON, Ld.
13 TRINITY STREET. S.E.

S.H.B.

THE KING'S MENU.

CLEAR OX-TAIL SOUP.

For this one of the frozen American ox-tails answers just as well as the dearer English ones. If large it will make about three quarts of soup, while next day the bones and clarifying meat, if this latter is well rinsed, will produce an excellent thick ox-tail. Again, the pieces of meat over from the tail on the first day will make a very nice dish for next day's lunch if served with brown sauce, and the vegetables from the soup cut into dice for a macedoine; or the meat can be curried and served with rice or macaroni, spagetti, etc. For the clear soup, cut the tail—mind it is properly thawed first if a frozen one is used—into neat pieces, and place them in cold water with just a pinch of salt in a stewpan; put this on the stove, bring to the boil, then strain, and rinse the tail in cold water and dry well. Melt an ounce or so of butter or clarified dripping in a stewpan, and fry in it four ounces of sliced onion, a leek, three ounces each of carrot and turnip, and one of celery, a bunch of herbs, a blade or two of mace, six or seven peppercorns and the same of cloves tied up with a bay leaf and the herbs. When the vegetables begin to colour add the well-dried pieces of tail, and fry till the meat is lightly browned. Now add from two and a-half to four quarts of good hot stock, the amount of this depending on the size of the tail. Bring gently to the boil, skimming very carefully, and when quite clear of scum draw to the side of the stove and simmer steadily for three and a-half to four hours. The stock is then strained off and freed from fat—it is best to make this soup the day before it is to be clarified, letting the stock get cold and then removing all fat. It is then clarified in the usual way with raw meat, white and shell of egg, and served after reheating, the garnish in it. The garnish is of small cubes of some of the meat from the tail and some of the vegetables from the stock-pot cut into little shapes with a plain pea-cutter. Many people prefer this soup very slightly thickened by adding at the last after the soup is clarified a dessertspoonful of best Bermuda arrowroot mixed with a wineglassful of sherry or cold clarified stock, for every quart of soup. Stir these together till they boil, then put in the garnish of meat and vegetables, and when these have heated through the soup is ready.

AN INEXPENSIVE LITTLE DINNER.

POTAGE DE QUEUE DE BŒUF CLAIR.

MERLANS FARCIS SUR LE PLAT.

COTELETTES EN CASSEROLE.

PIGEONS SUR CROUTES.

SALADE CUITE.

BAVAROIS AUX BANANES.

CROQUETTES A LA MILANAISE.

MERLANS FARCIS SUR LE PLAT.

For two good-sized whiting make a farce with two pennyworth of picked shrimps, two fillets of anchovies minced finely, two ounces of bread-crumbs, one well-beaten egg for binding, and a seasoning of mace, pepper, and salt, and a spoonful of finely-minced parsley added is an improvement to many tastes. Have the whiting unskinned and uncurled, clean and dry them thoroughly, then fill with the farce. Have ready a well-buttered oval fireproof china gratin dish, sprinkle with finely-minced parsley, lay the whiting in this, brush over with melted butter (i.e., oiled butter, not sauce), and moisten round the fish with either a gill of milk first flavoured by boiling up in it a teaspoonful of chopped shallot, and a pinch each of mace, pepper, and salt, or else a little fish stock and white wine can be used. Put the dish in the oven and bake for twelve or fifteen minutes, keeping the fish well basted with either the flavoured milk or stock. It is then served in the dish it was cooked in, with no sauce but the basting liquor and the juice which comes from the fish. Hand cut lemon and brown bread and butter. If a simpler dish is desired omit the stuffing, but have the fish sent home as directed, then after cleaning and drying, score each across one side at intervals of an inch and a-half, and lay the fish in the gratin dish with this side uppermost. Then after brushing well with oiled butter, sprinkle with a layer of finely-grated Parmesan before pouring the flavoured milk round. Proceed otherwise as above, only substitute a Dutch oven before the fire for the ordinary one. Fresh herrings stuffed and baked in this way, then served with horseradish sauce, are extremely good and savoury.

COTELETTES EN CASSEROLE.

For this, which is simply our old friend mutton hot-pot cooked and served in a casserole, cut a nice neck of mutton, weighing about three pounds, into cutlets, then cut away the bones (which can be used to make the stock for the casserole), leaving the meat cutlet-shaped. Line a casserole with a layer of parboiled sliced potatoes and blanched sliced onions, put a layer of the meat cutlets on this

Digitized by Google

(seasoning the meat first, mind, with pepper and salt, and a little curry powder with this seasoning is an improvement), cover with a layer of potato and onion, and so on till the meat is all used and the casserole nearly full, finishing with a layer of small whole potatoes. Pour in half a pint of good well-flavoured stock, or, failing this, dissolve a spoonful of Lemco in the requisite quantity of water. Put the lid on the casserole, and bake in a moderate oven till the top layer of potatoes is quite cooked. A little more stock, about a gill and a-half altogether, must be added from time to time, as that in the casserole evaporates in cooking.

PIGEONS SUR CROUTES.

For these choose Bordeaux pigeons, and have them drawn and trussed at home, and use their livers, together with that of a chicken (which the poulterer should send with the pigeons), as follows: Fry a teaspoonful of minced onion in a dessertspoonful of butter in a small sauté-pan, then put in the pigeons' and chicken's livers and fry gently, adding a seasoning of powdered dried herbs, pepper, salt, and half an ounce of glaze. As soon as the livers are soft empty the contents of the pan into a mortar, pound all to a paste, and use it to spread on the croûtes on which the roasted pigeons are served. The birds should be lightly roasted, well basted, and served very hot. Good gravy, bread sauce, and a salad of cooked vegetables should accompany them to table.

CROQUETTES A LA MILANAISE.

These can be made with macaroni, spagetti, or vermicelli, only be careful that whichever of these Italian pastes is used it is really fresh. Take two ounces of whichever is used, put it into plenty of fast boiling water, slightly salted (and on no account wash the paste first, as is the barbarous custom of many English cooks), and boil till the paste is just tender, but still breaks crisp when tried with a fork. Directly it is done enough stop the boiling with a dash of cold water, drain, chop the macaroni or spagetti, etc., small. Return it to the hot dry pan, with two tablespoonfuls of good white sauce, one tablespoonful of tomato purée (this and the white sauce should both be hot, mind), and two tablespoonfuls of finely-grated Parmesan cheese. Work these together over the fire till quite stiff, and well mixed, then turn the mixture out on to a cold dish, patting it into a disc about an inch thick. When quite cold and firm and the croquettes are wanted, divide the mixture into equal portions, and with a couple of spoons shape these into little oval or cork shapes. Brush them over with beaten egg, roll in fine bread-crumbs seasoned with grated Parmesan cheese and coralline pepper, and fry the croquettes in deep smoking fat. When a rich gold colour drain them well and serve very hot, dusted over with grated Parmesan.

GATEAU AUX FRUITS A LA CHANTILLY.
(Specially prepared and photographed for this paper.)

BAVAROIS AUX BANANES.

For this for a pint mould, sufficient for four or five people, rub sufficient ripe bananas, skinned first, of course, through a fine hair sieve, to produce half a pint of pulp, add the juice of half a lemon, or, better still, a spoonful of white rum, sweeten to taste with castor sugar, then mix in half a pint of custard with which has been well mixed half to three-quarters of an ounce of finest leaf gelatine first dissolved in a spoonful or two of hot water before adding to the custard. This can be a simple one of corn-flour, or a rich one of cream and egg yolks only. Anyway, it is nicest flavoured with vanilla, as this brings out the flavour of fruit so well. The custard must be mixed with the fruit pulp while just warm. Have ready a mould lined with clear lemon jelly, pour in the bavarois mixture, and stand on ice till firm. Do not unmould the bavarois till it is wanted to send to table. Any fruit pulp can be used instead of the banana if these proportions are adhered to.

SYBARITE.

TALKING OF COCOA,

It is worthy of note that there are no dregs in the real article, nothing deleterious whatever; it is precious to the last drop—at least, this is the universal testimony to

Fry's PURE CONCENTRATED Cocoa.

300 Gold Medals, etc.

"It deserves all the praise it has received from the Leaders of the Profession."—Medical Magazine.

"I have never tasted cocoa that I like so well."—Sir Chas. A. Cameron.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

THE "BOUDOIR" LADIES' GOLF COMPETITION.—The proposed rules and conditions are as follows: A limited number of ladies' golf clubs, affiliated to the Ladies' Golf Union, to be invited by the Boudoir to enter for this competition. At each club the lady competitor who returns the lowest aggregate for the best six rounds on the ordinary Medal days during the nine months—April to December inclusive—shall be the winner in that particular club. Handicap limited to 15. The final, which will consist of a Thirty-six-hole Medal Round, will take place under conditions to be arranged by Miss Issette Pearson, who has kindly agreed to act as referee throughout the competition. Her decision on all points will be final. Competition to last nine months, commencing April, 1905. The secretary of each club shall forward to Miss Mabel Stringer, the 20th Century Club, 29, Stanley Gardens, W., a list of gross and nett scores within three days of the completion of each Monthly Medal Club Competition. The returns of each club will be published every month in the magazine under the heading of "The Boudoir Ladies' Golf Competition." The prizes given by the proprietors of the Boudoir have been selected from the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, 112, Regent Street, W.

---

OUR readers who are on the look-out for a flat for the coming season in London will find their task considerably easier this year by means of a novel and admirably-planned feature in our contemporary the Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette. For years past the unfortunate flat-hunter has been obliged to wade through columns of advertisements of indiscriminately assorted flats, and many a wild-goose chase has resulted from following up mysterious references to flats in unspecified parts of London. Our contemporary has adopted an excellent system by which all the "Flats" advertisements are classified according to district, and inserted under separate headings, as "Mayfair and St. James's," "Kensington and South Kensington," etc. The flat-hunter can thus see at a glance what there is available from day to day in his or her favourite locality, and can, if necessary, visit all the most likely flats in that district in the course of a morning. The list published daily in the Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette is a very complete one, and includes all the principal blocks of flats in London, nearly a whole page being given up to this feature.

---

THE widely-increasing prosperity of the coming Naval Exhibition, which will be opened at Earl's Court by the Lord Mayor on May 6, has resulted in 766 members being elected to the Old Welcome Club at the full meeting of the committee. Earl Roberts will again occupy the presidency during the 1905 season.

---

H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE, Duchess of Argyll, has most graciously given her immediate patronage to the series of concerts which have been arranged in aid of The Heritage, the Craft and Toy-making School of the Guild of the Brave Poor Things, on May 2, 6, 9, 12, and 15, and of which full particulars and tickets can be obtained of Mrs. C. W. Kimmins, Dame Armstrong House, Harrow-on-the-Hill.

---

ON May 15 and 29 two matinées, which promise to be particularly interesting, will be given at the Court Theatre by Miss Rosina Filippi. The bill will consist of "Belinda," an adaptation of Rhoda Broughton's popular novel, and (second) "Tableaux from Dante," with dialogue by Rosina Filippi, and scenes from "Alice in Wonderland," dramatised by express permission of Messrs. Macmillan, the publishers, by herself and Nigel Playfair. We have already spent many pleasant half-hours with the products of Miss Filippi's pen, and two very agreeable afternoons may be reasonably anticipated.

---

ON and after the 1st prox. the service by the Harwich route between London and Liège will be greatly accelerated. Passengers leaving Liverpool Street Station at 8.40 p.m. will be due at Liège at noon the following day. Dining and breakfast cars will be attached to the boat trains between Liverpool Street Station and Parkeston Quay, Harwich. By this service passengers are enabled to enjoy a night's rest and breakfast in the steamer before landing at Antwerp. Through carriages will run from alongside the steamer to Liège and vice versâ. The Great Eastern Railway Company have also arranged for cheap return tickets, available for seven days, in connection with the exhibition, which will enable passengers to break their journey at Brussels.

THE "BOUDOIR" LADIES' GOLF COMPETITION.
Some of the prizes offered in the competition which has just opened, and which is to last nine months.

---

T.R.H. THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT and suite witnessed the two plays by J. M. Barrie, "Pantaloon" and "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," at the Duke of York's Theatre on Thursday evening last.

---

IN the Empress Hall at the Earl's Court Exhibition this year a full-sized third-class cruiser will make a tour of the Mediterranean. As is appropriate to a Naval Exhibition, organised by the leading experts in the land, the cruiser will be accurate in every detail and be armed with four 4·7-in. guns—similar to those that saved Ladysmith—four 6-pounder Hotchkiss, and four ·303 Maxims, all quick-firers. Her binnacle, steam winch, and pumping gear are those that were used in the Antarctic ship "Discovery." About 800 people at one time will be enabled to make the passage in the Mediterranean, and in this cruiser witness the daily life on board a war-ship.

---

MESSRS. STONE'S Furniture Cream has a number of excellent qualities to recommend it to careful housekeepers who like to see a good polish on the furniture. Not the least of these is its freedom from that overpowering scent which is so characteristic of other furniture polishes.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
SPECIAL MATINEE, TO-DAY (SATURDAY) at 2,
HAMLET.
To-night at 8. JULIUS CÆSAR.
MONDAY NEXT, May 8 (for four nights),
TWELFTH NIGHT.
Box Office (Mr. Watts) open 10 to 10.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.30.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Magnificent Varieties.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
The LORD MAYOR OF LONDON will OPEN the EXHIBITION in STATE, on SATURDAY, May 6th.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.,
which entitle owner to be present at the opening ceremony, can now be obtained at the Exhibition and all libraries.
Admission on Opening Day, before 2 p.m., 2s. 6d afterwards, and Daily, 1s.
Open 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
In the QUEEN'S COURT GALLERIES.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping and Fishery Sections.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of All Naval Events from the 15th to the 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
Concerts by the BANDS of ROYAL MARINES, 21st LANCERS, and EXHIBITION NAVAL BAND.
NAVAL AND SHIPPING EXHIBITION.
In the EMPRESS HALL. "WITH THE FLEET."
LIFE IN A CRUISER. "WITH THE FLEET."
The Handy Man at Work. "WITH THE FLEET."
The Handy Man at Play. "WITH THE FLEET."
L'Entente Cordiale "WITH THE FLEET."
Saluting French Squadron. "WITH THE FLEET."
Gun and Cutlass Drills. Storm at Sea.
"WITH THE FLEET." LIFE IN A CRUISER.
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work,
DEATH OF NELSON.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes.
Great CANADIAN INDIAN VILLAGE.—Chiefs, Artisans, Squaws, and Papooses. Hall of Monarchs. Voyage in a Submarine.
Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Shipwrecks.
Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes.
EXQUISITE ILLUMINATED GARDENS.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Patrick Rose-Innes | 187 |
| The March of Events | 188 |
| On the Links | 194 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 199 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 200 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Strange Marriages | 202 |
| Parisian Players | 203 |
| Under the Burgee | 204 |
| Yachts of the Year | 205 |
| Artistic Photography—III.—The Work of the Lafayette Studios | 206 |
| At the Lafayette Studios | 207 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the Midland Railway | 208 |
| Letters to Stage Favourites—XXIII.—To Miss Tita Brand | 210 |
| The Cricket Season—The Australian Team, by P. F. Warner | 211 |
| The Racing Season | 214 |
| The Services | 216 |
| May Day Merry-makings—May 1, 1805—May 1, 1905 | viii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—London Autograph Sales for April and May | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Paris Restaurants | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hote or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz, the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava. All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

The "Country Life" Library.

Lilies for English Gardens.

WRITTEN AND COMPILED BY
GERTRUDE JEKYLL.
Price 8s. 6d. Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

THE BOOK OF THE SEASON.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS.

By E. T. COOK.

THIRD EDITION.

Price 12s. 6d. nett.

SO great has been the success of this gardening book for beginners that a third edition has been called for and is now ready. This work is for those who are about to begin gardening, nothing that will help the beginner over first difficulties being omitted.

About 100 diagrams will explain certain practical operations better than mere descriptions. There are also nearly 200 illustrations, prepared in the best style, of flowers, fruit, vegetables, and trees and shrubs.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES LIMITED, 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

Your face tells; if soft and smooth, you use Williams' Shaving Soap.

Williams' Shaving Sticks and Tablets sold everywhere. Trial sample for 1d. stamp to pay postage. Write for Free booklet, "How to Shave." The J. B. Williams Co., 65 Great Russell St., London.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870. 119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C. and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus. A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

RHEUMATISM. BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

THE GARDEN.

WEEKLY, PRICE 1d.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street Strand W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE (PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,

17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including

2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,
Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to he ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel. Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

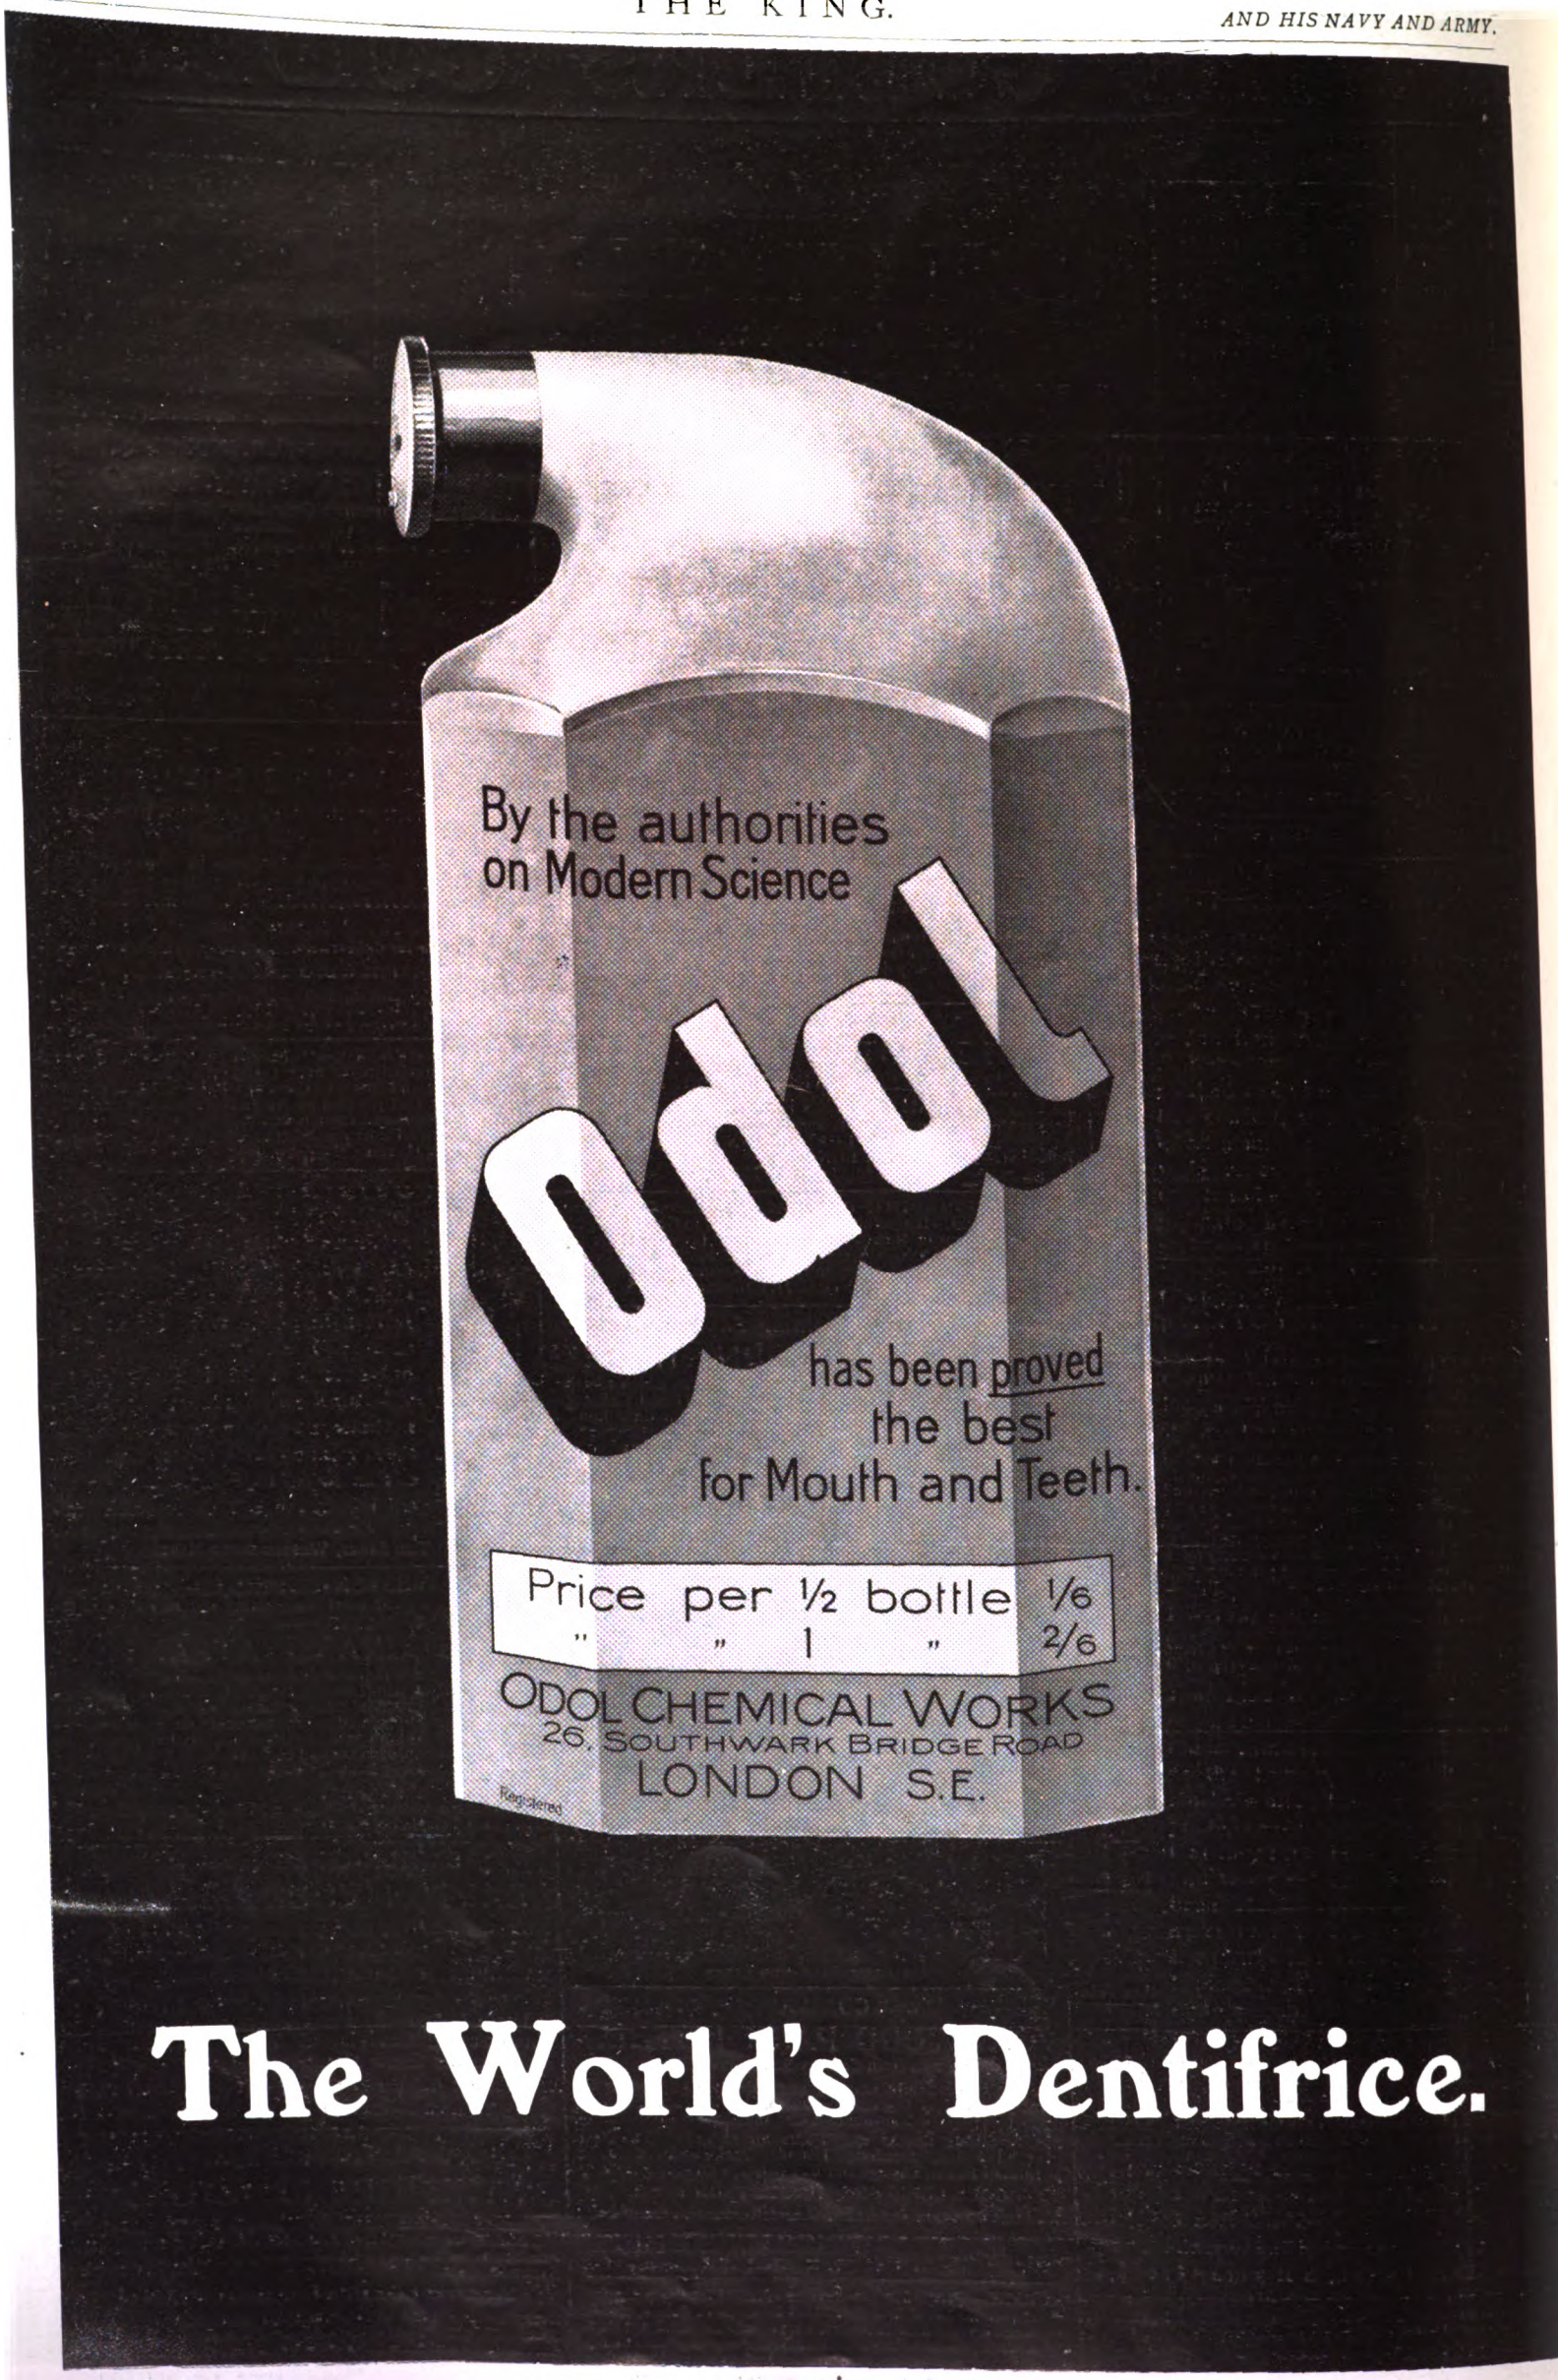
MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google



Digitized by Google

THE AUSTRALIAN TEAM.

By P. F. WARNER.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 432. SATURDAY, MAY 13th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Weston.

MR. PATRICK ROSE-INNES

Prospective Unionist Candidate for Elgin Burghs.

(See page 199.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY. THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 432. Saturday, May 13, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND SANDRINGHAM.—It is noteworthy that the King takes the earliest opportunity after his tour to visit Sandringham, and that his first week-end in England should be spent in his own county. For their Norfolk home all King Edward's family have a great affection, and the house, which, as the inscription over the portico says, "was built by Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, and Alexandra, his wife, in the year of our Lord 1870," has been so frequently the scene of happy family events and reunions. It was at Sandringham that the present Prince and Princess of Wales spent their honeymoon, and it is at Sandringham that the Christmas festivities are held, and it is to Sandringham that the King invariably wends his way when he wants a quiet week-end. Few country seats are so simple yet so elegant as the Norfolk home of the King, and his own study there, plainly furnished, with not even a rug on the oak floor, is a model of what such a room should be.

THE KING'S HORSES.—Last week many people learned to their surprise that no horse which had been in the King's service was disposed of by sale when his period of usefulness in the Royal stables was at an end. The King has a great aversion to allowing any animal which has been in his possession to be sent away to a life which may possibly be full of pain, and in which in any case it cannot be treated with the kindness and consideration which fell to its lot while of the Royal household. Therefore, when the animals are past work, the merciful course of despatching them by a dose of chloroform is followed. The King has a great fondness for animals, and of his attachment to the Irish terrier Jack, who got into trouble in Paris the other day for trespassing in the Tuileries Garden, much has been written. But Jack, it is reported, has a rival in the French bulldog, presented to King Edward by one of his friends in Paris. This animal is a splendid specimen of his breed, and at their best French bulldogs are both valuable and amiable.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S CONCERT.—The concert which is to be held this week at the Albert Hall in aid of the funds of the Union Jack Club, has been organised at considerable pains by the Prince of Wales, who has thrown himself heart and soul into every measure which has been taken to secure the future of this "home" in London for seamen, soldiers, and marines. A large and distinguished audience will be present at this concert, and at the Prince's request a number of singers of world-wide renown are making special efforts to be present. The King has intimated his intention to be present, and practically all the leaders of London will be in the audience. Of the labour entailed in the organisation of such an entertainment few can have any idea, and the fact that, despite his recent indisposition and his multifarious other duties, the Prince has attended to every detail himself, shows clearly the intense enthusiasm with which he is working for the welfare of the club.

MR. J. W. MATHEWS

First Master of Freemasons' Lodge, Chelsea, No. 3098, which is to be consecrated at Frascati's this week. The members of the Lodge are all connected with the theatrical and music-hall professions, and this is the first time that an attempt has been made to get the two to work hand in hand.

PRINCE EITEL FRITZ IN ENGLAND.—The children of the German Emperor are not so well known in this country as their illustrious father, but there is one of them, Prince Eitel Fritz, to whom Englishmen will extend a cordial welcome, if only for the fact that he is the intimate friend of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, our Duchess of Albany's son. The two young men are brothers-in-arms, in that they serve in the same regiment, and though Prince Eitel Fritz has been absent from his regiment for some time past on sick leave, the friendship has not languished. If his impartial nature permitted it, it is quite possible the Kaiser would look upon Prince Eitel Fritz as his favourite son, and there can be no doubt that he is the most gifted of the six boys. He is very musical, and has a strong bent for art, and in addition is a good all-round sportsman and a crack shot. Unlike his eldest brother, he is not a squire of dames, but English people would not be sorry if it shou'd prove to be a young English Princess whom he had come to see, as well as the mother of his companion-in-arms.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

M. DELCASSE

The Minister for Foreign Affairs in the French Government, returning from his interview with King Edward at the Hotel Bristol.

Copyright.

THE KING IN PARIS.

The crowds which gathered to greet the King whenever he went abroad in Paris were a strong testimony to his popularity.

Illustration Bureau.

AT DOVER.

In returning from France the King made use of the new turbine steamer "Onward," which was specially fitted up for the occasion.

Copyright.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AT WOOLWICH.

In his official capacity as Inspector-General of the Forces, the Duke of Connaught has just paid a visit of inspection to the Woolwich Military Station. His Royal Highness is here seen leaving the garrison church in company with Colonel Coke, the District Commander.

Copyright.

Copyright.

Schaarwächter.

ROYAL VISITORS TO ENGLAND.

(1) The Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, who has just returned to Claremont on a visit to his mother, the Duchess of Albany. (2) King Alfonso XIII. of Spain, preparations for whose visit to this country are proceeding apace. (3) Prince Eitel Fritz, son of the German Emperor, who has accompanied the Duke of Saxe-Coburg to Claremont.

Digitized by Google

EARL'S COURT, 1905.—In opening the Naval, Shipping, and Fisheries Exhibition at Earl's Court on Saturday last, the Lord Mayor said that he thought it was one which could not fail to awaken the enthusiastic appreciation of countless visitors. And if the enormous crowds that thronged the grounds of the exhibition on the opening day be any earnest of what is to come, the Lord Mayor will have shown himself an admirable prophet. There is much to interest and amuse in every part of the exhibition, from the cruise in a war-ship from port to port in the Mediterranean, invented and arranged by Mr. Herman Hart and his assistants, to West's "Our Navy," which is shown in a fine model of the "Victory." Professor Fleischer's panorama of the battle of Trafalgar again is one of the finest side shows which the directors at Earl's Court have ever given us. However much they may wish to, visitors will find it difficult to avoid taking the cruise in the "Python" in the Empress Hall, which has been fitted up as an accurate representation of the upper deck of a cruiser, while by means of a moving panorama on either side the impression of motion is given. Then, too, you may go to the bottom of the sea in a submarine boat, or inspect in another part of the grounds the fishes to be found there and learn how they are caught. More instructive and quite as interesting will be found the unique collection of relics of Nelson and other great Naval commanders exhibited, with portraits and pictures of battles, in the galleries so excellently arranged by Mr. Claude Garnett. A visit, too, should be paid to the beautiful models of ships shown in the commercial section, under the direction of Mr. Harold Hartley.

CHANGING LONDON.—To anyone who has been absent from the Mother Country for some years London must now present an almost uncanny appearance. For so much that used to be typical of the metropolis has been cleared away, and new and wonderful buildings are springing up to replace the old-fashioned erections which have had to yield to the pick and shovel. As a natural consequence many places of considerable historical interest have passed away, and this is especially the case in the region which is now a desolate waste, but which will in time become the "golden way" from the Strand to Holborn. To the casual passer-by, perhaps, there is nothing to attract attention to the little Harp Tavern in Russell Street, Covent Garden, which has at length had to submit to the fate which some time ago befel the buildings on either hand of it. And yet it is safe to say that in the bar of the old Harp almost every actor of the past two centuries has at some time or other taken his stoup. And even actresses could be included, for Nance Oldfield Anne Bracegirdle, and Mme. Vestris, to name but three of the most notable, are known to have enjoyed the hospitality of the old tavern. But it is with Edmund Kean that the most interesting memories of the place are bound up, and up to within a quarter of a century ago there were old men who still went to the Harp who had been frequenters in the days of the "City of Lushington" Club, of famous memory.

Illustrated Bureau.

THE "KING ALFRED" ASHORE.

The armoured cruiser "King Alfred" went ashore on the Shoebury Sands on Friday last, but was subsequently got off without damage, and proceeded on her voyage to relieve the armoured cruiser "Aboukir."

Cooke

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD AND THE "PRESIDENT."

At the beginning of this month the new Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet, who is now making a trip to America, hoisted his flag in the old training-ship "President" in the West India Docks.

Copyright.

THE NEW TRAINING-SHIP "EXMOUTH."

A full-sized replica of the old 90-gun ship "Exmouth," which since 1876 has been utilised as a training-ship, was launched by Messrs. Vickers, Sons, and Maxim, last week to replace the old vessel off Grays.

THE RETURN TO TOWN.—The beginning of May has seen the arrival back in town of nearly all the leaders of Society, from the King and the Prince of Wales downwards. The Princess of Wales, it is true, will only be back at Marlborough House next week, but Princess Henry of Battenberg and Princess Ena have arrived from the Riviera, and Princess Christian has returned from her short trip to Wales. From now until the middle of June nearly all the Royal family are expected to remain in town, and the Queen's return, though it must depend to some extent on the rapidity with which Princess Victoria of Wales regains her strength, is expected within the next few days. Whitsuntide and Ascot clash this year, but the race week should be a brilliant event, considering how many people will be freed from business cares.

Digitized by Google

THE NELSON RELICS AT EARL'S COURT

(1) A Chippendale chair, originally the property of Lord Nelson, and forming part of the furniture at Merton. (2) A silver tea-tray, bearing the Arms of Lord Nelson. (3) A Chippendale arm-chair, formerly the property of Lord Nelson. (4) Dirk used by Lord Nelson as a midshipman. Two swords belonging to Admiral Nelson. Lord Nelson's telescope, given to Captain Sir Thomas Fremantle after the Admiral's death. (5) Original drawing from the College of Arms for the Nelson Peerage (Viscountcy) armorial bearings. (6) The Nelson Cenotaph, made of the 84 guineas which were found in Nelson's purse when he was mortally wounded at Trafalgar. (7) Two spare left-handed gloves. A glove stretcher for a one-armed man (in centre at top). A pair of shoe-buckles. Some spare buttons for uniform coats. Collar of the Order of Bath worn by Lord Nelson (in case). Two beakers, part of a china service presented to Lord Nelson. Small saucepan (on left) used for heating brandy. Locks of Lord Nelson's hair in sealed box (on right), preserved in original papers. The majority of these well-authenticated relics have been lent to the exhibition by the Hon. Alexander Nelson Hood.

Digitized by Google

A Bit of History.—The death of the Vicomtesse Aquado in Paris the other day recalls the romantic story of her house. She was a Macdonell of Glengarry, whose great-grandfather emigrated to New York State on the break up of the Highland Clans after the '45. On the outbreak of the Revolution, with striking inconsistency, he, and every man of his name, took up arms for the King. When the Republic was acknowledged they lost everything, and voluntarily exiled themselves to Canada. Here Macdonell of Aberchalder became a man of consequence, and was the first Adjutant-General of the Militia in Upper Canada. He was afterwards made British Consul-General in Algiers. He had two sons—one our late Minister to Lisbon, and the other the Colonel of the Prince Consort's Own Rifle Brigade, who died in 1891. Seven of his daughters married men of position, the eighth being a nun. Vicomtesse Aquado was the fifth, and she and her husband were leading social lights under the Second Empire. Another filled a brilliant place as the wife of Don Augusto Conte, Spanish Ambassador at Vienna.

Count Von Moltke's Engagement.—At the farewell garden party given to Lord Milner in Pretoria, one of the most noticeable figures was Count Von Moltke, who was being overwhelmed with congratulations on his engagement to Miss Rose-Innes. He is a great-nephew of the famous German soldier. His fiancée is a daughter of the Chief Justice of the Transvaal, and is, therefore, a member of a family with roots in South African soil. Her father is the third of his name to rise to eminence in the Colony, her grandfather having been the well-known Secretary for Native Affairs and friend of Sir Bartle Frere, and her great-grandfather the head of the Education Department in the Cape Colony. The present Chief Justice of the Transvaal has a fine record, both as lawyer and politician. He was a member of the Rhodes Cabinet, but sacrificed place to his teetotal principles. During the trial of the Reform prisoners he represented the British Government. Later on he was Attorney-General in the Sprigg Ministry, and Leader of the Opposition. Curiously enough, the daughter of Sir Richard Solomon, the Attorney-General of the Transvaal, is also married to a man of distinction of another race, the French-Canadian, Sir Percy Girouard.

MRS. GREGOR MACGREGOR AND HER BABY.

Mrs. MacGregor is the eldest daughter of Mr. T. W. N. Oliver of Meads, Cuckfield, Sussex, and was married in 1902 to Mr. Gregor MacGregor, the well-known football and cricket player.

A Coming General.—Last week Colonel P. H. N. Lake was promoted above several of his seniors to the rank of Major-General. He is an officer whose brilliant intellectual and practical abilities have been proved both at home and abroad. He is, moreover, one of the few English soldiers who have gained popularity in Canada as a man as well as a soldier. For five years, 1893 to 1898, he was Adjutant-General of the Militia, and so impressed was the Government with his military qualities that they asked the War Office to lend him to the Dominion until Sir Frederick Borden's reforms are in working order. At first he could be spared only for a short time, but now arrangements have been made by which he is to spend four years in Canada as Chief of the Staff. Major-General Lake did good work in India, and came prominently to the front in connection with his services in the Intelligence Department during the South African War. He is an Imperial officer in the truest sense of the term.

South Africans in Society.—Lord and Lady Farquhar gave a large dinner party lately at their house in Grosvenor Square. Their guests included the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, Lord and Lady Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Rochfort Maguire, and Mr. and Mrs. Julius Wernher. Among South Africans in London these last take a high place. Mrs. Maguire is, as everyone knows, a daughter of Viscount Peel, and, for some time, acted as hostess to her father when he was Speaker. Her husband, popular Irishman that he is, made his money in South Africa, where he was on intimate terms with Mr. Rhodes. Mrs. Wernher is one of the few women in Society whose photograph is never seen in the newspapers. She is tall, graceful, and beautiful. As a hostess she is charming, but she does not entertain on a large scale. She prefers life at Luton Hoo, the famous country place her husband bought from the executors of the late Mme. de Falbe, to the rush of Society in London. In the winter she organised a most successful show of dolls for poor children; most of them were dressed by herself and her friends.

"Bradlaugh" and the "General."—Maoriland is amused, for General Booth, who is visiting the Colony, is the guest of Sir Robert Stout. He is an atheist, and so fierce was the contention he raised a generation ago that he was called the "Bradlaugh of New Zealand." He is one of those men who fight so well that they are seldom at peace. In his political career he managed to make even more enemies than his ability warranted, and always contrived to be in the thick of a public controversy of some kind. Even his retirement to the safe haven of the Supreme Court has failed to tone down the pugnacity of his temperament. First of all he made a fierce onslaught on that temple of dispassionate judgment, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Then he fought the Government on the question of precedence. It is said that Mr. Seddon made Sir Robert Stout Chief Justice in order to get him out of the way. It is not unlikely, for the "Bradlaugh" of the Colony would be a formidable political rival even to "King Dick."

Digitized by Google

PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT. — The recent indisposition of Prince Arthur of Connaught fortunately proved to be slight, and he has been able to go North to enjoy a short holiday and a little fishing. Like all the Royal family, Prince Arthur has many friends in Scotland, and also like his relatives, he is intensely proud of his Scotch ancestry. Queen Victoria, as is well known, liked nothing so well as to have it remembered that she had Stuart blood in her veins, and King Edward when North frequently takes the opportunity to don the kilt. In passing it may be noted that even now many journalists (and other people besides) cannot rid their minds of the idea that the correct appellation of the Scotch national costume is "kilts." Yet there is an admirable mnemonic in the answer to the old riddle about the Scotchman and the Irishman, the one being "cold with the kilt, and the other kilt with the cold." The "ordinary dress of a Highland gentleman," as the Prince of Wales once happily termed it, is the kilt.

BARON DE FOREST'S NEW STEAM YACHT.— "Honor," the vessel recently launched from Messrs. Ramage and Ferguson's yard, Leith, will form a notable addition to the existing fleets of steam yachts. She has a total length over all of 260-ft., and her breadth is 31-ft. She will be fitted with triple-expansion engines capable of developing 1,400-h.p. She is not designed to attain a high speed over a measured mile, but with a view of making extended cruises she will be able to maintain an average speed of 13-knots on long voyages. Her accommodation is exceptionally fine, and the most modern improvements have been adopted in every department. A particular interest attaches to this vessel, as being the latest yacht designed by the late G. L. Watson. Baron de Forest will be best remembered in yachting circles as the original owner of the 52-footer "Magdalen," which made such a remarkable record in 1901. "Honor" is expected to be ready for commission in June.

TENNYSON AND LYCIDAS.—We have heard much lately of Lycidas, thanks to the action of the Academy in refusing Mr. Havard Thomas's life-sized statue in black wax; but perhaps few remembered, if they ever knew of, Milton's poem on the subject, that poem of which Mr. James Douglas once said that "one half is magnificent art, the other half is magnificent artifice." Tennyson, who was himself not altogether free from certain Miltonic affectations, was very fond of reading "Lycidas" aloud; but it is said of him that whenever he came to the line, "And oh! ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth," he invariably stopped and remarked: "That is the only bad line Milton ever wrote." And the recent unveiling of the memorial to Elizabeth Barrett Browning reminds us of Tennyson's criticism of her husband. "Browning is devoted to music," he said, "but there is no music in his verse. I know nothing about music, and don't care for it in the least; but my verse is full of music."

LADY SELBORNE AND SOUTH AFRICA.— After all, Lady Selborne has not been able to go out to South Africa with her husband. This will be a great disappointment to the Colonists. As anyone who has seen the reception of a Governor knows, much of its charm is lost when her Excellency is conspicuous by her absence. Moreover, it would seem as though South Africa is to be as unfortunate socially as she is politically. Lord Milner is a bachelor, so for eight years she has been starved in her growth on its lighter side. Indeed, she has never known what it is to have a brilliant Viceregal Court in her midst, for the present High Commissioner is the first English peer who has accepted the post since Lord Caledon went out a hundred years ago. Until 1897 it was filled by civil servants at the end of their career. Hence the eager anticipation of South Africans to welcome Lord and Lady Selborne and their family. These latter will, of course, go out later, when Lady Mabel Palmer and her brother have recovered from their unfortunate attack of scarlet fever. Lord Selborne is accompanied by his eldest son, Viscount Wolmer.

Alice Hughes.

VISCOUNTESS FALMOUTH AND DAUGHTER.

Viscountess Falmouth, with her daughter, the Hon. Kathleen Boscawen. Lady Falmouth is the daughter of the second Baron Penrhyn, and was married in 1886 to the seventh Viscount Falmouth.

MAGAZINES.—There is, or was until a short time ago, a shop in Paternoster Row with as powerful an attraction for anyone interested in the history of journalism as could be found anywhere in London. It might be best described as "the home of remainders," for there you could purchase back numbers of practically every magazine and periodical that ever existed, but especially of those which had been published during the past fifty years, during the period, that is to say, that the "light fiction magazine" has been in vogue. For it was not until the middle of the last reign that the popular magazine became a factor in providing the public with literature. And what literature it was in those days, when Thackeray edited the Cornhill, when Dickens was at the helm of Household Words, and the Quiver and the Leisure Hour were names to conjure with! Those were the days when people read serials; not one serial, but four or five each month, and knew just where they were with each one when the new number came out. To-day no one can be bothered with serials. A few chapters of a new book appear perhaps in a magazine a short time before the work appears in volume form, as a sort of appetiser, but few people read it in instalments throughout the year. In those early magazines, too, there were illustrations by men who have since become leading lights in the world of Art, such men as Pinwell, Briton Rivière, John Collier, Du Maurier, Millais, and Keene.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE Spring Meeting of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews last week was very largely attended. Among the players who took part in the early practice matches of the week, as well as in the competition for the prizes, were Lord Dudley, Mr. Horace Hutchinson, Mr. Edward Blackwell, Mr. Robert Maxwell, the Hon. Osmond Scott, Mr. Leslie Balfour-Melville, Mr. Herbert Fowler, and Mr. Everard. At the half-yearly business meeting Colonel David Kinloch was appointed to be captain, in succession to Mr. Ralph Dalzell of Lingo. An estimate was submitted that the expenditure entailed on the club in keeping up the old and new courses would be £950. The new bunkers which are to be made on the course were shown on a plan, and the meeting approved the suggested alterations. A proposal to appoint a committee to discuss with the Town Council the advisability of fixing a tariff for players on the old course was withdrawn.

* * *

There was an entry of ninety competitors for the St. Andrews Silver Cross and the Bombay Medal, the holders of which were Mr. Robert Maxwell and Mr. Edward Blackwell. Among the absentees were Mr. Laidlay, Mr. Mansfield Hunter, and Mr. Norman Hunter. The course was in very fine order, and although a breeze blew across the links, the weather was admirably suited for good scoring. Old Tom Morris, recovered from his recent severe illness, was present on the first tee to start the competitors; and it is hardly necessary to say that the large number of congratulations which the old professional received were alike numerous and cordial. The Silver Cross of St. Andrew was won by Mr. J. B. Pease of Alnmouth, with the fine score of 76, and the Bombay Medal was won with 79 by Mr. C. C. Wedderburn, who has only been a member of the club for a year or two. The next best scores were 80 by Mr. J. L. Low, 81 by the Hon. Osmond Scott, and a string of HOME PARK LADIES' MEETING.

Miss C. Meyer driving. A good follow through.

82's by Mr. W. E. Fairlie, Mr. Herbert Fowler, Mr. J. A. Shaw, the Hon. Denys Scott, and Mr. Robert Maxwell. Mr. Hutchinson was 83, although in a match the previous day he had been round in 78, Mr. Mure Fergusson 84, and Mr. Balfour-Melville 85. Lord Dudley did not return his card, though throughout the week he had been playing a strong and steady game in private matches.

* * *

Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., is one of the latest recruits among the Parliamentary golfers. He has lately been playing at Sandwich and Deal, and on Saturday he was playing at Tooting Bec, with Major Seely, M.P., as his partner. As the cautious Scottish professional would say, "he shapes very weel to be a fair golfer," and he certainly seems to be very keen about the game. His strong point at present would seem to be his good putting, for, armed with a Shenectady putter, which had such a fleeting vogue a year ago by the success of Mr. Travis at Sandwich, Lord Hugh holes out his putts with great confidence. Out of his experience of the game it is probable that he too will enrich the vocabulary of his interesting speeches by a few "golfisms."

* * *

Lord Londesborough has laid out a charming nine-hole course on the estate attached to his shooting-box at Market Weighton. The course was formally opened last week by an exhibition match, in which Vardon, Herd, Ray, and Gaudin took part. Before the professionals began play, however, the formal opening of the links was celebrated by Lady Irene Denison driving the first ball off the tee. With a score of 74 Vardon won the stroke competition, and in a four-ball foursome after luncheon Vardon and Gaudin beat Herd and Ray by 2 and 1. Among those who followed the play of the professionals were Lord and Lady Londesborough, Lord Westmorland, Lady Cooke, Viscount Raincliffe, and others.

THE LADIES AT THE HOME PARK.
Miss Nora Meyer driving from the 8th tee. A grand finish.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

The Woking Club, having given permission to their lady subscribers to hold an Open Meeting, the green, on Tuesday, May 2, was visited by thirty members of different clubs, who, with the home members, made a field of fifty-four competitors. Mrs. Jillard and Miss Pascoe tied at 94 with the best scratch scores. Miss Fyfe and Mrs. Mould sent in the best returns under handicap for the eighteen and last nine holes, while Mrs. Whitehead won the Handicap Challenge Cup for members. Miss Sillem was successful in a driving competition, and Miss Lloyd Roberts in the approach-and-putt-out. In the afternoon the prize for the foursomes v. "Bogey" was taken by Mrs. C. S. Hunter and Mrs. Harvey.

* * *

The professionals are getting into form all over the country. The number of tournaments in which they now annually compete appears to be increasing, a fact which shows not only the popularity of the highest form of skilled play as a spectacle among all classes of players, but also the readiest method of making the golfing qualities of a green widely known. The tournament of the Southern section of the Professional Golfers' Association was held last week at Northwood, and produced some very fine golf among the eighty competitors. The Tooting Bec Challenge Cup was won by A. H. Toogood, who, for the second time this year, has shown that he can bring out a game of exceptional brilliancy. His two rounds were 77 and 73, Taylor's 78 and 73, Braid's 74 and 79, and Vardon's 76 and 77. Jack White, the Open Champion, was one of the competitors. Exactly three years ago White made the record score of 70 for the Northwood course, but last week he was so much off his game that, after taking 83 in the morning round, he did not return a complete card. Taylor lost a few strokes on the putting greens in the morning round, but in the afternoon his game was perfect. He was out in 34, and had to gain a 4 at the last hole to tie with Toogood. He was practically on the green in two long shots, but a long putt over a hog's back was short. Missing his putt of two club lengths, his total was one worse than Toogood's, 151 to 150. Vardon seems to have been distinctly unfortunate. A spectator—he could not have been a golfer—moved behind his tee shot at the seventeenth hole, with the final result that Vardon had to notch an 8 on his card. Then he drove out of bounds at the last hole, and took 6 for the hole, eventually tying with Braid at 153.

Copyright.

TEACHERS' UNION AT LLANDUDNO.

Mr. F. Wadsworth driving from the 16th tee on the Llandudno links, Dr. Macnamara, M.P., watching the shot.

Copyright.

THE TEACHERS AT LLANDUDNO.

Dr Macnamara, M.P., bunkered, but gets well out with a good shot.

* * *

A public meeting has been held at Oban with the object of securing ground so as to form a new golf course, but no definite decision was arrived at. The provost of the burgh indicated that the Town Council had enough to think about already without taking in hand the delicate government of a municipal golf course. The residents of the burgh, however, are quite aware of the value of golf as an attraction to the summer and autumn visitor, and they rightly enough think that Oban should not lag behind other resorts of the tourist. The committee that had taken charge of the subject found that the proprietors of the Dunollie estate would have nothing to do with the project. Among the other spots reported upon was Lochnell estate, where 125 acres could be secured to make an eighteen-hole course. It would begin at North Connel and extend along the seashore at Benderloch. The scheme, however, has yet to be developed and matured.

* * *

Mr. Ernest Rennie was the winner of the April Medal in the Vienna Golf Club, with a net score of 77.

* * *

It is stated that Vardon, Taylor, Braid, and Herd have received invitations to go and play in a tournament to be held in Mexico, on the course of the San Pedro Club.

* * *

The Bushey Hall Golf Club have arranged for a seventy-two holes stroke competition among sixty professionals for prizes amounting to £260 (first prize, £100), on Friday and Saturday, the 19th and 20th inst. Among the professionals who have entered are White, the Open Champion, Braid, Taylor, Vardon, Herd, Andrew Kirkaldy, Sayers, Toogood, and Ray. Members of recognised golf clubs and their friends are invited to witness the play. Railway vouchers for reduced fares within fifty miles of the course on the London and North Western Railway will be issued to those visitors who obtain luncheon tickets, and these can be obtained from Mr. N. Lindsay, the secretary.

THE LLANDUDNO LINKS.

A view of the 11th putting green, Mr. F. Wadsworth putting against Dr. Macnamara, M.P.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE PORTSALON LINKS.

Mr. T. W. Coning and Mr. Meikle at the 2nd green. To the left in the distance is the Portsalon Hotel.

THE IRISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP AT PORTSALON.

THE Portsalon Links, where the Irish Ladies' Championship is being played this week, were laid out in August, 1891, by Mr. R. A. Collingwood (now secretary of the Eltham Golf Club), who was assisted by Thompson, the then professional at Portrush. The formation of the ground lent itself admirably to the purpose, and afforded plenty of scope for eighteen holes, the first nine holes being played on the left, and the return journey on the right. The circuit of the course extends to well over 5,000-yds. The links are most sporting and picturesque, abounding in a variety of natural hazards.

The Biarritz Club is carrying out a piece of praiseworthy work in encouraging golf among the Basque caddies who are employed on the links in the season as club carriers. A short time ago seven prizes were given for a caddies' competition, for which twenty-two first-class caddies entered. The winner was a caddie named Jean Grassiat, whose score for the eighteen holes was 72. Arnaud Massey, the French professional seen at North Berwick and other places in the summer months, is a product of Biarritz golf, and a very brilliant player he has become.

* * *

At the Spring Meeting of the Lytham and St. Anne's Club Mr. John Ball was the winner of the Scratch Prize, consisting of the ladies' gold medal and memento, with a score of 76. The players who came next to him were Mr.

GOLF AT PORTSALON.

Mr. Meikle in trouble at the 3rd hole. The steamer on the left runs on Tuesdays and Fridays from Fahan.

THE PORTSALON LINKS.

Driving across the river at the 17th tee. Mr. Meikle playing, Mr. T. W. Coning watching the shot.

C. E. Dick, Mr. Oxley, Mr. G. F. Smith, and Mr. Terry. The winner of the first handicap prize was Mr. J. Hacking, and Mr. E. Drew won the Aggregate Prize for the best net score in the two days' play. This week an important professional tournament is being played among eight of the leading professionals, when prizes to the value of £100 will be given by Mr. J. H. Maden, ex-M.P. for the Rossendale Division.

* * *

The golf courses on the Continent continue to multiply. The opening meeting of the Havre Golf Club was held at Easter, when a fairly large muster of golfers assembled to see a professional match between Entwistle, the club professional, and Callaway of Gosport. The first-named won the match. A club-house will be erected on the Havre course in the course of the summer.

including the river, which has to be crossed at the fourth hole going out, and again at the seventeenth hole coming home. There are innumerable sand bunkers, whins, and bents, the tees and putting greens being excellently placed to obtain the greatest benefit from the various hazards. In addition to the river there is also a small stream to the right of the ninth green.

The professional record, 76, is held by G. Pulford, while the record of the green, 75, made by Mr. J. Ball, jun., on September 13, 1901, was obtained as follows: Out—4, 4, 3, 5, 4, 4, 4, 3, 6=37; home—4, 4, 3, 4, 4, 4, 5, 5, 5=38. The longest hole on the course is the ninth, 504-yds., the shortest hole being the fourteenth or "Binn" hole, 125-yds.

Portsalon course is, in the opinion of many well-known players, the finest holiday course in the world, both on account of the interesting

GOLF AT PORTSALON.

The drive to the 11th hole, or "Killavee." Very bad country for the foozling driver.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

BARNEHURST LADIES' SPRING MEETING.

(1) Mrs. Laidlay driving at the 11th tee. (2) Mrs. Westmacott approaching the 3rd green. (3) Miss Issette Pearson, hon. secretary of the Ladies' Golf Union, playing in the putting competition. (4) Some of the competitors in the putting competition in front of the club-house. (5) Miss May Hezlet, the winner, playing an iron shot. (6) Miss Oliver and Miss Harley putting on the 10th green.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

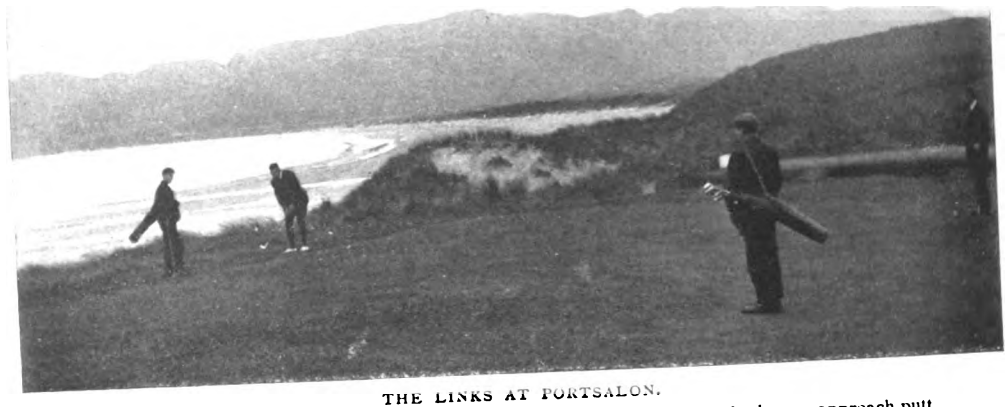
and varied character of the golf, and also the extraordinary beauty of the surroundings. Delightful views of mountain and sea are obtained from every teeing ground, whilst the climate is well-nigh perfect.

Colonel B. J. Barton, who owns the links, is also the proprietor of the Portsalon Hotel, a first-class and thoroughly up-to-date establishment, with ample accommodation and moderate tariff. Visitors can rest assured that this genial sportsman will do all in his power to secure their comfort. There is a post and telegraph office within a few yards of the hotel grounds.

Situated at the head of Lough Swilly, Portsalon can be reached in two ways, either by a steamer which sails on Tuesdays and Fridays at 11 a.m. from Fahan, in connection with the 10.20 train from Londonderry, or else by steamer to Rathmullen, and thence by coach.

The annual subscription is £1 1s., but members of recognised Irish clubs only pay 10s. 6d., whilst visitors staying in the hotel are entitled to play on payment of 1s. a day or 5s. a week.

A. V. D. Rintoul.



THE LINKS AT PORTSALON.

The 1st green, where the sea is shown to be at low tide. Mr. Meikle playing an approach putt.

Correspondence.

MAYBOLE AND GOLF: MOST FAMOUS MATCH IN HISTORY.

To the Editor of "The King."

Sir,—All golfers will approve that Maybole should open with becoming state and splendour its superbly situated green at Kilkenzie, on the Kilkerran estate, about a mile from the town; for "the ancient capital of Carrick" has a thrilling story of its own in other matters as well as golf, in spite of the unsavoury sneer:

"Minniebole's a dirty hole,
It sits aboon a myre."

known as "The Castle," was the veritable prison for life of that sweet lady the Countess of Cassilis, who fled with the gipsy Johnny Faa.

Gilbert, the fourth earl, "the King of Carrick"—whose brother had roasted the Abbot of Crossraguel, who was under the protection of the Laird of Bargany, in the persuasive way that suggested to Sir Walter his proposed treatment of the captive Jew in "Ivanhoe"—waylaid this laird with 200 men; and after an unequal combat, the Laird was mortally wounded and borne to Maybole, and thence to Ayr, where in a few hours he died. Mure, the Laird of Auchendrane, son-in-law of Bargany, in his turn waylays and

THE PORTSALON LINKS: RETRIEVING A BALL.

"Oh, my new Haskell is engulfed in this horrid turbid stream. Do get it!"

It was the seat of the vast power of the Kennedys:

"'Twixt Wigton and the toun o' Ayr,
An' largh doun by the Cruves o' Cree,
Ye sall not get a lodging there,
Except ye court a Kennedy."

And the old residence of the Ailsa, or Cassilis, family, near the centre of the town, still murders Sir Thomas Kennedy of Culzean; and the other murders and consequent wild happenings furnish the plot for Sir Walter's too little-known "Auchendrane, or the Ayrshire Tragedy."

To golfers the very names at once recall the most famous match in history—"for his nose between a monk of Crossraguel and a Lord of Culzean," not without a possible suggestion that the ancient reference has actually been to a far more serious strife than a golf match, in which more than a mere nose may have been at stake.

Again, when the Laird of Bargany, about 1559, quarrelled and exchanged abusive epithets with the Laird of Culzean, the latter put his foe to rout and shame by remarking that his nose was out of joint—"for it was trewthe his neise was laich be ane straik of ane goif ball on the hills of Air in recklessness."

To the town of Maybole itself, R. L. Stevenson unearthed a reference by William Auchterlonie in "Fasti Ecclesiæ Scoticanæ," Part III.: "Opposite to this vennel there is another that leads N.W. from the chief street to the green, which is a pleasant plott of ground, enclosed round with an earthen wall, wherein they were wont to play football, but now at the gouffe and byasse bowls." Allan Ramsay warbles of:

"Driving their ba's frae whin or tee
There's no ae goufter to be seen,
Nor doucer folk wysing a—jee
The byas bowls on Tamson's green."

Monsignor Seton wrote in American Golf some two years ago that there was an ancient game in Holland played in a large enclosed area with clubs and balls, and that this game was traditionally brought from there by George, the third Lord Seton, who had been a great traveller in the Low Countries. The reference, no doubt, is to golf. Wedderburn, Earl of Rosslyn, Lord Chancellor of England, had been in early life an advocate at the Scottish Bar. When in Edinburgh towards the end of his life, he revisited a "close" adjoining the old Mint where he had resided, and found still there five holes, which he had made in a small court for a game he was fond of. This, surely, points to putting.—I am, Sir, etc.

W. Dalrymple.

FIXTURES.

May 12-14.—Le Touquet, Solicitors' Golfing Society v. Le Touquet.
May 13.—Parliamentary Tournament at Deal.
May 13.—Hanger Hill, Medal and Magistrate's Bowl.
May 16-17.—Midland Ladies' Championship, at Nottingham.
May 20.—England v. Scotland (Amateurs), at Prestwick.
May 20.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal (Stroke).
May 20.—Hanger Hill, Monthly "Bogey" Winners.
May 22.—The Amateur Championship, at Prestwick.
May 27.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal Prize.
May 27.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
May 27-28.—Bar Golfing Society v. Le Touquet; Compiègne v. Le Touquet.
May 29.—Ladies Championship, at Cromer.
June 3.—England v. Scotland (Professionals), at St. Andrews.
June 7-8.—Open Championship, at St. Andrews.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLII.—Mr. Patrick Rose-Innes, Prospective Unionist Candidate for Elgin Burghs.

MR. PATRICK ROSE-INNES, the Unionist candidate for Elgin Burghs, is a member of an old Scottish family. He is the second son of the late Mr. George Rose-Innes of Blachrie, Aberdeenshire, who was himself the youngest son of Mr. James Rose-Innes of Netherdale, Banffshire, a Deputy-Lieutenant and Justice of the Peace for the county. Unlike many of his countrymen who make a career in London, he never omits an annual visit to his native place, and, in this way, has become well known in the constituency which it is his ambition to represent in the House of Commons, a factor which counts for much in the fortunes of an electoral campaign. The sitting member is Mr. Alexander Asher, K.C., who has all the local claims of Mr. Rose-Innes to popularity, together with a distinguished record in the Parliament House at Edinburgh as Dean of Faculty, and one of the leaders of the Scottish Bar. He has, too, the additional weight of nearly a quarter of a century's service at Westminster, for he was returned as representative for the Elgin Burghs shortly after Mr. Gladstone was swept into power on the great wave of national feeling of 1880. As a rule when the two candidates have no advantage in local esteem, it is the old member who secures the most votes. But at an election fought on a vital issue he must agree with the views of his constituents, or give way to his opponent. Such an issue is raised by the Fiscal Policy with which Mr. Chamberlain startled the country some two years ago. This, if carried into effect, Mr. Rose-Innes, after careful and deliberate consideration, thinks would be for the benefit of the community at large. He hopes, therefore, that he, and not Mr. Asher, will carry the Elgin Burghs with him at the next General Election.

The constituency is in some respects a peculiar one, consisting as it does of seven different Burghs, three of them, Peterhead, Inverurie, and Kintore, being in Aberdeenshire, three others, Banff, Macduff, and Cullen, in Banffshire, and last, but not least, Elgin, the county town of Morayshire. In the coast towns, more especially Banff, Macduff, and Cullen, the fishing population are naturally an important factor in the matter of voting power. Hence the result very much depends on the particular period of the year when an election takes place; for should the fishermen be away at sea, many hundreds of votes would be lost to either one side or the other. Moreover, the fishery question is a burning one in the constituency, and, indeed, it has lately been aired in the London newspapers. This is the exclusion of Scotsmen from the fishing ground in the Moray Firth, where foreigners can trawl over its entire area outside the three-mile limit—an extraordinary state of things due to Conventions with neighbouring countries, and the restrictions placed on our own people. To this subject Mr. Rose-Innes has given particular attention. and, if returned to Parliament, intends to press the matter upon the Government until some remedy is found for such a striking anomaly. In passing it is curious to note the growth of electoral power since 1832, for in 1829, as appears by an old Edinburgh almanac in Mr. Rose-Innes' possession, forty-nine Banffshire freeholders, of whom four were relations, returned a member to Parliament for the county. With the extension of the franchise 8,000 voters have been placed on the roll. Curiously enough of the "Fiars" enrolled before 1832 was Mr. Rose-Innes' father, who died in 1895, was the last.

On the Free Kirk question Mr. Rose-Innes is sound. At a public meeting held at Peterhead last September, he was one of the first to frankly avow his intention of supporting legislation in Parliament to equalise things. That is to say, he urges the restoration to the United Free Kirk of a fair proportion of the property lost to it by the decision of the House of Lords last year. In this historical case the counsel for the Free Kirk was Mr. Asher, the sitting member for Elgin Burghs.

Weston.

MRS. ROSE-INNES

Wife of the Prospective Unionist Candidate for Elgin Burghs.

Mr. Rose-Innes was educated at the Holborn Grammar School and at the University of Aberdeen. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1878, joining the South-Eastern Circuit and the Sussex Sessions. In his profession he has had a successful career, having, in addition to Bills in Committees of both Houses of Parliament and cases arising out of the Lands Clauses Acts, been connected with some very sensational civil and matrimonial causes. For instance he was junior with the present Lord Chancellor, then Sir Hardinge Gifford, in the notorious Langworthy trial. He also appeared in one of the actions brought into court to test the validity of Sir Tatton Sykes's signature to certain bills of exchange. These are, perhaps, forgotten causes célèbres, but everyone will remember the curious action for an alleged breach of promise of marriage, brought against a well-known baronet, since deceased, in which Mr. Rose-Innes with the late Sir Frank Lockwood successfully championed the defendant; the Cowley divorce suit; and the Scott v. Sebright case, are others perhaps not yet forgotten. Finally he played a professional part in the Whittaker Wright drama, when two years ago he appeared before the present Lord Chief Justice in the famous action brought against several members of the London Stock Exchange to recover the modest sum of £1,000,000.

In county and municipal affairs Mr. Rose-Innes takes a keen interest. He is a Justice of the Peace for Aberdeen and Kent, and, in the latter county, is regularly to be seen at Quarter Sessions, his London work preventing him from sitting very often in Petty Sessions. At St. Margaret's Bay, Dover, where he has a delightful little cottage, he was, until three years ago, chairman of the Parish Council. In London he is a liveryman of both the Shipwrights' and Paviors' Companies. In Aberdeen he succeeded Colonel Lumsden of Pitcaple Castle as Provincial Grand Master of the Freemasons for Aberdeenshire West. It should be added that Mr. Rose-Innes was, in 1875, gazetted a Sub-Lieutenant in the West London Rifles, then commanded by Lord Truro. When he retired in 1890 he was Senior Major of the corps.

Mr. Rose-Innes is an all-round sportsman. For some years he owned a 15-ton yawl, the "Tiger." But he has now given up the sea for shooting, cycling, and golf in Scotland. There he finds the exercise in the bracing air more exhilarating after the daily round in town than the tiller of his yacht in Cowes Roads or Oban Bay.

Colonials sometimes take it for granted that Mr. Rose-Innes is one of themselves; but although he is on terms of friendship with the distinguished Africander of the same name, they are, if at all, but distantly related. Their connection is one of the minor romances of British expansion. The founder of the South African Rose-Innes family was the son of a gentleman, born on the Netherdale estate in Banffshire. His surname was Innes, and he was christened after the then proprietor, James Rose. In the Cape Colony he reached one of the highest administrative posts under the Crown. The second James Rose-Innes was associated in the history of the Colony with the honoured name of Bartle Frere, who appointed him Governor of Griqualand West, and afterwards Under-Secretary for Native Affairs. The third James Rose-Innes is the present Chief Justice of the Transvaal, and a knight. He recently paid a visit to London, and sat on the bench as the honoured guest of the Lord Chief Justice of England and Mr. Justice Buckley.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

As the time for the French selection trials for the Gordon Bennett Cup approaches, doubts are being freely expressed, even in France, as to the safety of the course for racing purposes. In this country the Auvergne Circuit was pronounced from the outset to be highly dangerous, but it is somewhat significant that the French drivers and even the French motor journals should, at the eleventh hour, be questioning the wisdom of choosing such winding and narrow roads for the great race of the year. It is now proposed that at least one section of the route should be "neutralised," in consequence of its total unfitness for high speeds. Between the railway crossing at Volvic and the outskirts of Clermont-Ferrand, a distance of about 15-kilomètres, it is said that there is hardly a straight stretch more than 100-mètres in length, while to add to the danger the road is narrow and down-hill all the way. Any overtaking would be obviously impossible, as every driver would be obliged to steer practically the same course in order to negotiate the constant succession of curves, and a slow car, or an over-cautious or unsportsmanlike driver, might delay half-a-dozen machines close on his heels, to the advantage of the competitors in front.

Ever since the Paris-Madrid fiasco put an end to straightaway races, and compelled organisers to select circular courses, doubts have always been expressed as to the safety of the routes chosen. Many experienced motorists predicted that the Irish Gordon Bennett race would result in disaster, and the same forebodings were heard when the Homburg circuit was chosen. It would really seem, however, that immunity from serious accident for the last two years has emboldened the French Club beyond the bounds of prudence, and that in selecting the Auvergne Circuit it has taken a serious responsibility upon its shoulders. One professional driver after another has condemned it as almost impracticable for racing, though curiously enough they anticipate with remarkable unanimity an average speed of from

MR. HULBERT ON A 2¾-H.P. TRIUMPH.
Mr. Hulbert was the winner in Class I. at the recent Haslemere trials.

80-kilomètres to 85-kilomètres. The former estimate is equivalent to about 50-miles an hour, which, though 4-miles slower than Théry's record last year at Homburg, is about 1-mile faster than Jenatzy accomplished on the Irish course in 1903. On the other hand, the estimates for this year's race are based on the supposition that there will be no controls in the Auvergne Circuit, whereas in Ireland the cars were repeatedly stopped and restarted, which must have greatly diminished their average pace over the whole distance.

Another question in connection with this year's Gordon Bennett Cup which is provoking discussion, is the liability of the foreign clubs to share in the cost of organisation. By the conditions of the deed of gift, all the competing clubs are supposed to bear their share of the expenses; but in no previous contest has this rule been enforced. When the race was held in Ireland the British Club waived its right to a contribution from the French, German, and American bodies, and last year Germany was equally generous. When the International representatives met in Paris, early this year to protest against the Gordon Bennett being run concurrently with the new Grand Prix, one of the terms of the settlement of the dispute was that the foreign clubs should share the expenses of running the Gordon Bennett if the two races were divided. The delegates were hardly in a position to object, as they were merely agreeing to a condition by which they were already bound by the fact of entering for the race. It was felt, moreover, that the French Club had some slight justification for taking advantage of the rule, in spite of precedents to the contrary, as the running of two big International events, in addition to its Eliminating Trials, would be too great a strain upon that body's resources, ample though they are known to be. Now, however, that the Grand Prix has been abandoned, the position of the French Club is the same as that of England in 1903, and Germany in 1904, and it is difficult to see what moral right it has to claim contributions from the other competing countries. It is said that money will be spent like water in making the poor roads of the Auvergne Circuit fit for racing, and there are likely to be some heated discussions, when the time comes to settle the bill, as to what are necessary expenses within the meaning of the Cup rules.

HILL-CLIMBING AT HASLEMERE.
The Auto-Cycle Club's competition last week.

Although one may be opposed to motor-racing, on the ground that it is an excessively dangerous form of trade advertisement, in which the risks run and the expenses incurred are out of all proportion to its practical utility as a method of improving the automobile or advancing the movement, it must be confessed that, as a spectacle, a great road contest, such as the Gordon Bennett, has its undoubted attractions. It is, perhaps, hardly safe to analyse one's feelings, but the fascination of watching a succession of huge-powered cars negotiating a winding piece of rough country road at a speed which would be high for a train running on a straight steel track, must be experienced to be believed. It may be the danger to the drivers or their extraordinary skill, or, perhaps, the wonderful strength of their seemingly fragile machines, that attracts the imagination; but the fact remains that there are many motorists who will travel far and suffer countless discomforts in order to witness one of the great International races.

Digitized by Google

for more than a mile or two, so stupendous did the strain appear; and yet hour after hour the race went on, and the drivers never seemed to tire in their hard-fought struggle. There are very excellent reasons, as I have explained on a previous occasion, why racing is detrimental to the automobile movement, but I think that those in search of a new sensation might do worse than visit the Isle of Man to witness the Eliminating Trials on May 30. In

It is an extraordinary fact that the numbers of the winning cars in the five contests, which have been previously held, have run consecutively, beginning with the one of Girardot, who secured the Cup in 1900. It will, therefore, be interesting to note who is the sixth starter this year. It is clear that it cannot be a French car, unless two of the competing clubs withdraw, which, however, is not altogether improbable. As France is the holder

Alfieri and Lacroix.

KING VICTOR EMMANUEL AND QUEEN HELENE OF ITALY IN THEIR ELECTRIC CAR.

I well remember in the Irish Gordon Bennett in 1903 the thrill, almost of horror, which ran through the inexperienced crowd when the first car came tearing down the hill at Ballyshannon, leaping and bounding from side to side of the rough, narrow lane, all four wheels apparently often leaving the ground at the same time. It seemed almost impossible that even so skilled a driver as Mr. Edge could keep the car on the road effect they will consist of a race over a very fair course, which is sure to be keenly contested, as from all accounts the majority of the cars engaged are of a very high class, and among them may quite probably be found the winner of the Cup itself. In connection with the latter a curious coincidence has been pointed out to me. It is the practice for the competing vehicles to carry numbers, which correspond with the order of their starting.

of the Cup, a French machine will be the first to start, and the six challenging countries will follow in the order of their entries. It is rumoured that Switzerland will not compete, on the score of expense, and this would, I believe, give the first American car the sixth place. Should, however, only five countries in all be represented in the race, the second French car would start sixth, and be the one to carry the lucky number. RADIATOR.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

STRANGE MARRIAGES.

PEOPLE smiled on opening their morning paper at the news of a marriage connecting the Turf to the music hall, or the music hall to the Turf, as you please. Yet there is nothing more natural, more regular than this engagement between Woodland the jockey and Emilienne d'Alençon, both celebrated enough to be spoken of without the prefix of Mr. or Miss. The Turf without the ladies of the music hall would lose half its character, would be, in fact, as spiritless as the horse without its rider on the marked course. They make the green picturesque with the colour of their toilettes, they group in threes and fours like a Zuloaga picture, and attract by their brilliance — from afar. Their conversation is perhaps less brilliant than their plumage, a trifle monotonous as you catch the sounds passing by; but if you are interested in the liaisons, in the successful débuts, in the latest dressmaker of ces dames, you may be amused. They themselves do not appear to attach much importance to their comrade's remarks, as their eyes are never on the speaker's, but they must see the impression they are making or "where's the fun?" as they say in equivalent French. These little ladies and little gentlemen, as jockeys undoubtedly are, belong to the same world, and their marriages are in the perfect order of things and should call for no comment. The little lady bets on the jockey, she knows nothing of the animal he rides, his sire may have a name in the annals of the racing stable or be the issue of an "outsider"—pronounced "ootsedaire" — she cares less, the jockey carries her money, and him she applauds if she wins.

Emilienne d'Alençon, like many of her successful comrades, turned to the Turf as some turn to religion; she became the owner of racers after training animals of a lower breed; she met Woodland on the Turf, where presentations are no more difficult than in a drawing-room; and they marry. May they be happy.

The marriage that "Tante Leontine" brings about is quite another affair. M. Antoine is a remarkable manager from more points of view than that of the actual stage. He had heard—like the majority of people by whom these things are heard—that a marriage had been arranged and is to take place between the daughter of a popular manufacturer and the son of a well-known magistrate. There are certain details in connection with this marriage that suggested the revival of MM. Boniface and Bodin's comedy, and after long years we owe the pleasure of seeing once more the famous "Aunt" to a circumstance that the young authors are possibly still ignoring.

"There are no impossible cases," as a celebrated Frenchman said, and we do not require sounder proof of the truth of this observation than in the present instance. When the Théâtre Libre produced "Tante Leontine" in 1890, just fifteen years ago, it was considered a "comédie rosse," a play of a spiteful, biting nature. To-day at Antoine's Theatre it passes like a guimauve jujube. We have digested so much since the old Théâtre Libre days! And it must be acknowledged that the marriage of Eugenie and Paul is not as singular as we imagined it, when we first heard of it.

An aunt who has made or inherited a fortune, in a manner that does not bear the light of day, is not exactly the person that a respectable bourgeois family boasts of. It is also not surprising that the heads of the said family should wish to forget the existence of the terrible person. But when a daughter's happiness—or I should say her settlement in life—is at stake, objectionable aunts and their fortunes are seen through another pair of spectacles. Aunt Leontine pines for a home and young affection. She has not seen her brother for twenty years. She knows he has a wife and daughter, and makes up her mind to captivate them. A difficult task under ordinary circumstances, but she happens to come into their lives at an opportune moment. Paul, a young engineer, has asked the daughter to be his wife, knowing that her father, a wealthy man, will give her a fair proportion of his capital as a dowry. The father, however, has lost his money in speculations, and the young man pulls a long face. Without the £6,000 anticipated, there will be no marriage. Paul is miserable and Eugenie cries. Nothing can be done. Aunt Leontine comes to the rescue, and after discussions between the interested parties, it is decided that the world need never know, and the young couple accept the Aunt's money.

Radar, Paris.

MLLE. ROSA BRUCK

As Tante Leontine, in the successful new piece at the Théâtre Antoine.

In most French marriages money plays the important part. The first question asked by the young man is "How much?" As a rule it is an easy matter to ascertain without applying directly to the papa, but even when no question of dowry is raised at the formal demand, there is always a contract, drawn up by a notary, which specifies the exact sum the girl receives, and it is not at all unusual to hear of matches broken off at the last moment. Nowadays, less than ever, "money has no scent"; wherever it comes from it is accepted with open hands, as long as the world does not know. And, after all, does the world turn its back on wealth acquired in mysterious fashion? The young couples married with an Aunt Leontine's money will make their mark in Society as surely as others, given that the sum they spend on entertaining is sufficiently large to be noticed. For them there must be no luxury they must not aspire to. Automobiles of the newest mark, orchids on their dinner-tables, yachts on the Mediterranean, hunting parties, illuminated lakes in the Bois, and all Paris to assist at the representation, and aunts, good or bad, will be forgotten. Mediocrity of any description cannot be tolerated. So we wish happiness to the second couple, nameless this time, and hope that their peaches in December may be sweet this year, and that in years to come they may eat them like everybody else, when they cost but a penny, in June.

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

MLLE. EMILIENNE D'ALENCON

The favourite Paris comedienne, who is to marry Percy Woodland, the famous steeplechase jockey.

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

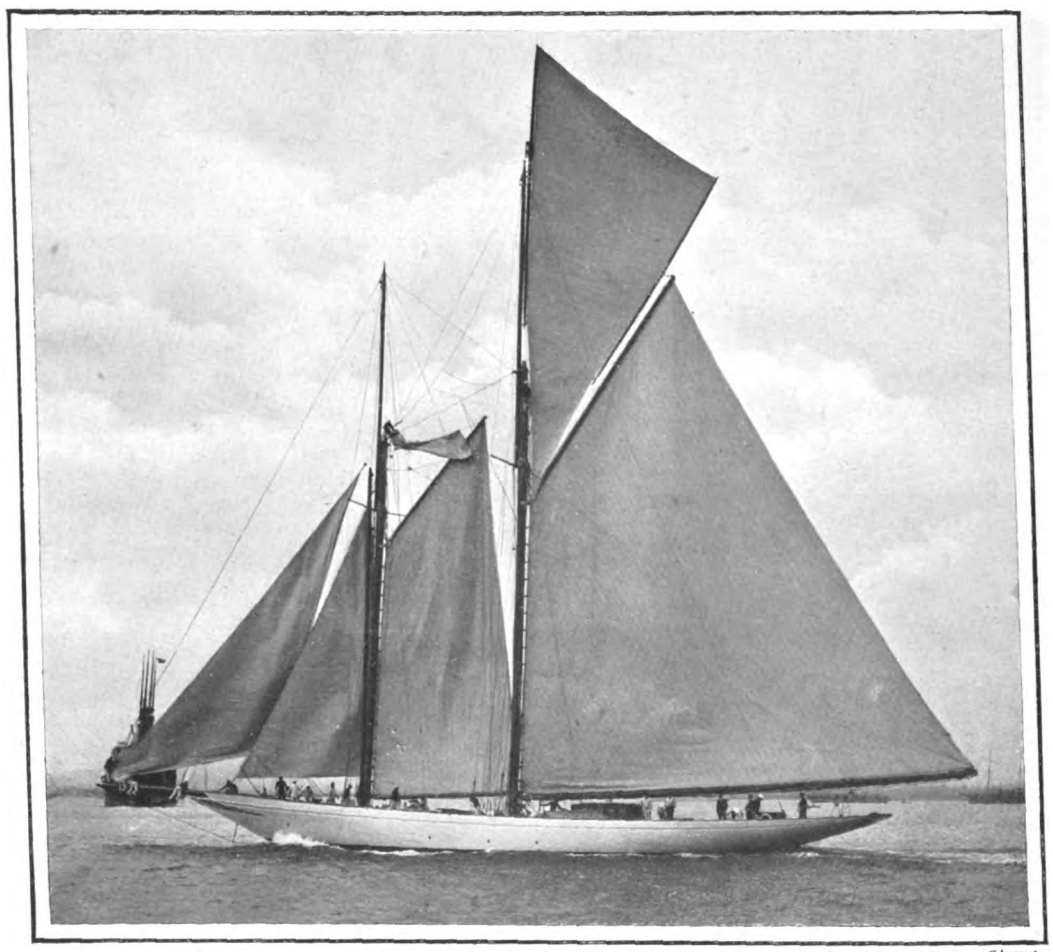
As the season approaches more closely, interest in the racing prospects continues to develop and increase in a greater degree than is usual at this advanced period. As a rule, one knows almost precisely ere now upon what lines the sport of the season is going to develop. All building orders are usually nearing completion, if the vessels are not actually finished; fitting out is in full swing, and it is generally known what boats will be competitors in the different classes. While all this is true to a degree in reference to the season ahead, additional interest is just now being aroused by an announcement that we are destined to see another Herreshoff boat in our 52-ft. class. It is not to be expected that the latest American production can arrive on this side in time to take part in the earlier regattas; but later in the summer, when, perchance, the keen edge has worn off the interest in this class, it will be fully revived by the appearance of the newest Herreshoff cutter.

The new boat is being built to the order of a German yachtsman, and will be delivered at Hamburg, which suggests that she will commence her racing career at Kiel, in which case she would probably join the English fleet at Cowes, unless able to get across from Germany in time to have her first brush with the British boats at Plymouth in the last week of July. Her appearance in the Baltic will, of course, not create any very special interest, as she will not meet any boats of her own type there.



Stuart.

CICELY.

This schooner was built in 1902 from Fife's design for Mr. Cecil Quentin, and her record in that year was a remarkably fine one. Sailing at Kiel, she won five races out of six starts. She was not in commission last year, and it is rumoured that she may be sold to an American yachtsman.

Some three or four weeks back I referred to the probability of another English boat being built for this class. Although no order has been definitely placed as yet, and it is now too late for a boat to be turned out to take part in any of the earlier matches, there yet remains the possibility that the arrival of another American craft later in the season may act as an incentive to the prospective English owner to place his order for this season. This would add enormously to the interest of the Cowes and Solent fixtures; but, under any circumstances, the sport in this class will be more attractive than any racing thus far during the present century.

Looking at it from the International point of view, it is of interest to note that during the latter part of the season Herreshoff will be represented by two new boats in the class, while, as matters stand at present, of the three British vessels that will hoist racing colours, only one will be a new craft—that now building for Mr. W. P. Burton, from Mylne's design. Maymon, of course, proved herself an exceptionally able craft last year, and although it may be fairly assumed that her best all-round form has been shown, it may be taken for granted that she will not suffer in the matter of handling, in charge of her new skipper, and although having already gone through the wear and tear of one season's hard racing, she will still be a craft to be reckoned with. Should Moyana, the oldest boat in the fleet, be outclassed, interest in the racing will be fully preserved, as there will be two American and two British boats matched in every race.

A point in the arrangement of the various regattas attracting a certain amount of attention at the present moment, is the crowding together, and, in some instances, the actual clashing, of important fixtures. This is particularly unfortunate, as it tends to divide the fleets of craft whose owners are in the habit of doing the whole round of the big regattas. The whole of the first-class fixtures are crowded into a shorter period this year. The season will open on June 3, as against May 27 last year, and the rearrangement of Plymouth Week—in July instead of following Dartmouth—curtails the season by a week at the end.

It will be remembered that at the annual meeting of the Yacht Racing Association it was announced that the fixtures conference would be revived. Club committees and yachtsmen alike will welcome this. Fixtures have, within the the last few years, increased to a considerable extent, and to avoid a clashing or overlapping of dates it may be found necessary to entirely rearrange a great portion of the season.

Until within the last few years, the Kiel and Baltic fixtures had not to be reckoned with; but they have now assumed such proportions, and proved so attractive to English yachtsmen, that they must necessarily be taken into consideration in any scheme of remodelling our own season. This year there will be one most unfortunate clashing of dates. On June 17 the time-honoured Nore to Dover Races will take place under the auspices of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, and on the same day the race for the Heligoland Cup, presented by the German Emperor, will be started from Dover. Last season many yachts, which took part in the Royal Thames matches, sailed in the race across the North Sea. Next month many vessels will take part in the Cowes to Clyde Race instead of going across to Germany. Nevertheless it would be in the interests of yachting generally, if such a clashing of dates could be avoided.

The International conference for the purpose of adopting a uniform rating rule will be held during this year, and already letters on the subject have been addressed to representative clubs in different countries, by the secretary of the Y.R.A. It is interesting to learn that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has consented to preside at the conference. An interest thus displayed in the sport by a member of the Royal Family may certainly be calculated to benefit yachting, but what all yachtsmen would like to see would be a Royal owner in the principal class.

CORINTHIAN.

---

OPENING FIXTURES.

June 3.—New Thames Yacht Club, Southend to Harwich.
June 5-6.—Royal Harwich Yacht Club.
June 9.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, off Southend.
June 10.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club, Port Victoria.
June 13.—Royal London Yacht Club, off Southend.
June 14.—New Thames Yacht Club, River Matches.
June 17.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, Nore to Dover.
June 19.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, Dover.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY

Stuart.

SENGA.

A successful 52-footer. She was built from Fife's design. In 1900 she sailed a series of duels, extending throughout the whole season, against Penitent, then owned by Mr. W. P. Burton. During the last three seasons she has sailed in the limited handicap class under Mr. George Terrell's flag.

Digitized by Google

Artistic Photography.

III.—THE WORK OF THE LAFAYETTE STUDIOS.

THE name of Lafayette is indubitably associated with all that is best in artistic photography, and their work has a refinement and finish which is quite distinctive.

Mr. Lafayette may be said to have elevated the mechanism of photography to something approaching a science, and this, taken in conjunction with sound artistic taste, has given us the really perfect photograph for which the name of Lafayette is famed.

Their work is a pronounced vogue, and it stands for all that is essentially modern in photography as opposed to the old-fashioned and ugly methods. It is interesting, therefore, to consider how Mr. Lafayette secures such uniformly perfect results. The mere act of taking a photograph has been planned out on an almost scientific basis. Nothing is left to chance, and everything is calculated with mathematical precision.

Not content with utilising the sun's rays, Mr. Lafayette has installed an electrical appliance of quite phenomenal potency. Automatic and noiseless, and weighing half a ton, it consists of two groups of three lamps so constructed that the light, which is equal to a naval search-light, is perfectly diffused, and the current used represents a tremendous voltage. The rays are thrown not at the sitter, who would be blinded and bewildered by the glare, but on a powerful reflector, and with this beautiful, soft reflected light the sitter is photographed. The system of ventilation is similar to that employed in the House of Commons. The air passes through pipes, where it is heated to an even temperature, and filtered of all its impurities. The advantages of such a system are enormous. There is a combination of daylight and electricity, doubling the power at the photographer's disposal. Hence the exposure of one-tenth of a second, and the consequent disuse of that instrument of torture, the head-rest. The light, combined with the fog-dispelling apparatus, gives an atmosphere which reminds one of the luxurious sunshine of the Riviera.

Scientist as well as artist, Mr. Lafayette has made many experiments with London fog, and he has been successful in creating a system of perfect lighting and perfect ventilation, which goes far to remedy the imperfections of natural conditions under unfavourable circumstances. Mr. Lafayette has been principally known as a photographer of beautiful women and brave men.

The King and Queen have honoured him with their patronage, and the leaders of Society and representatives of the Army and Navy have been constant patrons. On Court nights a long row of carriages await patiently outside the Lafayette Galleries, and the work of photographing beautiful débutantes goes on until well into the wee sma' hours. Mr. Lafayette has now designed a camera specially for child-photography, so that all the nurseries in the land may rejoice. The object of the camera is to follow the child rapidly to any part of the studio.

THE HON. MAYNARD GREVILLE
Son of the Countess of Warwick.

MRS. LEVESON-GOWER'S LITTLE DAUGHTER.
(From a miniature painted on ivory.)

It is the snap-shot idea adapted to studio photography. The camera is constantly in focus, and six photographs may be taken without changing plates, and in a total space of 10-sec. The shutter is operated by electricity, and is so silent that it is impossible to tell when the photograph is being taken.

This invention, which has taken Mr. Lafayette many years to perfect, has placed him in the unique position of being able to produce portraits of children that are in themselves works of art, on account of the naturalness of the posing, and contain all that grace and beauty which is so rarely conveyed in the ordinary stereotyped portraits that are not taken by artists.

MASTER ROBERT ABERCROMBY
Son of the present Lady Northbrook.

On entering the studio the child sees nothing but a number of interesting toys to amuse itself with, and it is very rarely the little one does not immediately become quite at home in their midst, and it is sometimes a rather difficult matter to get the children to leave "their new nursery," as the studio is so often termed, as the young clients have no idea that any permanent record has been obtained of them that they can look back upon in years to come.

Under the old régime the child is posed, and not without very considerable effort. The photographer then proceeds to adjust the focus of his camera, and as this takes some little time, it is rarely possible for the child to remain perfectly steady during the ordeal. And so the whole business is repeated until the child is on the verge of hysterics and the photographer in a condition of collapse. Hitherto child-photography has been the most difficult branch of the photographer's art, and simply owing to the lack of a suitable camera to obviate the difficulty of keeping the little one quite steady for a lengthy interval. Mr. Lafayette has solved the problem.

The latest addition to the Lafayette Galleries is a new and beautiful art gallery of modern pictures, which is under the administration of Mr. A. W. Binstead, who was for many years manager of the Continental and Grafton Galleries. Here there are some really excellent specimens of modern art, some characteristic studies of Jan Van Beers, and a quaint and delightful cat picture by Louis Wain, as well as many other examples of the work of leading artists.

Digitized by Google

AT THE LAFAYETTE STUDIOS.

MISS VERA PHILLIPS, DAUGHTER OF SIR JOSEPH PHILLIPS.

One of Messrs. Lafayette's most successful child studies.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

THERE are probably few parts of rural England more interesting to the holiday-maker, or, indeed, more beneficial to the health-seeker, than the lovely valley of the Wharfe, situated in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Of the Yorkshire dales, Wharfedale is, perhaps, the most beautiful, if not the most famous. On the banks of the river Wharfe, which rises at the head of Langstrathdale, is situated Ilkley and Ben Rhydding, both celebrated for their springs, while a little to the north lies the ruin of Bolton Abbey, surrounded on all sides by luxuriant woodland scenery.

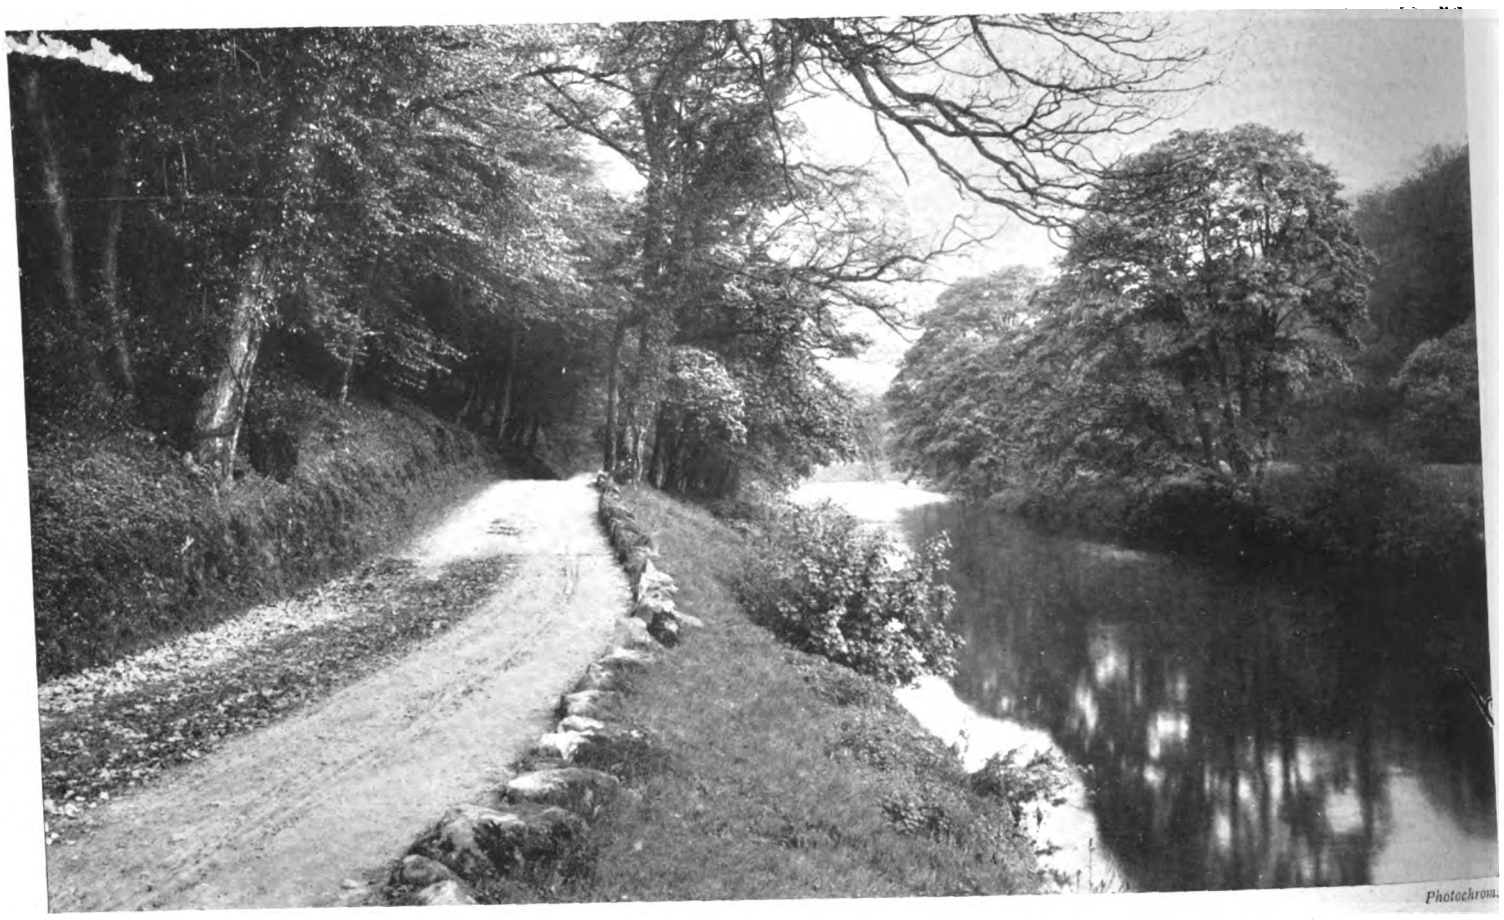
Ilkley, which stands second only in importance to Harrogate, is a spa of no mean order. It is, moreover, a favourite haunt of the holiday-maker who is fond of making excursions. The chalybeate springs which have caused the town to become so popular of late years, first began to attract attention early in the eighteenth century. It was not, however, until nearly a century later that any public conveyance ran between Ilkley and the neighbouring towns. When our late Queen came to the throne it was one of those quaint old villages, still to be found here and there all over England, that bridge the chasm between the Middle Ages and these last times. Many of the houses were of an unknown antiquity, of one storey, covered thick with thatch, on which house-leek grew, and grass, with now and then a flower, whose seed had been blown there by some vagrant wind. The town beck ran down from the moor through the middle of the little street; the green old corn-mill had been given by a noble lady, about 600 years before, to the monks of Sallay, with a permission to her tenants to grind where they would "when the monks had no water, or had too much." This is the description given by the Rev. Robert Collyer, the erstwhile village blacksmith, who afterwards became a minister. Needless to say, all this has now been changed, and little, if any, of the old town remains. The modern town of Ilkley, together with Ben Rhydding, consists largely of hydropathic establishments, where all kinds of medical treatment can be had by those who wish. But for the holiday-seeker pure and simple, especially for the antiquary and historian, Ilkley offers considerable attractions. It is referred to as one of the ten strongholds of the "fighting Brigantes," while it is known to have held a very important position in the North Country long before the Christian Era. In the town itself, at the back of the parish church, there are the remains of a Roman wall, while Roman relics—such as bricks, glass, and pottery—have been unearthed from time to time.

Ben Rhydding, which contains the first hydropathic establishment that was built in the neighbourhood, is very prettily situated on the southern side of Wharfedale, close to Rombald's Moor. It is within quite an easy walk of Ilkley. One of the most remarkable features of the scenery there is the curiously-shaped rocks called "The Cow and Calf," so disposed on the hill as to give one the impression that they might at any moment topple over into the valley beneath. The "Cow" rock, forming the summit of the hill, is 860-ft. above sea-level. For those suffering from loss of appetite the ascent of this rock before breakfast is strongly to be commended. As has already been remarked, Ilkley forms an admirable excursion centre, the chief ones being those to Bolton Abbey and Woods, Skipton Castle, Malham Cool, Brunham Grags, Fountains Abbey, Rylstone, and Grassington.

The Midland Railway, by which the traveller going North will travel, has also arranged a number of circular tours in the Wharfedale district at reduced fares. For example, from London one can purchase a first-class return ticket, available for a month, for 58s., or third-class for 32s., which will allow the traveller to break his journey at some half-a-dozen places, including Shipley, Ilkley, Grassington, Skipton, and Keighley. The same company are also making a feature this season of cheap week-end tickets from town, which doubtless will prove a great boon to numbers of travellers.

One of the most enjoyable ways of making the excursion to Bolton Abbey—the most picturesque of the several noble abbeys of which Yorkshire can boast—is to drive over from Ilkley. On the way will be passed the ruin of Barden Tower, where refreshments can be obtained at the adjoining farmhouse. A short rest should be made here, and those who wish can follow on foot the course of the winding river and its pretty woodland scenery, and rejoin the conveyance at Bolton Bridge.

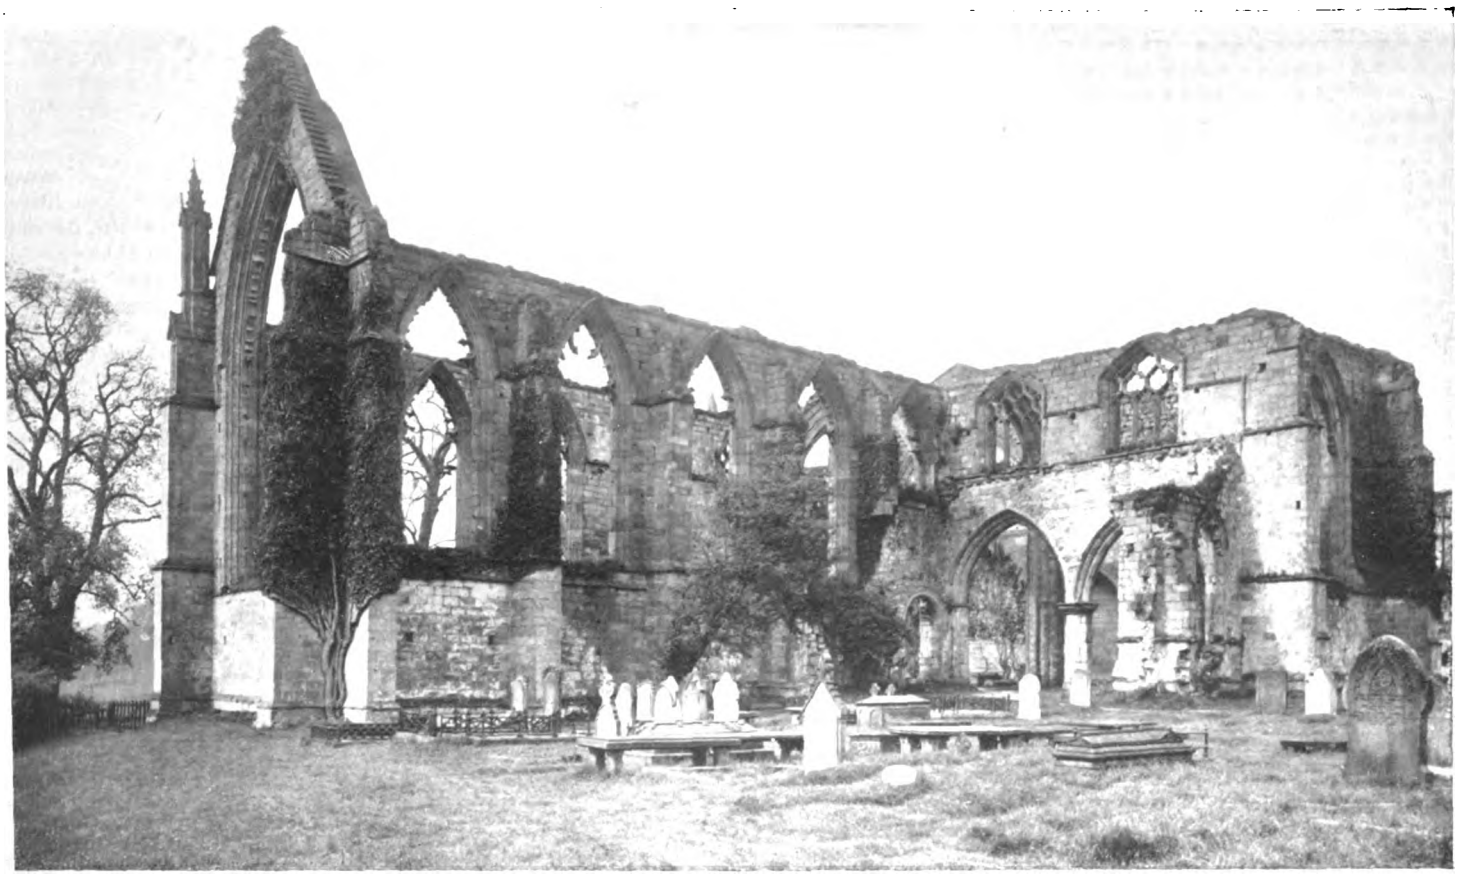
A delightful walk can be taken along the banks of the river to Bolton Woods, where the trees and foliage grow so thickly in parts as to almost shut out the daylight. On the way we pass the famous "Strid," or striding-place, where the rocks on either side of the river are so close that one can easily leap across to the other side. It was here that



ON THE BANKS OF THE WHARFE.

A portion of the road, which follows the windings of the river Wharfe, leading to the ruin of the famous old Augustine Abbey at Bolton. The priory was originally founded in 1121 at Embsay, a village about four miles distant, and was removed to Bolton about 1154. Tradition has it that the abbey was built by the Lady Adeliza to commemorate the loss of her son, the "noble boy of Egremound."

Digitized by Google

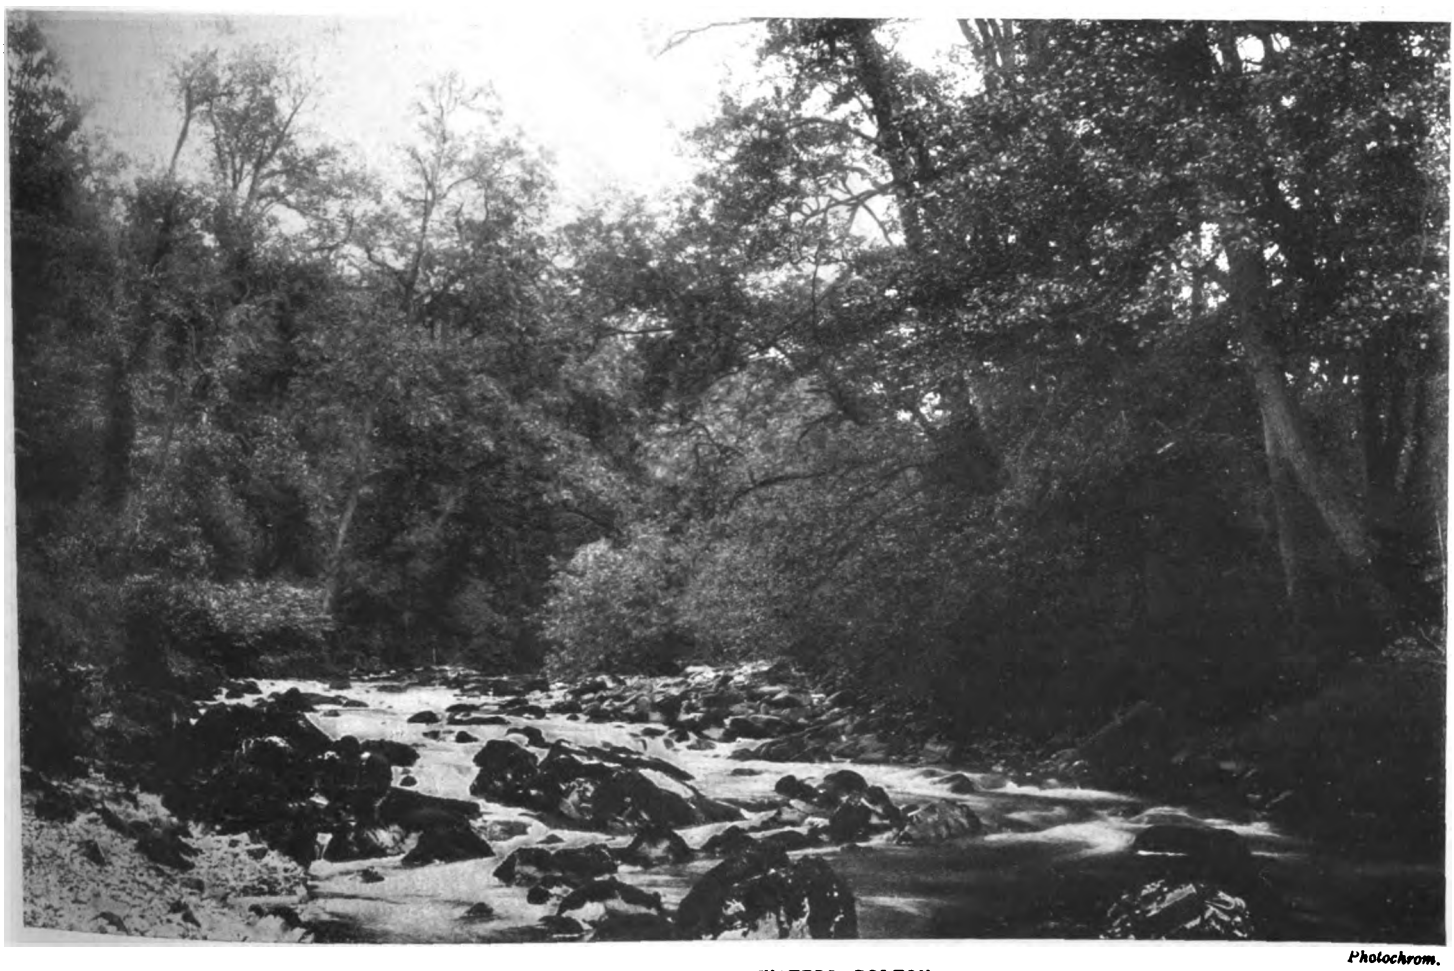


Photochrom.

THE RUINS OF BOLTON ABBEY.

The extensive remains of the abbey, originally built for Canons of the Augustine Order, are among the most beautiful in this country. Perhaps the most interesting portions are the remains of the Early English and Decorated work, the magnificent west front, and the fine Perpendicular window. Bolton is an occasional residence of the Duke of Devonshire.

the "Boy of Egremound" is supposed to have been drowned in attempting to jump the Strid with a hound in leash; and tradition has it that the abbey was built to commemorate the event. The legend of the "White Horse of Wharfedale," said to rise from the river before the occurrence of a fatal accident, is also associated with this spot. Bolton Woods are an ideal retreat for the picnicker. From one of the seats which have been placed there for the pleasure-seeker's comfort a splendid view is to be obtained of the ruin of Barden Tower, originally the residence of Lord Clifford, who earned for himself the sobriquet of "the butcher" on account of his barbarities during the Wars of the Roses. A short detour will take the traveller to Ghyll Beck Waterfall, reached by a pathway through a wood. The fall is about 50-ft. high, and has a background of dark-coloured rock, which is in striking contrast to the deep, narrow, glen clothed with ferns and mosses. Another short ramble takes us to the Valley of Desolation, so called from the number of oak trees riven by lightning.



Photochrom.

AT THE MEETING OF THE WATERS, BOLTON.

A typical bit of sylvan scenery in the vicinity of Bolton Abbey, where the surrounding country is indescribably beautiful. Within easy reach are the Strid, the Fairy Glen, and Barden Tower.

Digitized by Google

Letters to Stage Favourites.

XXIII.—TO MISS TITA BRAND.

DEAR MADAM,—The faithful few who really care for Shakespeare are grateful to you for a straightforward, sane, and spirited revival of his most realistic tragedy.

In your production of "Othello" at the Shaftesbury Theatre the author is, for once, allowed a voice in the matter. You and your companions speak his words directly, swiftly, "trippingly on the tongue." You do not diminish the force of his incident by a fatiguing mass of accessories, by irrelevant gesture, by supplementary tableaux, or any of the other scoriæ which cling about most modern revivals of his plays, and make him more expensive without making him more effective.

You let him speak for himself, and he would very likely recognise his own play if he happened to be in the theatre. For so much, I repeat, we Shakespearians are already indebted to you.

The acting in your revival keeps a very fair level; it is marked by a "mediocrity" which for once is really "golden." I confess that for yourself, dear Madam, you are, as all charming women ought to be, something of an enigma, la femme imcomprise.

Why, I cannot help asking, why were you so bent upon playing Desdemona? Was it that you might warble so delightfully in the elegiac damsel's swan-song at the end? I suppose so, for personally, were I in your place, the part would have little other attraction for me. Desdemona is one of Shakespeare's very green maidens, almost distressingly unsophisticated, with less of the soul of passion in her than Juliet, and without that delightful touch of boyish humour which he gave to Imogen and to Rosalind and to Viola. She is more decorative than inspiring, a passive figure of suffering upon whom, all innocent and unaware, the stroke of calamity falls, and leaves her pitifully crying out against it.

Were you really much moved, after all, by Desdemona's sufferings? You did not seem to be. You spoke a little monotonously, and seemed mildly surprised when your dusky lord turned from you; but one felt, at the end of it all, that you took misfortune with a certain placidity, with a sense that it would all come right in the end. You must have been disappointed when it did not.

Your Othello looked well and spoke well so long as he was habited like a "turbaned Turk." I thought, however, that his dignity was laid aside with his turban, and after his recital before the Senators of Venice (one of whom, by the way, does not know how to pronounce English) I lost interest in him. His hair took on a regrettably "darky" texture and appearance—he tore it too freely—he raved too much—his voice rent the theatre, and then gave way and continued, the ghost of itself, screaming in cracked, exhausted tones. There was too much zeal about it. You really must not let Mr. Hubert Carter think that he will ever please any but the groundlings by such gymnastics of the throat. I wish, too, that he would not clench his teeth, and protrude his chin. He looks quite unpleasantly plain when he does that, and the noble Moor, even when so perplexed, was first and before all things a man of dignity.

"OTHELLO."

You showed considerable discrimination when you engaged Mr. Henry Ainley for Cassio. I was surprised and delighted with him. He played the drunken scene exquisitely, giving us a sense of its mingled comedy and tragedy. He made us share the spirit of the wine with him, and yet he filled us, too, with a sense of approaching retribution. His by-play was all thoroughly excellent. With his Rossetti face, and rather fixed expression, I had hitherto considered Mr. Ainley as one ruined by the "fatal gift of beauty," and content, like most so gifted, to rest lazily upon Nature's laurels. Now I find that he can act and be beautiful as well. This is rare indeed.

What made you choose Mr. J. H. Barnes for your Iago? Whatever the reason, the choice has turned out a bad one. He is a little sententious, and he never succeeds in concealing his fundamentally benevolent disposition, that amiable disposition which we have seen in his Polonius and in "Rosemary," and in innumerable parts of choleric but good-natured old grandpapas.

Iago's disposition is morbidly malevolent. He broods over the mere suspicion of a wrong. He fastens upon a rumour which he knows untrue as an excuse for vengeance. He loves to watch the happiness of others crumble, wilt, and vanish under his corrosive words. None of Iago's nature came out in Mr. Barnes's performance, but he was inoffensive enough.

I was glad to see Miss Granville again, too. She was excellent as Emilia, that best of all episodic parts. What opportunities for acting there are even in the byeways of Shakespearian drama! What would have become of Cassio and Emilia, people who may excusably be considered as means to an end, in the hands, let us say, of Mr. Stephen Phillips? They would have wandered about and said vague things, and served merely as dead tools in the making of the plot. Instead of that here, how alive, how vigorously characterised they are! One can easily imagine them out of the circumstances of this particular play breathing still, in their vigorous flesh and blood, in quite other scenes and stories. We seem to see far back into their lives. We can imagine how Emilia must have smiled at Iago before we catch her doing it, and what a light-hearted but honourable soldier's life the gallant Cassio had led. These men and women are quite as real as those we see in the street when we leave the world of puppets.

Less delicately drawn, but still individual and alive, are Brabantio and Roderigo. No one could have recognised Mr. Anson as Brabantio. He looked marvellously antiquated and tremulous of limb. It was a capital little study.

Mr. Trollope, too, made Roderigo sufficiently silly, a perfumed and be-feathered gallant, with querulous voice and foolishly working mouth. Indeed, the lesser characters in your revival are even better played than the chief ones, and they help to make up the picture admirably.

I shall be glad, when you make your next venture, to see you in a better part, and I shall hope to be pleasantly surprised by Mr. Ainley again. Above all, however, remember not to let the stage-managing mania come upon you. Never become importunate with scenery, and realism, and "life-like" effects. Be content to aim at simplicity and Shakespeare; and the fanatics of the "sweet swan" will go to worship at a shrine built reverently to him. Φ

Digitized by Google

The Cricket Season.

THE AUSTRALIAN TEAM.

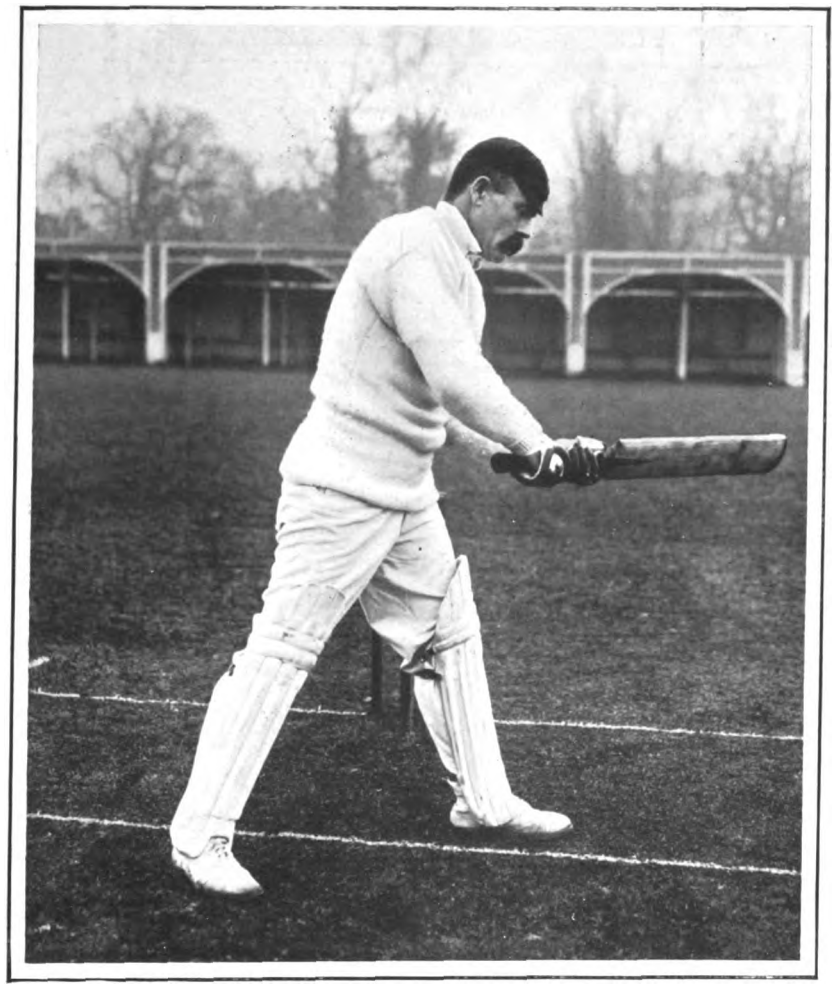
THE Australians paid their first visit to England in 1878, but in those days we scarcely regarded them as serious rivals to our cricket supremacy, many people being so ignorant of Australia itself, to say nothing of the cricket capabilities of its inhabitants, that they fully expected to find the members of the team black as the aborigines.

Mr. A. G. Steel tells a good story in this connection. "I remember," he says, "the late Rev. Arthur Ward 'putting his foot into it' before some of the Australians. One day, in the pavilion at Lord's, the writer, who had been chosen to represent the Gentlemen of England against the visitors in a forthcoming match, was sitting beside Spofforth watching a game in which neither was taking part. Mr. Ward, coming up, accosted the writer: 'Well, Mr. Steel, so I hear you are going to play against the niggers on Monday.' His face was a picture when Spofforth was introduced to him as the 'demon nigger bowler.'"

In considering the cricket of the two countries one or two facts must be borne in mind. First, when the Australians come over here they are practically always able to bring their best eleven; on the other hand, the strongest English eleven for Australia has never been chosen, and never will be; for, though it may be possible to obtain the services of the best professionals, it is quite certain that many of the leading amateurs will never be able to spare the time which the trip involves. Secondly, all test matches are played to a finish in Australia. In England, up to the present time, a match has been limited to three days; but in future, if the rubber has not been decided one way or the other after four matches of three days have been played, the fifth game will be fought to the bitter end. This seems to me a move which will, for the time being, satisfy both the advocates of a fight to a finish and the adherents of the old system. But it has one objection, and that is, that after four games it is quite possible that each side may have won one, and two may have been undecided, and that the fifth and deciding game may go to that side which, by the luck of the weather, was able to avoid being beaten in the two drawn games. We must, however, hope for something better than this, though, for myself, I should have preferred to have all five matches fought to the death, thereby asking some sacrifice of county cricket.

So far as my own experience goes, I should say that the Australians were especially strong in batting and fielding. This, I fancy, has been admitted by nearly all the critics; it is on the adequacy of the bowling that doubts have been cast. Let us consider the batting first. Here I am inclined to think that they will prove to be one of the strongest sides Australia has ever sent us, sound and reliable on good wickets, and with several hitters who will not be afraid to go for the bowling when pitches are sticky.

The selection of Darling came as a surprise, as we had been led to suppose that he had retired from International cricket. Many people appear to regard him as a veteran, but he is exactly the same age as F. S. Jackson, and who would ever dream of placing the great Yorkshire cricketer in the veteran class?



J. DARLING, CAPTAIN OF THE TEAM
(South Australia).

Darling is one of the greatest of Australian batsmen. When he was fifteen years old he made 252 runs in a school match, the South Australian equivalent of Eton v. Harrow. Soon after, he was sent to manage a farm in one of the back blocks, and he was not seen again in good cricket until he was twenty-three. Very strong in the arms and shoulders, he can play both games. I have seen him defend like a Barlow, when the crowd in the covered stand at Lord's became so annoyed with him that they whistled "Poor Old Joe," and then I have seen him hit as hard and as clean as a Jessop. With an iron nerve, and that cool, indomitable determination which is never flurried or upset, however the game may be going, he is an ideal man for a test match. This will be his fourth visit to England. He was here in 1896, in 1899, and 1902, and as captain of the last two teams gained much fame, for he is the essence of concentration. When on tour in England, he thinks of cricket and cricket only; studies the game in all its various problems; and spots very readily the favourite strokes and weak points of each individual batsman.

With the possible exception of K. S. Ranjitsinhji, Trumper is the finest batsman in the world. What W. G. Grace was to England, so is Trumper to Australia. He shines among the cricketers of the day—with all the lustre of a star of the first magnitude. He is like no one, and no one is like him. As he stands to receive the ball he is not exactly a stylist, for there is an ungainly bending of his right knee; but the moment he gets into position to make his stroke, he becomes the most brilliant and fascinating batsman I have ever seen.

Duff, who will go in first with Trumper, is a versatile player with an electric charm about some of his strokes.

Hill is undoubtedly the finest left-handed batsman there has ever been, the equal of Trumper. His record in test matches is better than that of any other Australian cricketer, and only slightly inferior to that of F. S. Jackson, K. S. Ranjitsinhji, and R. E. Foster, all of whom have, however, played in far fewer test matches than Hill. Before he was twenty-one he had made hundreds against the best bowling in England, and he is still as good as ever. Perhaps there is just a tendency every now and again to gamble with fortune; but when he does make up his mind to be got out, and not to get himself out, there is no one harder to bowl at. Thickset and of medium height, he is very quick on his feet, and an excellent judge of a run. Besides scoring over a century three times for Australia v. England, he has also made scores of 99, 98, 97, 96, and 88.

What a handful of steel-hearted soldiers is in an important pass, so is Noble in the crisis of a match. He has an imperturbability which nothing can shake, and he is a remarkably safe player, with a beautiful method and a knack of playing extra good bowling in the exact centre of his bat.

I did not expect to find Gregory chosen, but from all accounts he has been batting in something like the form of the days when he was second to none amongst Australian batsmen. This will be his sixth visit to England.

Gehrs is one of the three men who will be new to England. He is a South Australian, and came out in the season of 1902-3, at the end of which he scored a brilliant 100 against Lord Hawke's team, who were then on their way home from a tour in New Zealand. His pose at the wicket is rather ungainly, but

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

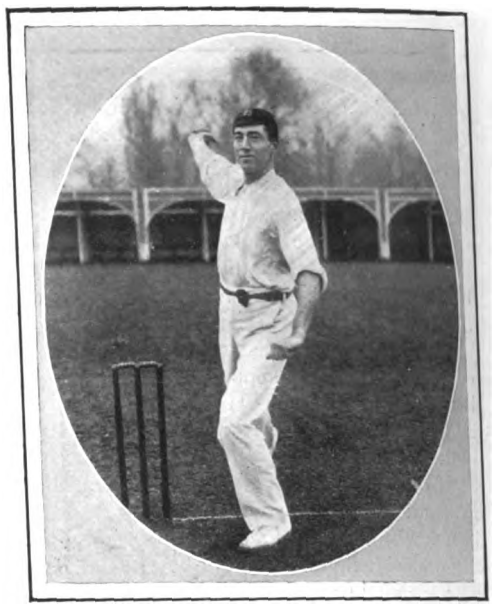
C. E. McLEOD
(Victoria).

R. A. DUFF
(New South Wales).



F. LAVER
(Victoria).

he hits hard, has a straight bat, and plays back very well.

Armstrong is the best batsman in Victoria. Very tall and strong, and with a thoroughly sound style, he ought to make a great many runs. At present he is not a great bat on a sticky wicket, but he has such hitting powers and such a long reach that there is no reason why he should not be successful under difficult conditions. Perhaps he is too cautious and does not let himself go quite enough. However, from what I have heard of his play this winter in Australia, he has adopted a freer style than formerly, with conspicuous success, and has improved so much as to be spoken of in the same breath as Trumper.

Hopkins is a slap-bang type of bat, with beautiful strokes on both sides of the wicket, but a trifle wanting in defence. He frequently gets runs when they are wanted, and is a dangerous man to come in No. 7 or 8.

McLeod, Laver, Kelly, Howell, Cotter, and Newland have all made plenty of runs during the past Australian season, and very tangible evidence of the run-getting power of the side was given during a short tour in New Zealand on the way to England, when in the course of six matches totals of 442, 433, 304, 533, and 593 for nine wickets were put together. "Undoubtedly the side will make a lot of runs, but how are you going to get the strongest English sides out for reasonable scores on good wickets? Neither Trumble nor Saunders is in the team, and remember how finely Trumble has always bowled in England; and how well, too, Saunders did when he was here in 1902. Besides, there is no left-handed bowler in the team, and is not a left-hander almost a sine quâ non in England, where sticky wickets are by no means exceptional?" This is the kind of attitude taken up by the critics and those who defend them. At first sight they would appear to have made out a strong case, but, on the other hand, it should not be forgotten that the 1882, 1884, 1896, and 1899 Australian elevens—four of the most successful—did not include a left-handed bowler. On Cotter a great deal will depend. In build he is not unlike G. L. Jessop, though not so thick about the thighs and shoulders, and for half-a-dozen steps in the middle of his run he reminds me of the Gloucestershire captain. He is not a Richardson or a Lockwood, but he is very fast, with an action very similar to Wilson's of Worcestershire; but though his arm is a trifle low, he can make the ball bump, while he keeps his feet on a wet

M. A. NOBLE
(New South Wales).

D. R. A. GEHRS
(S. Australia).

P. M. NEWLAND
(S. Australia).

A. COTTER
(New South Wales).

Digitized by Google

THE AUSTRALIAN TEAM.

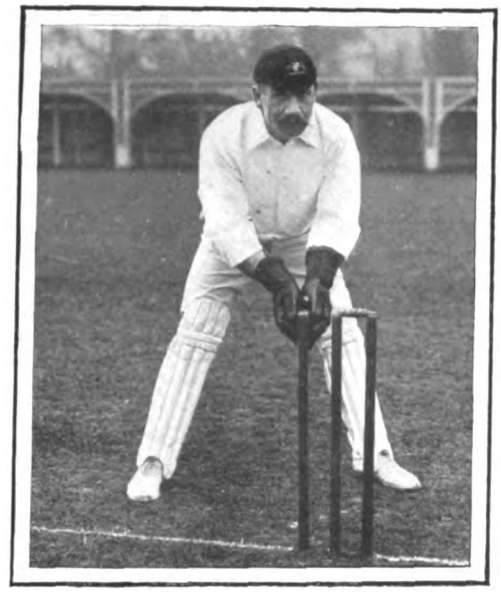
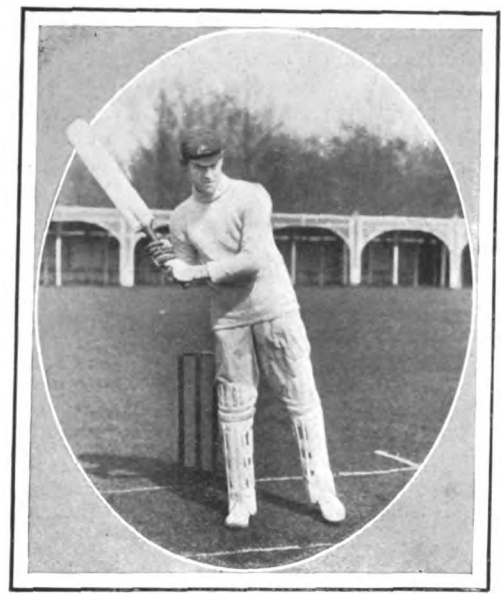
S. E. GREGORY
(New South Wales).



J. J. KELLY
(New South Wales).

A. J. HOPKINS
(New South Wales).

wicket better than any fast bowler I have ever seen. Noble's bowling is chiefly remarkable for its peculiar flight. When he first came out in the Australian season of 1897-98, he used to make the ball swerve from leg in the most baffling manner; but if he has to a great extent lost this swerve, he still has the power of pulling the ball back in the air, and the flight of his bowling is always difficult to judge accurately. He keeps a good length, and on a wicket which gives him the least help can make the ball break back very quickly. He is the finest point in the world, a sure catch, and wonderfully quick in getting to the ball on either side of him. The portion of the ground he covers is quite extraordinary. Hopkins has improved greatly, and on a perfectly true wicket is a fine bowler, for he has the power, like George Lohmann before him, of pulling the ball back in the air, and many a batsman has taken a good-length ball for a half volley and found himself in the pavilion. Ranjitsinhji has a high opinion of McLeod, but there is an unmistakable want of variety, Noble, Howell, and Hopkins being, like McLeod, medium right-handed medium-paced. Still, if there is little of that variety about the bowling which characterised the Australian elevens of 1896 and 1899, they are none the less the type of bowlers against whom runs will take a lot of getting, for if they have one excellence over and above another, it is their ability to keep a good length.



V. TRUMPER
(New South Wales).

Then, nearly every man is an exceptionally good fielder, so that if the old saying that "good fielding makes weak bowling strong" means anything—and the truth of it has been proved over and over again—the Australian eleven ought to be powerful in attack. Kelly and Newland may be expected to do the right thing behind the stumps. Noble will be at point, Gregory at cover, Gehrs at extra cover, and Duff at mid-off—a phalanx of fieldsmen hard to break through; for Gregory is Jessop's rival, Gehrs is as good as either, Duff like a sandbank at mid-off, and Noble equally impenetrable at point. Then there will be Howell and Armstrong at slip, Trumper, Hill, and Hopkins for third man and the long field, and Darling, McLeod, and Cotter for places near the wicket.

There is no doubt that England can put a very powerful eleven in the field—the number of all-round players having greatly increased — but there could be no greater mistake than for Englishmen to imagine that their old rivals will be anything but a very hard side to beat. P. F. WARNER.

C. HILL
(South Australia).

W. W. ARMSTRONG
(Victoria).

W. P. HOWELL
(New South Wales).

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

THE four days' racing which go to make up the Newmarket First Spring Meeting were this year unusually full of interest, although the presence of M. E. Blanc's crack colt would have added considerable excitement to the race for the Two Thousand Guineas, and as the race was run I cannot help thinking that it was just as well for the winner that he had not to meet the representative of France. Apart from the decision of the first two classic races of the year, the advent of some of the better-class two year olds of the season is usually looked for at this meeting, and there is, moreover, a pleasing occupation to be found in the early morning by watching the work on the Heath. On Tuesday morning Plum Centre, bearing the hopes of Kingsclere, came a nice half-speed gallop by the side of the Rowley Mile, accompanied by St. Oswald and Pamflete; he moved freely and well, but a vast improvement will have to be effected if he is to fulfil any of his pretensions to classic honours. So many rumours detrimental to the well-being of Cicero have been put into circulation that it was with quite a feeling of relief that we watched him go a really nice pace stripped gallop, ridden by Maher, and accompanied by Neyland. The following day he naturally had easy exercise, but on Thursday morning, after a couple of canters, he was sent down to the six-furlong post and in company with Osbech came a strong mile and a-half gallop, throughout the whole of which he moved with the ease and precision of machinery, and swept along in great style, full of fire and energy. If all goes well with him, Lord Rosebery's beautiful colt will after all prove to be a worthy champion when France and England meet in friendly rivalry for the Blue Ribbon.

The Two Thousand Guineas Trial Plate, with which proceedings commenced on Tuesday, possessed no special attraction, and beyond the fact that Sauterelle, the property of Mr. R. Hanbury, was a warm favourite and won easily, there is nothing to record. In the following race, the Visitors' Handicap, which went to Sir E. Cassel's Exchequer, quoted in the betting at 7 to 1, began a series of disasters to backers, which continued throughout the day, and amongst them May 2 will long be remembered as "Black Tuesday." Some nice two year olds were to be seen walking about in the paddock previous to the race for the first Spring Two Year Old Stakes. Crathorne, Gemma (the sister to Vedas), and Noisy Bill we have already seen out, but amongst the newcomers was Black Auster, a really fine colt, of whom we shall probably hear more in the future. This son of Persimmon and Crusado is a whole black, and a lengthy, powerful, and bloodlike young racehorse. He was bred by Mr. S. Harrison and sold to Sir Edgar Vincent at the Doncaster sales of last year for 600-guineas. Parlamante, the property of Miss Clinton, is a filly that should win races; she is still rather backward, and was by no means disgraced in being third behind Noisy Bill and Black Auster. It may be noticed that Noisy Bill started at 20 to 1, as also did K. Cannon's other winning mount. Lord Dalmeny's recent purchase, Ritchie, won the Hastings Plate. His owner was present to see him run, and, if report be true, won considerably more than the 500-sovereigns which represent the value of the stakes.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. DE WEND-FENTON'S VEDAS, BY FLORIZEL II.—AGNOSTIC.
Winner of the Two Thousand Guineas.

On Wednesday interest centred in the candidates for the Two Thousand Guineas, and a close inspection of them revealed the fact that in many cases they were very backward in condition, and it will be no surprise if future running should entirely reverse the form shown by more than one of the runners for the first classic race of the season. Rouge Croix is a big powerful horse and can certainly be considerably improved upon; Shilfa has trained off, and was lacking in muscle; Signorino, a son of the flying Signorina, has not grown much, and was decidedly on the big side, while Vedas, profiting by his training for the Lincoln Handicap, was thoroughly fit and clean, which had not a little to do with the result of the race, which he won rather easily by two lengths from Signorino and Llangibby. Whatever this colt's reputation for a nasty disposition may be, he ran kindly enough in the hands of H. Jones. Rouge Croix disappointed his many admirers, but it is by no means improbable that later on he will make them ample amends.

Copyright.

MR. W. HALL WALKER'S CHERRY LASS, BY ISINGLASS—BLACK CHERRY.
Winner of the One Thousand Guineas.

Perhaps the principal feature of the racing on Thursday was the first public appearance of Black Arrow, by Count Schomberg out of Black Cherry. He is certainly the best two year old colt seen out up to now, and so brilliant was his performance in the Newmarket Two Year Old Plate, which he won from eighteen competitors by six lengths, that his future career will be watched with much interest, and his popular owner, Mr. W. Hall Walker, is certainly to be congratulated upon owning not only such a brilliant home-bred two year old colt, but also upon being the possessor of such a filly as Cherry Lass, by Isinglass out of Black Cherry, who gave a most remarkable exhibition of pluck and gameness when she won the One Thousand Guineas on Friday, beating Lord Ellesmere's Koorhaan, Lord Carnarvon's Jongleuse, and sixteen others.

At Kempton Park on Friday Queen Camilla may win the Spring Plate, Ravilious should win the Manor Plate, Gemma or Queen Camilla the Spring Two Year Old Plate, and on Saturday Flower Seller should run well for the Jubilee Handicap.

CAURIE.

Digitized by Google

NOTES FROM NEWMARKET.

W. A. Rouch.

"THEY'RE OFF!"

A remarkable photograph of the start for the Wilbraham Plate.

W. A. Rouch.

EARLY MORNING IN THE HIGH STREET, NEWMARKET.

Felix Leach's string.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

AS was more or less clearly anticipated, the Egypt Command has been reduced to a Brigadier-General's appointment, and Brigadier-General G. M. Bullock, C.B., has been confirmed in the post to which he was temporarily appointed on the retirement of Major-General Slade. General Bullock is a first-class officer, formerly of the Devonshire Regiment, a Staff College man, with a good deal of Staff experience, and an excellent South African record. He was under Buller in the relief of Ladysmith, including Colenso, and was afterwards Commandant of Honing Spruit and on the Staff. The part taken by Colonel Bullock and the Devons at Colenso is well described in the second volume of The Times' "History of the War in South Africa." Bullock, it will be remembered, was surrounded near the guns, and asked to surrender, but declared he would fight it out. Some of his men, however, who were perishing of thirst, had begun surrendering, and the Colonel himself was stunned by a blow from the butt-end of a rifle wielded by a Boer who had come up behind him. "The rest gave in," and the guns, which the Devons alone had stuck to, fell into the enemy's hands.

OUR relations with Italy are so intimate and so cordial that the personality of the Military Attaché to our Embassy at Rome is a matter of very considerable interest and importance. The present holder of the appointment, whose tenure has just been extended to February, 1906, is Colonel C. A. Lamb, who has a very good South African reputation, having been twice mentioned in despatches, and seen enough of the "real thing" to bring him five clasps to his medal. Colonel Lamb is an ex-Rifle Brigade officer, and spent five-and-twenty years in the corps, of which only five were occupied by Staff service as a Volunteer Adjutant.

THE appointments of Captain F. C. D. Sturdee, C.M.G., M.V.O., and Captain O. de B. Brock to the Mediterranean as Chief of the Staff and Flag-Captain to Lord Charles Beresford respectively, are of much personal and professional interest. Captain Sturdee has recently been attached to the Admiralty for special duties, but he was previously under Lord Charles Beresford, having had command of that splendid cruiser, the "Bedford," when the present Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean was at the head of the Channel Squadron. Captain Sturdee is a very distinguished officer, and was given the C.M.G. for services rendered in Samoa, where he commanded the British Force in 1899. He was in the "Hecla" as Lieutenant at the bombardment of Alexandria, and he is a Royal United Service Institution Gold Medallist. He has served in the Departments of the Directors of Ordnance and Naval Intelligence, and is an authority on prize courts and prize law generally. Captain O. de B. Brock has come literally as well as metaphorically under the eye of the Admiralty, as he has been since last May the captain of the Admiralty yacht "Enchantress."

AN interesting visit was paid the other day by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, as Inspector-General of the Forces, to the Royal Military School of Music at Kneller Hall. The Commandant of that institution, Colonel F. O. Barrington Foote, is one of the best-known officers of the British Army, and one of the best respected, too, for he is a very genuine friend to the soldier, and has taken a prominent part in many movements tending to the improved welfare of the "rank and file." Professionally he has an excellent record, and has two campaigns to his credit, the Afghan War and Egypt, 1882, the latter bringing him a mention in despatches for his performance of special duties. His Staff service, prior to his selection for Kneller Hall, was of the personal variety, including two short terms in India as A.D.C., first to the Governor of Madras and afterwards to the Viceroy, and later a three years' spell as A.D.C. to the Inspector-General of Artillery at Army Headquarters. Since his appointment to the Royal Military School of Music, Colonel Foote has emerged into some passing prominence as Secretary to the important Committee on Army Canteens. He is, of course, an accomplished critic of music, and, moreover, an admirable amateur actor. The writer has a vivid recollection of him as the Lord High Executioner in "The Mikado" as performed at the old Gaiety Theatre, Simla, a round score of years ago.

THE recent death of General Le Grand, Royal Marines, made a Good Service Pension of £200 a year available for bestowal, and this has been awarded to a notable old Marine officer, General J. M. de C. Meade, who is a veteran of both the Crimea and the China War of 1857-60. General Meade is one of very few living officers who served both at the bombardment of Odessa, the battle of Balaclava, and the siege of Sebastopol. In the China War, again, he saw nearly all there was to be seen in the way of solid fighting, for he served in the blockade of the Canton River, as well as in the capture of the city. Later, he acted as Quartermaster to one of the Marine battalions, and took part in the North China Expedition, including the Sin-ho action, the capture of Tang-ku, and the storm and capture of the Taku Forts.

CAPTAIN F. G. KIRBY, who goes to Chatham at the beginning of June as Captain of the Dockyard and King's Harbour Master, has recently been in command of the "Leviathan," one of the first-class armoured cruisers on the China Station. At the end of the eighties he was in the Naval Intelligence Department, and previously he had served in the Suakin operations, being employed to superintend the land mines used to protect the flanks, for which service he was duly "mentioned."

Wiele, Bangalore

THE 69TH PUNJABIS AT FIELD TRAINING: RESERVES ADVANCING UNDER COVER.

This regiment, after having been subjected to Lord Kitchener's war-training tests, was officially pronounced to be the best in the 9th Division of the Indian Army. The battalion consists of four companies of Punjabi Mussulmans, two companies of Dogras, and two companies of Sikhs, and was raised two years ago by Lieutenant-Colonel H. V. Cox, who now commands it.

Digitized by Google

Compound Interest

comes to life when the body feels the delicious glow of health, vigour and energy.

That Certain Sense

of vigour in the brain and easy poise of the nerves comes when the improper foods are cut out and pre-digested take their place.

Grape-Nuts

If it has taken you years to run down don't expect one mouthful of this great food to bring you back (for it is not a stimulant but a Rebuilder).

10 days' trial shows such big results that one sticks to it.

"There's a Reason."

Get the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each packet.

ALL UPHILL.

Until She Found the Proper Food.

Life has a very pleasant aspect when viewed through the spectacles of health. We are equal to almost any task; mountains are as molehills and difficulties made but to be overcome when vigorous health is ours.

Just as certain as fate, if we overload the stomach with poorly cooked, pasty, starchy or greasy foods we will suffer and lose our health, for all the machinery of the body is dependent upon the food we eat.

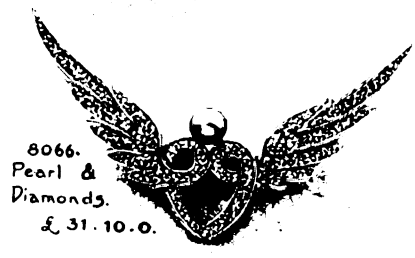
A woman, living in Maidstone, learned this from bitter experience:—

"For months I suffered severely with pains in my chest and arms as well as round the back of my waist, and always felt tired and lackadaisical, so that the slightest exertion was an effort. My appetite kept growing smaller and smaller. I consulted two doctors, but no improvement was noticeable while under their respective treatments. I became despondent and begun to think my case was hopeless, when a friend recommended Grape-Nuts, having derived great benefit from this truly wonderful food himself. As a last chance I invested in a packet, and after only a couple of weeks' trial it had marvellous effects upon my health. The pains disappeared entirely, and in their place strength and an excellent appetite returned. I felt strong and fit for anything, that nasty sensation of lifelessness having quite departed.

"I have put on flesh rapidly.

"I have now used Grape-Nuts for many weeks, and mean to continue to do so in the future, for the reason that I and the remainder of the household like it so much. We eat it with milk and a little jam, generally apricot, which is a valuable addition."

Name given by the Grape-Nuts Co., 66, Shoe Lane, London, E.C.



Diamond Brooches In New Styles

PRICES NETT

A New Book "Jewels of Today"

SENT POST FREE

Hancocks & Co

Corner of Bruton St

New Bond St London.

"MY LADY NICOTINE."

(CHAPTER VII.)

"I approached Gilray then, and without a word handed him my pouch, while the others drew nearer. Nothing was to be heard but the water oozing out and in beneath the houseboat. Gilray pushed the tobacco from him, as he might have pushed a bag of diamonds that he mistook for pebbles. I placed it against his arm, and motioned to the others not to look. Then I sat down beside Gilray, and almost smoked into his eyes. Soon the aroma reached him, and rapture struggled into his face. Slowly his fingers fastened on the pouch. He filled his pipe without knowing what he was doing, and I handed him a lighted spill. He took perhaps three puffs, and then gave me a look of reverence that I know well. It only comes to a man once in all its glory—the first time he tries the Arcadia Mixture—but it never altogether leaves him."

Dr. J. M. BARRIE says:

"What I call the 'Arcadia' in 'My Lady Nicotine' is the Craven Mixture, and no other."

ASK FOR

CARRERAS' 'CRAVEN MIXTURE'

AND CRAVEN CIGARETTES.

From all Tobacconists.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND. SPECIAL STEEL: HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS. GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brand) keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

SHOOTING.

(In Two Vols.)

Edited by Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per Vol.)

THE BREEDING AND REARING OF PHEASANTS, PARTRIDGES AND WILD DUCK.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD AND CURES INDIGESTION,

CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,

June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

Digitized by Google

May Day Merry-makings.

MAY 1, 1805—MAY 1, 1905.

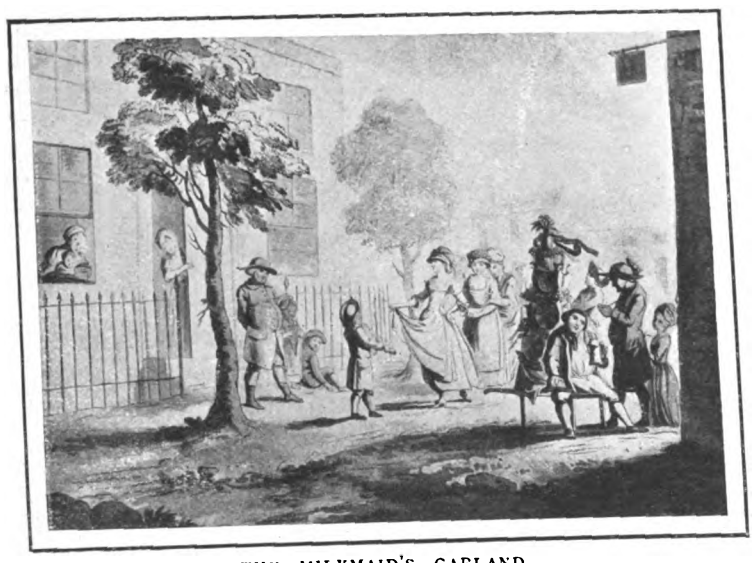
A CENTURY ago the 1st of May still meant something, both to the London milkmaid and the London chimney-sweep. If the maypole had disappeared many years previously from the Strand, and the joyous saturnalia of the "Palais Portman" in Portman Square had come to an untimely end with the death of Elizabeth Montagu, the time-honoured observances of May Day had not altogether passed into the limbo of things that were. Only nine years before Gaugain had produced the charming etchings now reproduced by permission of their owners, Messrs. Maggs, which he christened respectively "Chimney-sweepers on May Day" and "The Milkmaid's Garland." Full of vigour and incident are these two beautiful aquatints, the first of which was supposed to deal with the annual gathering of the knights-of-the-broom before Mrs. Montagu's house in Portman Square, where the "Queen of the Blue-Stockings" always provided a sumptuous breakfast for her humble guests. Gaugain's prints appeared just four years before her death. The tradition clung to the locality for half a century afterwards. In the illustration of "Portman House in 1851," in Mr. Austin Dobson's fifth volume of "Mme. d'Arblay's Diary," a group of chimney-sweeps are seen in the act of disporting themselves before the well-known gates. The coloured mezzotint entitled "The Spell of Hobnelia," by James Walker, after Northcote (also in the collection of Messrs. Maggs), bears the date of 1783. It deals poetically with another old-world May Day custom, according to which a maiden was supposed to be able to read her true lover's name in the track of a snail over some ashes strewn on the ground or on a block of wood (as in the picture) for that purpose.

The water-colours of Georgiana Keate are now almost forgotten, although very popular about 1780, when she sketched the Duchess of Devonshire, Mrs. Siddons, the Chevalier d'Eon, and a number of well-known people both in London and Bath. A good many of them were published about that time. It is still easy to recognise the corner of Covent Garden in which the May Day scene she depicts so cleverly is taking place. It is reproduced from an original picture in a private collection.

MAY DAY IN COVENT GARDEN. CIRCA 1782.
(After a rare water-colour by Georgiana Keate.



THE MILKMAID'S GARLAND.

CHIMNEY-SWEEPERS ON MAY DAY.

(From etchings by Gaugain, in the collection of Messrs. Maggs.)

THE VILLAGE MAYPOLE.
(From the frontispiece of Gay's "Shepherd's Weeks," 1714.)

If the merry-makings of our pleasure-loving ancestors had no direct connection with the Roman Floralia or the Celtic Beltein, they could certainly claim a very respectable antiquity. The "May Queen" and the "going a-maying" were at any rate as old as Chaucer's time, and in Henry VIII.'s reign the heads of the Corporation of London went out into the high grounds of Kent to gather the may, the King and his Queen Catherine of Arragon coming from their palace of Greenwich, and meeting these "grave and reverend seigniors" at Shooter's Hill.

"O that I were there
To helpen the ladies their may-bush to bear," sung Spenser, while Herrick exclaims:

"Come and coming mark
How each field turns a street, and each street a park,
Made green and trimmed with trees."

Until the Puritans obtained the mastery the maypole (such as seen in our illustration) had its place equally with the parish church, or the parish stocks. Uprooted during the Commonwealth, the maypole flourished again after the Restoration, but hardly, perhaps, with the same enthusiasm as in Tudor times. Washington Irving saw a maypole at Chester—one only, it is true, but he records the fact that the sight "gave a glow to his feelings, and spread a charm over the country for the rest of the day." Chaucer has immortalised the "great shaft" or maypole in Cornhill, which over-topped the steeple, and still lives in the name of "St. Andrew Undershaft," although the maypole in no way enters into the economy of modern Aldwych. George Buchanan apostrophised May Day in a Latin poem, the first verses of which are thus rendered by Archdeacon Wrangham:

"Hail! Sacred thou to sacred joy,
To mirth and wine, sweet first of May!
To sports, which no grave cares alloy,
The sprightly dance, the festive play.

Hail! thou of every circling time,
That gracest still the ceaseless flow!
Bright blossom of the season's prime Age, hastening on to winter's snow.

. . . . .

Such was the soft and genial breeze,
Mild Zephyr breathed on all around;
With yielding glee, to airs like these Yielded its wealth th' unlaboured ground."

A. M. B.

Digitized by Google

The Crown Perfumery Co.
Paris. London. New York.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

IN spite of all the criticism which is yearly thrown at the Royal Academy, the public still shows keen interest in its exhibitions; and there is no doubt that Messrs. Cassell will have a large sale for their quarto publication, "Royal Academy Pictures," of which they have sent us the first of four shilling parts. It contains a Rembrandt photogravure of Sir Edward Poynter's picture, "The Cup of Tantalus," and forty-eight pages of beautiful reproductions of pictures and statues. When complete, the volume will form a very attractive memento of the year's exhibition.

Royal Academy Pictures.

* * *

MESSRS. GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, have issued opportunely at the beginning of the cricket season, a shilling reprint of Mr. P. F. Warner's very successful and interesting book, "How we Recovered the Ashes." The volume is very clearly printed on good paper. In substance it remains practically the same as the larger library edition, which was published some time ago by Messrs. Chapman and Hall. Mr. Warner has omitted one or two passages of a controversial nature, simply, as he says, because he was anxious to leave no record of a thoroughly pleasant tour but such as would naturally tend to increase the good feeling between the cricket public of Australia and that of the Mother Country. The edition includes an introduction by Mr. C. B. Fry, in which he pricks one or two bubbles that have been blown concerning Mr. Warner's team and International cricket in general. "Whoever would understand," says Mr. Fry, "the test match cricket of 1905 cannot do better than read Mr. Warner's account of the last campaign in Australia," and we heartily agree with him. The book is illustrated with most interesting photographs of the scenes and performers in the tour.

Recovering the Ashes.

* * *

ANOTHER very timely publication is a new volume of "Cricket Songs," by Mr. Norman Gale, which has just been published by Mr. Alston Rivers. Everyone who cares at all for cricket knows the former songs on the great game by the "Cricket Laureate," and this second volume should meet with no less enthusiastic a welcome than the first. There is no failing in Mr. Norman Gale's vigour, and the breezy, healthy spirit of these songs of his, to say nothing of their value as poetry, cannot fail to appeal to thousands of readers.

Cricket Songs.

* * *

MESSRS. MACMILLAN and Mr. Austin Dobson may be alike congratulated on the success of the new edition of "The Diary and Letters of Mme. D'Arblay," now in process of publication. Mr. Dobson's invaluable notes have been prepared with the utmost care, and are always given in such a manner as not to interfere with the continuity of the text. On the completion of the sixth volume, to which Mr. Dobson adds not only a supplementary preface, but a short bibliography, an illustrated review of this absorbingly interesting book will be given in the columns of THE KING. For the present it suffices to say that the moment of its appearance is most opportune. Bath has recently bestirred herself to replace the shattered memorial erected sixty-five years ago over the grave of Queen Charlotte's much-tried "reader"; and commemorative tablets will doubtless soon mark her former Bath abodes, either in the North Parade, Queen Square, or Stanhope Street. The appeal of Mr. T. Sturge Cotterell has not been made in vain. We are in the presence of a Bath reawakening as well as a Burney revival, and the Burney family has offered to carry out the pious work in Walcot Cemetery which Bath was both willing and anxious to undertake. It is satisfactory to note that Mr. Dobson's task has been accomplished while Archdeacon Burney, who, in 1840, read the last rites over the open grave "of the friend of Johnson and Reynolds," his distinguished relative, still lives. It is very rare that the performer of the ceremony actually survives the tombstone itself, as appears to be the case in the instance of Fanny D'Arblay—the feminine Pepys of English literature. The Archdeacon of Croydon is thus a living link between the literary traditions of the twentieth century and those of the eighteenth.

Fanny Burney.

* * *

WE are still close enough to Easter, and drawing near enough to Whitsuntide, to appreciate the fact of the nuisance caused to everybody by the want of any simple law to settle the date of these festivals. You have to look them up in the calendar weeks beforehand, and then ten to one you forget all about it. We have received from Mr. Moses B. Cotsworth of York a little book crammed with learning, which advocates what he calls a Rational Almanac. We could not hope, under twenty pages or so, to give anything like an idea of all that Mr. Cotsworth's remarkable book contains, but very briefly his proposal for the future is this. In and after 1916 let us fix Easter for April 23 every year; let us divide the year into thirteen months of exactly four weeks each, and call the extra day (which is a special day, or year-day, apart from all the others, without any week-day name of its own) Christmas Day. The advantages of such a scheme are obvious. Sunday would always be the first, eighth, fifteenth, and twenty-second of the month; we should never have to count the months on our knuckles to see whether they had thirty or thirty-one days; in fact, the Rational Calendar would soon become so fixed in the head that we should need no printed calendar at all, and we should never again misdate our letters and cheques because the office boy (it always is the office boy, of course) has forgotten to alter the date-card.

The Rational Almanac.

ALEXANDRE G. P. D'ARBLAY

The husband of Fanny Burney. From a crayon drawing. Reproduced by permission of Messrs. Macmillan from Vol. V. of their handsome edition of "The Diary and Letters of Mme. D'Arblay."

* * *

ONE of the most striking of recent novels is "Seth of the Cross," by Mr. Alphonse Courlander, published by Mr. Eveleigh Nash. Mr. Courlander clearly owes not a little to Mr. Thomas Hardy. Seth reminds us irresistibly of Jude the Obscure, and his tragedy shows just the kind of apparently reckless cruelty on the part of circumstance that chimes in with Mr. Hardy's well-known later views of life. But we must not imply that Mr. Courlander has nothing original to offer. There is a strong individuality about this countryman, who has a soul above his neighbours and above his own passions; and though the total impression left by the book is gloomy, and the end of it sees Seth lying dead at the foot of the village cross, and the woman he loved ruined by his worthless brother, there is sufficient strength in the book to justify this harrowing of our feelings.

A Novel.

* * *

MESSRS. A. AND C. BLACK have in the press the first volume of an important addition to military literature, in the shape of a "Military Geography of the Balkan Peninsula." The object of the series, of which this is the first volume, is to classify and analyse the geography of probable and possible theatres of war in such a way as to give full information about each area on strictly educational lines, i.e., to be of use both to the ordinary reader and to the military student. To ensure due weight being given to each side of the subject, the work has been entrusted jointly to Lieutenant-Colonel A. F. Mockler-Ferryman, late Oxfordshire Light Infantry, F.R.G.S., F.Z.S., and Professor L. W. Lyde, Professor of Economic Geography of University College, London.

Military Geography.

* * *

MR. JOHN LANE is just publishing a new book on sport in India, by Captain A. I. R. Glasfurd. The title of the volume is "Rifle and Romance in the Indian Jungle," and it is a record of thirteen years of Indian jungle life. The book is illustrated very largely by the author's own hand, and also with a number of reproductions from photographs. Other publications of Mr. Lane's are a new novel by Mr. William J. Locke, called "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," "Love's Journey," a new volume of poems by Miss Ethel Clifford, and a book on "Joachim," by Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland, which is to form one of the series of Living Masters of Music.

The Indian Jungle.

* * *

MR. FISHER UNWIN, who is now the publisher of Mr. T. P. O'Connor's "Life of Beaconsfield," has just issued a new edition of it in his Half-crown Library of Standard Biographies. A new volume in his Shilling Series is Lanoe Falconer's famous story, "Mademoiselle Ixe," together with the "Hotel d'Angleterre," and other tales by the same author. Among other recent reprints is Messrs. Nelson and Sons' little sixpenny edition of "The Deerslayer," by Fenimore Cooper. These pocket reprints of Messrs. Nelson's have the rare advantage in sixpenny books of being strongly bound, and strike us altogether as being some of the best in the market.

Some Reprints.

---

BOOKS TO READ.

English Table Glass, by Percy Bate. (Newnes.)
Autobiography of Andrew Dickson White. Two vols. (Macmillan.)
Mrs. Dane's Defence, by Henry Arthur Jones. (Macmillan.)
Indiscretions, by Cosmo Hamilton. (Treherne.)
The Three Essentials, by Dorothea Gerard. (Hutchinson.)
Dorset Dear, by M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell). (Longmans.)
The Brooding Wild, by Ridgwell Cullum. (Chapman and Hall.)
The Jackal, by Coulson Kernahan. (Lock.)
A Cheque for Three Thousand, by A. H. Vesey. (Arrowsmith.)

Digitized by Google

A CURIOSITY IN CALIGRAPHY.

Our photo shows Mr. C. H. Unthan, whose unique public exhibitions attract great attention, performing one of his "feats." If he finds, as he says he does, that "Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen" is the pen that best suits his foot, you will realise that it will give you extra ease and facility in writing with the straightforward use of your hand.

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen.

If you travel, this is the pen that frees you from the inkstand, the hotel, the post office, and boarding house pen.

From 10/6. In Silver and Gold for Presentation. Of Stationers, Jewellers, etc. Dainty illustrated booklet on pens post free from L. & C HARDTMUTH, 12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.
PARIS: 6, Rue de Hanovre. NEW YORK: 173, Broadway.

FEATHER BOAS

THE LARGEST STOCK IN LONDON.

Ostrich Boas

Curled, made from selected Feather in White, Black, Natural and White, Black and White, and Grey and White.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 56 inches long | - | 10/6 |
| 58 " " | - | 16/6 |
| 60 " " | - | 21/- |
| 60 " " | - | 29/6 |
| 80 " " | - | 35/6 |
| 80 " " | - | 42/- |
| 80 " " | - | 63/- |

Richer qualities, 84/- to 20 gns.

Hungarian Feather Stoles

Rich quality, for Day and Evening wear.

Very wide and long.

In White or Grey, 16/6

In Natural or Black, 14/6

Sent on approval.

Debenham & Freebody,

WIGMORE STREET, LONDON, W.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

MODES.

MAISON LEWIS,

16, Rue Royale, PARIS.

Entrance, 422, Rue St. Honoré.

Place du Casino, MONTE CARLO.
7, Place de la Mairie, BIARRITZ.

210, Regent Street, LONDON. W.

"The House for Veils."

LARGEST SELECTION IN LONDON.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear,

famous for THE ROYAL CRESCENT VEIL, a shaped patent adjustable veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

Motor Veils. Motor Hats. Motor Veils.

THE LATEST AND LARGEST SELECTION IN LONDON.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

LONDON AUTOGRAPH SALES FOR APRIL AND MAY.

NELSONIANA IN EXCELSIS.

IF the book sales of the present season are few, the autograph dispersals are both numerous and important. In the matter of prices, the predictions made last year in the columns of this journal have been abundantly verified. Autograph letters of the rarer sort have quadrupled in value during the past twenty years, and one must look abroad for the bargains which were once of every-day occurrence in London. Mr. Walter R. Benjamin of New York, however, prices a two-page quarto letter of Sir Joshua Reynolds in his latest catalogue at only 15-dol., while M. Noel Charavay recently sold a curious and characteristic epistle of that ardent Whig, Lord Stanhope, discussing the acquisition of a stone from the Bastille as a sacred relic, for 12s. The Nelson-Hamilton letter of last year still holds the record price (£1,030); but a long holograph letter of Mary Queen of Scots in the Scott Book Sale was purchased by Mr. Quaritch for £900, although it was unfinished and unsigned. It was dated January, 1652, and fills fourteen pages. It belonged originally to the famous Dawson Turner Collection, at the sale of which at Puttick's, in June, 1859, it formed part of two volumes of MSS. entitled "Original Letters of Sovereigns and other Illustrious Personages, 1538-1704." These volumes were knocked down to Thorpe, the bookseller, for £280! The mention of these volumes brings one, naturally enough, to the Sotheby sale of the 13th ult., one of quite exceptional interest, at which 145 lots fetched just £2,000—probably quite a record average—in the course of little more than an hour. Six months ago the letters and documents, now finally scattered, were tightly bound together with string and glue. The difficult task of separating them was entrusted to Messrs. Maltby of Oxford, who make a special feature of autograph mending and similar work. They succeeded in detaching every separate sheet, not only without injury, but in such a manner as to leave no trace of having, during over two centuries, formed part of a calf-clad folio volume. If sold in one lot they would certainly not have realised a quarter of the sum they eventually sold for. The MSS. in question almost entirely related to the momentous political events of 1649-51, and comprise letters from Queen Henrietta Maria to her son, written in the first flush of her poignant grief at the loss of her husband, from Henry Jermyn (who subsequently married her), from Prince Rupert, the Marquesses of Ormonde and Montrose, William Prince of Orange, Sir Richard Browne, Sir John Culpepper, Sir William Boswell, Sir Edward Hyde, and last, but not least, from Abraham Cowley, the poet-secretary, whose letters are of the utmost rarity. Amongst the keenest competitors for these treasures were Captain Lindsey and Mr. F. Sabin, both of whom are possessors of extremely valuable Stuart collections. Mr. Sabin gave £151 for the finest letter of Henrietta Maria, filling four entire pages, written in French to her son on January 25, 1650, and dealing largely with the political outlook at Paris. A superb letter of the luckless Montrose was knocked down at £48 to Captain Lindsey, who paid £31 for one of the Cowley letters, and £51 for a letter from the Queen-Mother, soundly rating Mr. Long for his share in the Scotch treaty. The most important Cowley letter was bought by Mr. Sabin for £64, Dr. Scott giving £30 for a second, and Messrs. Maggs £22 10s. for a third.

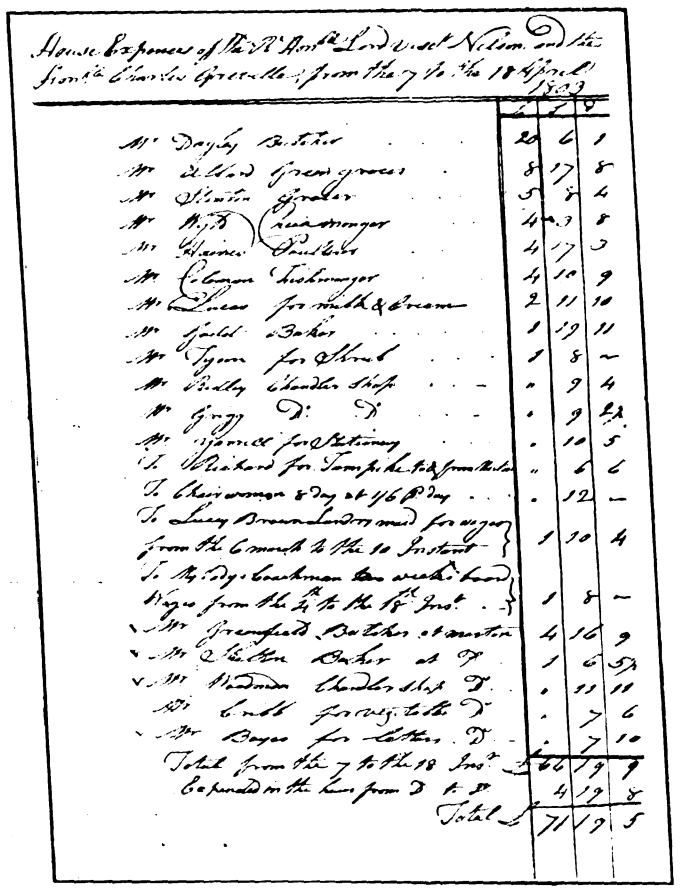
The sales announced for May 11, 12, and 13, as well as that for the 17th, are scarcely less interesting and important than that of the 13th ult. The last of the three days is devoted almost entirely to the dispersal of what has been long known as the Bunbury Collection, many of the more striking letters of which are printed in the "Correspondence of Sir Thomas Hanmer." The epistles in question were for the most part addressed to Sir Henry Bunbury, Sir Charles Bunbury, Mrs. Bunbury, and other members of the family.

The pièces de résistance on the 11th inst. consist of a series of twenty-five autograph letters covering eighty pages addressed by Mrs. Piozzi, between 1789 and 1816, to her friend the Rev. Dr. Whalley of Bath, and a still more sensational series of twenty-four extending over seventy-two pages written by Mrs. Siddons to her old friend Mrs. Pennington, concerning the troubles between her daughter and Sir Thomas (then plain Mr.) Lawrence.

In view of what took place last year it is not impossible that the following Nelson letter, dated "Victory," May 4, 1805 (to be sold the same day), may yield more than either of these lots:

"Your poor dear Nelson is my dearest beloved Emma very very unwell, after a two years hard fag it has been mortifying the not being able to get at the Enemy, as yet I can get no conformation about them, at Lisbon this day week they knew nothing about them but it is now generally believed that they are gone to the West Indies. My movements must be guided by the best Judgment I am able to form. John Bull may be angry, but he never had any officer, who has served him more faithfully, but Providence I rely will yet crown my never failing exertions with success, and that it has only been a hard trial of my fortitude in bearing up against untoward events. You my own Emma are my first and last thoughts and to the last moment of my breath, they will be occupied in leaving you independent of the world, and all I long in the world that you will be a kind and affectionate Father to my dear [a word obliterated] DAUGHTER HORATIA, but my Emma your Nelson is not the nearer being lost to you for taking care of you in case of events which are only known when they are to happen and an all wise Providence, and I hope for many years of comfort with you, only think of all you wish me to say and you may be assured it exceeds if possible your wishes. May God protect you and MY DEAR HORATIA, prays ever your most faithful and affectionate &c., &c."

Another notable item consists of a long holograph letter of Frederick the Great to Algarotti, including some original verses, but the lucubration of the Royal poet will scarcely command the price likely to be given for another long letter from Nelson to Lady Hamilton, dated June 13, 1801, which contains the lines, "How is Sir William—better? I shall do as you please about going into the country, but in the party to Wales there will be Mr. Greville, who I am sure will be a stop to many of our conversations, for we are used to speak our minds freely of kings and beggars, and not fear being betrayed." In view of the work on Lady Hamilton now being written by Mr. Sickel, all these letters (many of which now see the light for the first time) are of supreme interest. Mr. Greville's relations to Lady Hamilton before he introduced her to his relative, Sir W. Hamilton, are well known. The writer some three years since came across a large scrap-book once belonging to Mr. Greville, and still containing many curious odds and ends relating to Nelson and "beloved Emma." From this source was derived the MS. account now reproduced in fac-simile of the expenses of Nelson and Greville while living together in Bond Street from April 7 to April 18, 1803. The Admiral's opinion of Mr. Greville had evidently undergone a total change in the interval.



NOTE OF LORD NELSON'S HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES

While living in Bond Street, in the month of April, 1803, with Mr. Charles Greville.

The sale of the 17th inst. may be fairly described as a Nelson field-day, for of the 226 lots to be dispersed, more than half consist of either Nelson letters or those of his captains or Naval contemporaries. The earliest of the former dates as far back as 1785, when he writes from the Leeward Islands to his uncle, William Suckling, announcing his engagement to Mrs. Nisbet, and asking him for £100 a year for a few years, or £1,000 advance, adding naïvely, "How happy you will make a couple who will pray for you for ever. Don't disappoint me or my heart will break," and so on for four closely-written pages! What a curious contrast to the Nelson-Hamilton letters of 1801-5! In addition to the Leeward Islands letters, Mr. Tom Hodge will offer for sale on the 17th inst. Nelson letters from Barbadoes, Leghorn, Myrtello Bay, Genoa, Porto Ferrajo, Naples, Palermo, Maddalina Island, and Merton, concluding with one addressed to Lord Collingwood three days before his death. It will be useful to watch the effect of the simultaneous sale of thirty-four Nelson letters in the year of Trafalgar's centenary on the high prices which ruled twelve months ago. Will the enthusiasm of the moment compensate for a too-abundant market? On the same day will be sold ninety-three exceptionally fine letters of Nelson's captains and contemporaries, beginning with Acton, the Neapolitan Premier, Captain Constantine Phipps, afterwards Lord Mulgrave, who writes in June, 1773, to Sir Joseph Banks, when preparing to fit out the "Racehorse" and the "Carcass" for his Arctic expedition, "with young Nelson on board as coxswain, under Captain Lutwidge, second in command." The foreign letters are of no particular importance, but the following item is sure to stimulate the energetic rivalry of Nelson collectors. "Autograph letter of John Pascoe Senior and Signal Lieutenant on board the 'Victory' at Trafalgar, narrating to Robert Cole his personal interview with Lord Nelson in his cabin at eleven o'clock the morning of Trafalgar day":

"The Admiral was on his knees penning that beautiful prayer to the God of Battles, a passage of which runs thus: 'And may the prevailing feature of the British Fleet (after the action) be that of mercy.' This prayer has not been sufficiently shown in his life, &c., seeing that he did not put his trust in an Arm of flesh."

Forty-five minutes after this interview the great Admiral on the poop ordered him to make the ever-memorable signal, "England expects that every man will do his duty." Pascoe was wounded later in the day, and was placed near the cockpit, where the dying hero was passing away.

B.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the
HIGHEST QUALITY
OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE
as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.
AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.
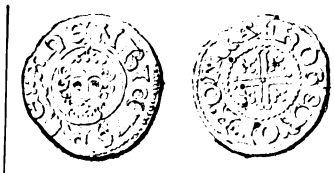
(Two hours from Paddington.)



PENNY—HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS
(AT MODERATE PRICES)
SPINK & SON LTD.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

CATALOGUES OF
ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,
GRATIS.
Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,
DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,
53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

JAMES TREGASKIS,
"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS, MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS, DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST, ORIGINAL DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, AMERICANA, CURIOSITIES, ANTIQUITIES, OBJECTS OF ART.
Catalogues Price Sixpence.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

M. NOEL CHARAVAY, the well-known Official Expert, can give American Travellers valuable aid in their researches for Autographs and Documents relating to America, the French Empire, European History, and Art and Literature. THE AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHS is published by him monthly, as well as Catalogues, etc.

Note Address:
3, RUE FURSTENBERG, PARIS.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

R. L. Stevenson's "An Inland Voyage," "Travels with a Donkey," "New Arabian Nights," "Virginibus Puerisque," and others same Author.—155, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Boxiana, Vols. IV. and V., in boards.—158, THE EXCHANGE.

Army List, 1815 and 1816.—163, THE KING'S KING'S EXCHANGE.

Early copies of Pilgrim's Progress, with contemporary portraits.—164, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cotton's "Voice from Waterloo," first edition, in original boards.—165, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry. "The Book of Constitutions," first edition, with frontispiece.—166, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIth Century Caricatures and Broadsides relating to Baptists.—246, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures illustrating the Attorney-General's Charges against Queen Caroline. Colonial copies wanted.—247, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bath Tokens issued by Turner, coach contractor, between 1770 and 1800.—747, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Scarce Arundels, Angelico's Annunciation, Limia St. Catherine, Adoration Trinity, Giorgione, Primavera, Venus rising, etc.—219A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Grand Oil Painting, Venus and Cupid, 69×54. Landscape, Wilson, R.A. Drawings by Alken, Herring, set by Solomon.—220A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals.—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Palæolithic and Neolithic Flint Implements for disposal.—743A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

A RECENT case at Hendon illustrates the frivolous manner in which the police often prefer charges against harmless and law-abiding motorists. Four summonses were issued against a motor-tricyclist, whose early experiences of motoring must have appeared somewhat alarming, as he had only proceeded three miles after taking delivery of his machine before he was stopped by an inspector of police. He was subsequently charged with not having a proper identification plate, with driving without having procured a licence, with not producing the licence, and with using abusive language. The first two summonses were dismissed; on the third he was fined 1s. only; and the fourth was dismissed, the magistrates stating that they did not believe for one moment that the defendant had used the language imputed to him by the police.

* * *

It is announced that the Automobile Club, having carried out the pioneer work in the encouragement of motor-boating, is about to hand over the control of all motor-boat events to a separate body, to be called the Marine Motor Club of Great Britain and Ireland. This, the latest offshoot of the parent body, will start under the most favourable auspices, and the nucleus of a useful programme for the coming season exists in the Reliability Trials in Southampton Water and the Selection Trials for the International Cup, for which the Automobile Club has already made the preliminary arrangements.

* * *

The objections raised by M. Paul Meyan to any modification of the terms of his original challenge to run his French car against a British-built machine in a 5,000-kilomètre reliability trial will not be allowed to stand in the way of the proposed match. Mr. Siddeley has now announced that he will agree to M. Meyan's conditions, and run the entire distance in France. A new difficulty, however, has arisen, as the French Club has declined to supervise the trial, a decision which does not seem to indicate great faith on its part in the chances of the French car. Doubtless, however, some method of appointing independent observers can be arrived at if M. Meyan is sincere in his expressed desire to disprove the statement that a British car holds the world's record for reliability. Our own Automobile Club would probably consent to appoint one of the two observers, whose presence at the match is absolutely necessary, if the result is to have any value.

* * *

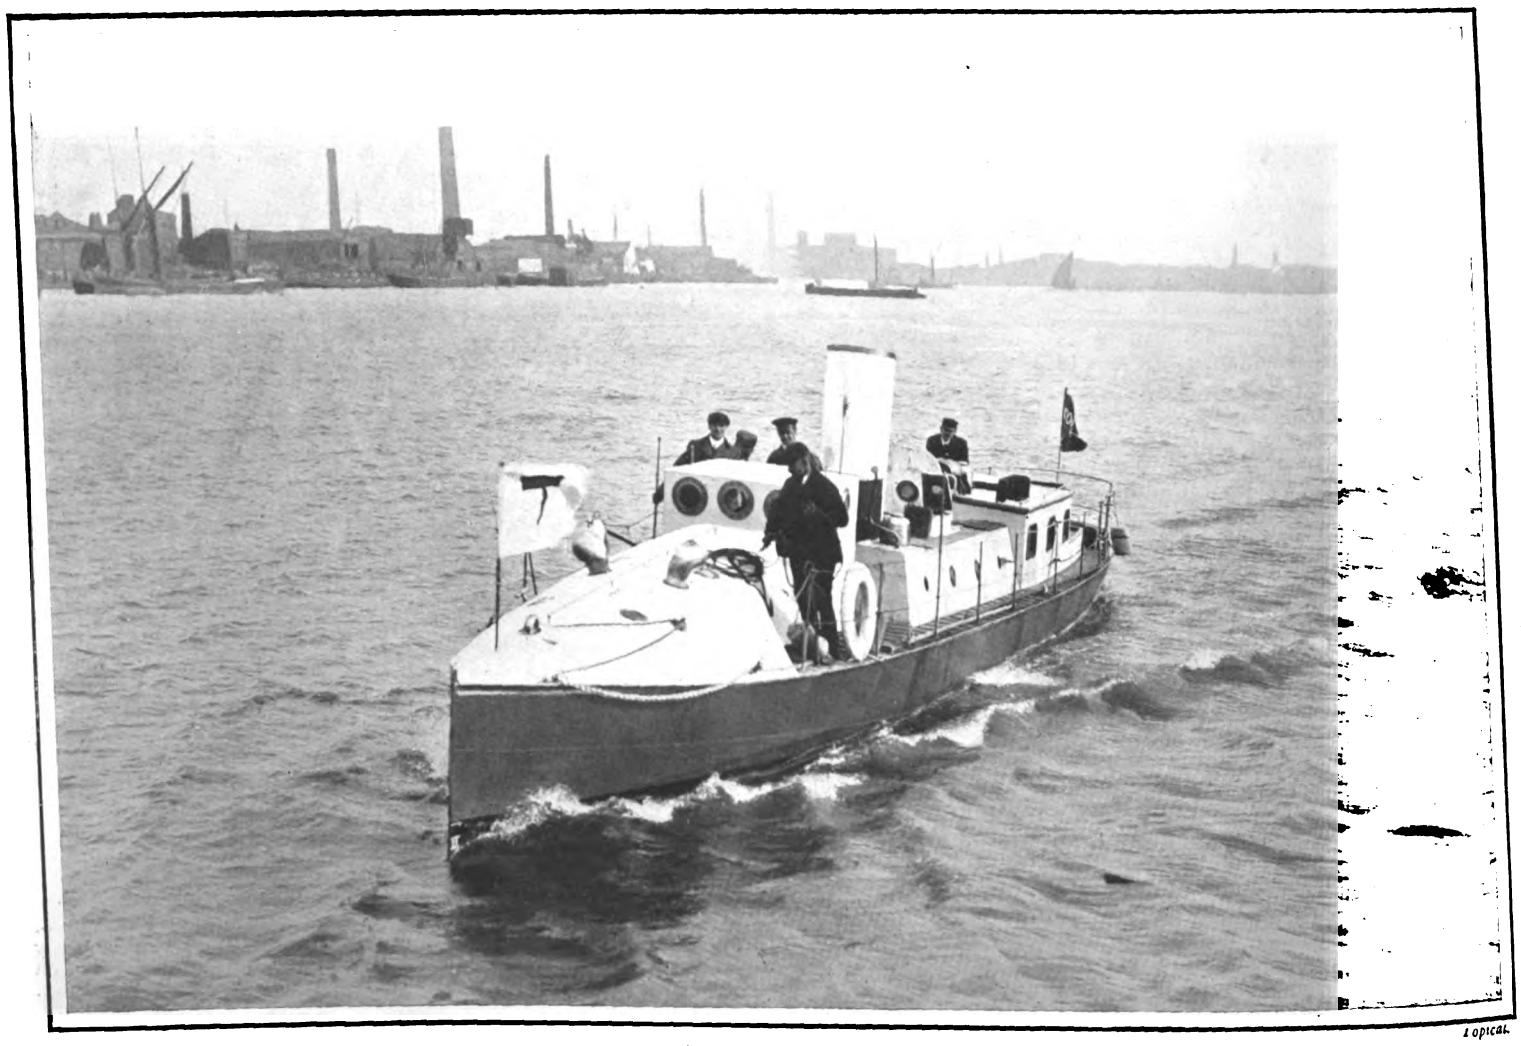
By the time these lines appear in print the Scottish Trials will be nearing their completion, the four days over which they extend being the Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of the present week. Thursday's run includes the ascent of the Cairwell Pass, and as the daily papers will doubtless give only brief accounts of the progress of the competition, it is of interest to describe the most severe test to which the cars will be put. The summit of the pass is 2,000-ft. above sea-level, a fact which entitles the road to be described as the highest in Great Britain. The cars will be timed over about 1,200-yds. of the steepest portion of the climb, which has an average gradient of 1 in 8·9. This, of course, would be an easy task to set any modern car, but two-thirds of the way up is the famous Devil's Elbow, an acute-angled S turn, where the gradient increases to 1 in 6·5. To add to the difficulty the road is generally in very poor condition, so that it would not be improbable if some of the less powerful cars were compelled to shed their passengers at this point.

* * *

Friday's run is from Aberdeen to Pitlochry by way of Huntly, Grantown, and Kingussie, and on Saturday the cars will return to Glasgow, whence they started on Wednesday, through Aberfeldy, Crieff, Inverary, and Arrochar. This last run includes the ascent of Loch-na-Craig Hill near Aberfeldy, but the value of this test consists more in its length, which is 3¼-miles, rather than its steepness, as the worst gradient is only 1 in 10. The total distance to be covered in the four days is 595⅛-miles, and the minimum times in which the cars are permitted to cover the various stages have been carefully arranged in order to prevent excessive speed. In every case the maximum average allowed is well under the legal limit. Forty-four vehicles are entered, ranging from a 6-h.p. light Wolseley to a 30-h.p. Daimler.

* * *

The rules of the Scottish Trials are particularly severe in the matter of adjustments and repairs, as, with the exception of five minutes per day for inspection and adjustment of the brakes, everything necessary must be done during the running time, with a consequent loss of marks. Stops for tyre troubles will not count against the competitor, unless the total time occupied in tyre repairs exceeds four hours. This, of course, could only occur in the case of a car fitted with tyres of bad quality, or insufficient in strength to carry the weight of the vehicle. The awards will consist of a non-stop gold medal for each of the four classes. If two or more cars gain full marks in one class, the medal will be allotted to the car making the best performance on the hills.



Topical.

THE NEW PETROL MOTOR-BOAT FOR THE SWEDISH NAVY.

A new motor-boat for harbour duty has just been completed by Messrs. Thornycroft, and on her trial trip last week she gave very satisfactory results. Since the "Caroline" incident the Customs officials have exercised great precautions to prevent suspicious craft from leaving home waters, and the new Swedish boat has been under surveillance day and night.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 and 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.: 3171 & 1849 GERRARD.

H.I.M. THE EMPEROR OF GERMANY

has just ordered

ONE OF OUR FAMOUS 24-40 H.P. CARS.

F.I.A.T.

BRIGHTON DEPOT:—Brighton & South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James' St., Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland—

FIAT MOTORS, LTD., 37 & 38, Long Acre, London, W.C.

Agents for Yorkshire: H. Johnson & Co., 28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.

Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire: Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

1905

MERCÉDÈS MODELS.

1905 MERCÉDÈS LICENSED CARS

can only be obtained from

Sole Conoessionnaires:

Cannstatt Mercédès, Ltd.,

127/130, LONG ACRE, LONDON, W.C.

Or their Authorised Agents as under:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| London Agents: J. E. HUTTON, Ltd. | Glasgow Agents: RENNIE & PROSSER. | Liverpool Agents: J. A. LAWTON & CO., Ltd. |
| Leicester Agent: H. A. HAMSHAW. | Edinburgh Agents: J. CROALL & SONS. | Dundee Agents: T. SHAW, Ltd., |

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE season now is opened in earnest, and it promises to be a very gay and busy one, to judge by the announcements of all the gaieties in store. May is pretty well filled in, and the greater part of June. It is a puzzle sometimes to know where the thousands and thousands of visitors during the London season are accommodated—and still they land over here with each steamer from all parts of the globe, and I am told passages have been booked for months ahead. Well, it is good for business, and some benefit more by this influx than others. Take, for instance, the big Court dressmakers. Americans always seem to bring plenty of money with them, and are lavish in the spending thereof. They, of course, all visit such establishments as Paquin, Kate Reily, and naturally Lucile, whose gowns have a distinction and cut second to none. Some of their newest models are on view, and we here give photographs of two of the latest, which view accurately the delightful style of this favourite house. The one, a quaintly simple dinner-gown of gold striped taffetas mousseline. The skirt is set very full into the waist, and flows in graceful folds, the rich gold embroidery at the hem making a very delightful effect. The charming bodice, with flowered silk sash, defines the waist-line. Then turn to the elegant faced-cloth costume in orange faced cloth. What could be more simple, and yet how beautifully cut and hung. Herein lies the charm of Mme. Lucile's garments. They look so simple, and yet they require the hand of an artist, such as she is, to make such a gown perfect. There are few houses where you get such a line as you do here.

A DINNER-GOWN OF STRIPED TAFFETAS MOUSSELINE.
(Mme. Lucile, Hanover Square, W.)

I do not wonder that Lucile's name has become known all over the world. Each one of her gowns must be an admirable advertisement; for women of fashion are indefatigable, and when they see a costume or gown that appeals to them, they do not rest until they have ferreted out where that special gown was created, and they, in their turn, inspire the artist to new flights of fancy. There is nothing like enthusiasm to ensure success.

The variety of lovely new light summery materials is bewildering. I was immensely taken with some sweetly pretty and original blouse bodices at Charles Lee of Wigmore Street the other day. For motoring he has an endless selection of these useful bodices, which are so easily packed into a small compass, and are quickly donned for table d'hôte during these tours. For instance, one in black chiffon and lace, high transparent neck and elbow sleeves, was a gem. Also a delicious white Alençon net, with coloured floral embroideries, was charming; and a pale grey silk crépon, most originally trimmed with bunches of pale yellow satin baby ribbons, the neck and sleeves being of transparent lace. Another pretty novelty is the painted floral net blouse, made with a fichu crossed and loosely knotted together. For simpler bodices Charles Lee has some daintily hand-embroidered lawns, all made in pretty new shapes. One in embroidered French lawn, with broderie Anglaise, was very tempting; the new butterfly sleeves looked charming, too, in this model. He has also a speciality in white embroidered linen bodices, which are marvellous value, the price being only 12s 11d. In fact, I find you get very good value for money spent at this house, be it in what department you choose. His hats are always good style, and his prices not too exorbitant.

Lace of every description, embroidered linen, both in white and colours, will be much used for trimmings. Buttons also are playing a big rôle; in fact, button manufacturers ought to make their fortunes this season by the unusually large demand for these articles. Sunshades look delightfully fascinating with their chiffon foundations and frills and furbelows, and their elegant handles and sticks. Tortoiseshell and ivory seem to be the coming fancy in these. Now we are approaching the warmer season, how welcome will be the airy and dainty underwear I have mentioned once or twice. I have been induced to invest in an outfit of these, and am so charmed with the effect that I don't want to hide them. I know when the hot weather does arrive I shall hate to cover them up.

A CHARMING COSTUME OF ORANGE FACED CLOTH.
(Mme. Lucile, Hanover Square, W.)

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

A MARVELLOUS ACHIEVEMENT.

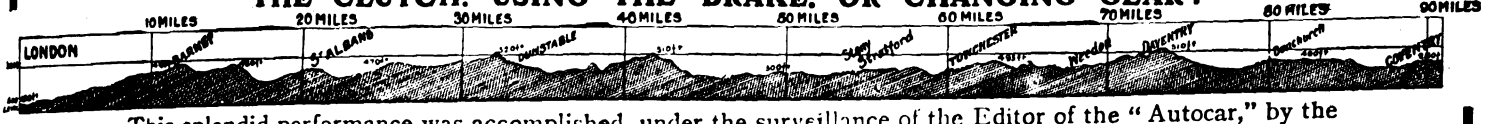
LONDON to COVENTRY on TOP GEAR WITHOUT TAKING OUT THE CLUTCH. USING THE BRAKE, OR CHANGING GEAR!



This splendid performance was accomplished, under the surveillance of the Editor of the "Autocar," by the

4-CYLINDER COVENTRY HUMBER CAR.

The Editor of the Autocar writes in the issue of May 6th:—

"The start was made upon the third speed, the clutch being slipped sufficiently to allow the engine to pick up its load. This it did immediately, without the least shock. Thence onward the control was entirely by the throttle. The long inclines up to Tally Ho Corner were taken with the greatest ease on the top gear, and the car showed such a reserve of power that it ran right through without once changing the gear. The engine is perfectly balanced, and runs with the greatest smoothness. It is an exceedingly well designed engine; in fact, the same remarks apply to the car throughout. It was proved that the car had a very high turn of speed indeed. So far as we are aware its performance for a car of its size has not been equalled."

NO FINER EVIDENCE CAN BE GIVEN OF THE FLEXIBILITY AND POWER OF THE HUMBER ENGINE, EVERY PART OF WHICH IS MADE AT THE HUMBER WORKS.

This performance was accomplished on a Standard-pattern, Coventry Humber, three-seated Car, selling for 240 guineas. Complete specification of Humber Cars post free on application to

HUMBER, LIMITED, Works, BEESTON (Notts) and COVENTRY.

DEPOTS: LONDON: (Motor Cars) 13, Cambridge Place, Paddington, W.; (Cycles and Motor Cycles) 32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C. LIVERPOOL: 73, Bold Street. MANCHESTER: 5, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 4, Victoria Square. Nottingham: Grey Friar Gate. SOUTHAMPTON: 27, London Road.

PRICES: 225 to 450 GUINEAS.

---

FOLLY SHOWS WISDOM

In choosing for flight the £150 £150

THE BEST LIGHT CAR.

Look at this reliability record for one year, 4,572 miles covered.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER RECEIVED FROM A MEDICAL MAN.

MESSRS. JARROTT AND LETTS. CORNWALL,
DEAR SIRS, March 8th, 1905.

"I completed my first year's running on the 5 h.p. OLDSMOBILE I had on Feb. 16th, 1904, and think you may like to hear how I've got on. I had no previous knowledge of cars, and have looked after the car myself. It has been out almost every day, and there has never been a day on which the car was not fit to run. . . . . It has run in all weathers, including frost and snow, over an extremely hilly country; most of my hills have a grade of 1 in 6 (measured) somewhere on them. In the twelve months I have covered 4,572 miles, and have never had a tow. . . . The car has the record of having climbed the worst hill in my district without having to turn out its passengers. The 'Olds' has been such a boon that I cannot say too much in her favour."

Yours very truly,
(Signed) MONTAGUE W. ROE.

This speaks for itself and proves that the

OLDSMOBILE

Accomplishes everything and goes anywhere.

Prices—Two Seated Car, £150. Four Seated Car, 200 Guineas.

For full particulars and catalogue, write—

CHARLES JARROTT & LETTS, LIMITED,
45, Great Marlborough Street, LONDON, W.

Telephone No. 2362 Gerrard. Telegrams "Jemidar," London.

---

IN BUYING A

"SWAN"

Fountain Pen

You are satisfied. Your purchase is a good one. It will last for years, do good work, rapid work, and do it comfortably.

Size 3 Improved "SWAN" Pen, 16/6 (mounted 21/-). Post Free.

None so good as The "SWAN."

Other prices:
10/6, 16/6,
25/- to £20
POST FREE.
Of all Stationers. Catalogue Free.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
79 & 80, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON, W.C.
93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.
95a, Regent Street, W.; 3, Exchange Street, Manchester; and 37, Ave. de l'Opera, Paris.

---

DOES NOT APPRECIATE THE WONDERFUL PURCHASING POWER OF ONE PENNY UNTIL ONE BUYS A

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

CIGARETTE

(ALL TOBACCO LEAF. NO PAPER.)

The very thing when there's no time for a Cigar. Awarded 10 Gold Medals for purity and excellence. Sample one of these delightful whiffs, the experiment costs but One Penny. On sale at all good Tobacconists, 1d. each; 8/- per 100, in cedar wood box; or Carriage Paid from the Importer, BEWLAY, 49, STRAND.

ESTABLISHED 1780.

Digitized by Google

ONE of the principal charms of the Paris restaurants is that not only every house has its own history—generally an interesting one—but the establishments, as a rule, have played a more or less important part in the events of the day, and thus have acquired a historical celebrity apart from the fame they owe to their cuisine. Few restaurants, however, can boast of having played such an important political rôle as Durand's, the famous house in the Place de la Madeleine. Founded in 1830, it had no record during Louis Philippe's reign; but, the moment the Second Empire was established, Durand rushed to the fore. It was here that the marshals of France came to luncheon, preferring the cosy little room and dinner to the more brilliant but somewhat formal entertainment at the Tuileries palace. The Ministers, too, patronised the place; and Count de Morny, MM. de Persigny, Rouher, Fould, Ollivier, always had their tables reserved. In the course of years the leaders of the opposition like Thiers, Jules Favre, Pelletan, Jules Simon, and others also put in an occasional appearance, carefully selecting their seats as far as possible away from the official representatives of the abhorred régime. These were gay times. Here came also the famous demi-mondaine Cora Pearl, driving up in a carriage and four, to spite her rival, the notorious Skittles, who could only afford two horses, and other minor stars of the monde des cocottes. Nor must we forget Hortense Schneider, to whom Offenbach offered a magnificent supper at Durand's on the night of the première of "La Grande Duchesse." And then came the crash. The Franco-Prussian War broke out, followed by the Commune. Durand put up the shutters, and philosophically waited for the hurricane to pass. The house was struck by a shell, which smashed a looking-glass; but as these were incidents of daily occurence, little notice was taken of it at the time.

MENU OF A DINNER AT DURAND'S

Offered by the Marquise de Jaucourt to King Edward on his last visit to Paris as Prince of Wales.

When peace was signed and order restored, Durand reopened its doors, and at once resumed its position as a leader among restaurants. For several years, however, it kept clear of politics, until General Boulanger came upon the scene and made Durand's his headquarters. Then things began to look lively once more. The "brave General" had many admirers; money flowed in freely, and he was able to entertain his friends royally in the handsome room on the first floor, with a small drawing-room adjoining, the sanctum where only the privileged few were admitted. It was here the beautiful Mme. de Bonnemain sat night after night, giving the General the benefit of her advice, and attentively listening to the reports of their friends Deroulède, Rochefort, Dillon, and others. And then again there came a crash. One night—Jules Grévy had just died—a carriage drove up to Durand's. Some hired enthusiasts had unhorsed the carriage, and were waiting for the General to escort him to the Elysée, where his friends wanted to crown him emperor, or king, or dictator, or, perhaps, only president—nobody exactly knows what. But poor Boulanger, an honest man at heart, refused to follow his friends, who eagerly pressed him forward. His detractors will have it that he showed the white feather, but I rather think that it was a nobler feeling: the fear of dragging his country into a civil war. The next day he disappeared. The game was lost.

Following the old traditions, the Ministers of the day make it a point now of lunching at Durand's. Ministries follow one another, sometimes in rapid succession, but Durand always remains, and greets every new member of the Cabinet with the same courteous smile he gave to his predecessors. There is a decided political atmosphere at luncheon-time, which, however, disappears when the dinner-hour has struck. Then we see the influx of strangers, the newly-arrived Englishman and American, the Russian who drinks more champagne than anyone else in the room, and the gentleman from Brazil with many titles and rings. But even if you should have lunched or dined at Durand's—and exceedingly well, too—do not fail to drop in there one night to supper. You will not regret your visit, for Durand's is one of the few, of the very few, restaurants which the ladies of the French aristocracy deign to honour with their presence. Society women, of course, follow in the wake, and, if you are lucky, you may while supping at Durand's have a feast for the eyes as well as for the inner man.

Here are the favourite dishes that the habitués so much appreciate:

Sole Durand.—Place the sole—which at Durand's, as in all first-class kitchens, is always skinned on both sides—in a sauté-dish that has been well buttered. Season with salt and pepper, add a tablespoonful of tomato sauce, a branch of thyme, a laurel leaf, chopped parsley, a little white wine and fish stock. Cover it, and let it cook with hot cinders upon the cover, or simply in the oven. When quite done, remove the sole into a hot dish, strain the sauce to free it from the thyme, etc., and add a lump of butter and cream to thicken it, and the juice of a lemon. Pour this sauce over the sole and serve hot.

Salade Durand.—Cut into thin strips a number of boiled potatoes, according to the quantity of salad required. Add truffles, artichoke fonds, asparagus points, and celery, also cut finely. Place them in an iced timbale. Season with a mayonnaise, and serve very cold.

Poulet Durand.—This is a very simple and excellent recipe for an entrée of chicken, particularly seasonable at the present moment, when young artichokes are plentiful. For eight people take two chickens, carve them, and cook in butter, pepper, and salt, turning them on both sides to colour. They can be browned either in the oven or in a sauté-pan on a moderate fire. In the meanwhile, make a purée of artichokes, using the fonds of a dozen; add a good béchamel to the purée, and dress in the centre of the dish, surrounded by the pieces of chicken. A sauce is made with the butter in which the chickens have been cooked, a glass of white wine, and a little meat extract or good stock, and poured over the pyramid of artichokes, with its base of chicken. A small bunch of asparagus points is placed on the top, like a flag. The purée is sometimes relieved with an ornamentation of carrots, turnips, and potatoes, cut into tiny balls; but the simple purée is all that is necessary for epicures.

Digitized by Google

THOS. WALL & SONS
LIMITED

HAVE HELD THE ROYAL APPOINTMENT

THROUGHOUT THE LAST CENTURY.

THOS. WALL & SONS
LTD.

DELICACIES IN GLASS

FOR INVALIDS.

Chicken Breasts, Real Beef Essence, Calf's Foot Jelly.

THOS. WALL & SONS
LTD.

SPECIALITIES IN GLASS.

Ox Tongues, Lunch Tongues, Boar's Head, Collard Head, Brawn.

The above Goods can be had from most Stores throughout the Kingdom.

'DAREN' BREAD

Awarded 32 HONOURS for Excellence of Quality.

TRY A LOAF.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray postage.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

| Price per lb. |
|---|
| 2/4 |
| 1/10 |
| 1/6 |

The Coffee of the Epicure.

ASTOUNDING OFFER.

We will send post free, 3d.,

A PACKET

of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.

THE METATA AGENTS, 17k, Devonshire Square, LONDON, E.C.

| Samples post free |
|---|
| 8d. |
| 6d. |
| 4d. |

ROUBLE COFFEE

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

Brent Good

TIME

cannot impair the youthful beauty of a skin washed exclusively with Cook's Pure Toilet Soaps, such as "Riviera," or "Throne," The Royal Toilet Soap.

Six dainty samples sent, post free, for six penny stamps.

Edward Cook & Co., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, London, E.

HANSEN'S

UNKET
TABLETS.

For summer weather the ideal food is Junket. Besides having a high dietetic value and being easily assimilated, it is a charming addition to your table. Hansen's Junket Tablets make the best Junket in the quickest way. They are double the value of the next best, so be sure you get Hansen's.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each of which is sufficient to make a quart of milk into a dish of junket. Sample Tube and Book of Delightful Junket Recipes, 6d., post free, from

HANSEN'S DEPOT, 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S
The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA
The Most Nutritious and Economical.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are

PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,

117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.

Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.

Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

STAFFORD HOUSE, which has been the scene of many important and memorable gatherings in the cause of charity, will, by the courtesy of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, witness another, and a specially interesting one, on May 17, under the patronage of T.R.H. the Princess of Wales and Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyll), and many distinguished ladies and gentlemen. On that occasion a grand concert, in which Mme. Albani and other famous singers and instrumentalists have consented to take part, preceded by a reception and followed by a soirée, will take place in the suite of magnificent galleries and drawing-rooms, in aid of the Cottage and Orphans' Home Fund of the Furniture Trades' Provident and Benevolent Association. This society, founded two years ago, with Mr. S. J. Waring, jun., as president, is now proceeding vigorously with the most important part of the work by the erection at Radlett in Hertfordshire of the cottage homes which it is proposed to establish for the training and education of the orphan children of furniture trade employés, and the opening of which will shortly be announced. The concert will be a notable social event for many reasons. The favoured visitors of May 17 will have an opportunity of seeing the historic rooms, where three-quarters of a century ago the Duke of York and his companions of the card-table, including that prince of egotists, "Beau" Brummel, foregathered in order to amuse themselves with the solemn and scientific game of whist. Then the concert itself ought to be a great attraction, remembering that Mme. Albani, Mme. Marion McKenzie, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Dalton Baker, Mr. Plunket Greene, Mr. Albert Archdeacon, and other well-known artists will take part; and in addition to the features of a delightful programme, there will be the usual accessories of a soirée, and the Very Rev. the Dean of Norwich will explain the objects of the fund. The initial cottages which are about to be built at Radlett are regarded as the nucleus of what it is hoped will turn out to be a large and well-supported colony. Such widespread support as has already been accorded strongly indicates the popularity and importance of the scheme, which must be very gratifying to all those connected with it. It may be confidently anticipated that so deserving an institution will quickly take rank with such great charities as the Pinner Schools of the Commercial Travellers' Institution and the Purley Schools of the Warehousemen, Clerks', and Drapers' Institution, and thus worthily maintain the traditions for which the English Trades Guilds have been so pre-eminently famous.

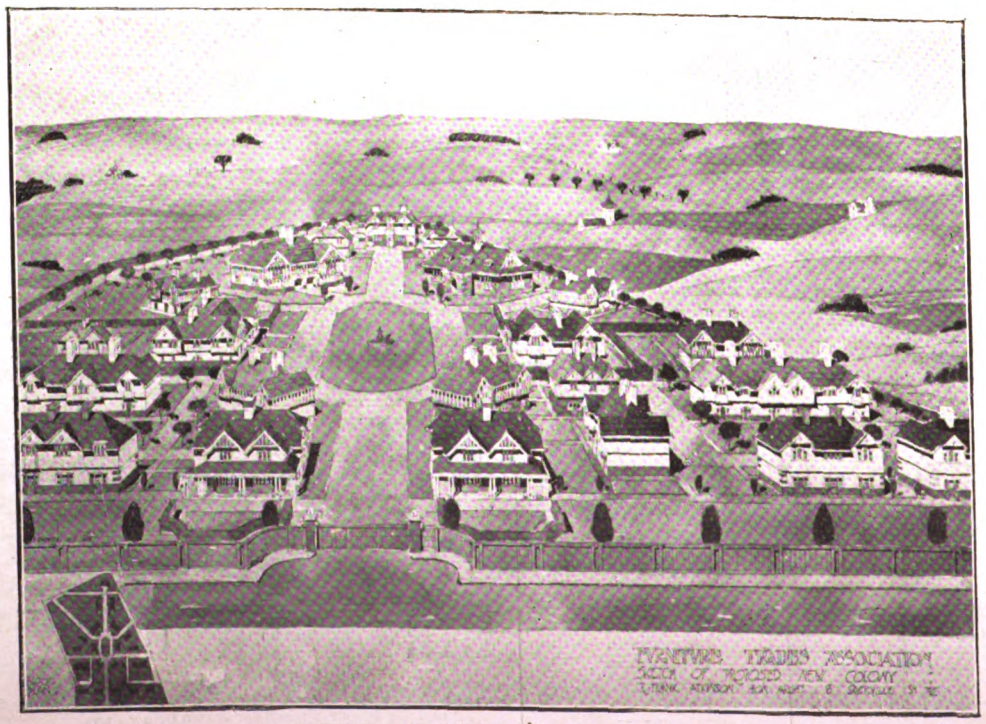
THE Great Western Railway Company announce that the list of farmhouse, seaside, and country lodgings, hotels, and boarding-houses on or near their line, including Jersey and Guernsey, is now ready, and will be forwarded to any address on receipt of 3d. to defray cost of postage. The book also contains an attractive illustrated preface and a list of golf links, showing green fees, etc.

A POINT to be borne in mind when buying a bicycle is the length of time it will last, for this may make all the difference in the actual cost. What is to be expected in a really high-grade machine is seen from a letter received by Messrs. Humber, Limited, from Miss M. G. Bayliss of Redditch. "The machine has been practically in daily use for the last twelve years," writes Miss Bayliss of her Humber, "both winter and summer. Although, of course, altogether out of date as regards weight, etc., it is even now the easiest-running machine I have been on. My friends on light machines who have tried it are surprised at its easy running."

THE Dunlop Tyre Company have just been favoured with a contract for the supply of motor-tyres to the War Office.

THE Caledonian Ball, which is to take place at the Hotel Cecil on June 5, instead of June 6, as previously stated, promises to be a very brilliant affair. Lord and Lady Tullibardine are taking their usual practical interest in the arrangements, and the application for vouchers is already extremely brisk. The Duchess of Sutherland has undertaken to get up the reel, which is one of the special features of these balls, while the Countess of Crawford is arranging the quadrille. Herr Iffs's band has been engaged as formerly, while a list of the patronesses can be supplied by application to the Hotel Cecil. Admission is by voucher only.

AT the Alhambra matinées the latest series of "Urbanora" pictures is by far the most remarkable ever seen on the bioscope. It is an extraordinary fact that the operators engaged in obtaining these films are able, apparently, to get within the danger zone, but—there are the pictures. They have been sanctioned by the Japanese Legation in London, and will be transferred to the evening bill on the 15th inst. Another exceedingly popular entertainment is that at the London Hippodrome, where, in addition to a most excellent programme, the wonderfully trained performing polar bears are drawing crowded houses afternoon and evening.



COTTAGE AND ORPHANS' HOMES AT RADLETT

In connection with the Furniture Trades' Provident and Benevolent Association. A concert in aid of the funds of the association will be held at Stafford House next week.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
TO-NIGHT (SATURDAY), MAY 13, will be produced a new play in three acts, entitled
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
Adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.30.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Open 12 noon to 11 p.m.
Admission 1s. Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.
In the QUEEN'S COURT GALLERIES.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping and Fishery Sections.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of All Naval Events from the 15th to the 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
Concerts by the BANDS of ROYAL MARINES and EXHIBITION NAVAL BAND.
NAVAL AND SHIPPING EXHIBITION.
In the EMPRESS HALL. "WITH THE FLEET."
LIFE IN A CRUISER. "WITH THE FLEET."
The Handy Man at Work. "WITH THE FLEET."
The Handy Man at Play. "WITH THE FLEET."
L'Entente Cordiale "WITH THE FLEET."
Saluting French Squadron. "WITH THE FLEET."
Gun and Cutlass Drills. Storm at Sea.
"WITH THE FLEET." LIFE IN A CRUISER.
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work,
DEATH OF NELSON.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes.
Great CANADIAN INDIAN VILLAGE.—Chiefs, Artisans, Squaws, and Papooses. Hall of Monarchs. Voyage in a Submarine.
Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights.
Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes.
EXQUISITE ILLUMINATED GARDENS.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Colonel A. C. E. Welby, M.P. | 217 |
| The March of Events | 218 |
| On the Links | 224 |
| The Styles of Eminent Players—IX.—Mr. J. E. Laidlay | 228 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 229 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 230 |
| The Parisians of Paris—The First Communion | 232 |
| Under the Burgee | 234 |
| The Ocean Yacht Race | 235 |
| A Juliet of the Nineteenth Century | 236 |
| A Juliet of the Twentieth Century | 237 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the Great Eastern Railway | 238 |
| The Services | 240 |
| In Aid of Westminster Hospital—Some Stall holders at the Bazaar | 242 |
| The Cricket Season | 244 |
| Plays and Players | 245, viii. |
| The Racing Season | 246 |
| The Chester Meeting | vii. |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Three Centuries of British Broadsides | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.
First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hote or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

NOW READY. Price £2 2 0 Nett.

IN ENGLISH HOMES.

THE INTERNAL CHARACTER, FURNITURE, AND ADORNMENTS OF SOME OF THE MOST NOTABLE HOUSES OF ENGLAND HISTORICALLY DEPICTED FROM PHOTOGRAPHS SPECIALLY TAKEN BY

CHARLES LATHAM.

This large and handsome volume measures 16in. by 11¼in., and contains about 200 full-page plates and 150 smaller plates, illustrating "Our goodly English Dwelling-places, those houses which have been sanctified by the passing of centuries."

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

The "Country Life" Library.

Preparing for Publication.

To be issued in Two Volumes, PRICE THREE GUINEAS Net the Two Volumes.
A sumptuous work, handsomely bound in cloth, containing about 300 plates.

Being a Series of Illustrations from Photographs of the most famous examples of

THE

GARDENS OF ITALY.

By CHARLES LATHAM.

DESCRIPTIVE TEXT BY E. MARCH PHILLIPS.

Dedicated by Special Permission to

HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF ITALY.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE (PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—

Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,
17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

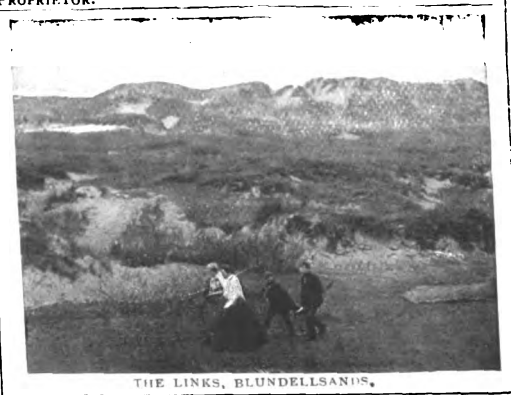
Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.



THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 10s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"Is it a Private House or an Hotel?" is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL

A SOVEREIGN HELP IN ALL HOMES.

AT SMALL INITIAL COST.

LOVELY COLOURS. BRILLIANT GLOSS.

REFUSE IMITATIONS.

Colour Card Free from ASPINALL'S ENAMEL Ltd.,
New Cross, London, S.E.

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent

GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET

be SURE that you get

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE, UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S's Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

"AN OLD FORMULA REVIVED"

Carlin's 'Calross' Mixture

A Blend of the choicest tobaccos.
Exquisite flavour & delicate aroma.
Exceptionally cool smoking.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Sold by leading tobacconists, & Sole Proprietors.

C.A. CARLIN & Co. 177 PICCADILLY

¼LB. SAMPLE TIN 2/6 POST FREE

TRAVEL BY
WEST COAST ROUTE
. . BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Trossachs Pier. via Callander.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

Edinburgh.—Princes Street Station and Hotel.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:

LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH
GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

Digitized by Google

THE WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL BAZAAR.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 433. SATURDAY, MAY 20th, 1905. Price 6d.

Lydiat Sawyer.

COLONEL A. C. E. WELBY, M.P.

Conservative Member for Taunton.

(See page 229.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY. THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 433. Saturday, May 20, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND HIS VISITORS.—During this month and next the King will be very busy receiving visitors from all parts of the world, not only guests at the wedding of Princess Margaret of Connaught, but others who will be none the less welcome. Foremost among them will be the King of Spain and H.I.H. Prince Arisugawa, a member of a Japanese princely family that stands very near to the throne, and one of the three Japanese G.C.B.'s, the others being the Prince of Komatsu and the Marquis Ito. York House, formerly the residence of the Prince and Princess of Wales, has been placed at the disposal of Prince and Princess Arisugawa and their suites, and it is quite possible that their Imperial Highnesses may also pay a visit to Windsor. For the greater part of the month of June the Court will be at the riverside palace, and numerous week-end parties and small social events will grace the stay of their majesties there. For Whitsuntide a large party of diplomatic and official personages will assemble at Windsor, and a further large gathering is arranged for the Ascot Race Meeting at the end of the month.

THE KING AND THE NEW GUNS.—Guns, figuratively, fill the air at the present time, and though the ill-judged attempt to create a panic among those who are not well informed on Naval matters has fizzled out like a damp squib, public interest in the matter of guns has been roused, and there was therefore a much larger gathering around the gates of Buckingham Palace last Saturday than would have otherwise been the case. Two batteries, one of the Horse and one of the Field Artillery, each comprising six of the new guns with twelve ammunition carriages, making in all thirty-six teams, came up from Woolwich for the occasion, and a magnificent show they made. It was a matter for some regret that the King's arrangements did not permit him to go to Woolwich for the inspection, for the Royal Arsenal would have given him a loyal and royal reception. It is now nearly 200 years since the Government Foundry was moved from Moorfields to the site at Woolwich, which had previously been a huge rabbit warren, and a century since George III., on a visit to the place, suggested "that the Royal Arsenal" was a nicer sounding title than "the Arsenal" without the adjective, a delicate and complimentary way of signifying his satisfaction at what he had seen.

THE KING AND THE TOURNAMENT.—The Royal Naval and Military Tournament, as the popular entertainment now in its twenty-sixth year at the Agricultural Hall is for the future to be called, will be opened by the King next week, and a very fine pageant is promised. Appropriate to the year of the Trafalgar centenary the main feature of the tournament will consist of a procession of men clad in the uniforms which have been distinctive of the Navy from the times of the Armada and the early Stuart reigns to the present day. The public interest in Naval uniform is not so widespread as it might be, but few subjects better repay study, or demand more careful attention from the student. There are very few men living who can claim to be authorities on the subject, and the danger of falling into error in the preparation of the pageant has therefore been the greater. But the executive have triumphed over the difficulties in their path. And those who visit Islington during the fifteen days the tournament is in progress will find that in no way does the new arrangement interfere with the features which have proved so popular in previous years. There will be musical rides and drives, gymnastic classes will repeat their performances, and there will be a final display of all arms founded on incidents suggested in the blockhouse lines in the South African War. As in previous years the Prince and Princess of Wales and their children will be present one afternoon.

Copyright.

ST. ALDHELM

Bishop of Sherborne, founder of the famous Dorsetshire see and town, the 1,200th anniversary of whose connection with the place is to be commemorated in Whitsun Week by the performance of a masque specially written by Mr. L. N. Parker.

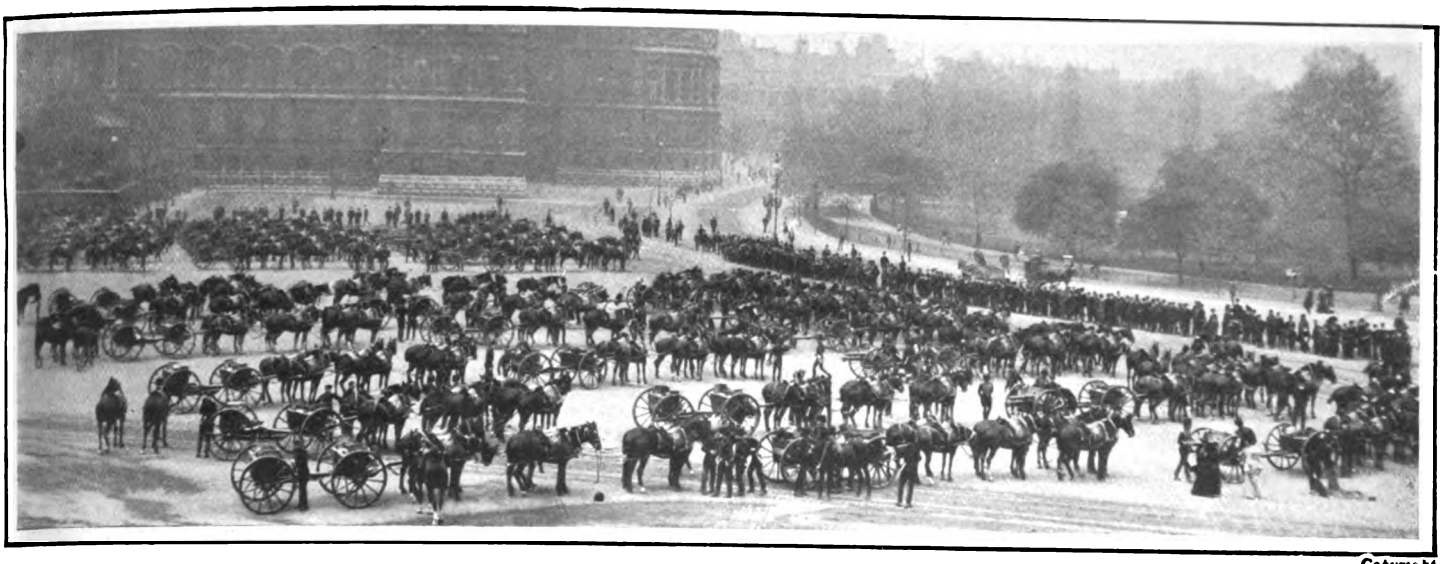
THE PRINCE AND HIS CONCERT.—The success of the concert organised by the Prince of Wales in aid of the funds of the Union Jack Club was never for a moment in doubt, but the brilliant sight that the Albert Hall presented on Friday evening of last week has seldom been equalled and never eclipsed in the history of the famous dome. Yet the Albert Hall has a long record of famous gatherings, not a few of them notable by reason of the large number of Royalties present. There was the memorable Sims Reeves farewell concert, at which King Edward, as Prince of Wales, was present. On that occasion, if memory serves, among the artists, in addition to the hero of the occasion, were Mme. Christine Nilsson and Sir Henry Irving, who recited the farewell poem. Another gala night at the Albert Hall was the performance of Gounod's "Mors et Vita," at which Queen Victoria was present, and after which she sent for Albani, Patey, Edward Lloyd, and Santley, and congratulated them on the performance. And at the Albert Hall Christine Nilsson and Edward Lloyd both took their farewell of the concert stage.

Digitized by Google



Copyright.

THE KING'S INSPECTION OF THE GUNS.

On Saturday last the King inspected two batteries of the new gun, with which it is proposed to re-arm the Royal Horse and the Royal Field Artillery, in the grounds of Buckingham Palace.

Johnston and Hoffmann.

THE GAEKWAR OF BARODA

An enthusiastic yachtsman and an ardent reformer. He is paying a visit to England after an absence of twelve years.

Sweet.

MISS OLIVE CHRISTIAN MALVERY

Whose marriage to Mr. Archibald Mackirdy was solemnised at St. Margaret's, Westminster, on Saturday last, in the presence of a distinguished congregation.

Johnston and Hoffmann.

THE MAHARAJAH OF KAPURTHALA

Who is on a visit to London. The Maharajah is an excellent linguist, and one of the most progressive of our Indian feudatories.

Watts, Dunedin, N.Z.

THE QUEEN VICTORIA MEMORIAL AT DUNEDIN.

The ceremony of unveiling the statue erected to the memory of Queen Victoria at Dunedin, New Zealand, was performed at the end of March by Lord Plunkett.

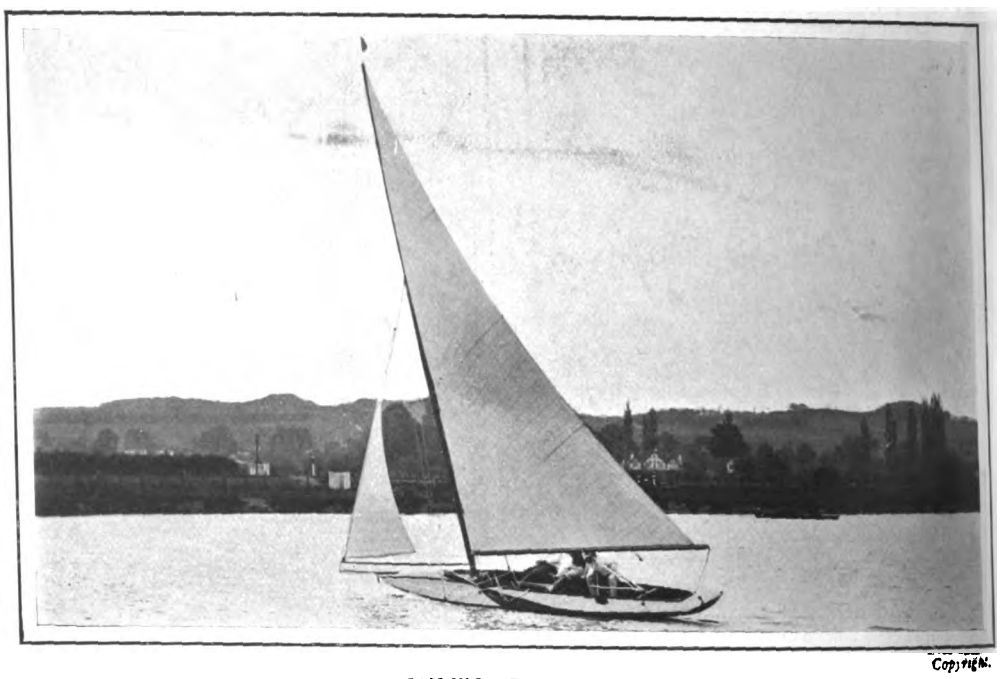
Digitized by Google

Copyright.

AN EXHIBITION OF STRAIGHT SHOOTING.
An Indian father, in the village at Earl's Court, fixing arrows in a board against which his little son is leaning. The marksman has never yet hit the child.

LORD KITCHENER'S APPEAL.—Lord Kitchener's appeal to the Army on behalf of the Dharmsala victims should receive general support. The Gurkha has been called the Highlander of the East, though he is much more like the Japanese. In greater or less strength he has fought with us in every campaign, including the Mission to Thibet, we have undertaken since 1815. His loyalty is without a stain. Moreover, it is due to him that the catastrophe at Dharmsala did not assume even greater proportions than it actually did, for his discipline, courage, and promptness averted a panic. The need for relief is great, since not only have the dead left widows and orphans, but many of those who were rescued will never be fit for soldiering again. It is at such moments as this that Imperialism is seen at its best, for we touch its very essence. As the Gurkhas have shared a common glory with us, so they are now sharing with us a common sorrow. And it may well be that this latter will bring us closer together. The Gurkha is the last to forget the generosity whose hand is held out to him in the hour of his need.

TWO ROYAL WEDDINGS.—The preparations for the two Royal marriages of next month proceed apace, and the ladies' columns of the daily papers are filled with wonderful particulars of the brides' trousseaux. Some little indignation has been caused in Germany at the intelligence that a great number of frocks for the future Crown Princess have been ordered from Paris, but in Princess Margaret's case no such objections have been raised. The greater portion of the lace and linen has been purchased in Ireland, though part of it will also be supplied by the North Bucks Lace Association. Prince Gustavus Adolphus, the bridegroom-elect, has been on a visit to London, and has been staying at Clarence House, St. James's Palace. He has naturally been visiting a number of prominent places, and among others dines this week with the Treasurer and Benchers of Gray's Inn. The wedding takes place in the middle of next month, probably at Windsor, and the honeymoon will be spent in Ireland, the official entry of the Prince and Princess into Stockholm being at present fixed for July 9.



Copyright.

SAILING AT BOURNE END.
At the Upper Thames Sailing Club's Meeting last week "Caprice" was returned the winner in the race for first-class boats.

Copyright.

THE INDIAN VILLAGE AT EARL'S COURT.
A family party at lunch. The youngest member has a strong objection to facing the camera.

THE PRINCE AND THE COLONIALS.—At the time of the South African War there was a deal of big talk about the tightening of the bonds which join the Mother Country and her children beyond the sea; but the advent of peace has silenced a good deal of the hysterical nonsense that was then spoken and written, and has left only the solid and valuable tokens of the strong affection which subsists between Britain and the Colonies. One of these is the memorial to the Colonial officers and men who fell in the war, a memorial designed and executed by Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and set up in St. Paul's Cathedral, where the Prince of Wales will next week unveil it. And as he is ever ready to do honour to the dead, so he has shown himself pleased to give pleasure to the living. At the Oval the other day, where the Prince and his two eldest boys were interested spectators of the match between the Australians and Surrey, the Colonial team were presented to his Royal Highness, and father and sons shook hands in a friendly manner with the representatives of the Commonwealth, who are over here to do battle with such eleven good men and true as we shall pick to meet them.

Digitized by Google

THE KEMPTON PARK MEETING

Copyright.

COMING OUT OF THE MEMBERS' ENCLOSURE.

The brilliant weather of last week took large crowds to Kempton Park on Saturday for the Jubilee Stakes, and the scene in the paddock and the members' enclosure was a most animated one.

Copyright.

IN THE PADDOCK

Before the great race of the afternoon. The horses filed out of the paddock in the order in which their names appeared on the card. Ambition won by a head from Fermoyle, followed by Union Jack.

W. A. Rouch.

THE MEMBERS' LAWN.

On two days last week the King visited Kempton Park, motoring down from Buckingham Palace on each occasion. In the above illustration may be seen the Royal box.

Digitized by Google

WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL BAZAAR.—The Grand Historical Bazaar in aid of the Westminster Hospital, which will be held on May 23, 24, and 25, is one of the social events of the season. It is under the immediate patronage of her Majesty the Queen and other members of the Royal Family, and it is expected that the Queen will be present. The idea for the bazaar originated with her Grace the Duchess of Buccleuch and the Ladies' Association of the Hospital, with the object of trying to realise money enough to liquidate the hospital's debt, which is something like £11,000. The list of patrons comprises almost every name of distinction in England, and an influential working committee under the chairmanship of the Marquess of Salisbury, High Steward of the City of Westminster, are undertaking the arrangements in connection with the bazaar. These will be of such a character and on such a scale as to attract a very large and representative attendance, and will, it is believed, ensure a great measure of success. The stalls will represent by costume the reigns of the Kings and Queens of England, and the ensemble will certainly not lack picturesqueness. Amongst the many ladies officiating at the various stalls may be mentioned Mrs. Asquith, the Countess of Lytton, the Lady Ribblesdale, and Lady Sassoon (Queen Anne period). The Duchess of Westminster will assist at the fine art stall (Victorian), as will the Duchess of Somerset, Cora Countess of Stafford, and Mrs. Frank Shuttleworth. The American candy stall will be under the care of Mrs. Edgar Speyer and the Lady Sybil Smith, assisted by Mrs. Willoughby Pemberton. The Duchess of Sutherland and Mrs. Wilberforce will preside at the Staffordshire pottery stall (Edward VII. period). Other well known names are the Duchess of Norfolk, the Lady Edmund Talbot, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Lady Weetman Pearson and her recently married daughter Lady Denman. The list of great names is far too lengthy to do more than touch on. The Dean and Chapter have kindly granted the use of Dean's Yard for the bazaar. This is the enclosure under the shadow of Westminster Abbey, held sacred as a playing-field of the boys of Westminster School. For the first time in its history the yard will be covered in. One of the daily papers, in an outburst of statistical enthusiasm, has been making computations as to the amount of material to be used, and from this we learn that in the work over 40,000-ft. run of floor-boards will be laid on top of 16,000-ft. of joisting. Eighteen thousand square yards of canvas will be used to enclose the framing, and 20,000-yds. of bunting and sateen will appear in the interior decoration. The weight of the timber and material will exceed 70-tons. It is earnestly to be hoped that the work of the promoters and organisers of the bazaar will meet with all the success it is entitled to, and that the hospital will be enabled to clear off their debt, and place their finances on a sounder and surer basis.

Bassano.

MISS KATHERINE TREFUSIS

Whose engagement was recently announced, is a daughter of Lady Mary Trefusis, and niece of the Duke of Buccleuch.

THE LATE SIR ROBERT HERBERT.—With the death of Sir Robert Herbert a link with the early days of Queensland is broken. He was her first Prime Minister, and between him and her first Governor under the Constitution, Sir George Bowen, and one of her pioneer settlers, Sir Arthur Hodgson, there was a notable friendship. They were always the most noticeable figures at the annual Queensland Dinner, which takes place in June, and now they are all gone. Sir Robert was the only Englishman who has never entered the Civil Service at home after a political career in a self-governing Colony. A grandson of the first Earl of Carnarvon, and a brilliant scholar, there was no reason why he should not have entered public life in England on leaving Oxford. But it is said that an unhappy love affair drove him to the Colonies, colour to which romance is lent by the fact that he remained a bachelor all his life. For twenty years he was Under-Secretary for the Colonies, a post where his Colonial experience was of the utmost value. So popular was he in Greater Britain, indeed, that after his retirement in 1892, Mr. Chamberlain asked him to give the Colonial Office the benefit of his African knowledge. This was subsequent to the Raid. Of Sir Robert's courtesy, tact, and sympathy it is impossible to speak too highly. It is a pity that he has left no successor. Anglo-Colonials in Downing Street are not the rule, but the exception.

DEATH OF VISCOUNT TRAFALGAR.—The tragic death of Viscount Trafalgar, who died from the effects of a fall, will be a great blow to Earl Nelson, who is in his eighty-second year, and the only living peer who was a member of the House of Lords when Queen Victoria ascended the throne. Lord Trafalgar married a daughter of an Australian merchant, but had no children, and so his brother, the Hon. Thomas Horatio Nelson, now becomes heir to the title. He is unmarried, and curiously enough the next brother, like the eldest, married an Australian lady. She, however, died some years ago. Lord Nelson is not a direct descendant of the great Lord Nelson, who left no son, but a grand-nephew. With him will die the pension, which was granted by Parliament to the national hero's successors for three lives. The seat of the family, Trafalgar House, was also a gift from the country.

Digitized by Google

THE BOOM DEFENCE AT PORTSMOUTH.

West

CLOSING THE BOOM.

Last week the boom defence of Portsmouth Harbour was placed in position in order to test its efficiency. The boom is composed of ponderous baulks of timber 120 in number, each 40-ft. long and weighing nearly 1-ton, and spiked on each side. It stretched when closed right across the harbour mouth.

Russell

THE WORK COMPLETED.

The object of the boom is to prevent light craft like torpedo-boats or destroyers breaking through. The work of getting it into position began at 5 a.m. and was finished shortly after midday, but the work of opening the harbour occupied much less time than closing it.

Cribb, Southsea.

THE BOOM IN POSITION.

The efficacy of the boom received unexpected demonstration in the afternoon when the tide was running strongest. A dockyard launch which was outside the harbour drifted at considerable speed on to the boom, and was impaled with such force that she had to be taken into dock as soon as ever the boom was opened. In the above illustration the vessel may be seen lying as she struck on the boom.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE annual Parliamentary Tournament was begun at Deal on Saturday last. The weather was fine and bright, with a cool fresh breeze coming off the sea sufficient to temper the heat of the sun and to make the play in the outward half of the round interesting as well as difficult. The executive of the Deal Club had obviously spared no effort to get the links into the pink of playing condition. The lies throughout the course were beautifully clear and smooth, giving to those players who kept consistently on the straight line a very nice teed ball lying on the freshly-mown grass for the second shot. The putting greens were also in beautiful order, and every Parliamentary golfer throughout the day's play, no matter whether he lost or won his match, was loud in his unrestricted praise of the general condition of the course. The opening stages of the tournament began quite early in the morning, and it was close upon seven o'clock in the evening before the crowd of political golfers, who had given an animated and almost a crowded appearance to the links, finished their day's play, and in the majority of cases returned by the comfortable South Eastern and Chatham special train to London. The Parliamentary golfers have every reason to be grateful to the authorities of the Deal Club for the courtesy which was extended to them in putting the links for the day as well as the accommodation of the club-house absolutely at their disposal. The captain of the club, Mr. J. Leslie Wanklyn, M.P., was present throughout the day attending to the comfort of his fellow members, and in seeing that all the arrangements worked with harmonious smoothness and satisfaction.

* * *

Though a good many of the Parliamentary golfers were staying at Deal on Thursday and Friday in preparation for the Saturday matches, a fairly good muster left Victoria by the special train at ten minutes to nine in the morning. The early departure from London meant either an unusually early breakfast at home or the partaking of a good solid golfer's breakfast served on board the special train. The last-named alternative was that which was generally chosen, so that when the special train arrived at Deal about eleven o'clock those players who journeyed from London on the morning of the tournament were ready to begin their matches at once. The next hour or two was a busy one for Hunter, the Deal professional, who, sitting in his box at the first tee, sent off the players as soon as the preceding couple had reached the first putting green. At various points of the course throughout the day there were scattered a fair number of the general public anxious to see at close hand many of the politicians whose speeches in Parliament they had read or about whose personality they were otherwise interested. Both the Prime Minister and the Colonial Secretary received the usual amount of attention from the spectators, and as both right hon. gentlemen were playing golf of a good quality throughout the day it is more than probable that those who saw their game received as much genuine enjoyment from it as the players did themselves.

THE PARLIAMENTARY GOLFERS' SPECIAL.

The country's legislators arriving at Deal on Saturday last in the special train of saloon and dining cars kindly placed at their disposal by the South Eastern and Chatham Railway Company.

* * *

In some of the matches played in the first round there were some interesting results. Mr. A. W. Soames, M.P., the winner of last year's tournament, was beaten rather easily by the Hon. T. H. Cochrane. Mr. Alfred Lyttelton had an easy match against Lord Estcourt, and Lord Chesterfield had not a great deal of difficulty in disposing of a fairly steady player like Mr. Bonar Law, M.P. It

THE PARLIAMENTARY TOURNAMENT.

Mr. H. J. Tennant, M.P., playing out of "Sandy Parlour," one of the most picturesque bunkers to be found on any green for a "one-shot hole."

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

was only at the seventeenth hole, however, that Mr. Eric Hambro, who is plus 4, won his match against Mr. O. Partington, while Lord Donoughmore won his match on the last green against Sir E. Sassoon. Though Lord Galway won easily in the end against Mr. A. Wylie, he began rather loosely by driving his first tee shot on to the gravel path in front of the club-house. Mr. H. W. Forster, M.P., the secretary of the tournament, who plays at plus 2, had an easy task in beating Mr. H. J. Tennant, and Mr. Herbert Gladstone had similar good fortune in disposing of Mr. J. A. Morrison. Perhaps the most curious match in the first round was that between Mr. Causton, M.P., and Mr. H. J. Badeley. Mr. Causton was dormy 4, had the misfortune to lose all the remaining holes, and in the end to suffer defeat at the nineteenth hole. In the second round, Mr. Albert Gray had a close match with Sir Kenneth Mackenzie, whom he beat on the last green. The Prime Minister played Major Evans-Gordon, to whom he had to concede seven strokes; and though Mr. Balfour was playing a good steady game he found the odds a little too heavy to give to his strong opponent, who won by 2 up and 1 to play. Dr. Macnamara had a very stubborn match with Lord Kinnoull, whom he only beat on the last putting green, after leading substantially nearly all the way round. Dr. Macnamara, starting with a 3 at the first hole, kept up a brilliant game for the best part of the round, his figures for the first five holes being 20. The Colonial Secretary, keeping up the form which he showed in the first round, defeated Mr. Hayes Fisher by 5 and 3. It was curious to note how in the majority of the matches the bunker at the "Sandy Parlour" hole trapped the players. The breeze that blew from the sea came across the line of flight of the ball, but, apparently, the majority thought that the wind was more behind them than in being actually against them. The result was that the bulk of the tee shots here were either spared or under-clubbed, with the result that the balls dropped short at the end of their flight into the bunker.

THE PARLIAMENTARY MATCH AT DEAL.

Mr. Alfred Lyttelton, M.P., driving off the tee in his match with Lord Estcourt.

* * *

While the parliamentary golfers were deciding their matches at Deal, the neighbouring links of the Royal St. George's Club at Sandwich were the scene of the annual match between the Bar Golfing Society and the Stock Exchange. Each match was one of thirty-six holes, one point being scored for the winner of each. Both teams were strong and representative, and although the Bar Golfing Society were five matches to the bad at the end of the morning round of eighteen holes, they succeeded in winning by 6 points to 3. The winners on the Stock Exchange side were Mr. H. W. De Zoete, who won his match against Mr. Harold Beveridge at the thirty-seventh hole. Mr. Mure Fergusson beat Mr. B. Darwin, and Mr. M. W. Mossop won against Mr. Mansfield Hunter. On the other hand, Mr. Ernley Blackwell beat Mr. A. D. Blyth, and Mr. F. H. Newnes—who won the Hope Grant medal for the best scratch score at the Spring Meeting of the London Scottish Club a week ago—beat Mr. Hayman, while Mr. E. G. Rand, Mr. D. D. Robertson, the Hon. Evan Charteris, and Mr. L. Mossop all won their matches against Messrs. Harris, Richardson, F. H. A. Booth, and Walter Carr.

THE PARLIAMENTARY GOLFERS AT DEAL.

Lord Estcourt, the opponent of the Colonial Secretary in the first round, driving at the 17th tee.

THE PARLIAMENTARY HANDICAP.

Lord Rathmore, who was beaten by Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., M.P., approaching the 17th green. Accompanied by a stately collie dog, Lord Rathmore is a familiar figure on the Wimbledon links.

The Irish Ladies' Championship was played at Portsalon last week, resulting in the victory of Miss May Hezlet, who was the holder of the distinction. There were twenty-three entries, among the players being Miss Issette Pearson, the hon. secretary of the Ladies' Golf Union. The tournament was remarkable for the success of the Hezlet family, for though Miss Florence Hezlet had to continue her match to the twentieth hole before she gained a hard victory over Miss Stuart, all the players at the opening of the third round were members of the Hezlet family except four. Three were in the semi-final round, and the final was played between Miss May Hezlet and Miss Florence Hezlet, who had previously beat her sister, Miss Violet Hezlet, by 2 and 1 to play. The final, therefore, between the two sisters was of a very interesting character, and for the greater part of the match there was really not much to choose in the quality of the golf shown by the two. Miss May Hezlet and her sister did the first nine holes in 42 strokes, but perhaps greater nerve and experience on the part of the elder sister enabled her to wear out the game of her opponent and to snatch a difficult victory by 2 and 1 to play.

THE PARLIAMENTARY TOURNAMENT.

Lord Newton, who, when a member of the House of Commons, won the competition twice, driving from the 1st tee.

* * *

The two days' Professional Tournament, held last week on the course of the Lytham and St. Anne's Golf Club, was productive of some brilliant play. It proved that White, the Open Champion, was completely off his game, and that Toogood is inclined only to reveal occasional flashes of brilliant play. Both Harry Vardon and Toogood played rather a poor game in the morning owing to their weak putting, Vardon's score being 10 and Toogood's 11 strokes worse than the brilliant 73 for each round recorded by Taylor. With two rounds of 73 Taylor secured the first prize of £25, Braid being second with 153, for which he received £15; Tom Vardon third (£10) with 156, and Harry Vardon fourth (£5) with 158. The survivors of the stroke competition played off for final victory by holes. Taylor was drawn against Tom Vardon, and, after the brilliant play he had shown in the stroke tournament, it was a subject of general surprise to find Taylor beaten by 3 and 2 to play. Braid beat Harry

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Vardon, so that the final was played between Tom Vardon and Braid. In the meantime, however, Tom Vardon's game appeared to suffer deterioration, for though he started well, Braid beat him rather easily by 6 and 5 to play. The feature of Braid's play in this match was his splendid putting.

* * *

Dr. George Browning, who was a winner of the South of Ireland Championship some years ago, has been elected captain of the Lahinch Club for the ensuing year. He is a scratch player, and his appointment is a popular one.

* * *

Viscount Glerawly (Earl Annesley's son), whose coming of age has just been celebrated at Castlewellan, County Down, with great rejoicings, was the recipient of a handsome presentation from the County Down Golf Club, which included a silver loving-cup and salver and a set of golf clubs.

* * *

The memorial to the late Mr. Richard Plummer, who was hon. secretary to the Lahinch Golf Club from its formation until his death, is to take the form of a large stone structure, containing a booking-office, a room for caddies, besides a new workshop for the professional. The design is a fine one, and all the members of the club are subscribing towards the memorial.

THE BRAID HILLS COURSE, EDINBURGH.

THE conclusion of another tournament open to all the golf clubs of Edinburgh gives excuse for some account of the wonderful development of the game which in less than a generation has taken place in and around the Scottish capital. On a recent Saturday, before a crowd numbering in its various divisions an army of 10,000 golfers, the concluding stages of the Evening Dispatch Braid Hills Tournament were carried out with signal success. In the small area of Edinburgh, Leith, and Portobello there are several clubs which have private courses, but the Braid Hills course is par excellence the Edinburgh golf course. It belongs to the town; it is regulated by the city officials; and it is open to all players, if not quite free, at least at a nominal regulation fee.

The course, which is one of fine hilly character, and commands some most beautiful views of "mine own romantic town" and the Firth of Forth beyond, was for almost a century mere whin-covered hills, on which sheep secured a precarious existence. When the play on the Boroughmuir or Bruntsfield links became some years ago inconvenient, on account of the new traffic caused by the expansion of the villa districts in the south-west of Edinburgh, it became necessary to find a new home for the game. After much negotiation, that part of the Braid Hills area belonging to the Cluny Trustees was secured for the Corporation by amicable bargain at a moderate cost of £11,000. Never did the capital of Scotland make a happier purchase in the interests of public health and public sport. From the very outset, even when the grass was rough, and the whins, like the language of the Californian miner, were far too thick and frequent for the security of the innocent golf ball, the public took ever-increasing advantage of the privilege of a game on these breezy slopes. As the ground improved under the tread of many feet and the care of the town's successive green-keepers, the popularity of the game spread more and more, especially among the working and shop-keeping classes, and those professional people who have leisure in the daytime.

As a result, the Braid Hills golf course is now more taken advantage of by a continuous stream of players than any other course in the world. The fact that the grass had for eighty years been unbroken pasture has given the deep-rooted turf a quality of recuperation which enables it to withstand all the inroads even of the duffer who plays nothing but irons. The course is now recognised as one of the best investments the Edinburgh Town Council ever made.

The competition, in connection with which we publish a few sketches, was a contest for a handsome silver trophy presented by the proprietors of the Edinburgh Evening Dispatch, in celebration of the acquisition of the hill, in the agitation for which that newspaper bore an important part. Many of the Edinburgh clubs are small and not too opulent bodies. They cannot afford a private course, and they take advantage of the public green. The Evening Dispatch Tournament once a year brings the pick of such clubs into friendly rivalry. Play is by foursomes, each club sending two couples. In April, 1890, the first year of the competition, twenty-two clubs entered. Gradually the numbers crept up, until the year before the present (1904) a record of fifty-one was reached; and this year

J. Patrick, Edinburgh.

THE WINNERS OF THE TROPHY: THE NEW ALBAN CLUB.

Reading from left to right—W. H. Hamilton, D. G. Mackenzie, S. M. Macpherson, and R. W. Orr.

J. Patrick, Edinburgh.

MR. A. GEOGHEGAN

The convener of the Evening Dispatch Braid Hills Golf Trophy Committee.

J. Patrick, Edinburgh.

MR. H. M. KNIGHT

Hon. Secretary of the Braid Hills Golf Trophy Tournament.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

the respectable total of forty-eight separate clubs was attained. The team that finally emerged, as the result of the recent Saturday's play, were the New Alban, who now hold the trophy for the second year in succession. No fewer than five previous holders—Thistle, Carlton, Whitehouse, Watsonian, and St. Matthew's—went down at one or other of the stages of the contest, which extends over three Saturdays. As a sample of the play it may be stated that the best scores ranged from 73 to 77 for the eighteen holes, the latter figure being quite common on a difficult and well-extended course.

It is not too much to say that the Braid Hills is rearing up a school of young golfers who are bound, as they come to maturity, to make their name in the world of golf. It was a great feather in the cap of Braid Hills golfers when in 1897 Dr. A. J. T. Allan, a young medical student, whose experience of golf had been almost exclusively gained on the Braids, won the Amateur Championship. James Braid, of Open Championship fame, played as an amateur in one at least of the early Braids tournaments, and to-day there are many promising young players, most of whom were engaged in the recent competition, of whom great things are yet expected by those who know them best.

The honour of presenting the trophy to the winning club was performed by Provost Mackie of Leith, the newly-elected captain of the Edinburgh Burgess Golfing Society, and prospective Unionist candidate for the Leith Burghs, who was supported by Mr. James Law, senior proprietor of the Evening Dispatch, Bailie McMichael, Councillor Macfarlane, Mr. McHattie, and other prominent officials.

H. M. KNIGHT.

Correspondence.

PHOTOGRAPHY AND LADY GOLFERS' DRESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE KING."

SIR,—I was one of three golfers in the club smoking-room the other day who were engaged in discussing the changed appearance of lady golfers' dress worn on the links. The subject of debate arose out of the very interesting photographs of lady players which have been appearing in the instructive pages of THE KING, and "when a lady's in the case, you know all other things give place."

Golfers generally, and lady players in particular, owe you a debt of gratitude for really being the first high-class illustrated journal to show golfers by means of instantaneous photography how they actually play the game. But though that is not the point I wish to enforce, it has something to do with it, for the outcome of our smoking-room discussion was that there had been a great improvement in the dress of lady golfers in late years. Your photographs show that the old cricket sweater, the cloth cap, and the ill-fitting gown have given place to really appropriate and elegant attire, which enhances the grace and the charm of each individual player. Personally, I do not like the big motor-cap and the veil tied over it. I should like to see English lady golfers imitate the French women and play without headgear of any kind. Then the men among the spectators who witness their competitions would have the extreme pleasure of seeing English lady golfers really dressing their bountiful hair with some approach to art, and not in wisps and loose strands. This was the conclusion of our symposium—no hats and veils, and more art in coiffure.

After listening to my two fellow-controversialists, both married men, I came to the conclusion that, after all, the best thing to hope for was a Scottish rendering of the old Latin saying, "Formosa facies muta commendatio est" ("A bonnie face is aye the best recommendation") in a lady golfer.—I am, etc.

A MERE MAN.

FIXTURES.

May 20.—England v. Scotland (Amateurs), at Prestwick.
May 20.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal (Stroke).
May 20.—Hanger Hill, Monthly "Bogey" Winners.
May 22.—The Amateur Championship, at Prestwick.
May 23.—Tunbridge Wells, Ladies' Open Meeting.
May 27.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal Prize.
May 27.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
May 27-28.—Bar Golfing Society v. Le Touquet; Compiègne v. Le Touquet.
May 29.—Ladies' Championship, at Cromer.
June 1.—Bushey Hall, Ladies' Spring Meeting.
June 2-4.—Le Touquet v. Hythe.
June 3.—England v. Scotland (Professionals), at St. Andrews.
June 3.—Sundridge Park, Summer Meeting.
June 3.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
June 6.—Royal Blackheath, Summer Medal.
June 7.—Mixed Foursomes Tournament, Sundridge Park.
June 7-8.—Open Championship, at St. Andrews.
June 8-10.—Amateur Championship of France at La Boulie.
June 10.—New Luffness, Trayner Cup.
June 10.—Cinque Ports, Captain's Prize.
June 10.—Hythe, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Royal St. George's, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Rye, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Glasgow, Garroway Cup (at Killermont).
June 10.—Frinton, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10-13.—Tooting Bec, Foursome Tournament.
June 10-16.—Bushey Hall, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 12.—Portmarnock, Cup Competition.
June 12.—Cinque Ports, Scratch Challenge Cup.
June 12.—Royal Isle of Wight, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12.—Royal North Devon, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12-14.—Le Touquet, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 13-15.—Royal Cromer, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 15.—Hastings and St. Leonards, Ladies' Open Meeting.
June 15-17.—Bar Golfing Society, Annual Tournament, at Sandwich.
June 17.—Bushey Hall, Vice-Captain's Prize.
June 17.—Tooting Bec, Victoria Diamond Jubilee Cup.
June 17.—Royal Portrush, Midsummer Meeting.
June 17.—Wembley, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 19.—St. George's Challenge Cup, at Sandwich.
June 19-20.—Scottish Ladies' Championship, at North Berwick.
June 19-24.—Yorkshire Union Championship Meeting, at Redcar.
June 19.—Hanger Hill, Ladies' Open Competition.
June 24.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 24.—Sudbrook Park, Rube Challenge Shield.
June 26.—Highgate and East Finchley, Ladies' Summer Meeting.

GOLF ON THE BRAIDS, EDINBURGH. James Patrick, Edinburgh.

The crowd round the 1st hole in the recent foursome tournament for the Evening Dispatch Trophy, showing a portion of Southern Edinburgh, and Arthur's Seat beyond.

Digitized by Google

The Styles of Eminent Players.

IX.—Mr. J. E. LAIDLAY.

MR. LAIDLAY AT THE FINISH OF HIS SWING.

THE THREE-QUARTER BRASSIE SHOT.

THE FINISH OF THE CLEEK SHOT.

OF all our Scottish golfers, no one takes such a prominent place in the history of past and present golf as Mr. Laidlay. Wherever golf is known, he is known, and though not devoting so much time to the game as heretofore, he is still often as invincible as ever, when he appears. There is no need to tell about Mr. Laidlay's prowess, or to give a list of victories and medals won; indeed, the last-named task would be far beyond my owers, for he certainly has won more medals han any player living.

Mr. Laidlay lives near North Berwick, and consequently plays most of his golf there. His knowledge of that and other East Lothian courses is complete. St. Andrews has not seen so much of him of late years, but there are few more deadly opponents to play against there than he. It is a course which suits his style of play perfectly, for it is accurate iron shots that tell at St. Andrews more than anything else.

Mr. Laidlay is the most beautiful iron player in the world, amateurs and professionals all included. This is a big thing to say, but I think I shall have all the first-class golfers at my back to confirm it. He is one of the two players (Mr. Low is the other) who can consistently and accurately keep an iron shot low from any distance within the range of the particular club.

Driving is not the best part of Mr. Laidlay's game. For rounds he drives quite well, then there comes a time when he starts pulling and foundering the ball. But when he is hitting them well he drives a nice low ball, generally with a suspicion of pull, and which runs a very long way. It is all done by the wrist and forearm, for Mr. Laidlay is essentially a wrist player, and very fine wrists and forearms he has. This is the reason, I think, as in the case of Mr. Charles Hutchings, that he finishes on both toes, as will be noticed in photograph No. 1. Of course, to finish on the toes so much as Mr. Laidlay does, must be wrong, and I think it partly accounts for his sometimes indifferent driving. I hope, however, that I have not given the impression that Mr. Laidlay is a bad driver. That would be absurd, but I am writing about superlative golf and its players, and my reference is only comparative.

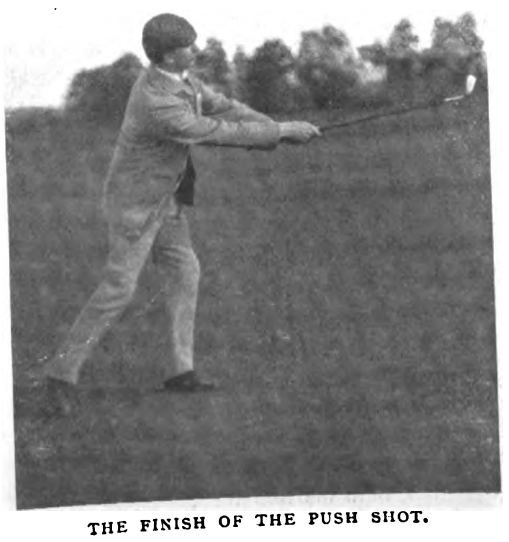
No. 2 is a brassie shot. As will be noticed in this picture, the shot is played entirely by the wrists. In all Mr. Laidlay's wooden club shots he keeps his left knee bent; this is done, I think, to counteract the right leg being pulled up, for Mr. Laidlay has a very wide stance, and his right leg is kept very often right out behind his lett.

In Nos. 3, 4, and 5 we have iron play. This is where, as I have said before, Mr. Laidlay excels. All iron clubs are his slaves, and he can conjure with them as he will. He has two clubs which he calls his "big" and "little" cleek, and his opponent always hates to hear them asked for, as he knows that the ball is going on to the green and pretty near the hole. No. 3 is the finish of a long shot. No. 4 is a three quarter shot; note how the head of the club is turned round, apparently to keep the ball low. In No. 5 we have the finish of the push shot. Mr. Blackwell and Mr. Laidlay finish this shot in almost the same way, with the exception that Mr. Laidlay's left knee is always a little bent. Mr. Laidlay is awfully good at this shot, as often as not holing off it, and always giving himself a chance of doing so.

No. 6, putting. No one can beat Mr. Laidlay on the greens, and the keener, more fiery, and more heart-breaking they are, the better he putts, which he does with an old-fashioned long-bladed cleek laid back a little, and always hits the ball off the heel—I almost wrote socket—so near does he go; notice the short grip and the good high follow through. No one is better at getting out of bunkers than Mr. Laidlay. Often I have been playing with him and chortled with glee when he got in. But it is no good; he happens to be lying fairly well, takes his mashie, and puts the ball on the green. There is no pleasanter opponent or a more doughty partner than Mr. Laidlay. He excels in foursomes, is kind to your mistakes, blames your lie, your stance, keeps you in a good temper, and to top it all, pulls you through at the end of the day.

H. Ferrier-Kerr.

THE FINISH OF THE IRON SHOT.



THE FINISH OF THE PUSH SHOT.

THE PUTTING STANCE AND GRIP.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLIII.—Colonel A. C. E. Welby, Conservative M.P. for Taunton.

THE Welbys of Welby, afterwards resident at Ropsley, Harrowby, Harlaxton and Denton, at Multon, Fossdyke, Kirton-in-Holland, and Gedney, are a Lincolnshire family of great antiquity. In the long-distant past, when the Normans were new in the land, Welbys, then "de Wellebis," held fiefs in feudal tenure for knightly service, and a handsome book, recently compiled and privately printed, of "Pedigrees of the Family of Welby," affords interesting reading to those who delight in family records or the domestic history of the distant past. So long ago as 1086 one Rannulf was a military tenant of Wido de Credun in Wellebi, one Ernold or Arnold was granted lands in Wellebi by the Empress Maud, and their successor, John de Wellebi, must have been a considerable landowner in 1166, as is amply evidenced in the Black Book of the Exchequer. His heirs and successors have branched out into different families in the Lincolnshire manors and villages mentioned above; but all down the long centuries Rannulf has never been forgotten, and the little son of a brilliant Parliamentarian and colonel of one of England's most famous cavalry regiments bears the name of his forerunner of 800 years ago, and carries the chain of illustrious soldiers and servants of England from William the Conqueror to Edward VII. The Arms of Welby were borne with distinction in the memorable field of Crecy, the Welbys were in the Bosworth fight, they were on both sides of the Civil Wars, they have been rewarded or attainted, have been litigants and suffered the law's extremest penalty, have been Sheriffs of the County and Members of Parliament in many generations, outlaws or held in great honour, and in all these capacities played a moving part in "this rough island story." To come to modern times, William Earle Welby, who served as Sheriff of Lincolnshire and M.P., was created a Baronet in 1801. His great-grandson, the seventh son of Sir Glynne, is Colonel Welby, late of the Scots Greys, and now M.P. for Taunton. The first Baronet married twice, and a grandson of the second marriage is Lord Welby of Allington, G.C.B., who was created a Peer in 1894 for his eminent services at the Treasury. Colonel Welby's nephew, Sir Charles Welby, Bart., C.B., is M.P. for the Newark Division of Notts, and owner of Denton and Welby parishes. Alfred Cholmeley Earle Welby was born in 1849, his branch of the ancient family having owned land in Denton, near Grantham, Lincolnshire, for 400 years. His mother was daughter of Sir M. Cholmeley of Easton Hall, Grantham. He was educated at Eton, being in the Rev. C. Wolley's house from 1862 to 1866. He obtained a direct commission in the 56th Essex Regiment, 1867; exchanged as Lieutenant to the 90th Light Infantry (now 2nd Battalion Scottish Rifles), 1871; was promoted Captain, and exchanged to the Royal Scots Greys, 1876, became Major 1885, and Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding in 1892, which post he retained until 1896. During his command the Emperor of Russia was appointed Colonel-in-Chief, and a deputation, headed by Colonel Welby, proceeded in 1894 to St. Petersburg to congratulate his Majesty, and offer for his acceptance a picture representing himself as Colonel of the regiment leading the Scots Greys in a "trot past" in the Long Valley at Aldershot. The British officers were most graciously received in private audience when the picture was presented, and afterwards in public with innumerable other corporate and military deputations. Colonel Welby and his comrades were most hospitably fêted by regiments of the Guard, especially by the Red Hussars at Tsarskoe Selo, who are also mounted on greys. They dined with the Emperor and Empress in the Anitchikoff Palace before leaving, and were graciously entertained at the Berlin Schloss, on the return journey, by the German Emperor. Colonel Welby, on returning, was commanded to Windsor Castle, and thus had the singular honour of dining with the three greatest European sovereigns in their own palaces within seven days, viz., the Czar, the Kaiser, and Queen Victoria. In 1896 he made a second visit to Russia to represent the Scots Greys at the Coronation of the Czar in Moscow, and was one of about 600 present in the Uspensky Church when the crowning took place. On the former visit he received the Order of St. Anne, second class, and at the Coronation received the same order set in brilliants. One acquaintance Colonel Welby made at the Moscow Coronation lived to cement his earthly happiness, for the late Bishop of London married him in 1898, at St. Margaret's, Westminster, to Alice Desirée, daughter of A. E. Copland-Griffiths, Esq., grand-daughter of Judge Caillard, and niece of Sir Vincent Caillard of Wingfield, Trowbridge. Colonel Welby in 1880 represented his brother Sir William (who was abroad ill) at his election for the Stamford Division of South Lincolnshire; in 1885 he made a good fight for Grantham, for which his great-grandfather sat a century ago, his grandfather 1807-20, his father 1830-57, and his brother 1857-68, but was unfortunately defeated. He then gallantly stormed the Poplar Division of the Tower Hamlets, and on one of two occasions the "forlorn hope" was nearly successful, Colonel Welby being only 76 votes behind. In 1895 he was returned for Taunton without opposition, and in 1900 there was a contest, when the gallant Colonel was placed at the head of the poll with a majority of 363.

Elliott and Fry.

MRS. WELBY AND HER CHILDREN.

Mrs. Welby is the wife of the Conservative Member for Taunton.

As a painstaking politician Colonel Welby visited Canada in 1888 and India in 1889 to better understand their needs. He is very fond of sport, especially of hunting, his early home being in the middle of the Belvoir Hunt, with whose hounds he had a bad accident in 1884, of which, fortunately, the effects have at length entirely passed away.

To the great regret of his supporters, Colonel Welby has announced that he will not again seek the suffrages of the electors of Taunton, but it is strongly to be hoped that some other constituency will avail themselves of the services of an ideal member, who disarms opposition by his courtesy and kindliness, while carrying conviction by means of forceful, persuasive, and statesmanlike speeches. In the House he has been increasingly listened to with the respect his undoubted ability and grasp of his subject deserve, whether it be on Army Reform, of which he has been from the first a consistent advocate, or on social subjects, such as the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill, in which debate his speech the other day on the ideal married life commanded much admiration in the Press from friends and foes alike.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

ONE of the many baseless charges levelled against the much-abused motorist is that he is an inveterate and deliberate slayer of dogs. The accusation is one that rankles in the mind of every driver, as it argues that because a man happens to possess a motor-car he thereby becomes devoid of all feelings of humanity. No doubt a great many dogs have been killed by motor-cars, but I do not believe that in one case in a hundred has the motorist been to blame in the slightest degree. The dog is a conservative animal, and anything of an unaccustomed nature seems to rouse his hostility, with the result that he rushes out to show his disapproval, sometimes with unfortunate results to himself. In the early days of cycling the bicyclist was his pet aversion, and the dog generally came off best in the encounter. Even at the present time it is no uncommon occurrence for a bicyclist to meet his death through collision with a dog, although such incidents are rarely considered of sufficient importance to call for any mention in the newspapers.

When the motor was introduced the tables were turned, and for a time the mortality among country dogs was somewhat high. I do not believe, however, that, except in the rarest instances, the accidents were avoidable. Apart from the question of humanity, it is an exceedingly dangerous matter to run over even the smallest of dogs, as there is always the possibility of damaging some portion of the steering-gear and rendering the car unmanageable. Moreover, there is the involuntary impulse, too strong to be resisted, except by a powerful exercise of will, on the part of every driver to try and avoid any obstacle which may appear in his path.

Speaking from a fairly wide experience, I can say that I have known motorists run very serious risks to themselves, and most certainly cause great damage to their tyres, in saving the lives of snapping little curs which have sought to immolate themseives beneath their wheels. For three years I drove almost daily in various parts of the kingdom without hurting a living thing, and my record was only spoilt by a poor little terrier which ran out, fiercely barking, from behind another vehicle, and was killed almost before I had seen it. The owner frankly admitted that it "served the dog right," as it was in the habit of flying at every car, bicycle, or cart that passed. I paid him over and above its value, as he was a poor man, and could hardly afford to replace his pet, but my conscience was absolutely free from any sense of responsibility in the matter.

It may be that now and again some driver of a motor-car runs over a dog, and displays a heartless indifference to its sufferings, but it is absurd to urge such incidents against motorists and motor-cars in general. I see that Lieutenant-Colonel Mark Mayhew, who is a vice-president of the Automobile Club, has related in an evening newspaper an experience of his own that shows that inhumanity towards dogs is not confined to any particular class of road-user, as the anti-motorists would have one believe. To use his own words, he saw "a horse-drawn victoria deliberately drive over an Irish terrier which was standing still in the middle of the broadest part of the Victoria Embankment. The driver must have seen the dog, and after the accident heard its cries, yet he never endeavoured to pull his horses an inch out of the way, nor did he pull up for one moment to apologise to the owner, or to see what could be done."

Only recently I witnessed a very similar occurrence. A terrier was run over by a cart, and though the two men in it looked back and saw what had occurred, they made not the slightest pretence of stopping. I was driving some 30-yds. behind at the moment, and it was not until I drew my car up alongside the cart and threatened the men with various pains and penalties that they stopped, and returned to investigate matters. They were in no way to blame for running over the dog, and apparently saw no reason why they should concern themselves in its sufferings. There may be motorists who would take the same view of their responsibilities; but the two incidents related above show that such callousness is by no means confined to one particular class of driver, and, therefore, has not the slightest bearing on "the public and motor-cars" agitation.

If one may judge from the number of open cars which are entirely devoid of any means of protecting the passengers from dust and rain, it is evident that the advantages of the Cape cart-hood are insufficiently realised by the majority of motorists. In my opinion no touring car is properly equipped that is not fitted with this efficient and inexpensive covering. It adds very slightly to the weight, and when folded back in fine weather serves to keep the dust from rising over the back of the tonneau and smothering the occupants. Should occasion arise, it can be opened up in Aikan Blair.

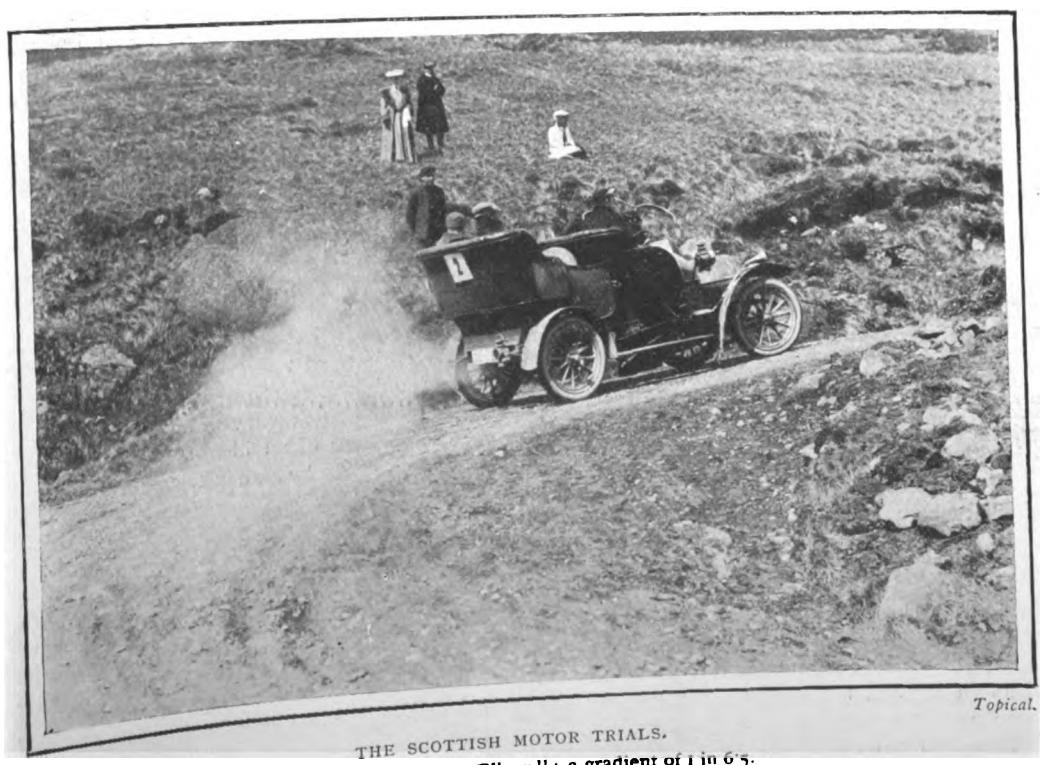
THE SCOTTISH MOTOR TRIALS.

The starting control at the commencement of the Cairnwell Hill-climb.



Topical.

THE SCOTTISH MOTOR TRIALS.

Rounding the "Devil's Elbow"; a gradient of 1 in 6·5.

Digitized by Google

a few seconds and the front curtain dropped, thereby entirely enclosing the rear seats and affording complete protection from rain. It is true that the driver and his companion obtain little advantage from the hood, but there is a pleasant sense of independence derived from the knowledge that, whatever the weather may prove to be, the passengers in the tonneau can be shielded from the wet. Even the front seats can be kept dry if the car is stopped and turned away from the direction of the wind, and the effects of an occasional shower may be entirely avoided in this manner.

There is one objection to the Cape hood, though I think it is wholly outweighed by its undoubted advantages. If fitted to an ordinary tonneau, it renders the back seats somewhat difficult of access. In the case of a side-entrance body the fitting of the hood is a rather complicated matter, and it loses some of the simplicity and compactness that are so attractive in its original form. Various shades of colour are used for the hoods, but the original light khaki-coloured waterproof-canvas will be found to be the most satisfactory, as it does not show the dust and mud in the manner that has been found so objectionable in the darker materials. From £10 to £20 is the price usually charged for fitting a Cape hood, and for that very reasonable sum one obtains many of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of a covered body.

The Board of Trade statistics for the first four months of the present year indicate in a striking manner the importance of the automobile industry. The value of the cars, motor-cycles, and motor parts brought into this country during the first four months of 1904 was £742,854. These figures rose to £1,072,500 in the present year, although there was a slight decrease in the number of vehicles imported. During the same period the value of imported component parts increased from £99,795 to £245,405. Excluding motor-cycles and component parts, 1,897 cars were introduced into this country between January 1 and April 30 last, which were valued at £809,659, or an average of £426 per machine. A year ago the average value per machine was exactly £100 less, which is a proof that the horse-power of foreign cars is largely on the increase, as there is no question that the general tendency of prices has been distinctly downwards.

RADIATOR.

Rapid Photo Co.

MISS DELIA MASON ENTERING HER ELECTRIC LANDAULETTE.

Miss Mason, who is an enthusiastic automobilist, is playing in "Lady Madcap" at the Prince of Wales's Theatre.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

THE FIRST COMMUNION.

THE stranger too often takes his impressions of the Parisian from theatres, music halls, cabarets, and other so-called places of amusement. Year after year he visits the capital, and although his knowledge of the language may improve, he gets little or no insight into the character of the people. To understand Paris you must study the streets, carefully avoiding the boulevards, with their cosmopolitan stream from every country of the universe. Watch the crowd, the real Parisian crowd, and you will then understand that if everybody gets his share of enjoyment in this brilliant city, it is because in the course of centuries the Parisian—even he of the humbler classes—has acquired taste and tact, and does not allow anything to impart a jarring note into this atmosphere of outdoor pleasure. Spring, of course, is the all-important time of the year, and it is in the month of May—le mois de Marie—that we see in our streets those graceful apparitions, little girls dressed in spotless white muslin, their heads covered with long veils, tripping along, escorted by an admiring throng of parents and friends. They are the "First Communicants," and, like everything else in the life of Paris, furnish an occasion for a fête wherein everyone participates. The Paris flaneur, be he workman or clubman, smiles good-humouredly as he watches these dainty white moving specks, for they help to put a bright colour into the streets, and he, therefore, looks upon them with an approving eye.

In all classes of Paris Society the function of the first communion is the signal for great rejoicings. When the great day arrives, the excitement reaches a high pitch, and the communicants, boys and girls, trembling with emotion, await to be conducted to the morning mass, generally fixed for eight o'clock. The traditional girl's costume consists of a white muslin dress, with a broad sash tied in a bow at the back. On her head a small cap or a wreath of white roses, over which is thrown a veil gathered round like a shawl. A rosary twined round the left wrist forms a pretty bracelet. The boys are rigged out in a short black jacket, white trousers, and a huge white bow round the left arm. Nor must we forget the wax tapers, from which the Church derives a not inconsiderable revenue. These tapers, sold by the Church, vary in price, according to size, from 1-fr. to 100-fr., and are returned to the priest when the ceremony is over. Rich parents, therefore, buy expensive tapers, thereby not only showing their true spirit of devotion, but their children, too, are treated with extra consideration, and are allowed to occupy the front benches on the day of the first communion. This question of seats is a deep and delicate thing, and gives rise to no end of rivalry and curious intrigues. I know a lady who, having purchased an expensive taper, had been promised for her daughter a seat in the front row. Much to her surprise and disappointment her little girl was relegated to the second one. What had occurred? She enquired, and found that another mother had gone "one better," and had come forward with a magnificent embroidered banner. After that the taper—or rather the child—had to take a back seat.

On the day before the ceremony there is a kind of dress rehearsal in the church, to teach the children to take their proper places in the procession, and everything is done to prevent a hitch. Despite the early hour—and the Parisian of the higher classes is no early riser—the fashionable churches are crammed with an elegant crowd, consisting of the children's parents, godfathers, godmothers, sympathetic friends, and sight-seers. And the Paris churches, with a keen eye to business, charge 2-fr. per chair for good seats. The children of the well-to-do classes, of course, drive to mass and back again, and those who do not own carriages hire a brougham for the occasion. In the afternoon the parents receive their friends, who bring presents to the communiants and communiantes. At one time these offerings partook exclusively of a religious character: golden crosses, medals, illuminated pictures of saints, and, especially, missals. It is only in the old aristocratic families that this custom is still upheld. The more practical bourge is detected a flaw in the system. He looked dejectedly at the dozen costly missals his boy or girl had received from various quarters in the course of the day, and sighed over this waste of money. And now, to the delight of the children and the satisfaction of the parents, the gifts are of a more practical nature.

"FIRST COMMUNICANTS" AND THEIR FRIENDS.

And what about the children of the poor? They not only form the majority of first communicants, but it is they whom we see in the streets, and who offer a far more interesting study than their more fortunate companions. The excitement among the lower classes in connection with this religious function is intense. To the Paris workman every important event in life means a holiday, and he loves holidays. Christenings, funerals, weddings, etc., are his delight, and on them he spends his money recklessly. Moreover, at heart he is something of a snob; and the fear "of appearing mean" before his neighbours makes him lavish with his money. But to the Parisian of the lower strata there is no pleasure unless he can take it al fresco. What is the good, says he, of spending money on new dresses and then remain within four walls? Not only the neighbours, but all Paris must see his children in their new outfit, his wife in her new gown, and himself in a wonderful frock-coat and impossible hat. And that is also why you meet so many wedding parties driving through the Bois; and why, even if they can afford a conveyance, the people of the humbler classes want the little communicants to walk through the streets to be seen and admired. This promenade, however, is generally productive of extraordinary incidents. The most frequent occurrence is that one of the children suddenly limps. Has the little one sprained its foot? Do not be alarmed. It is only the wooden heel come off one of the cheap shoes, and a search has to be made for it. Then there is the treacherous gust of wind blowing the veil from the girl's bonnet, undoing the hair, and sending up the skirt over the child's head. All this forms part of the day's enjoyment, and everybody is happy and contented. No, not everybody. To the little boy this day is one of anguish. In the morning he has been taken in hand by the hairdresser, who has crimped his hair and given him an appearance half lamb, half monkey. But his locks, which, until then, have lived in a state of absolute independence, after a while show a rebellious spirit, whereupon a halt is made, and the mother or an obliging friend belabours the boy's head with a not always gentle hand and puts things straight. At last the church is reached, the ceremony gone through, and the fun of the day begins. There is no "reception" nor an "At Home" at the parents' house, but the whole party repair to the nearest marchand de vin, where they luncheon, and the child's health is drunk. On that day the poor are not forgotten. Charitable ladies in the parish supply the children with the necessary dresses. To them, also, it is a day of joy. They, too, get their share of Paris.

FRANCES KEYZER.

BOY COMMUNICANTS LEAVING THE MADELEINE.

(From photographs by Paul Géniaux, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

"FIRST COMMUNICANTS" APPROACHING THE MADELEINE.

THE OFFICIATING CLERGY LEAVING THE CHURCH.

(From photographs by Paul Gèniaux, Paris.)

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

THE event of the week in yachting circles is, of course, the race across the Atlantic for the German Emperor's Cup, for which the yachts were started on Tuesday from off Sandy Hook. The interest which is being manifested in the event may be gauged by the elaborate preparations which are being made to notify the arrival of the boats off the Lizard, the winning-post. This interest, however, is derived more particularly from the comparative rarity of such contests, as well as the individual histories of some of the boats taking part therein, than from any genuine sporting interest in the race as a trial of speed.

As I have remarked in these columns on previous occasions, yachtsmen do not look upon races of this description with any special favour, and if they were of frequent occurrence entries would probably be difficult to obtain. Those with but a slight knowledge of the sport are, however, often inclined to attach an importance to a long race in open waters out of proportion to its value as a speed test, in the belief that the conditions favour the more healthy types of vessels. This is undoubtedly true to a degree, but there can never be the genuine excitement of a race when the competitors become widely separated, and very probably get into different streaks of wind.

The race now in progress has been talked of for many months, and the Kaiser's avowed object in offering the trophy is the encouragement of healthy cruising types of yachts that can keep the sea in all weathers. In addition to this, however, there undoubtedly is the hope that the yachts taking part in the contest will contribute, by their presence, to the success of the Kiel regattas, more particularly as the prizes will be presented personally by the Emperor during the Kiel Week.

In more recent years the German Emperor has shown a most decided preference for cruising vessels. In the early nineties, when he first became an ardent yachtsman, he became owner of the old America Cup challenger Thistle, and a year or so later he commissioned the late G. L. Watson to design him a racer, and Meteor II. was the fastest cutter of her time afloat. When her rig was altered to that of a yawl, she showed a remarkable turn of speed, under the handling of Ben Parker, with an Itchen Ferry crew. Three years ago, however, his Majesty turned his attention to schooners. He had previously purchased the American yacht Yampa, which, renamed Iduna, now hoists the Empress's flag, and in 1902 Meteor III. was built to his order in America, from designs by Cary Smith. In her earliest races in a mixed class she did not show to advantage, and the German classes were accordingly divided, so that at all the big regattas in German waters there are separate events for racers, cruisers, and schooners. All the two-stickers are fitted as comfortable cruisers, and since the Kaiser has shown his preference for these craft, he has done his utmost to encourage the types of vessels which he deems most seaworthy. Hence, the race now in progress, and the annual race from Dover to Heligoland, are prompted by this idea.

West, Southsea.

HAMBURG.

This schooner came out in 1899, being then named Rainbow, and in that season raced under the late Mr. A. L. Orr-Ewing's flag. She is a Watson-designed boat. Her actual powers as a racer have never been fairly tested, as she had no schooners as opponents in English waters, and in the Baltic regattas last year she did not show to advantage, with a German crew on board.

It may be of some little interest to pass in review the vessels engaging in the contest. Lord Brassey's Sunbeam is too familiar to everyone to need description, and from her extended cruises will always be regarded as one of the most famous yachts ever built. Lord Brassey is a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron, as is also the Earl of Crawford, owner of Valhalla. The latter vessel is a magnificent craft, a full-rigged ship of 1,490-tons Thames measurement. She was originally built for Mr. Laycock, who manned her with a crew of Royal Naval Reserve men numbering all told over 100. These are the only English-owned vessels competing, although some of the other competitors were built in this country.

Apache, the second biggest vessel in the contest, is owned by Mr. Edmund Randolph of the New York Yacht Club. She is of British build. The schooner Hamburg, the only German-owned vessel in the contest, was formerly known as Rainbow, and was built on the Clyde. She is a Watson design, and raced in English regattas in 1899 under the late Mr. A. L. Orr-Ewing's flag. Ailsa (yawl) is a Fife-designed 90-footer. She is owned by Mr. H. S. Redmond of the New York Yacht Club. She was originally built for Mr. A. Barclay Walker, and as a cutter engaged in many exciting races with Britannia, both at home and at Mediterranean regattas. Utowana is an American-built three-masted fore-and-aft schooner, owned by Mr. A. V. Armour. She won the race for auxiliary yachts given by the Royal Yacht Squadron in Coronation year. The most modern vessel in the fleet is Atlantic, a three-masted fore-and-aft schooner, built in America two years ago for Mr. Wilson Marshall of the New York Yacht Club. Hildegarde, owned by Mr. E. R Coleman of the New York Yacht Club, is an American built schooner. Endymion, another American schooner, belonging to Mr. George Lauder of the New York Yacht Club, has already a reputation for Atlantic sailing, and holds the record for the passage from Sandy Hook to the Needles, which she accomplished in 13-days 20-hr. 36-min. Thistle (schooner) was built in America in 1901, and is owned by Mr. Robert E. Tod of the Atlantic Yacht Club; while the smallest boat in the contest is the American schooner, Fleur-de-Lys, built in 1890, and owned by Mr. L. A. Stimson.

There will be no time allowance. This fact serves to show that the organising committee regards as futile any attempt to bring vessels together upon handicap terms in such a contest. It would be absurd to attempt to predict a winner, as the element of chance must necessarily enter so largely into the case. Fair winds over the whole journey would favour a vessel like Valhalla, while with a prevalence of head winds, the fore-and-aft craft would leave their square-rigged opponents hopelessly astern.

CORINTHIAN.

Digitized by Google

THE OCEAN YACHT-RACE.

West, Southsea.

SUNBEAM.

One of the most famous yachts in existence She was built in 1874 for Lord Brassey, her present owner, a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron, and her cruises in all parts of the globe have extended over many thousands of miles. She is fitted with auxiliary engines, but her owner prefers sail-power whenever practicable. Her main dimensions are—length, 154-ft., beam, 27-ft. 6-in., draught, 13-ft. 9-in.

West, Southsea.

VALHALLA.

This full-rigged ship was originally built for Mr. Laycock, under whose ownership her crew, numbering over 100 hands, was composed of Royal Naval Reserve men. She is the largest yacht taking part in the Atlantic, and measures 1,490-tons Thames measurement. She is fitted with auxiliary power. The Earl of Crawford, her owner, is a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron, and has undertaken some extended cruises in her.

Digitized by Google

A JULIET OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

MISS MARY ANDERSON.

When Miss Mary Anderson made her début in Louisville, U.S.A., in 1875, it was in the part of Juliet; and when, nine years later, she came to London, she elected to be seen in the same part, though she did not open her season with the tragedy of the ill-starred lovers. Her Romeo was Mr. William Terriss, of whom a contemporary chronicler said he "had seen no one who in years and good looks was so likely to take captive the heart of Juliet at first sight."

Digitized by Google

A JULIET OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

Langfier.

MISS EVELYN MILLARD.

Trained in Miss Sarah Thorne's stock company at Margate, Miss Evelyn Millard essayed Juliet in the early days of her connection with the stage, and to-day she is appearing in the part again, in Mr. Lewis Waller's beautiful revival of the play at the Imperial Theatre. But between her first and her present assumption of the character, Miss Millard has played many parts, and has achieved many notable successes.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

Photochrom.

THE DOWNS, NEAR SHERINGHAM.

"Pretty Corner," a picturesque bit of the road leading from Sheringham to Cromer. In the distance may be seen Upper Sheringham Church, standing in the midst of old-fashioned thatched cottages.

FEW English watering-places can boast of having become popular in so short a time as Cromer. At the present day it is unquestionably the most charming and health-giving of spots for a holiday to be found anywhere on the East Coast. As a well-known East Anglian author once remarked, it is the peaceful little hamlets nestling in vales between the cornfields and heather-clad hills and the sea which are the chief charm near Cromer; these and the homesteads, roofed with mossy thatch, the woodlands carpeted with bluebells and anemones, and the country-folk, half-fishermen, half farm-hands, who garner the harvests of land and sea. These are what bring to Cromer those who wish to enjoy the loveliness of Devon scenery without the relaxing air of the South, and they must be made the most of while we have them. For in a little while red-brick terraces will have taken the place of many of the thatched homesteads, and every heathery hillside will have its huge hotel.

Photochrom.

THE SANDS AT CROMER.

The foreshore at this popular watering-place consists of one of the finest stretches of sand to be found anywhere round the coast. Hence the bathing, which is one of the chief attractions of Cromer, may be indulged in with comfort and safety.

Certainly Cromer has grown apace of late, though, happily, up till now it has not been deprived of its air of unconventionality. The good people of Cromer owe much to the late Clement Scott, whose acquaintance with their town first began when it was little more than a simple and primitive small hamlet, and Overstrand and Sidestrand, Cromer's two flourishing suburbs, even smaller still.

The fine, bracing, exhilarating air of this favoured corner of the Norfolk Coast is pretty generally admitted to be the chief cause of Cromer's present-day popularity. It will be remembered that it was almost solely on this account that the late Empress of Austria was ordered there some eighteen years ago, and derived much benefit from her stay.

Although peaceful and quiet, one need never be dull in Cromer, for there is so much to interest and amuse the visitor. The bathing, which can be indulged in with perfect safety, either from a machine or tent, is excellent, owing to the sandy nature of the shore. Then there is sea-fishing, including crab-catching, which forms one of the chief occupations of the Cromer and Sheringham fishermen—a most civil and obliging set of men.

Within the past few years Cromer has become a favourite resort of the golfer. The Royal Cromer Golf Club, formed in 1887 through the initiative of Mr. H. Broadhurst, M.P., formerly had the patronage of the King when Prince of Wales. The course of eighteen holes is picturesquely situated on the Light-house Hills. Cromer also boasts a very handsome pier, where a first-class band plays twice each day during the season.

Digitized by Google

The town is conveniently situated for any number of delightful walks and excursions.

About three miles from Cromer is situated the pretty village of Felbrigg. The Hall, the ancient home of the Felbriggs and Wyndhams, whose name, by the way, is derived from the old market town of Wymondham, contains some fine paintings, and can be visited by special permission.

It should be borne in mind, too, that Cromer is quite handy and convenient for the Broads. Just a few minutes' ride by rail takes the holiday-maker to North Walsham or to Wroxham. At the former is to be seen the old Grammar School where Nelson was educated.

Photochrom.

SHERINGHAM FISHERMEN.

Both Cromer and Sheringham are famous for their crabs and lobsters, vast quantities of which are despatched to the metropolis. A good season's catch of crabs has been known to amount to the enormous total of nearly a million and a-half.

No one should miss the short tramp by the beach to Overstrand, and visit the late Clement Scott's original "Poppyland," which has become nowadays quite a household word.

Another pleasant ramble by road can be taken to Sheringham by the Holt Road, passing on the way "Pretty Corner," seen in the illustration at the head of this article.

A pleasant drive by the sea can be made to Mundesley, Cromer's rapidly-growing neighbour. The road runs parallel with the coast, and commands some of the finest sea views imaginable. From Mundesley the drive may be continued to Bacton, with its grand old ruin of a Cluniac Priory, or it may be reached by walking along the cliffs.

For those with a young family East and West Runton, a few miles to the east of Cromer, are highly to be commended. The sands are excellent, while good accommodation is usually to be had at very moderate prices. West Runton is within an easy walk of Cromer, and excellent bathing can be enjoyed.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

REAR-ADMIRAL CAMPBELL, C.B., D.S.O., who was recently appointed British Member of the Arbitral Tribunal for dealing with the indemnity claims of the French fishermen in Newfoundland, is an officer of singular and varied distinction, and is well known as the compiler of the Vocabulary Signal Book and the Admiralty Secret Ciphers. He was Commander in the "Thalia," which was employed in the Transport Service during the Egyptian War of 1882, and he subsequently saw a deal of hard service on both the East and West Coasts of Africa. For some time he was Captain of the "Philomel," and his services in the operations against the Chief Nanna of Brohemie were so conspicuous that he was given the C.B. Later he won the D.S.O. in the Benin Expedition, obtaining special mention in despatches for having saved the lives of the wounded by his prompt action at the fire which broke out in the city. He became A.D.C. to Queen Victoria in 1899, and attained flag rank in December, 1901.

THERE is a very interesting article in the May number of the United Service Magazine on "Chips," by a writer signing himself "Telescope," who has clearly made an exhaustive study of this curious subject. "Chips," it should be mentioned, are, theoretically, only the shavings, sawdust, chippings, and "offal wood" from the sides or ends of timber used in the Royal Dockyards, and these in olden days were the lawful perquisites of the shipwrights in the yards. But the system led to many abuses, which are fully and interestingly described in "Telescope's" article. Eventually the practice of allowing workmen to carry "chips" away from the yards was done away with, as it was found that much valuable timber was deliberately being cut to waste in order to increase the value of bundles which the men used daily to take with them. For some time afterwards officers employed in the yards were allowed "chips" for firewood, but now even this privilege has been abolished, and there seems very little doubt that the waste of timber has sensibly decreased in consequence of the watchful eye kept by the Admiralty on this apparently small, but really serious, item in the national expenditure.

IT is much to be hoped that no attempt will be made to hinder the complete satisfaction of Admiralty requirements as to the control of wireless apparatus and stations. Here is a question in which it is essential that all commercial considerations should be utterly subordinated to Naval demands, and it will be most regrettable if any sort of controversy arises in regard to such a subject even in respect to peace arrangements. As a matter of fact, the term peace is one which can never be safely applied to any serious Naval development, and it will be an ill day for us as an Empire when we forget that the British Fleet is always on active service. There is no possible analogy between Naval and Military demands in the matter of wireless telegraphy, and, if the Admiralty wants a closer grip on the wireless stations along the coast, it should have it, without any fuss or talk about private rights. We cannot afford to play with questions of this sort, and the time seems to have come for the control of a mighty weapon like wireless telegraphy to be primarily in the hands of those who know how best to use it for purposes of Imperial assurance.

THE selection of Lieutenant-Colonel F. J. A. Trench, D.S.O., commanding the Royal Garrison Artillery at Gibraltar, to proceed to German South-West Africa for the purpose of being attached to the Staff of the German Commander-in-Chief in Damaraland, is suggestive, and is doubtless not wholly unconnected with the German Emperor's recent visit to the "Rock." It may be surmised that, even if Colonel Trench goes to Damaraland ostensibly for the purpose of watching the German system of dealing with a native African rising—a system which has not hitherto been very brilliantly demonstrated—his own stock of local knowledge and experience is not likely to be largely increased by anything the Germans can teach him. No fewer than four Trenches served—three of them with marked distinction—in the last South African War; but Colonel F. J. A. Trench in addition made his mark in the Zulu War of 1879, and was present at the battle of Ulundi, a counterpart of which would, doubtless, be extremely welcome to the Germans at the present moment.

THE reduction of the Army of occupation in Egypt does not, of course, affect the number of British officers employed with the Egyptian Army, whose names still occupy three pages of the monthly Army List, and include, by the way, a round score of D.S.O.'s. But changes are taking place here also, and the loss to the Egyptian Army of men like Colonels F. J. Nason and the Hon. M. G. Talbot will be severely felt. Both of these fine soldiers are experienced campaigners, one having five and the other six wars or expeditions to his credit. Colonel Nason is the son of the late General John Nason of the old 49th Foot, and has a brother, a D.S.O. like himself, who retired ten years ago from the Essex Regiment, of which he was a major. An old Harrovian, Colonel Nason joined the old 26th Cameronians, now, perhaps, better known by their second title, the Scottish Rifles, and for four years served as Adjutant. For the last nine years he has been attached to the Egyptian Army, and recently has been Secretary-General to the Soudan Administration. Colonel Talbot is the son of Lord Talbot de Malahide, and before he went to Egypt as Director-General of the Local Intelligence Department had acquired a notable reputation in India as a brilliant and enthusiastic surveyor. He is an old Wellingtonian, a Staff College man, and a Royal Engineer of thirty-two years' standing

Copyright.

TYPES OF THE PUNJAB POLICE FORCE, TAKEN AT THE FORT, PHILLOUR.

The Indian Police Force has recently been reorganised and redistributed, and a large number of places formerly garrisoned by English regiments are now to be occupied by the Police. The names of the English officers, reading from left to right, are: Probationers H. T. Wickham and C. P. Sconcia, Inspector MacGregor (late H.L.I.), District Superintendent G. A. Cocks, and Probationers J. M. Misick and V. A. Short.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

Bourne and Shepherd.

THE CREW OF THE "HYACINTH."

The "Hyacinth" is a protected cruiser of the "Highflyer" class, and the flag-ship of Rear-Admiral Atkinson-Willes, the Commander-in-Chief on the East Indies Station. She was commissioned at Devonport in July, 1903.

Digitized by Google

IN AID OF WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL.

MRS. CALVERLEY BEWICKE.
William I., 1066-1087.

MISS LAURIE.
William I., 1066-1087.

MISS TURNER.
William I., 1066-1087.

LADY HARGREAVES BROWN.
Henry V., 1413-1422.

MISS H. BRIDGE.
Henry III., 1216-1272.

LADY PEEL.
Henry IV., 1399-1413.

MRS. CYRIL SPOTTISWOODE.
Caxton Stall.

MRS. L. BROWNING.
Caxton Stall.

COUNTESS OF YARMOUTH.
Charles I., 1626-1649.

The great historical bazaar, which has been organised by the Duchess of Buccleuch, the Duchess of Norfolk, and other distinguished ladies, in aid of the funds of the Westminster Hospital, in the enclosure of Dean's Yard, will take place next week, and there is every prospect of the event proving a brilliant success. The stall-holders are all to be dressed in costumes representative of the various reigns of Kings and Queens of England.

(From photographs by Messrs. Langfier, Old Bond Street, W.)

Digitized by Google

SOME STALL-HOLDERS AT THE BAZAAR.

MRS. ALAN ERSKINE.
Charles I., 1625-1649.

A PURITAN GROUP.
About 1650.

MRS. WILLOUGHBY PEMBERTON.
Charles II., 1661-1685.

MRS. FERRIER-KERR.
James II., 1685-1688.

MISS INA WILSON.
James II., 1685-1688.

MISS LENA FANSHAWE.
George I., 1714-1727.

HON. RACHEL DE MONTMORENCY.
Edward VII.

LADY LANSDOWNE.
William IV., 1831-1837.

HON. KATHLEEN DE MONTMORENCY.
Edward VII.

In our illustrations we are enabled to give portraits of some of the principal stall-holders in costume. The hospital, which has been in existence for nearly 200 years, ministers to the wants of a crowded and busy neighbourhood. But the income of the hospital is annually over £10,000 short of its expenditure, and unless this state of things can be remedied, its work will have to be confined within very narrow limits.

(From photographs by Messrs. Langfier, Old Bond Street, W.)

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

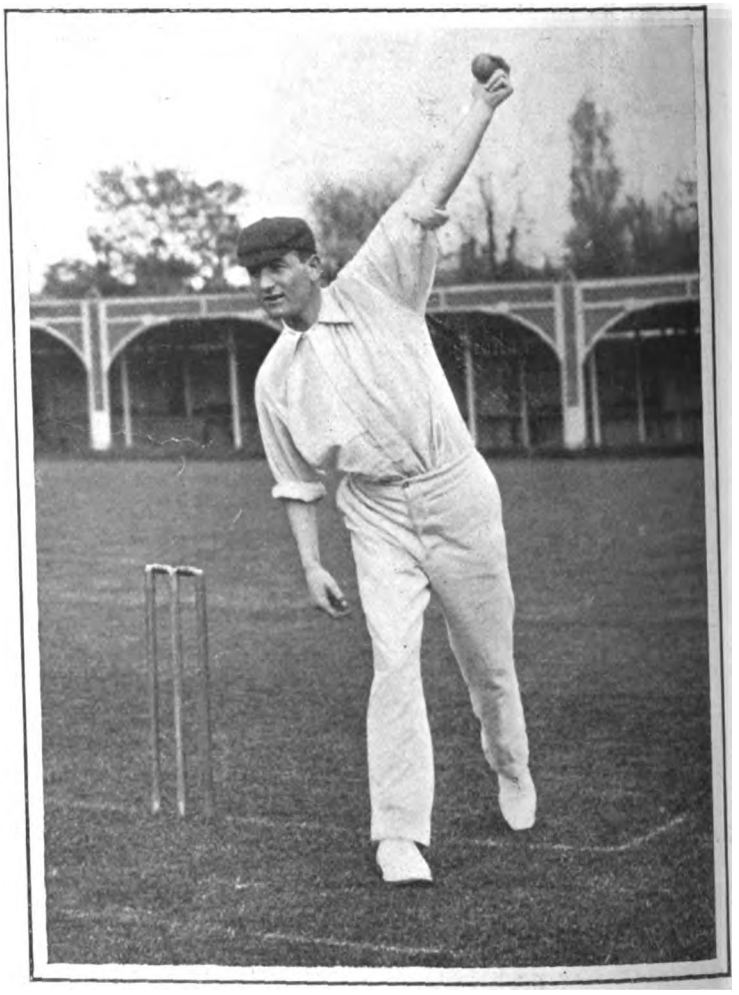
MR. C. B. FRY'S GREAT ACHIEVEMENT.

When the above photograph was taken, Mr. C. B. Fry, the famous old Reptonian-Oxonian, was in the course of achieving a record in the matter of scoring double hundreds in a first-class match. Messrs. W. G. Grace, R. E. Foster, and C. B. Fry had, previous to May 10, achieved the feat three times. By scoring 156 and 106 for Sussex v. M.C.C., Mr. Fry now stands alone in this particular matter, his actual figures reading: 1898, for Sussex v. Middlesex at Brighton, 108 and 123 not out; 1900, for Sussex v. Surrey at Brighton, 125 and 229; 1903, Sussex v. Kent at Brighton, 138 and 101 not out; 1905, Sussex v. M.C.C. at Lord's, 156 and 106. He has more than once scored a century first innings and 99 in the second. His latest double hundred was made without giving a single chance.

MR. P. F. WARNER.

Such is the irony of cricket! Here we have this well-known old Rugby boy going out with Mr. C. P. Foley to continue his innings after lunch at Lord's on May 9, when he made his record score of 204 for M.C.C. v. Sussex. On the next occasion he sallied forth from the same gate on to the same ground, with probably the same bat, boots, pads, and gloves on, he failed to score, and was out in the first over. He would not be a cricketer if he was not prepared for such a happening, for it is just this uncertainty about it that makes men hanker after cricket. In scoring his record score and the highest of this season, "Plum" gave no chance, and has seldom batted in more facile style.



F. TARRANT.

On June 1 another importation from Australia becomes qualified for an English county, Middlesex to wit, in the person of the left-hand bowler above depicted. He hails from Melbourne, and has this season started well enough by bagging Mr. C. B. Fry in each innings of his recent big feat at Lord's, clean bowled in the first and l.b.w. in the second. Tarrant is a good right-hand bat and not a bad fieldsman, so should be a great acquisition to Middlesex, especially now that Trott has begun to show signs of not possessing quite so much sting as of yore. Tarrant, like most slow left-handers, bowls round the wicket, rather wide out, and he has a very good slow ball, which, however, he is rather inclined to overdo.

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

Ellis and Walery.

"PANTALOON" AT THE DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.

Mr. J. M. Barrie's curtain-raiser, "Pantaloon," tells the story of a love match between Harlequin (Mr. Willie Ward) and Columbine (Miss Pauline Chase), and the revenge that Clown (Mr. A. W. Baskcomb), who was in love with Columbine himself, took upon Pantaloon (Mr. Gerald du Maurier). The young couple were turned out of doors, and left to shift for themselves. But when, a few years later, they crept back with a Baby Clown (Miss Ela Q May), Pantaloon forgave them and took them back into their home.

Ellis and Walery.

"ALICE SIT-BY-THE-FIRE" AT THE DUKE OF YORK'S THEATRE.

The above scene from Mr. Barrie's play shows the children before the home-coming of Colonel and Mrs. Grey. Cosmo (Mr. A. E. Matthews), the young "Britannia" cadet, and his sister Amy (Miss Irene Vanbrugh) are discussing the way in which they will greet their parents, and Amy's friend, Leonora Dunbar (Miss Lettice Fairfax), is assisting with advice. The opinions of the Baby and the Nurse upon the question are also forcibly expressed.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

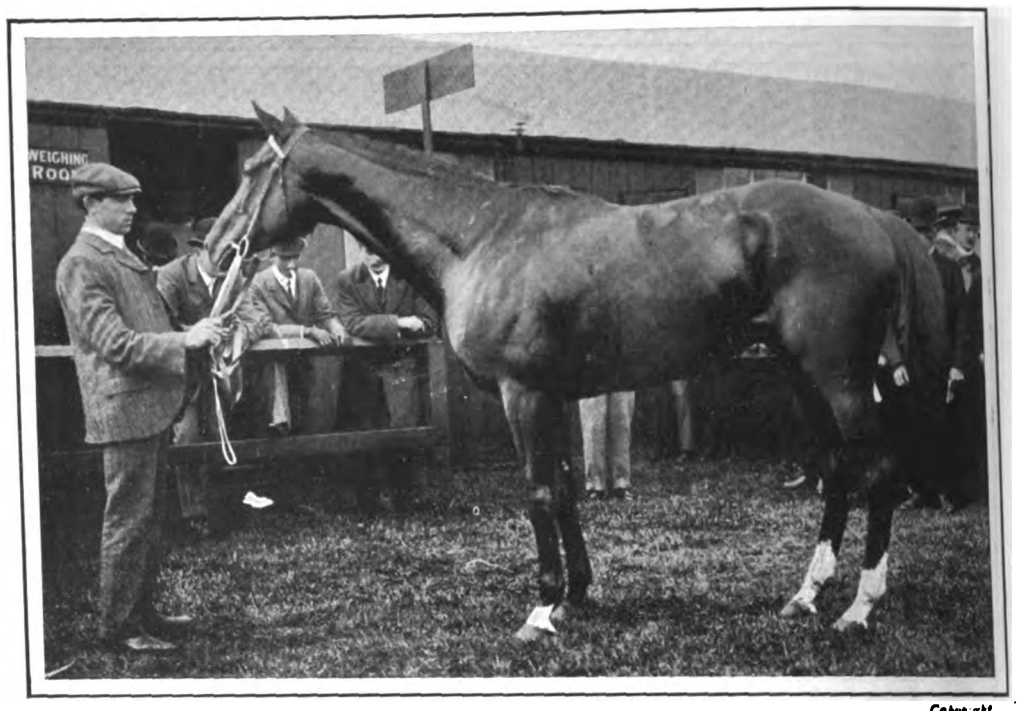
VERY pleasant was the weather at Chester on Tuesday, the 9th, when proceedings began with the easy victory of St. Ives in the Mostyn Two Year Old Plate, and her owner, Mr. Homan, could probably have won the race with his other entry, Noisy Bill, had he elected to start him instead of the filly. Powder Puff had no difficulty whatever in placing the principal race of the day, the Wynnstay Handicap Plate, to the credit of Mr. G. Tod, and old Chon Kina performed what I think is an unprecedented feat, by winning the Cestrian Selling Welter Handicap Plate for the third year in succession.

The Chester Cup is a good old-fashioned race, but its fortunes have somewhat waned with the passing of time. In 1852 forty-three horses came out to do battle for "the Cup," and twenty-six of them carried under 7-st., while to two of the remainder the handicapper had allotted less than 5-st. George Fordham rode Beniton in this race at 4-st. This year but ten horses could be found to gallop the two miles and a quarter round the Old Cup Course, and it can hardly be said that any animal of really high class was included among them. It is true that the glamour of a sensational and perhaps fluky victory in the Ascot Gold Cup of last year still attaches to the name of Throwaway. Palmy Days is a beautiful mare, but hardly yet at her best, and others of the field had been running over hurdles during the winter months. The race itself, however, resulted in a pretty struggle. Lynham on Throwaway (8-st. 12-lb.) was quickest away when the barrier went up, and strode along in front till about half a mile from home, when Imari (7-st. 4-lb.) ranged alongside and proceeded to tackle the leader, who made a gallant fight for victory, but weight told its inevitable tale, and with Mark Time (8-st. 13-lb.) joining in the fray, Imari forged ahead and won by three-quarters of a length, leaving Mark Time and Throwaway to finish second and third for the second year in succession. With regard to future racing it may be worth noting that Throwaway was meeting Mark Time on 11-lb. better terms this year than last. The remainder of the day's racing calls for little comment beyond noting that Eageress scored a popular win for the Duke of Westminster in the Prince of Wales's Welter Handicap Plate; and that in spite of a bad start Mr. Dugdale's Picton, hitherto known as the Hecuba colt, gave Mr. Thursby a comfortable winning ride in the Eaton Maiden (at entry) Two Year Old Plate. The value of the Great Cheshire Handicap, which was the principal item on Thursday's card, has been reduced from 1,000-sovereigns to 500-sovereigns, but no further money has been added to any of the other races, and it is, perhaps, doubtful if a wise course is being pursued by the executive of the meeting, and the addition of an extra selling race on "Cup Day" can hardly be classed as a popular innovation. The Pace Egger colt showed temper at the start for the race under notice and met with a very serious accident, kicking one of his hind legs right over the rails and becoming impaled upon one of the sharp spikes, which inflicted a terrible wound.



Copyright.

MR. W. LOW'S IMARI, BY RIGHTAWAY—WINSOME CHARTERIS.
Winner of the Chester Cup.

If the attendance at Kempton Park on Friday, the 12th, was not a record one, the enclosures and stands were quite crowded enough for comfort, and the meeting was honoured on both days by the presence of his Majesty, whom everyone was delighted to see in the best of health and spirits. Brilliant racing and a series of disasters to backers were the chief characteristics of the opening day of the meeting; those who had the good fortune to witness it will not readily forget the finish between St. Brendan, Thrush, and Brother Bill for the Stewards' Handicap of 1,000-sovereigns, which resulted in the head victory of St. Brendan, with a short head dividing the other two for second and third places.

Not a few enthusiastic lovers of a good horse fondly hoped that Ypsilanti would carry his 9-st. 13-lb. to victory in the Jubilee Handicap on Saturday for the third time in succession, but it was expecting too much. Minting, it is true, won it with 10-st., but his warmest admirers can hardly claim that Ypsilanti is in the same class as Minting. Victor Wild won the race twice, and, like him, Ypsilanti was cheered by the public as he cantered down to the post to attempt an impossible task. There was some little delay at the start, but the competitors appeared to get off on fairly level terms, and most of the running was made by Housewife, with Fermoyle always handy; some scrimmaging took place at the bend, in which the top weight lost whatever chance he might have had. At the distance Ambition was in front, but was challenged by Fermoyle, and in a desperate race home only just managed to maintain his advantage by a short head, the third place being filled by Union Jack.

As far as future events are concerned, it is difficult to anticipate events a week ahead, but at Gatwick Sweet Mary will win the Worth Stakes, the Mart Plate should go to Giulan, in spite of his penalty of 16-lb., which brings the weight he has to carry up to 9-st. 1-lb. Melayr should go very near to winning the Alexandra Handicap of 1,000-sovereigns, with Airlie and Donnetta his most dangerous opponents.

CAURIRE.

W. A. Rouch.

MR. T. W. BLENKIRON'S AMBITION, BY PRIDE—PEGAWAY.
Winner of the Jubilee Stakes.

Digitized by Google

THE CHESTER MEETING.

W. A. Rouch

THE CROWD IN THE COUNTY STAND, CHESTER.

The Chester Meeting this year took place in the most delightful weather, and the crowd was one of the largest ever seen on the historic course. The County Stand, as will be seen in the picture, was packed to its utmost capacity, ladies in the brightest summer costumes forming a large proportion of the visitors,

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Hana.

MISS FRANCES KAPSTOWNE

Who is appearing with The Drolls and Mr. Herbert Fordwych of Aldwych at the Queen's (Small) Hall.

Ward.

MISS GLADYS GLYNN

Who appeared in the successful Irish musical play, "Peggy Machree," with Mr. C. E. Hamilton's company.

Ellis and Walery.

MISS SYBIL GLYNN

As Mme. Asani, in "The Darling of the Guards," has, with her sister, been appearing in "Peggy Machree."

Rapid Photo Co.

MISS ETHEL OLIVER

Who, it is announced, will make her reappearance in "The Spring Chicken," when that play is produced at the Gaiety.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

The British Medical Journal says:
"Benger's Food has by its excellence established a reputation of its own."

BENGER'S Food

for Infants, Invalids, and the Aged

Delicious, Nutritive, Digestible.

BENGER'S FOOD with milk forms a dainty, delicious, and most easily digested cream. Infants thrive on it, and delicate or aged persons enjoy it.

Benger's Food is sold by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

SKIN LIFE

Cook's THRONE SOAP adds life to the skin!
Why?
Because it is thoroughly prepared from skin-nourishing constituents by scientific methods (under scientific control).

Six dainty samples sent post free for six penny stamps.

EDWARD COOK & CO., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, London, E.

DR. J. M. BARRIE says—"What I call the 'Arcadia' in My Lady Nicotine is the CRAVEN Mixture and no other."

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

A Concentrated Tobacco for Pipe Smokers. Delightfully Cool.

Sold everywhere in 1, 2, & 4-oz. Tins.

GALLAHER, Ltd.,
The Independent Firm.

ST. JACOBS OIL

CURES

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA,
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia | Soreness
Bruises | Stiffness
And Bodily Aches and Pains.

In 1/1½ and 2/6 sizes.
Of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

The Misses H. & I. WOOLLAN

(UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.)

Telephone: 5467 Gerrard.
Telegrams: "Decoriter."

SQUARE MARKED WORCESTER.

ANTIQUES. FURNITURE. CHINA, LACE, GLASS, etc., etc., etc.

28, Brook Street, Grosvenor Square, W.

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

IT is only of late that Naval officers have begun to write books on their experiences in war. Now we have from Lieutenant C. C. Dix "The World's Navies in the Boxer Rebellion (China, 1900)," published by Messrs. Digby, Long. Mr. Dix tells the story of those exciting times, when the Navies of the Powers set to, both by sea and land, and prevented a fearful disaster to the Europeans in Peking and elsewhere, which at one time was believed to have actually happened. He handles his facts in a plain and straightforward manner, which makes very agreeable reading, and sets everything out very clearly. After a preliminary chapter on the causes of the Boxer outbreak, Mr. Dix describes the capture of the vaunted "impregnable" Taku forts, and the events in Tientsin—its first siege by the Chinese, its relief, its second siege, and the fierce battle by which, after Admiral Seymour had gone down to Taku, the native city was captured. Mr. Dix was not a member of the force with which Admiral Seymour made the gallant but fruitless dash for the relief of the Peking Legations, but he was a member of the force that went to relieve Admiral Seymour, and had ample opportunities of learning the facts; and by no means the least interesting part of his book is the chapter which describes the adventures of Admiral Seymour's plucky little force of some 2,000 men. So far as we know this story has not been told so fully before. Mr. Dix was also engaged in the final advance to Peking and the relief of the Legations, of the siege of which he tells a lucid story. Altogether his book is a most creditable piece of work, and it has the advantage of being illustrated by photographs taken on the spot, which give details of costume and so forth not easily obtained elsewhere.

The Boxer Rebellion.

* * *

THE latest volume of Messrs. Newnes's Art Library is "Filippino Lippi." The introduction is contributed by Mr. P. G. Konody, a very interesting writer, who is quite at his best in the present instance. He begins by describing what is known of Lippi's life, supporting, so far as is possible, the authority of the much-criticised Vasari, and making use of the latest discoveries of Lippi's historians and critics. Then, after explaining how difficult it is to give a broad summing up of the work of this master of the Renaissance, he proceeds to write a very able and illuminative piece of criticism, which gives as good an account of the artist's work as could be found in a brief space. The list of the principal works of Lippi in public and private collections at home and abroad is well chosen and representative, and then follows what is, after all, the gist of the matter, some sixty-five reproductions of Lippi's pictures and frescoes. We have nothing but the highest praise for the manner in which these reproductions have been carried out. They are made from photographs, but nothing either of quality or detail is lost, and the book will be of the greatest value, both to students of art and as a work of reference on matters of composition.

Filippino Lippi.

* * *

ABOUT November last Captain Klado, while waiting to give evidence before the Paris Commission of Enquiry into the North Sea Incident, occupied his time in contributing to the Novoe Vremya a series of articles, attacking frankly and fearlessly the big-wigs of the Russian Navy. These articles have now been collected into a book, which Messrs. Hurst and Blackett publish under the title of "The Russian Navy in the Russo-Japanese War," translated by Mr. L. J. H. Dickenson. It is a plain-spoken book, exceedingly Russian in sentiment, and, indeed, showing the truest patriotism in an author who can so denounce his country's shortcomings. It is not a book that can be read with any pleasure in this country, because the author hates England as much as he loves Russia, and never loses an opportunity of saying so. But it can be read with the greatest interest, and affords an excellent commentary on recent events.

The Russian Navy.

* * *

AT this season of the year Spring Poets are rife, and very opportunely for their use there appears "The Rhymer's Lexicon," compiled and edited by Mr. Andrew Loring, and published by Messrs. Routledge. Here the young poet may find rhymes to his hand galore. Supposing, for instance, he desires to end his first line with "cuddle," he need not hesitate for a moment; if he turns to page 697 he will find all these to his hand, "fuddle, huddle, muddle, nuddle, puddle, ruddle, and scuddle." But, alas! even Mr. Loring has not been able to discover any rhyme for "love" but the old ones of "above" and "dove." But we have no desire, nor indeed reason, to make fun of a valuable and exhaustive piece of work, which has great philological interest in itself—an interest increased by the learned and comprehensive introduction by Professor Saintsbury, who contributes a kind of sketch of a subject which he is to treat at greater length and with authority in his forthcoming "History of English Prosody."

For Spring Poets.

* * *

A VERY neat and useful little series of art books is the Langham Series, edited by Mr. Selwyn Brinton, and published by Mr. A. Siegle. We have before us two volumes, "Rome as an Art City," by Mr. Albert Zacher, and "Italian Architecture," by Mr. J. Wood Brown. Mr. Zacher traces the history of Art in Rome from the classical period down to the present day, stating his facts clearly and comprehensively, and adding two interesting chapters on Rome as a school of Art, and the value of Rome to the modern tourist. His book is illustrated by sixteen well-chosen reproductions from photographs, a particularly fine one being the church of San Paolo Fuori. Mr. Wood Brown divides his subject into six heads—the architecture of Rome, by which he means ancient Rome, and the five orders—Basilican, Byzantine, Lombard, Gothic, and Renaissance. He, too, writes well and simply, with a full realisation of the connection between the architecture and the social life of a period, and his book is usefully illustrated. Other volumes in this excellent little series concern Bartolozzi, Japanese colour prints, Rodin, English caricature in the eighteenth century, Venice, and Nuremberg; while Mrs. Steuart Erskine has contributed a volume on London as an Art city. A volume on Millet is in preparation.

Langham Series.

PORTRAIT OF AN OLD MAN.

From the painting by Filippino Lippi in the Uffizi Gallery, Florence. One of the illustrations in "Filippino Lippi," in the Art Library Series, published by Newnes, Limited.

* * *

THERE is no question that the principle so commonly adopted by Messrs Cassell and Co., of issuing books in sixpenny or shilling parts, is both very tempting and very sensible, more especially when they make liberal provision for the binding of the parts when the work is complete. For this reason we have no doubt that their latest undertaking, a volume on wild flowers, of which we have received the first of forty sixpenny parts, will have an immense success. "Familiar Wild Flowers," by Mr. F. E. Hulme, is not a new book, but it has been revised and enlarged; and the illustrations, which are reproduced in colour, are certainly samples of very beautiful work. This first part contains a new feature in the shape of a valuable colour index, in which, by referring, for instance, to white, you find a list of all the white flowers, with references to the pages of the work on which they appear.

Familiar Wild Flowers.

* * *

MESSRS. WARD, LOCK, AND CO. have recently published the twenty-sixth edition, entirely rewritten and reillustrated, of their pictorial and descriptive "Guide to London and its Environs." So far as we have tested the book, it is completely accurate, and it is most interesting reading, for the more one knows of London the more one realises one's ignorance. Not a page of this book but has something of historical, literary, or artistic interest; it is fully and pleasantly illustrated; it has a large number of clear and useful maps; and such humdrum details as railways and hotels, times of admission and so forth, are given clearly and fully. A man who could pass an examination in the matter of this book would be a remarkably learned person. A propos of the "Guide to London" we may mention Warrens' "London Cab Guide," an invaluable work, which gives all the information possible about London cabs and their fares, and will enable the most timid of old ladies to resist any attempt at extortion. Extortionate cabmen are rare, as it is only fair to confess; and that Mr. Warrens publishes his cab guide as much in the interest of the driver as of the fare is clear from the inscription "Kindly remember the driver," which he puts in three languages at the top of each page.

A Guide to London.

BOOKS TO READ.

Fiction.

Roger Trewinion, by Joseph Hocking. (Lock.)
Seth of the Cross, by Alphonse Courlander. (Nash.)
A Cheque for Three Thousand, by A. H. Vesey. (Arrowsmith.)
A Dark Lantern, by Elizabeth Robins. (Heinemann.)

History.

The Sword of Islam, by A. N. Wollaston. (Murray.)

Poetry.

Cricket Songs, by Norman Gale. (Alston Rivers.)

Sport.

Rifle and Romance in the Indian Jungle, by Captain A. I. R. Glasfurd. (Lane.)

Naval.

The World's Navies in the Boxer Rebellion (China, 1900), by Lieutenant C. C. Dix, R.N. (Digby Long.)

Digitized by Google

TWICE WITH HALF!

Because it's really good, you get twice the brilliancy with half the quantity of that you get with other polishes. Try JUST A SMEAR AND A RUB on your boots, harness, or anything leather.

WREN'S BOOT POLISHES

Send 7½d. in stamps for samples (black and brown), and put them to the test!

WREN & CO., NORTHAMPTON.

THE CLOTH FOR GOLF SUITS.

"Hydea"

is the best English cloth—made of the best English wool—grown on the HYDE Farm, Gloucestershire. It is delightfully soft and elastic—absolutely the best for sportsmen—most durable for out-o'-doors—most handsome for town suits—long thread—refined finish.

THE KING WEARS IT,

and pays no more than you—because there's only one quality at one price. "HYDEA" is stamped on every two yards of the selvedge—that's how you may know it—that, and its excellent surface! Send for FREE Booklet:—

APPERLY, CURTIS & Co., Ltd.,
Dudbridge Mills, Stroud, West of England.

Keen Cooks Know

KEATING'S POWDER KILLS

Beetles

IS YOUR PENCIL A KOH-I-NOOR OR ONLY AN IMITATION?

They Glide along beautifully

Hardtmuth's

KOH-I-NOOR

PENCILS.

In Seventeen Degrees for all Pencil Purposes. Pronounced best by Artists, Students, Teachers, and Business Men. They are famed for their consistent reliability and excellence.

Of Stationers, Artists' Colourmen, and Photographic Dealers. A Dainty Illustrated Booklet, in Colours, post free from

L. & C. HARDTMUTH,
12, Golden Lane, London, E.C.

Beauty.

Icilma Fluor Cream prevents the skin from shining when warm, checks the growth of superfluous hair, and suppresses the abuse of powder. No woman can hope to preserve free from lines a delicate transparent complexion without Nature's marvellous skin tonic Icilma. Send 2d. stamps for two samples (different scents). ICILMA CO., Ltd. (Dept. 43), 142, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

The Crown Stopper ensures the Perfection of Perfumes.

Look for the Crown Stopper on every bottle of

Crab Apple Blossom and Lavender Salts.

The Crown Perfumery Co.
Paris. London. New York.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Entirely fade away.

The Medical Editor of the "Echo" writes in that paper:

"I have been in the habit for years of smoking the 'Flor de Dindigul Cigarettes' or miniature Cigars. They are cheap, and to my idea purer than American or Cuban, and the flavour is far more agreeable."

FLOR DE DINDIGUL CIGARETTES.

ALL TOBACCO LEAF, NO PAPER.

SWEET AROMA AND FASCINATING FLAVOUR.

10 Gold Medals awarded for Excellence.

1d. each; 8/- per 100. Everywhere and from

BEWLAY & CO., Sole Importers, 49, Strand, W.C.

Tobacconists to the Royal Family.

7/10ths of ALL

Your little ills will find relief in

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

For HEADACHE,
For BILIOUSNESS,
For INDIGESTION,
For TORPID LIVER,
For CONSTIPATION,
For SALLOW SKIN,
For the COMPLEXION.

Very small, and easy to take as sugar. Purely Vegetable.

Genuine must have signature

PRICE 13½d.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

The finest Pipe Tobacco is PLAYER'S Navy Mix-ture

Sold in Two Strengths

MEDIUM—
1/6 PER ¼ lb. TIN
4½d. " OZ.
MILD—
1/8 PER ¼ lb. TIN
5d. " OZ.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

THREE CENTURIES OF BRITISH BROADSIDES.

THE term broadside or broadsheet is singularly comprehensive. It includes the proclamations of Sovereigns, the promulgation of weighty measures of State and the declaration of wars, as well as the dying speeches of malefactors, the ephemeral addresses of politicians great and small, and the rudely-printed patriotic ballads, both Naval and Military, which bore the same primitive illustrations in the days of Nelson and Wellington as they did in those of Marlborough and Sir Cloudesley Shovell. The broadside was born of the Spanish Armada, fostered by the literary and political controversies of the Civil War, took a fresh lease of life during our long life-struggle with Napoleon, and finally died of inanition under the combined influence of the introduction of railways, the abolition of the newspaper tax, the ever-increasing prosperity of the cheap Press, and the discontinuance of public executions. The broadsheet, either as a whole, or in one or other of its varied forms, e.g., the political, the poetical, the dramatic, and so forth, presents a subject of great fascination to the collector, who is still able to add to his store from all sorts of out-of-the-way sources. While some broadside collectors classify their treasures according to their subjects, others prefer to arrange them under the reigns or periods in which they were printed. It is in the contemporary broadside that the future historian of English social life will find his principal supply of useful information. It is much to be regretted that their real value was far too little known or appreciated by the writers of the earlier days of the Victorian era. The collection of broadsides in the British Museum is one of the finest in the world, and it is to be deplored that the fruits of the late Colonel Grant's long and energetic labours in the same field were dispersed at his death, although Mr. James Tregaskis vainly tried to dispose of them as a whole, at a much less sum than that which they afterwards fetched when sold singly. From the Caxton Head came the very rare broadside and portrait of the prototypes of the Siamese twins, Lazuz and John Baptist, who flourished in 1637, when they were exhibited in the Strand. In the important sale of the library of the late Mr. John Scott, which took place at Messrs. Sotheby's six weeks ago, figured a probably unique series of Scotch Jacobite broadsides, in addition to a number relating to the Revolution of 1688. Another notable broadside is that published by order of Oliver Cromwell after the battle of Worcester, offering £1,000 reward for the apprehension of the fugitive King de jure. It is exceedingly rare, and formed one of a unique set of early Commonwealth proclamations sold by Messrs. Puttick two years ago, and is still preserved unbroken in a private collection. Another remarkable broadsheet is that by which Queen Anne proclaimed a General Fast on the breaking out of the hostilities which were to crown John Churchill with laurels and make him Duke of Marlborough. The broadside hobby is by no means as expensive as stamp-collecting or the accumulation of historic medals. In their recent catalogue Messrs. Maggs offer for sale en bloc a broadside collection of a very interesting and representative character. An enumeration of some of its contents may be pardoned, as it will at once demonstrate that variety of subject which forms one of the most agreeable and attractive features of the pursuit of this particular form of collecting. We have amongst the 300 items of this particular collection the following rare examples of the "sheets" which entered so largely into the life of our ancestors of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries:

Swift (Dean) The Tale of a Nettle in Verse, Cambridge, 1710
Wild (R., D.D.) A Poem upon the Imprisonment of Mr. Calamy in Newgate
Purcell (D.) Lovely Charmer, a Song with Music, and others by him
Purcell (H.) A Song set to music
Sir Hugh and the Maiden, a ballad
The Guernsey Garland
The Genius of True Englishmen, a ballad
A Satyre against Mankind, in verse
The New Letanie, in verse
The Jesuit's Justification
Poem to his Majesty, 1679
The Politick Squire, in verse
Prison Groans of Southwark Malefactors
Song of Hunting of Chevy Chase
Poem upon Nothing
The Cook Maid's Garland, and many other interesting items
Rowe (N.) Original Prologue to the Fair Penitent
Carey (Hy.) Ballads, with music
Indulgence Pleniere de Clement XI., 1760
Durfey (T.) The Jolly Miller
Franklin (Dr. Benj.) The Way to Wealth, Lond., circa 1750
The Thief Taker Taken, or Jonathan (Wild) Unveiled, portrait and five views
The Danger is Over, in verse, 1701
A Poem on the Art of Printing
New Year's Gift for the Rump
Protestant's Petition against Popery, in verse, 168.
Ballad of the Cloak
Divine Poem, by M. Wells, 1684
The Jesuit's Character, in verse, 1679
Martyrdom of Charles I., 1648
The Wine Cooper's Delight, in verse, 1681
Act of the Commonwealth Parliament to appoint Commander of London Forces, 1650
Proclamation of Charles II. respecting the Execution of Charles I., 1660

A true Picture and Story of two Brethren borne in Genoa in Italie, 1620. the one called Lazar, the other John Baptist, both at this present living, and to be seene in the Strand at London, 1637. Decemb. 6.

Historia. Enigmatis de gemellis Genoa connatis, Anno salutis nostræ MDCXX. in unum coalescentibus, quorum major Lazar, minor Ioh. Baptista, ad sacrum Fontem nominati, vivis bodie & miranda London monstratis An. MDCXXXVII.

Solutio Ænigmatum.

Imprimatur &c. Baker. Decemb. 6. 16

See heere two Brothers, Twinnes, yet one they be.
One, yet two heads, three legs, foure hands hath he.
Each hath a body, both but one, two-foul'd
VVhether or no, I dare not boldly hould.
The Childe, a pineous, hideous, Infant blinde,
VVhether the mind wants eyes, or eyes want minde;
Is seene, but sees not, fed, but never eates,
His speechlesse mouth, takes neither drinke nor meates:
Nor eares, nor eyes, nor feet, nor hands, can do
Such offices as Nature fram'd them to.
Ever a burden to his loving brother,
Ever a Childe, nor ere like to be other:
The bigger to the lesse, a servant and Compeere,
A Comfort, and a Porter him to beare.
A friend, a nurse, a mother to him, whom
He beares and fosters at his tender wombe,
The brothers health and life on brother lyes,
The brothers syle with brothers syle complyes.
Such brothers rare, such friendship wondrous rare,
Such as the world can hardly shew a paire.
All the Spectators flocking to this scene,
VVonder, and aske what may this wonder meane.

The Key and Morall of this Riddle.

Loe heere th'English of this Latine Monster,
This prodigie, prodigious thus I conster,
See here the lively Picture in this Table,
The clearest Embleme of the Romish Babel:
Clergie and Laity, th'infant hath in one,
Blind both in faith and true Religion.
Both alike foolish, and like wretched live,
VVhat life implicit Colliers faith can give?
Their heads have reason as this Monster hands,
Their heads and reason both for Cyphers stands:
VVhat ever they beleeve or know is nought,
Vnlesse the Pope do ratifie their thought:
His yea, and nay, what ere the Scripture saith,
Must be the standard Canon of their faith:
On him depends their soules, their faith, their all,
His Chaire falling, how can they but fall:
Oh wofull case where blind do leade the blind,
VVho can them helpe, but both destruction find.

London Printed by A.M. for Robert Milbourne.

THE FAMOUS TWINS OF 1637.
From a very early broadside.

It is curious to note that some of our best-known songs first became famous through the broadsheet, but ballad-collecting will be dealt with in a separate article. It is at present the most popular form of the broadside hobby, and is often subdivided under such headings as Political, Naval, Military, etc. Broadside collecting has certainly one great advantage. Shams and "duffers" are practically unknown, and reprints when they do occur are easily recognisable. The number of known broadsides far exceeds 100,000. Those relating exclusively to Napoleon and the Napoleonic wars run into hundreds, and may very well be made the subject of a separate collection. An American collector is said to possess between 7,000 and 8,000 "dying speeches and confessions," while another confines his attention only to rewards offered for the apprehension of absconding offenders. It would be curious to know if the Charles II. broadside is made to come under that category.

It is a happy coincidence that Oak Apple Day (May 29) should be the date at which commences the sale of the Philbrick Library, with its wonderful series of "Eikon Basilikes" (the book which would have saved the life of Charles I. if it had appeared three months earlier), Walton and Cotton's "Anglers," and the Fables of La Fontaine. Judge Philbrick, has been known for at least a quarter of a century as an ardent and judicious book buyer, and the dispersal of his collection by Messrs. Sotheby should attract purchasers from all parts of this country, the Continent, and America, especially those who are interested in the early and the beautiful bindings of Royer, Payne, and others, works on Art and relating to Napoleon, and last, but not least, such costly volumes as Ravenscroft's "Pinetum Britannicum" and a coloured copy of Griffith's "Palms of British India."

B.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

hold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

IMPORTANT AND INTERESTING BOOK SALE.

On the 29th, 30th and 31st of May,

Messrs. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE,

13, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.,

will dispose of the valuable library of

HIS HONOUR JUDGE PHILBRICK, K.C.

Catalogues now ready.

PENNY- HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS

(AT MODERATE PRICES)

SPINK & SON LTD.

17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,

3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,

41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cotton's "Voice from Waterloo," first edition, in original boards.—165, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry. "The Book of Constitutions," first edition, with frontispiece.—166, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Catalogues, in good condition, of the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea in 1891.—167, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Guides and Histories of the Isle of Wight.—168, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIIth Century Caricatures and Broadsides relating to Baptists.—246, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures illustrating the Attorney-General's Charges against Queen Caroline. Colonial copies wanted.—247, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Theatrical Prints by any of the following publishers:—Bailey, 1802-1808; West, 1811; Clark, 1821; Hodgson, 1822-1838; Dyer, 1825-1840; Fairburn, 1800-1837; Straker, 1829; Floyd, 1830; Skelt, 1832-1870; Green, 1834-1860; or Webb, Park, Reddington, and Matthews.—248, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bath Tokens issued by Turner, coach contractor, between 1770 and 1800.—747, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals.—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Palæolithic and Neolithic Flint Implements for disposal.—743A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

THE Scottish Trials, which came to a conclusion on Saturday last, proved to be by far the most important motor event ever organised north of the Tweed. It was also remarkable for the fact, somewhat rare in the annals of competitions of this description, that only one car out of the forty-four entrants failed to put in an appearance at the start. As we anticipated, a few of the machines found the celebrated Cairnwell Hill too steep to be surmounted with a full load; but in justice to those who lost marks at this point, it should be remembered that a double S turn, with a gradient of 1 in 6·5, is such an exceptional occurrence on a British road that one might drive for years without meeting so severe an obstacle.

* * *

The first day's run from Glasgow to Dundee, by way of Edinburgh, Stirling, and Perth, a distance of 136-miles, presented no particular difficulties, the route being chosen rather with an eye to advertising the cars, and displaying their controllability in the great cities. Tyre troubles were very numerous, and most of the stoppages were due to this cause. As marks were not deducted for time spent in tyre repairs, unless the total for the four days exceeded two hours, thirty-three cars may be considered to have made non-stop runs, including the De Dion, Cadillac, Darracq, and light Wolseley, the four entrants in the single-cylinder class. The regulations for preventing reckless driving or excessive speed were of a most stringent character and strictly enforced.

* * *

The second stage was from Dundee to Aberdeen, viâ Glenshee and Braemar, and included the ascent of the Cairnwell Pass, which rises 2,200 ft. above sea-level. This route took the cars into the heart of the Highlands, and provided a severe test of their hill-climbing capacity and the efficiency of their water-cooling and brake equipment. Forty-two cars started from Dundee, the 16-h.p. Martini having voluntarily retired on the previous day at Edinburgh. All reached their destination within the schedule time.

* * *

Friday's run was the longest in the trials, the cars having to cover the 181 miles of road between Aberdeen and Pitlochry. The roads were again found to be in very bad order, and tyre troubles were very numerous. An accident of a very unusual nature occurred during the day, a car of almost unknown make fracturing its steering gear and upsetting by the roadside, luckily without very serious results to the occupants. The final stage, from Pitlochry back to Glasgow, which brought the total distance up to 595 miles, included some very trying climbs, notably the ascent of Loch-na-Craig Hill, which has a rise of 979-ft. in 3¼ miles, with gradients varying from 1 in 10 to 1 in 50, with an average of 1 in 17. There was also the winding hill between Glen Kingras and Glencroe, which goes by the name of "Rest and be thankful."

* * *

It is impossible in the space at our disposal to more than summarise a few of the results. In the single cylinder class the four entrants mentioned above all made four non-stop runs, so far as the mechanism of the cars was concerned. The Darracq lost one minute owing to a driving stop, and the Wolseley had numerous tyre troubles.

In the two cylinder class only the 16-h.p. Albion obtained full marks, but the 12-h.p. Clement, the 12-h.p. Wolseley, and the 12 h.p. Gladiator showed excellent form, and, excluding tyre troubles, only lost a few minutes each. In the three and four cylinder class the following cars suffered no loss of marks for mechanical defects: 16–20 h.p. Humber, 20-h.p. Ariel, 24-h.p. Mors, 14-h.p. Minerva (five minutes replenishing), 16-h.p. Argyll (driving stop three minutes), 24-h.p. Germain, 24 h.p. Thornycroft, 12-h.p. Richard Brasier, 30-h.p. Belsize, 15-h.p. Brooke, 20-h.p. Vinot Deguingand, 12 h.p. Gladiator, 12-h.p. Argyll. The fastest times in the hill-climbs appear to have been made by the 24-h.p. Thornycroft, the 24-h.p. Mors, and the 20-h.p. Ariel.

* * *

The first stage of the Algiers to Toulon race resulted in an easy win for "Fiat X.," the smallest and lowest-powered boat engaged, which arrived at Port Mahon nearly four hours ahead of any of the other craft. There were seven starters, "Fiat," "Mercédès C.P.," "Mercédès - Mercédès," "Quand Même," "Camille," "Malgrè-Tout," and "Heracles," each of whom was convoyed by a French destroyer. Involuntary stoppages were somewhat frequent, except in the case of "Fiat X.," which is reported to have made the run with only two stops to take in fresh supplies of petrol. The total distance from Algiers to Port Mahon is 195 nautical miles, which the winner covered in 13-hr., or an average speed of 15-knots. The second stage of the race was postponed for a week, but the boats were caught off Toulon in a heavy sea, and the majority were sunk, although at the time of writing it was reported that no lives were lost.

Underwood and Underwood.

IN THE HARBOUR AT ALGIERS.

Some of the motor-boats which took part in the recent race from Algiers to Toulon. "Fiat X.," the second boat from the right of the picture, was an easy winner of the first stage of the race, although it was the smallest and lowest-powered boat engaged. She is one of the two survivors of the second stage from Mahon to Toulon, when the remainder were sunk by the heavy seas off Toulon.

Digitized by Google

PETROLEUM PRODUCTS.

FINEST AMERICAN LAMP OILS.

"WHITE ROSE" and "ROYAL DAYLIGHT."

Good Alike for Lamp or Stove.

Brilliant Light.
Free from Odour.

PRATT'S MOTOR SPIRIT.

IN SEALED CANS ONLY. EMPTIES EXCHANGEABLE EVERYWHERE.

Always Reliable.

Always the Best.

SOLE IMPORTERS—

ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL CO., LTD., 22, BILLITER ST., LONDON, E.C.

PETROL CONSUMPTION ON THE ARIEL CAR.

An owner writes

"I think I have got the carburation of my 15 h.p. as near perfect as possible. Yesterday I ran 81 miles at least, including a run to Southend and back on three gallons of petrol. This works out at 27 miles to the gallon. We went down a hilly, twisty route, via Brentwood, Billericay and Rayleigh, in 1hr. 40mins., and back with the wind in 1hr. 35mins., 38 miles each way, three passengers. I drove easily, letting her sprint on the straight pieces."

1905 MODELS. 15—18 h.p., 18—22 h.p., 22—25 h.p., 30—35 h.p.

Booklet "Ariel Achievements," post free on request. Free trials at London Showrooms.

THE ARIEL MOTOR CO., Ltd.,
127—130, LONG ACRE, W.C.

81 MILES ON 3 GALLONS, 27 MILES TO THE GALLON

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE approaching summer toilettes have rarely been so fascinatingly graceful and charming. I have seen several most delightful gowns destined for seaside and river wear, all most simply but artistically designed and carried out in deliciously cool and refreshing colourings. This is decidedly an Englishwoman's most advantageous season of the year, for I always think our English type of beauty looks its best in light and dainty colours, especially our young girls, who have such an indescribable air of freshness and charm, rarely met with elsewhere. Certainly the gowns this year promise to be most picturesque.

Some sweet muslins, and embroidered lawns in white and delicate tints, that I saw the other day, were being made for river wear, and are admirably adapted to show off the lines and curves of women who indulge in the healthy and becoming pastime of punting. These were charming in their simplicity, with full, gracefully flowing skirts and fitting draped bodices, with dainty Indian muslin fichus, caught carelessly together with knots of ribbons or bunches of flowers to correspond with the trimmings of the hats, the one in cream embroidered lawn, and the other in tiny white and black check muslin. These are for a well-known puntist who passes her summer at this enjoyable and healthy pastime, and her charmingly developed figure is a welcome sight indeed as she glides past.

For present wear, Mancus of 9, New Bond Street is once more months ahead of other firms in introducing novelties. He has, amongst other gowns, a very fine white faced cloth costume, with full skirt and the new "Mandarin" coat, which is one of the latest designs, trimmed with Irish lace. The front falls straight, and has long wide shaded ribbons which tie at the neck. The black velvet hat and white ostrich plumes make a pleasing contrast to the dead white of the gown.

Another new creation of his is the corselet skirt, which gives the effect of the "princesse" robe, and is moulded to the figure. The pretty short bolero and new sleeve are very quaint and becoming. This is made in dark blue faced cloth; but, carried out in canary cloth with amethyst trimmings, was most novel and artistic, and has been immensely admired.

A CHARMING COSTUME IN WHITE FACED CLOTH.
(Mancus, New Bond Street.)

China blue is one of the favourite new shades of blue, which is being very much used just now, and is trimmed with pale rose colour. The combination is very popular. White will, as usual, be very much in evidence; also all the pastel shades. Black and white are always seen, but as the summer grows nearer the white and pale tints predominate.

In reference to the increasing demand for corsets for gentlemen, one correspondent, who signs himself "Small Waist," and has the courage to own that he has worn corsets for fifteen years and feels the benefit therefrom, asks for further information on the subject. I can only say that for evening dress a great many men are wearing these "health supports," and I am told, when once they get accustomed to them, they cannot do without them, for they find such comfort in the wearing of them that they adopt them entirely and dispense with suspenders altogether. Independently of the comfort, they are undoubtedly an improvement to the figure, and reduce corpulency. For men whose occupations necessitate much standing, these supports are really invaluable, as they do away with the inclination to stoop, and they straighten their shoulders and back unconsciously, and find both their digestion and appearance materially improved. If "Small Waist" would like to see the "health supports" I mention and compare them with his "corsets," I will give him the address with pleasure where the same can be seen and made to measure.

The old superstition that opals are unlucky seems to be dying out, for this is decidedly the favourite "stone" just now, both for men and women. An evening dress that was being made for a very special occasion had the bodice studded with these precious stones, and I hear that the jeweller who supplied them had been collecting them for some time, so as to get them all the same size and shape. Jewels and lace of all descriptions are the favourite trimmings for evening bodices. For day wear embroideries, both self and multi-coloured, are very much used for dressy occasions. For morning wear simplicity is the keynote.

At last we have adopted the practical short skirt, even on dressy occasions. In fact, so much has it become the fashion that, in describing some of the toilettes worn at Kempton Park, one of the daily papers mentioned one lady who wore a "short blue serge skirt"—I trust for the lady's sake this was not her "only" article of clothing. There were some very elegant white cloth and serge dresses worn, and plain voiles, trimmed with the same colour silk strappings, were much en evidence, with the inevitable feather boas and lace scarves. As for the flowers on the hats, seen en masse from above, they resembled huge flower-beds; they certainly made a gay impression, but this rather exaggerated mode makes the head look a little overweighted. However, we must adhere to the extreme of fashion in this, I suppose. A charming Directoire coat in stone grey, with its many caped collars and linings of reseda green satin, looked very chic on a well-known Frenchwoman, who knew how to wear this delightful garment, and attracted much attention. The new Russian net flouncings for renovating silk under-skirts are very practical, and in black with coloured velvet ribbons are a very welcome change for wet and doubtful days, and if not worn too long will stand much hard wear, too.

R. D.

(From a photograph specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

From
HUMBER, LTD., BEESTON (Notts) & COVENTRY.

If this is on your New Bicycle,
It's All Right.

DEPOTS:
LONDON (Cycles and Motor Cycles)—32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.; (Motor Cars)—13, Cambridge Place, Paddington, W.
LIVERPOOL—73, Bold Street.
BIRMINGHAM—4, Victoria Square.
SOUTHAMPTON—27, London Road.
MANCHESTER—5, Deansgate.
NOTTINGHAM—Grey Friar Gate.

£8 8s. to £16 16s.

DEWAR'S WHISKY

A GUID AULD SCOTCH DRINK

"The House for Veils."
Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,
The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .
98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,
famous for
The Royal Crescent Veil,
a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.
9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.
The latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return—no trouble after selecting.

HOLIDAYS ON THE RHINE.

BY THE
Royal British Mail Route
VIA HARWICH
AND HOOK of HOLLAND.
Daily (Sundays included).
Send post-card to the Continental Manager, G.E. Ry., Liverpool Street Station, London, E.C., for descriptive illustrated pamphlet (free).

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS
For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.
INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.
8, 14, and 33 stamps.
G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.
Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.
Loans of £30 to £5,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.
2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.
DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "
Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.
A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham

The "Country Life" Library.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS.
THIRD EDITION.
NOW READY.
By E. T. COOK, Editor of "The Garden," Author of "Trees and Shrubs for English Gardens."
Price 12/6 Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Preserve your Teeth!
BY USING FRAGRANT
FLORILINE

It imparts a
FRAGRANCE TO THE BREATH
that is rare and delightful.
IT PREVENTS ALL TARTAR
and COMPLETELY ARRESTS DECAY.
IS THE CHOICEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.
PRICE Per bottle 2/6 in case.

FLORILINE TOOTH-POWDER.
For use with or without FLORILINE.
1/- per large Jar.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. THE ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd., Proprietors,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE
TEOFANI'S
HIGH-CLASS
CIGARETTES.
TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.
TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

BIRKBECK BANK
ESTABLISHED 1851.
Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.
Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE KING'S MENU.

SALADE DE SAUMON A LA PARMENTIER.

For a pound and a-half of cold cooked salmon make half a pint of mayonnaise or mavonnaise verte, meanwhile letting the fish—cut into neat pieces free from skin and bone—marinade in a little fresh olive oil, vinegar, pepper, and salt. When the sauce is ready (and it should only be prepared just before the salad is to be served, or the oil in it will become rank if exposed to the air long beforehand), arrange the fish in a dome shape in the centre of a flat china dish, mask it with the mayonnaise, and arrange round a garnish of small olive shapes cut from new potatoes, cooked carefully, and allowed to get cold before using. Some people like the fish mixed with shredded cos lettuce heart leaves as well as the potato garnish.

PETITS POULETS AUX LEGUMES NOUVEAUX.

Truss two small spring chickens as for roasting, dust them over with a shallot, and season them inside with salt and powdered rosemary. Have ready a large casserole (if an earthenware one is used one can get them for 2s. or so each at Shoolbred's, Tottenham Court Road, W.C.), melt three ounces of butter or well clarified beef dripping in it, then fry the chickens in this till lightly coloured, turning them about that they may be evenly done. Now pour off the fat, add sufficient good stock, mixed with a spoonful or two of light wine if possible, to reach halfway up the chickens, put the cover on the casserole, and stew gently in the oven till done, basting them from time to time. Meantime have ready some carefully-cooked green peas, small olive shapes of young carrots and turnips, and when the chickens are done these can either be added to them in the casserole and served altogether in this, or the chickens can be dished up and the vegetables arranged round as a garnish, the stock thickened with roux, and a little Lemco added to enrich it, then sent to table separately in a sauce-boat.

CREME DE RHUBARBE.

Cut up a pound of rhubarb and simmer it with enough syrup (made by boiling sugar and water together first) to cover it, together with the zest of a lemon. When quite soft rub the fruit through a fine hair sieve, melt half an ounce of fine leaf gelatine in the syrup, mix with the pulped fruit smoothly, whip in two gills of cream, whipped till stiff first, then pour into a wetted mould, or, better still, one lined with kirsch-flavoured jelly. Set aside on ice till the cream is firm, then unmould carefully. It is a great improvement if a wineglassful of kirsch is mixed with the syrup.

OEUFS DE VANNEAU EN CROUSTADES.

Make some little oval cases of pastry (about 2-in. long), pipe them over with green butter, set a cold shelled hard-boiled plover's egg in each, and serve garnished with watercress.

COFFEE.

Owing to the average Englishwoman's carelessness and indifference where "Kitchen Physic" for her household is concerned, coffee does not at present enjoy the popularity amongst us as a national beverage that it deservedly does amongst Continental nations. Did the Englishwoman realise, as the Frenchwoman does, the value of practical dietetics in keeping a household healthy (and, in logical sequence nine times out of ten, "wealthy and wise" as well), she would have found out long ago that coffee is the best daily beverage possible for a great meat-eating nation like ourselves. The reason, of course, is that animal food, including eggs, greatly increases the introduction and formation of uric acid, and all the evils this gives rise to, and at the same time, unless a great deal of active outdoor exercise is taken, prevents its being thoroughly thrown out of the body. Though it has not yet been determined which of the constituents of coffee it is that has such a curative or preventive action on the formation of uric acid deposits, we have clear proof of its enormous value in this respect by the immunity from all uric acid troubles—which include, of course, gout, rheumatism, gravel, and kidney disease—enjoyed by both the French and the Turks. Both these nations are great coffee drinkers, and they ascribe their immunity in this respect to their free use of the coffee berry.

Against the great national scourge of drunkenness, coffee is also one of the most effective weapons we can use, for, as the late Sir Henry Thompson pointed out, the use of coffee is almost symbolical of temperate habits, and if only really good well-made coffee was as general here as it is in France, there is no doubt we should see a great decrease in the national drink bill. As all smokers blest with a fine palate know, the aroma of good coffee "marries" perfectly with the perfume of fine tobacco, while this is not the case with either wine or spirits. It is only to the dull, callous palates of the uncultured classes of Great Britain and her Northern neighbours that the association of spirits and tobacco appeals.

Hitherto, of course, one great bar to more general coffee drinking has been that few servants can be trusted to take the necessary trouble to properly roast, grind, and blend it. This difficulty can now be met, however, by getting the "Pybal Kope" Rouble brand coffee powder, "fresh and fresh," direct from the Melata Agents, 17, Devonshire Square, London, E.C. It is put up in very convenient square tin canisters at 2s. 4d., 1s. 10d., and 1s. 6d. per pound, while sample tins will be sent, post free, for 8d., 6d., and 4d. respectively.

I would counsel those who suffer from headache, due either to nerves or uric acid (a far more general cause of headaches, by the way, amongst those with any rheumatic or gouty tendency than people generally seem aware of), to try the effect of a cup of this coffee, really strong and hot, before resorting to other less harmless remedies, such as cocaine or phenacetin tablets. I first tried coffee for headaches on the advice of Dr. Fernie of "Kitchen Physic" fame, and it is certainly both pleasant and efficacious in many forms of it. He also recommends a well-made infusion of freshly-roasted and ground coffee as being often a better restorative than alcohol in fever, while for sufferers from constipation a small cup of it, black and strong, should be taken first thing on awaking instead of the nerve-destroying matutinal tea.

A LITTLE LUNCHEON FOR MAY.

SALADE DE SAUMON A LA PARMENTIER.

PETITS POULETS AUX LEGUMES NOUVEAUX.

CREME DE RHUBARBE.

ŒUFS DE VANNEAU EN CROUSTADES.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

GATEAU AUX FRUITS A LA CHANTILLY, ETC. (Scarlet Pimpernel). — For the cake you can use any nice cake mixture, one of the white ones flavoured with orange or almond being particularly nice, as is also a chocolate or coffee cake. Also you can obviously use small individual cakes instead of one large one, or make little cake cases, one for each person, out of slices from one of those great square cakes from which one buys pieces by the pound. Given a little time and trouble in preparing the meringue or icing wherewith to coat the cases, an almost endless variety of smart pretty sweets can be evolved by an amateur quite inexpensively. All the cuttings and odds and ends should be crumbled down and used for bavarois, puddings, or trifle. For a large cake cut the top off a nice cake and with a cutter stamp out the inside of the bottom part of it, to make a case with walls from three-quarters to an inch and a quarter thick all round and at the bottom; the thinner walls for a small cake, the thicker ones for a big one, as the weight of the filling of this will be so much greater. For the meringue to coat it with, one of four eggs and eight ounces of sugar will coat a good-sized cake. The whites must be whipped (not forgetting to add a pinch of salt) till so stiff that the whisk can be lifted clean out of them, or till they can be cut through with a knife. If not beaten long enough the meringue will be tough, as it will be if the oven was too hot. Pipe the meringue round the cake case, then stand in a slow oven till a pale biscuit colour, sprinkling icing sugar over the meringue just before it is quite done. It is then set aside till cold, and when wanted for table the case can be filled according to taste with a simple compôte or macedoine of fruit, a fruit salad, or a more or less rich fruit fool lightly iced, or to which has been added from a quarter to half an ounce of melted fine leaf gelatine for every pint of fool. Again, you can use ice cream or sorbet for the filling, or a Coupe Jacques mixture, i.e., layers of two kinds of ice with between them shredded nuts, glacé or fresh fruit that has been marinaded first in wine or liqueur, and mixed with walnuts or pistachios. At this time of year a simple but very nice filling is made by peeling some Tangerine oranges, dividing these into sections, freeing these from pith and skin, sprinkling them well with maraschino syrup (1s. a large bottle from any good grocer or stores), putting these on ice and then filling the case with them just before it is to be served. Whipped cream, sweetened and flavoured to taste, piled on the top of whatever filling is chosen gives the cake the additional title of à la Chantilly, as the addition of a garnish of whipped cream does anything thus decorated. Thus if you have a gateau aux fraises (i.e., a cake case coated with either icing or meringue then filled with a strawberry compôte) and you put some whipped cream on the top your cake then becomes a gateau aux fraises à la Chantilly. For the icing or glacé, suppose you have a white cake and an apricot fool or compôte for its filling, make an apricot glacé to coat the cake thus: Stir together on the stove four ounces of cane icing sugar with a tablespoonful of abricotine liqueur or noyeau syrup, and a drop or two of apricot yellow colouring, till warm and smooth, then use to coat the cake. With the orange filling given above you could use an orange glacé made by stirring a tablespoonful of strained orange juice with the four ounces of cane icing sugar and a drop or two of yellow colouring, till warm and smooth, then use.

GELEE D'ORANGE (Hawthorn).—In making this or any other jelly whose appearance depends on its clear brilliancy, be very careful that the pan it is made in, the scale plate, the measure, the jelly bag or straining cloth, and the mould itself are all absolutely free from the slightest speck of grease or dust, and, moreover, that the gelatine (which must be the fine leaf kind) is not touched with hot or greasy hands, as carelessness in any of these respects will prevent the jelly clearing properly. This understood, put into a delicately clean pan, sufficiently large to be only half full when all the ingredients are in, a pint of water, three gills of strained orange juice, and one gill of strained lemon juice, seven or eight ounces of loaf sugar, and an ounce and a-half of best leaf gelatine, and stir this all together over the fire till the sugar and gelatine are quite dissolved, but do not let the mixture become anything like boiling. Now add to it the whites and broken up shells of two eggs, and whip steadily till the mixture is not far off boiling, when stop whipping at once, when scum will begin to work to the top, and the mixture is allowed to boil for about five minutes, after which it is drawn to the side of the stove to stand for another five minutes before straining. Pour a quart of boiling water through the jelly bag or cloth before passing the jelly through it. When this has been done and the jelly cooled a little, stir in a gill or a gill and a-half of orange brandy, rum, or wine to taste, pour into the mould and put aside, preferably on ice, till set. If this jelly is required for filling a border mould, or for lining moulds for bavarois, creams, etc., increase the gelatine to two ounces.

SYBARITE.

Digitized by Google

'DAREN' BREAD.

Awarded 37 HONOURS.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray cost of postage.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY OF SPORT.

SHOOTING.

(In Two Vols.)

Edited by Mr. HORACE G. HUTCHINSON.

Price 25/- Nett. (12/6 Nett per Vol.)

THE BREEDING AND REARING OF PHEASANTS, PARTRIDGES AND WILD DUCK.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Feel Baby's Flesh

A Frame-Food Baby has very firm flesh, because Frame-Food is rich in the proteids, potash, and phosphorus from wheat.

These are the Flesh Formers.

Now most infant foods are too fattening. They make babies Flabby.

This is unhealthy, because too much fat uses up Reserve Strength. The best test is—Feel Baby's Flesh.

You can tell a Frame-Food Baby.

He has fine limbs.

Because Frame-Food feeds the bones as well as the flesh.

Mothers say so, and so do Medical Authorities. Write to-day for book containing mothers' letters and medical opinions. This book gives much important advice about the care of children and will be a REAL HELP to you as a mother.

We will forward a free sample tin if you will send a penny stamp but please mention this magazine. Or get a 16-oz. tin, price 1s., from your grocer or chemist to-day, and start at once to give your child firm flesh, firm legs, and a firm hold on life. Address—

FRAME-FOOD

The Famous Factory, Southfields, London, S.W.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

The Coffee of the Epicure.

| Price per lb. | Samples post free |
|---|---|
| 2/4 | 8d. |
| 1/10 | 6d. |
| 1/6 | 4d. |

ASTOUNDING OFFER.

Just send a postcard and we will forward, post free 6d., A ¼lb. PACKET of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.

The ROUBLE COFFEE Co., 17B, Devonshire Square, LONDON, E.C.

ROUBLE COFFEE

Don't spoil your face with bad soap. Use only Williams' Shaving Soap.

Williams' Shaving Sticks and Tablets sold everywhere. Trial sample for 1d. stamp to pay postage. Write for free booklet, "How to Shave."

The J. B. Williams Co., 65 Great Russell St., London.

BORWICK'S

5 GOLD MEDALS

FOR MAKING BREAD, CAKES & PASTRY

BAKING POWDER

GUARANTEED PURE & WHOLESOME

TOOTH-ACHE

CURED INSTANTLY BY

BUNTER'S NERVINE

Prevents Decay. Saves Extraction Sleepless Nights Prevented.

Neuralgic Headaches and all Nerve Pains removed by BUNTER'S NERVINE. All Chemists, 1s. 1½d., or on receipt of stamps to 13, St. George Street, Norwich.

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

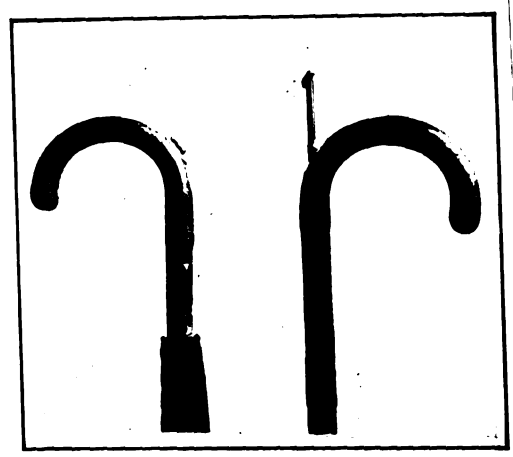
THE first of the corridor express trains, which the Caledonian Railway Company have for some time been engaged in building for service between Glasgow and Edinburgh, along the main line north to Aberdeen, has just been completed. The idea aimed at by the company was to provide for the large and constantly-increasing traffic on their system, between the capitals of the east and west and the Granite City, on a sumptuous scale hitherto locally unknown. In carrying out the project, advantage has been taken of all modern improvements that make for increased comfort, so that the train possesses quite a number of noteworthy and novel features.

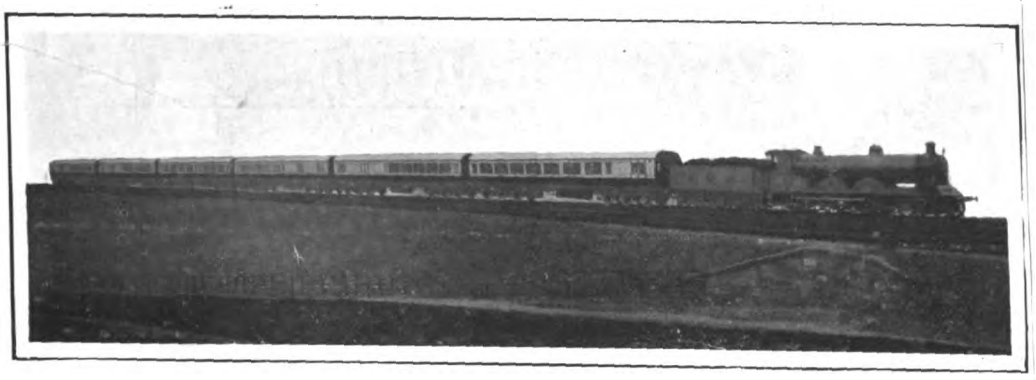
MESSRS. C. A. CARLIN, LIMITED, have just issued an interesting and well-illustrated booklet dealing with Havana and its cigar industry. As far back in the world's history as 1492 Havana tobacco was first introduced to the notice of Europeans, but between the quaint pipes and unprepared leaves then used and the delicious and aromatic cigars such as Messrs. Carlin sell, there is a wide difference. "Havana cigars," we are told in this booklet, "should be smoked slowly, or otherwise the combustion will be imperfect, and the greater part of that delicate aroma which belongs to a good Havana cigar is lost." Which is as good and sound advice as Hamlet gave to the players.

WITHIN the short space of a year Perrier, the French natural sparkling table water, has established a great reputation in Great Britain. It has lately been honoured with a Royal Warrant of appointment to H.M. the King, is supplied to the House of Commons, and is prominent in all the best clubs, restaurants, and hotels. Perrier is sparkling in the full sense of the word with its own pure natural gas, is very delicately mineralised, is crisp and invigorating with a very agreeable sub-acid flavour, has digestive properties of a high order, and mixes with wines—especially white wines—and spirits to perfection. A sample case of Perrier, containing two large, two small, and two quarter bottles, will be forwarded, carriage paid, on receipt of a P.O. for 2s., addressed to the London office of Perrier (Sample Department), 45 and 46, New Bond Street, London, W.



A BOON TO RACE-GOERS.
A combined stick and pencil case, invented and produced by Messrs. Brigg and Sons.

FOR those who attend race-meetings, and they are numerous indeed in these days, a new stick has recently been invented and put on the market by Messrs. Brigg and Sons. As may be seen by the illustration on this page, the cane or umbrella, as the case may be, is leather-covered, and into the handle of this is set a case for pencil With the cane hanging on the arm, the race-goer has a writing implement ready to his hand, and the saving of time and worry will no doubt be appreciated. Messrs. Brigg, who have been established since 1836, are well known as manufacturers of walking sticks, driving whips, crops, etc., and their new departure should meet with generous support. Their present temporary premises are 5, St. James's Street during rebuilding.



CORRIDOR TRAIN ON THE CALEDONIAN RAILWAY.
This popular North British railway company have recently been adding some very comfortable and luxurious carriages to their rolling-stock.

"HAVANA AND ITS CIGAR INDUSTRY."
An illustration in Messrs. C. A. Carlin's new booklet.

A MOST unusually large number of marriages have taken place lately, or are announced for the month of June; and as if to fit in with this burst of matrimonial ardour, Messrs. Oetzmann and Co. of 62-79, Hampstead Road are offering a most exceptional opportunity to all young couples to furnish their new homes at a very small outlay. Messrs. Oetzmann have recently purchased for £35,000 the whole of the stock of Messrs. Norman and Stacey, Limited, of Tottenham Court Road, which they are in turn offering for sale at vast reductions, varying from 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. off the original prices. Honeymooning couples should send for the fully-illustrated catalogue which Messrs. Oetzmann have prepared, and which will be forwarded post free on application; for what better occupation could a young couple find than making their choice, at their leisure during their holiday, of the best kind of furniture for the residence to which they are going to return? The stock offered for sale includes everything required for the complete furnishing of a house, whether small or great; and the reductions on their beautiful collection of artistic furniture are unprecedented in every department.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. MR. TREE.
EVERY EVENING AT 8.30.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
A new play in three acts, adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 2.30.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.30.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM.
Lessee and Manager: MR. FRANK CURZON.
To-night at 8.45.
MR. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
HENRY LOWENFELD, Sole Proprietor.
TOM B. DAVIS, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. GATTI & CHARLES FROHMAN.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. HITCHINS.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Open 12 noon to 11 p.m.
Admission 1s. Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.
In the QUEEN'S COURT GALLERIES.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping and Fishery Sections.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of All Naval Events from the 15th to the 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
NAVAL AND SHIPPING EXHIBITION.
In the EMPRESS HALL. "WITH THE FLEET."
LIFE IN A CRUISER. "WITH THE FLEET."
The Handy Man at Work. "WITH THE FLEET."
The Handy Man at Play. "WITH THE FLEET."
L'Entente Cordiale "WITH THE FLEET."
Saluting French Squadron. "WITH THE FLEET."
Gun and Cutlass Drills. Storm at Sea.
"WITH THE FLEET." LIFE IN A CRUISER
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work,
DEATH OF NELSON.
West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes.
Great CANADIAN INDIAN VILLAGE.—Chiefs, Artisans, Squaws, and Papooses. Hall of Monarchs Voyage in a Submarine.
Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights
Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture Switchback. Chutes.
EXQUISITE ILLUMINATED GARDENS.
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. Timothy Davies | 247 |
| The March of Events | 248 |
| On the Links | 254 |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 259 |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 260 |
| The Parisians of Paris—Prima-donnas' Husbands | 262 |
| Parisian Players | 263 |
| The American Lawn Tennis Challengers, by J. Parmly Paret | 264 |
| Plays and Players | 265 |
| Under the Burgee | 266 |
| Yachts of the Year | 267 |
| The Traveller—A Holiday on the London and North Western Railway | 268 |
| The Services | 270 |
| The Yearly Meeting of the Society of Friends—Leeds: May 23—June 1, 1905 | 271 |
| Notable Members of the Society of Friends | 272 |
| The Society of Friends at Leeds | 274 |
| The Cricket Season | 275 |
| The Racing Season | 276 |
| Literary Notes | x. |
| Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Oak-apple Day and its Associations | xii. |
| Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Fashions of To-day and To-morrow | xvi. |
| Paris Restaurants | xviii. |
| Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

No Breakfast Table complete without

EPPS'S

The Cream of Cocoas.

COCOA

The Most Nutritious and Economical.

MEDICAL GALVANISM

HAS CONQUERED some of the most obstinate complaints after all other remedies have failed.

HALE'S IMPROVED ELECTRIC BELTS and BATTERIES for wearing next the body without blistering or injuring the skin. These appliances are PERFECT GENERATORS OF ELECTRICITY, and are most comfortable in wear. Price One Guinea.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, and GOUT are speedily REMOVED by this powerful Agent.

ELECTRIC BELT and SUSPENSOR, price 42s., for MEN, for VARICOCELE, Nervous Debility, and Exhaustion, Bladder Weakness, etc.

Pamphlets Gratis. Consultations Free.

HALE & SON, Medical Galvanists,
117, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Prevents the Hair from falling off.

Restores Gray or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no unpleasant odour.

IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin, or even white linen.

Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

Ask your Chemist or Hair-Dresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the . . .

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG CO., Ltd.,
33, Farringdon Road, London, E.C.

SULPHOLINE SKIN LOTION.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches,

Entirely fade away.

WHELPTON'S PURIFYING PILLS

For Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Sea Sickness.

INVALUABLE FOR LADIES.

8, 14, and 33 stamps.

G. WHELPTON, 4, Crane Court, Fleet St., London.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.

Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.

Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date.

First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

CANARY ISLANDS.

TENERIFFE
(PORT ORATAVA).

THE ENGLISH

Grand Hotel,

Over 200 Rooms. Climate and situation unrivalled. Beautiful gardens and grounds. Pure Water. Electric light. Lawn tennis. Near golf links.

Apply to the Agents—
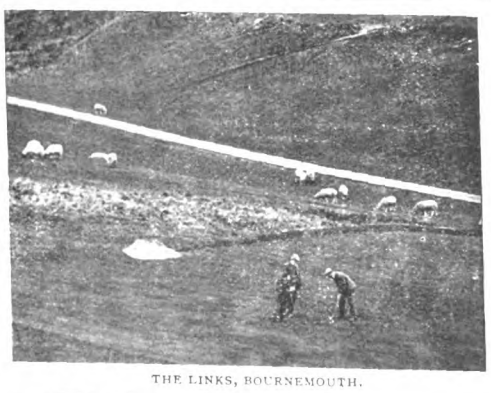
Messrs. SINCLAIR, HAMILTON & CO.,
17, St. Helen's Place, London, E.C.



THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.
Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.
Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.
Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

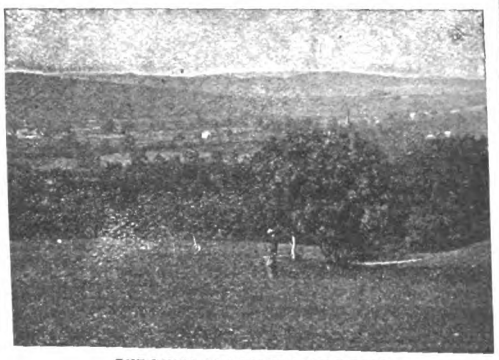
TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.
J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"T.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.



THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.
THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.
A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.
Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads.
Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.
Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.
Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.
New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,
Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.
To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.
Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.
Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.
SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.
Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.
Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 10s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY,
Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months.

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Digitized by Google

"SANALENE"

THE LATEST BRITISH PRODUCTION.

Artistic, Sanitary, Durable.

Gives an unsurpassed Enamel Finish to all surfaces on which it is applied

In White or Colors as desired.

"SANALENE"

Can be supplied also in egg shell or flat.

Avoid Lead Paints which are Poisonous.

WASHES AND POLISHES TO PERFECTION.

WILL LAST A LIFETIME.

Ask your Architect to specify "Sanalene."

See that your Decorator uses "Sanalene."

For further particulars, apply by letter to

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL, Ltd., New Cross, S.E.

THE MISSES

H. & I. WOOLLAN

(Under Royal Patronage)

are showing a

UNIQUE

Collection of

Antiques.

Chippendale, Sheraton, and Hepplewhite Furniture. . . Worcester and Lowestoft Services. Lace, Glass, etc.

Showrooms: First Floor.

28, BROOK STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

Old Brass Stand and Lamp.

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE ESTABLISHED CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, SCIATICA.

"I should like to tell the public of the good St. Jacobs Oil has done me. When quite a boy I had a severe attack of Rheumatism, and could only walk with the aid of crutches, and in consequence I was obliged to give up my work. My parents used nothing but St. Jacobs Oil, and in a very short time I was again able to follow my occupation, and walk morning and night to work and home again, without using the crutches. I have felt nothing of the Rheumatism since, until last November, when I got very wet; but I am glad to say that with a few appliances of your Oil I was again set free.

"(Signed) W. DEACON,
"Rose Cottage, Bradford Street, Eastbourne."

January 12th, 1905.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

CONQUERS PAIN!

TRAVEL BY

WEST COAST ROUTE

. . BETWEEN . .

ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Trossachs Pier. via Callander.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

Edinburgh.—Princes Street Station and Hotel.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE

LONDON (EUSTON), BIRMINGHAM, LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER

WITH

GLASGOW (CENTRAL), EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.), ABERDEEN, INVERNESS, OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

Digitized by Google

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AT LEEDS.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 434. SATURDAY, MAY 27th, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. TIMOTHY DAVIES, L.C.C.

Ex-Mayor of Fulham, and Prospective Liberal Candidate for the Borough.

(See page 259.)

Digitized by Google

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY. THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 434. Saturday, May 27, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND EMPIRE DAY.—Empire Day this year is to be spent by King Edward as he would wish to spend it, among his soldiers, and at Aldershot he will inspect the troops of the Army Corps at work in the field. The open country between Woolmer Forest in Hants and Godalming in Surrey is to be the scene of a great mimic campaign, and the main interest will doubtless lie in the neighbourhood of Tilford and Waverley Abbey, where the King proposes to spend the day. Waverley Abbey was founded in 1128 by William Giffard, Bishop of Winchester, and passed a peaceful and useful existence as a monastery until Henry VIII. literally "played the old Harry" with these establishments, after which time it became the home of many notable people in succession. Tilford is a quaint and quiet wayside village, more notable for its stone bridges and its appearance under the name "Milford" in Edna Lyell's "We Two" than for visits of Royalty. But no doubt the loyal Tilfordians will know how to honour Empire Day with their Sovereign in their midst.

THE KING AS AN ADMIRAL.—The interchange of compliments between King Edward and King Alfonso has put the seal upon the friendly relations between Great Britain and Spain, which have led up to the eagerly-expected visit of the youthful monarch to this country. King Edward is already an Admiral à la suite of the German Navy, and holds rank as General and Colonel in most of the Armies of the world, and he will be proud to find himself an Admiral in the Navy with which in the early days of sea power we were so often and so honourably engaged. The fighting traditions of the British Navy prior to Trafalgar, it may almost be said, are those of the Navy of Spain, and there are names of Spaniards, officers, gentlemen, and seamen, in every sense of the words, that rank with those of Britain's sea heroes in the pages of Naval history. For King Alfonso, too, there is honour in his new connection with that Army of ours, which is a perennial subject for conversation with the fireside politicians, but which, when it becomes a case of deeds, not words, knows how to do its duty to-day as it did in the Peninsula, and as it did in all other parts of the world to which it has been sent. History is written, and old enemies are new friends. And the last state of this world is very much better than the first.

THE ROYAL RIVER.—Old Father Thames this year must put on his most smiling aspect, for the river season will be the most brilliant that has been known for many years past. The King's interest in all the pursuits of his subjects and his respect for old customs has led to a revival of the glories of Virginia Water, which has for some years past been sadly neglected, and this year he proposes to reintroduce the Virginia Water picnic with which the Ascot Race Week was formerly closed. And as a result, Windsor and its environs will be more crowded than ever for the great Ascot Sunday. To name the people who have taken houses for the season on the banks of the Thames would be to reprint a miniature Debrett, and lower down the river, in that part where the habitués are not pleasure seekers, but money makers, the Prince of Wales will, about the middle of June, inaugurate the steam-boat service. The river pageants which delighted our forefathers and made the Thames at London Bridge quite a gay sight on occasions no longer obtain, but the procession of thirty boats from Westminster to Greenwich, with the Prince of Wales's "flag-ship" in the van, should attract large crowds. And there is this to be said of the new vessels, they are more useful than ornamental. The reverse held good of the State barges in which the Princes of Wales of olden times made their progress on the river.

Gabrielli.

THE COLONIAL TROOPS' MEMORIAL.

Designed by Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and unveiled in St. Paul's Cathedral this week by the Prince of Wales.

THE PRINCE AND THE TRAMS.—When he inaugurates the municipal service of steamboats on the Thames next month, the Prince of Wales will travel from Westminster to Greenwich by water, but the return journey will be made by land, transferring his flag, so to speak, to one of the London County Council trams, and thus returning through South London. The Prince, it will be remembered, inaugurated the system from Westminster to Tooting, and on that occasion, being accompanied by the Princess and the elder children, he insisted on paying fares, much to the amusement of those accompanying him. But it is not generally known that both the Prince and Princess have before this incident had experience of riding in public conveyances, and if he could not show enough 'bus tickets to win a prize in a Tit Bits competition, he could probably show more than any other member of the Royal Family. And his interest in all that concerns the welfare of the poorer neighbourhoods of the metropolis is once more shown by his determination to inspect the new municipal workmen's dwellings in Bermondsey. When we have the poor housed in the manner the King and the Prince have been working hard to see them housed there will be less work for the hospitals.

Digitized by Google

THE QUEEN'S MEDITERRANEAN TOUR.

Ellis, Malta.

LANDING AT THE CUSTOM HOUSE, MALTA.

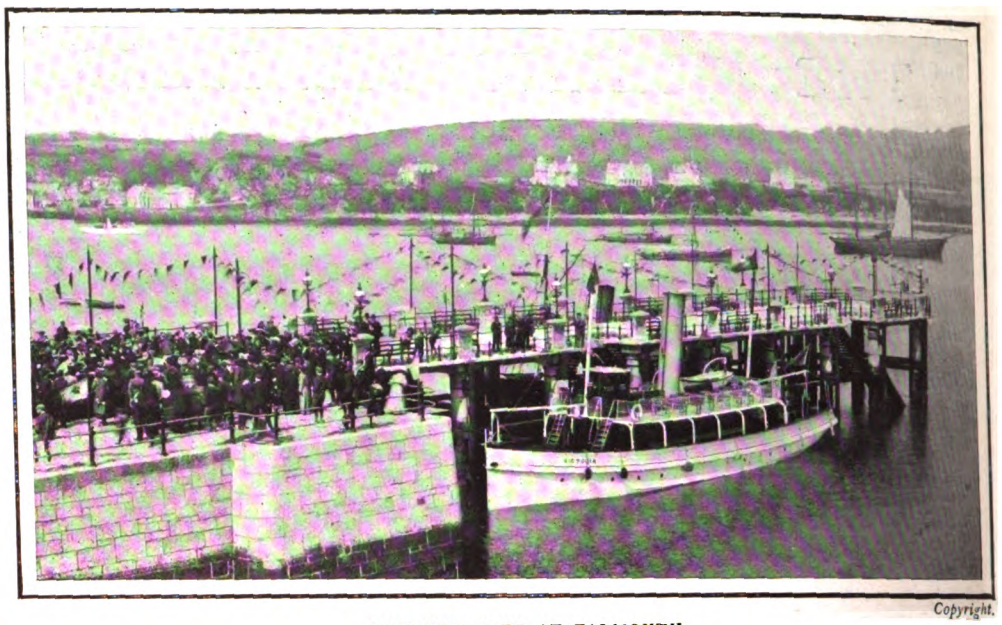
The trip which Queen Alexandra has been taking in the Mediterranean in the "Victoria and Albert," with Princess Victoria, concluded with visits to Malta and Gibraltar, at both of which places she was loyally received. The tour has lasted over six weeks, and among the places visited have been Lisbon, Marseilles, Algiers, and Athens. With the return of the Queen to London the social season may be said to be in full swing, and a very busy season it promises to be for the Royal family.

Digitized by Google

THE AMERICAN EMBASSY.—Next week the new American Ambassador will enter into possession of Dorchester House, which has been aptly described as one of the finest private mansions in London. It is by no means an old building, though it stands on the site and bears the name of a mansion which figured largely in the social history of two centuries. But the present house has played a large part in the social life of the past fifty years, and twice has been lent to the Crown for the reception of official foreign guests, at the time of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, and for King Edward's Coronation. The picture gallery is full of old masters, among them two Caraccis, which came with many others to England in the collection of the Duke of Lucca, Titians, Vandykes, and Murillos, and the collection is one of the finest in private hands in this country. The owner is, of course, Captain Holford, who has been equerry in waiting to the King since the beginning of the century, just as he was previously to the then Prince of Wales. The representative of the United States could not well find a more palatial residence than Dorchester House, or one in which he could better dispense the hospitality befitting the great country he represents.



Copyright.

THE NEW PIER AT FALMOUTH.

The progressiveness of Falmouth is well illustrated by the opening last week of the new Prince of Wales's Pier. This handsome structure will be a great boon to the town.

Hogg, Belfast.

A YACHT CLUB MOTOR MEET.

To open the yachting season with a motor hill-climbing competition is a very unusual proceeding, but the Royal North of Ireland Club, which adopted this procedure this year, had the most successful opening of its career.

COLONIAL MONUMENTS IN ST. PAUL'S.—The monument to the Colonial soldiers who fell in the South African War is the first of its kind to be placed in St. Paul's Cathedral. It is in bronze, from a beautiful design by the Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and at the unveiling ceremony this week by the Prince of Wales his guard of honour was a detachment of the King's Colonials, a corps unique in history. Not that there are no monuments to Colonials in the Cathedral. There are several, but they are to individuals. The first was a tablet to Captain A. Macnab, a Canadian, who was A.D.C. to General Picton at Waterloo, where they both fell. The next was a bust of William Bede Dalley, the statesman who despatched the Australian Contingent to the Soudan. The third was a bust of Sir John Macdonald, the maker of Canada. The monument to the Colonial soldiers who fell in South Africa has, therefore, noble precedents. It, however, honours all the Colonies equally, marking that epoch-making event in the annals of the British Empire, the gathering of all the British clans before the face of a common enemy on behalf of an Imperial interest.

THE "BREECHES" BIBLE. — Distinctive names have been given to a number of editions of the Bible, in consequence of curious misprints which have crept into them. But the copy of the "Breeches" Bible, which, by the will of Mr. Irving, a Windermere gentleman, has just passed into the possession of the King, has historical connections which make it doubly interesting. It formerly belonged to Henry Prince of Wales, eldest son of King James I., who died at the age of nineteen, and will be placed with the few remaining memorials of that Prince in Windsor Castle. Some of the departures from the sacred text which have given to these Bibles their curious apellations are, "Blessed are the placemakers" for peacemakers, and "The parable of the vinegar" for vineyard. Then, in addition, there are the "Treacle" Bible, which substituted Treacle for Balm, "the Wicked" Bible, which omits the negative in the Seventh Commandment, and the "Printer's" Bible in which David complains that "Printer's (princes) have persecuted me without cause."

Copyright.

AFTERNOON TEA AT RANELAGH.

Three polo matches were played at Ranelagh on Saturday last in the presence of a distinguished company, and the scene on the ground during the afternoon was a very brilliant one.

Digitized by Google

TWO NAVAL FUNCTIONS.

Graham.

THE LAUNCH OF THE BATTLE-SHIP "AFRICA."

On Saturday last the new battle-ship "Africa" was launched at Chatham by Lady Londonderry, in the unavoidable absence of Lady Salisbury, who had undertaken to perform the ceremony. The vessel is of the "King Edward VII." type, and is the seventh of the class to take the water. There have been several previous "Africa's" in the Navy, the most famous of which served with Lord Nelson at Trafalgar on the port beam of the "Victory," and nearly abreast the foremost ship of the enemy. When completed, the "Africa" will probably join her sister ships in the Atlantic Fleet.

Copyright.

SEAMEN AT GUN DRILL AT PORTSMOUTH.

A new feature is introduced this year into the gun drill which is annually exhibited by a squad from Whale Island at the Tournament at Islington. This is shown in the above illustration, where a narrow bridge is being negotiated by a gun team. As the gun, mounted on two wheels, is too large to be taken across the bridge, the piece has been unmounted, and slung on either side of one wheel, as shown in the illustration. The spare wheel is trundled across the bridge alone.

Digitized by Google

SUMMER HOLIDAYS.—It seems yet early to be talking of the holiday season. There is much to be gone through before the halcyon days (they seem such in anticipation) when the cares of office can be put aside are due, but for some people the days of May are the days when the summer holidays loom largest. And those people are the proprietors of boarding-houses in little seaside towns, not the large fashionable resorts which have a winter as well as a summer season, but the small places where cottages are the rule, and where there is certainly not more than one building pretentious enough to call itself an hotel. These early days of May see such a village waking, as it were, into new life. The mystic placard 'partments" reappears in the windows, which have once more been adorned with the best curtains, and in which the stuffed parrot in its glass case has made its reappearance as mysteriously as the swallows twittering in the eaves above. And the beach, which has been so long deserted to the waves, becomes once more studded with that wonderful contrivance the British bathing-machine and the boats, which will shortly be bearing gay parties of holiday-makers for an hour or more on the gentle billows of the summer sea, are luxuriating in the new coat of paint which is to draw the attention of the young man in the immaculate flannels who fancies himself as a seaman.

THE WEST INDIAN MAILS.—Mr. Lyttelton will find it difficult to convince plain business men in this country, and the Colonists in the West Indies, that the Colonial Office has done well in the matter of the mails. In the first place, it is not correct that the lowest tender is always the most advantageous. A hundred things have to be taken into consideration, which may make it desirable to accept a higher one. In the second place, there has been some leakage of information which it is to be hoped will be explained. Then there is the wider view of policy. It seems a little hard that the Colonies, who are still smarting from the withdrawal of the fleet and the garrisons, should be still further tried by tactless officials at home. There has been a lack of sympathy on the part of the Colonial Office with regard to the mails, which is keenly resented in the West Indies. When we remember that the United States is ready to profit by our mistakes, we shall not be content to know that someone has blundered, but must see that action is taken to prevent its recurrence.

LADY FARRAR.—Lady Farrar, who is on her way to Johannesburg to join Sir George, is one of the youngest and prettiest of the South African Colony in London. The daughter of an officer in the Indian Medical Service, she was married in 1892. Her husband is one of the leading magnates on the Rand. Though he lives part of the year in England, he is a member of the Legislative Council. In the South African War he took the field, and for a time was on the Staff of the Colonial Division, which did such good work under General Brabant. In recognition of his services he was made a D.S.O. in 1900. Sir George and Lady Farrar when in England live at Chicheley Hall, Bucks.

Kate Pragnell.

LADY FARRAR

Who is a daughter of the late Dr. Charles Waylen, I.M.S., and wife of Sir George Farrar, D.S.O., a member of the Legislative Council of the Transvaal. Sir George served with great distinction during the South African Campaign.

A PREMIER'S RECORD.—Mr. Seddon, who has just entered on the thirteenth year of his Premiership, has received many congratulations. He is one of the most picturesque figures in contemporary politics, the only Australasian statesman who has impressed the imagination of the world. His individuality is, however, sometimes a little overpowering. At present Mr. Seddon holds the Australasian record for length of service as Premier, but it was Sir John Forrest who broke the spell of political frivolity in the South Pacific. Until his ten years' administration of Western Australia promised better things, the changes of Government were so frequent in the various Colonies that older and wiser communities shook their heads; but in no part of the Empire, England not excepted, has a Prime Minister, under a democratic franchise, held office so long as the late Sir John Macdonald. He was in power eighteen years.

TREASURE TROVE.—The discovery of gold coins in Kensington, on land of which Mr. Justice Phillimore is ground landlord, has revived the ancient but ever-interesting discussion on treasure trove. London is a rich storehouse of treasure trove, and it would seem to have been so in the days of Edward I., for he decreed that coroners were to hold inquests where "any be slain, or suddenly dead or wounded, or where houses are broken, or where treasure is said to be found." Coroners are still expected to make enquiries where treasure is said to be found, and some of the most interesting lawsuits of recent years have been fought around hidden treasure. Two years ago, it may be remembered, the British Museum authorities had trouble over some Celtic gold relics—"votive offerings thrown into the sea to placate the sea-god of Ireland," as they poetically described them in their defence; but findings are not keepings, as more than one has found before this to his disadvantage.

Digitized by Google

THE STORY OF SEAMEN'S COSTUME.

AT THE ROYAL NAVAL AND MILITARY TOURNAMENT.

(Drawn for this paper by J. Jellicoe.)

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

THE Professional Tournament arranged by the Bushey Hall Golf Club will in many respects be looked back upon by players as well as promoters as being one of the principal events of the golfing year. Sixty picked professionals had been invited to compete in a seventy-two-hole stroke competition for money prizes amounting to £260—more than double the sum of money distributed at the Open Championship. Altogether there were eighteen cash prizes, with two special prizes of £10 each for the best eighteen holes returned on each day, and two special prizes of £5 each for the best thirty-six holes returned each day by an assistant or professional of not more than two years' standing. The first prize of £100 was won by Braid, with 294, who played splendid golf throughout the two days; the second, of £30, by Taylor, with 296; the third, of £20, by Herd, with 298. Much careful thought had evidently been given by the executive of the club to the arrangements for starting the competitors; and the time-table worked with smoothness. A large number of golfers visited the links in the course of the two days' play, and when the competition was brought to a close about five o'clock on Saturday evening there was a large crowd of spectators gathered at the home hole to see each couple finish. At the close the prizes were presented to the winners by Mrs. Hildebrand Harmsworth.

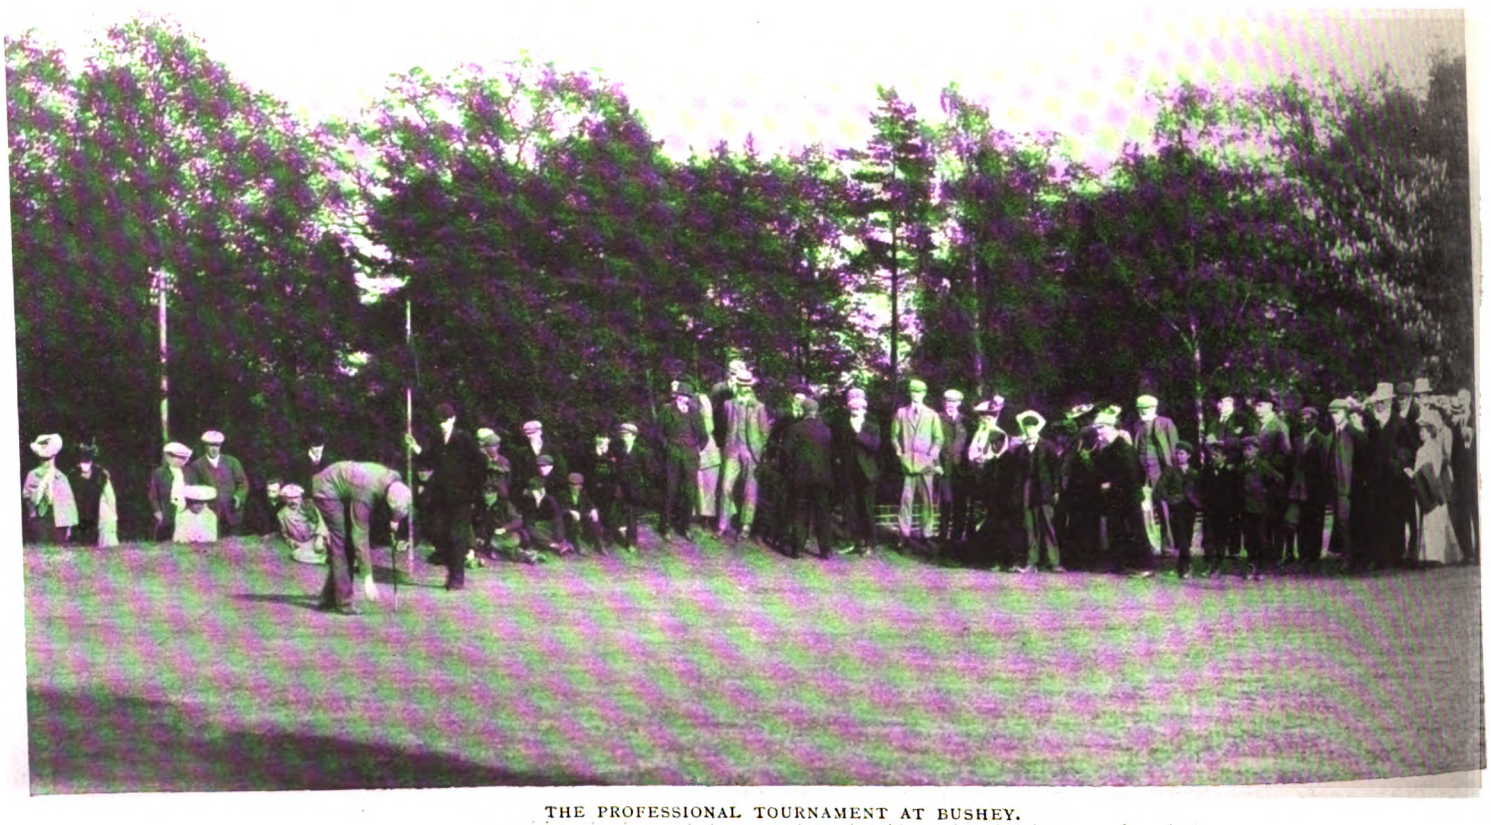
Perhaps the feature of the gathering was not so much Braid's dashing brilliancy, especially on the first day, as Taylor's marvellous steadiness throughout the strain of seventy-two holes. Braid compiled a score of 73, 71 (the record for the course), 74, and 76, while Taylor returned four cards of 74 each. At one time on Saturday it looked as if Taylor would win. At the first hole he drove beyond the green into the ditch, but playing out boldly he holed in 3, amid a round of applause. At the third he spared his approach up the hill. The ball caught the face, stopped dead, and rolled back into a hollow. He took 5 to this hole, which with a little better luck might have been an easy 4. Then at the sixth he sliced his approach, overran his third, missed a pretty long fourth, and got down in 5. Little checks and variations of this kind just hindered Taylor from equalling Braid's record score of 71 on Saturday afternoon, for if he had been able to save a couple of strokes more he would have tied with Braid, while the saving of three shots would have taken him from third place on the opening day to first. As it is, however, Taylor's achievement of sustained steadiness, despite all sorts of ups and downs, over two days' keen and strenuous play, stands out as the great feature of a notable gathering of professionals.

BUSHEY HALL TOURNAMENT.

Taylor, the winner of the second prize, with four fine scores of 74, putting on the 11th green.

* * *

The Bushey Hall course is one of attractive picturesqueness. It abounds in variety of hill and dale, and no two holes can be said to have the same character. The holes have been well laid out, and the bunkers have been ingeniously placed. It possesses the merit also of compactness, as was proved on Saturday, when groups of spectators hung about the converging putting greens and bunkers to see something like a panoramic view of the play both out and in. There was thus no need to follow a couple all the way round, for the crowd following Braid, Taylor, or Vardon was composed of a mingling of groups gathered at



THE PROFESSIONAL TOURNAMENT AT BUSHEY.

Braid, the winner of the first prize of £100, holing out his last putt.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

odd points of view all the way round. If the variety of the course cannot be gainsaid, neither can the exhilarating freshness of the air be doubted, for on Saturday the breeze smote the cheek as if coming from the sea. To see the finish of such a tournament as this, assuredly no better hole could be imagined on any golf course than the home hole at Bushey. The spectator stands on a plateau looking down into a valley intersected by a ditch. He can see the tee shot for the home hole come bounding down from the right, and he can watch the whole flight of the ball played in the second shot up on to the putting green at his feet. From this point also he can watch the groups following the leading players, and he can tell by the echo of the round of applause borne on the breeze that Braid, Taylor, Vardon, or Herd has executed a stroke out of a difficult lie which compels a burst of admiring encouragement. It is a beautiful course, obviously supervised by a body of golfers who know what the golfer most appreciates and give it to him.

* * *

The Amateur Championship has been opened with the playing of the International match between Scotland and England at Prestwick on Saturday. It is the fourth match that has been played, and this year, as at Sandwich last year, Scotland won over the thirty-six holes by 6 matches to 3. Mr. John Ball and Mr. R. Maxwell had a stiff match in the morning, for though the first-named was 4 down at one point he succeeded in halving the first eighteen holes. On the day's play, however, Mr. Maxwell won by 4 and 3. Mr. John Graham beat Mr. Herbert Fowler, who was entirely off his game, by 11 and 10; Mr. Hilton beat Mr. J. Robb by 3 and 2; Mr. S. H. Fry beat Mr. J. E. Laidlay by 5 and 4; Mr. Edward Blackwell beat Mr. H. Hambro by 9 and 8; Mr. R. Andrew beat Mr. Darwin by 7 and 6; Mr. Cecil Hutchison beat Mr. J. B. Pease by 2; Mr. C. E. Dick beat Mr. J. S. Worthington by 5 and 3; and the Hon. Osmund Scott beat Mr. R. Harris by 3 and 2.

* * *

One of the most successful ladies' meetings of the spring months has been the Open Competition at Farnham, on Monday, May 15 Organised by the hon. secretary, Mrs. Eggar, and the members of the men's committee, it introduced new features in the management of a large meeting, innovations which haply may become general, as they added to the interest of the play and the comfort of the player. Competitors who were members of recognised golf clubs were given a free entrance, a novel and welcome piece of generosity on the part of a club. When presented with their cards, players were at once asked whether they wished to put down their names for sweepstakes on the morning medal round and afternoon driving and approaching competitions, and they could also, on payment of one shilling, draw a player for another sweepstake. Each was given with the scoring card a separate and definite copy of local rules, and caddies had to be paid for before starting, thus avoiding all subsequent confusion. A splendid luncheon was served in a large marquee at the modest sum of two shillings, while the prizes presented by the Farnham Club, its president, Mr. G. F. Rommieu, and Mrs. Eggar, and distributed by Mrs. Ryle, wife of the Bishop of Winchester, were exceptionally handsome souvenirs of this first Ladies' Open Meeting on the new course.

* * *

The chief event of the medal round was the best aggregate score from any three members of one club, and was sent in by Winchester with 277, Guildford, Woking, Farnham, Wimbledon, Isle of Wight, and North Hants following in order of merit. The best scratch score was returned by Miss A. B. Pascoe. Miss G. Gowan and Miss Capel made the best under handicap. Miss Lane took the prize for the largest number of holes done in five or under. Mrs. Jillard won the driving and Miss A. Gowan and Miss Lane the approaching competitions. An excellent idea was a previous decision posted in the club regarding ties. A tie between competing clubs was decided by the score of one player from the teams. Nine holes were to be played for a medal round tie, and one hole for others. By this happy forethought for all possible and probable contingencies no one was at a loss what to do, and the committee of management, with Mrs. Eggar, who did not compete, but gave up her time to supervision, have every reason to congratulate themselves on a day whose stream of events ran smoothly and successfully to a close without one untoward event.

THE FARNHAM LADIES' OPEN MEETING.
A view of the Farnham Ladies' Club-house from the links.

FARNHAM LADIES' OPEN MEETING.
Miss Hotham, Captain of the Woking Ladies' Club.

THE FARNHAM LADIES' MEETING.
Miss Lane and her partner leaving the club for the 1st tee.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE IRISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

IN glorious weather the twelfth Irish Ladies' Championship Meeting took place at Portsalon, County Donegal. It was a great pity that there was such a small entry, as Portsalon is a perfectly ideal spot at which to hold a championship meeting. The links are all that can be desired, and are surrounded by such beautiful scenery that even if one plays badly the attractions of mountains and lake draw attention from the fact and administer consolation. The course, although not very long, is undoubtedly a difficult one, and every quality of good play is required to overcome the different bunkers, straightness above all things being an absolute necessity. The greens are natural, undulating, and very true, and the holes are of such varied and sporting character that they can never become monotonous.

The meeting began with a preliminary medal competition for two scratch prizes kindly presented by Colonel Barton, and the trophies took the form of two very pretty little shamrock pendants, one set in diamonds and one in pearls. The first place was tied for by Miss May Hezlet and Miss F. Hezlet returning the same score—87, the next best return being 96, made by Miss Tynte and Miss Dickson. It was decided that another eighteen-hole medal round should be played by the Misses Hezlet, and at the finish great amusement and excitement were caused, as the result was again a tie, the scores this time being 90. Another attempt was made, only five holes being played, and this time Miss May Hezlet managed to win, her sister getting into trouble and starting with an 8, which made it practically impossible for her to pull up on the narrow margin of five holes. A handicap sweep held in connection with the morning round was won by Miss Dickson, after playing off a tie with Miss Tynte. Both players are members of the North-West Club, and play for the Donegal County team.

On Tuesday the first round of the championship was started at 10.30 a.m. The best match was between Miss F. Hezlet and Miss Dickson, the former eventually winning by 3 up and 1 to play. Miss Issette Pearson suffered defeat at the hands of Miss L. Martin, the latter playing perfect golf. Miss M. E. Phillips and Miss M. Murray had a close struggle, victory resting with the former on the seventeenth green. Miss M. E. Stuart and Miss V. Hezlet had byes, while Miss May Hezlet won her match somewhat easily from Mrs. Knox. In the afternoon two very exciting matches took place, between Miss M. E. Phillips and Miss Tynte, and Miss M. E. Stuart and Miss F. Hezlet, both being carried to the twentieth green. At the eighteenth tee Miss Phillips was 1 up, and had a good chance for the match, but she failed to get down in two putts on the eighteenth green, and a tie was the result. On playing off both got good fours at the first hole, and at the second Miss Tynte missed her drive, made a splendid recovery, and eventually holed out in 5 to her opponent's 6, thus winning the hole and the match. Miss Stuart and Miss F. Hezlet had a most curious match. Miss Stuart led by 4 up at one point, but then Miss F. Hezlet won five holes in succession. Afterwards the play was more even, and by a little weak putting Miss Stuart threw away a couple of chances and left Miss F. Hezlet dormy at the eighteenth tee. The latter, however, missed her drive at the last hole, and Miss Stuart, being quick to seize the advantage, won the hole, and so tied the match. Both made good drives at the nineteenth, and halved in 4. At the twentieth Miss F. Hezlet missed her drive, but made a brilliant recovery and got down in 5, while Miss Stuart, having a series of bad lies, failed to halve, and so lost the match.

MISS FLORENCE HEZLET

Who is making a reputation as one of the best match players among the ladies.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Hezlet and Miss Murray had a close struggle, the latter winning on the nineteenth green. Miss Tynte and Miss F. Hezlet also had a good match, the latter being successful on the seventeenth green. And, finally, the three Misses Hezlet and Miss Murray were left in to play in the semi-final round. Miss Murray and Miss May Hezlet were opponents, and the first-named lost the match by 6 up and 5 to play. Miss V. Hezlet and Miss F. Hezlet had a close struggle for supremacy. The former led at the start, but lost coming home, and at the fourteenth tee was in the uncomfortable position of 4 down with 5 holes to go. From that point, however, she played a splendid

MIDLAND COUNTIES LADIES' TOURNAMENT AT HOLLINWELL, NOTTINGHAM.

Mrs. Blakesley driving; her partner watching the flight of the ball.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE ROYAL ST. GEORGE'S LINKS, SANDWICH.

(1) The club-house. (2) Mr. Eric Hambro, M.P., and Mr. Mure Fergusson crossing the bunker to the 7th hole. (3) Mr. Eric Hambro, M.P., the captain. (4) Mr. W. Ryder Richardson, the secretary of the club. (5) A fore caddie showing the line to a blind hole. (6) Mr. Hughes playing out of the rough at the "Maiden." (7) Mr. P. Hughes playing out of the bent.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

uphill game, reducing the lead to 1 up and 2 to play. Unfortunately she missed her drive at the seventeenth, and Miss F. Hezlet, making the most of the opportunity, won the hole and the match.

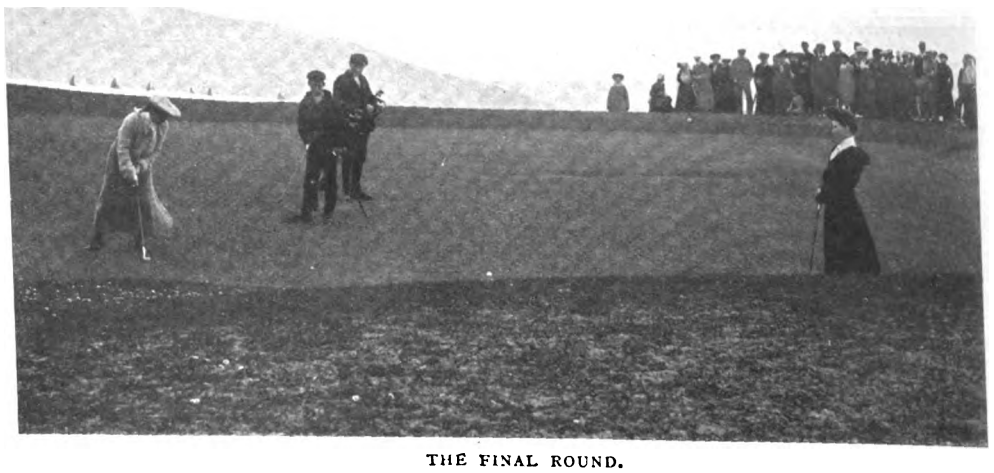
A number of spectators came from Buncrana and Derry to watch the final round between Miss May Hezlet and Miss Florence Hezlet. The weather was glorious, and an excellent match took place. They were all square at the turn, but coming home Miss May Hezlet gradually got the lead and stood 2 up and 5 to play—that number which is popularly supposed to be so unlucky. The fourteenth was halved in three, Miss F. Hezlet making a beautiful putt. The fifteenth fell to Miss F. Hezlet, her sister missing her approach. At the sixteenth a sudden squall and shower of rain came on. The wind caught Miss F. Hezlet's approach and blew it very much to the right into the river. Miss May Hezlet was on the green in 4, and finally gained the hole, making her dormy 2. At the seventeenth both got good drives, Miss May Hezlet's, however, being very much to the right, and in playing her second shot she pulled into the river, and so lost a stroke. Miss F. Hezlet was on the green in 4, and appeared to be practically certain of the hole; but Miss May Hezlet, in playing two more from about 30-yds. off, holed her approach and so snatched a half and the match, her sister just failing to get her putt down for the hole. Miss F. Hezlet had by far the hardest work during the meeting, as she was in the worst corner of the draw and had to encounter all the best players.

At the conclusion of the meeting the prizes were presented by Mrs. Barton. Miss May Hezlet received the championship cup, replica, and gold medal, Miss F. Hezlet a very pretty silver cup as runner-up, and Miss V. Hezlet and Miss Murray, as semi-finalists, smaller editions of Miss F. Hezlet's cup.

All the arrangements for the comfort of visitors and competitors were most ably carried out by Miss Leah Garrett and Colonel Barton, and both are to be congratulated on the successful result of their efforts. The meeting was one of the most successful and most enjoyable yet held.

On Thursday afternoon the final of the county team contest took place, and resulted in a win for County Donegal, their defeated adversaries being County Dublin. The members of the teams were as follows: County Donegal—Miss Dickson, Miss Tynte, Miss K. Gillies, and Mrs. Baird; County Dublin—Miss Martin, Mrs. Chaytor, and Miss Lane.

The 1906 Irish Ladies' Championship Meeting will be held at Newcastle, County Down. MAY HEZLET.



THE FINAL ROUND.

Miss Florence Hezlet putting in the Irish Ladies' Championship final against her sister, standing on the right of the green. The herring fleet is seen in the distance going seawards through Lough Swilly.

THE IRISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Hezlet family. The names, reading from left to right, are: Miss Violet Hezlet, Miss Florence Hezlet, Mrs. Hezlet, and Miss May Hezlet.

THE IRISH LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

Miss Florence Hezlet driving at one of the tees in the final round against her sister.

FIXTURES.

May 27.—Sundridge Park Monthly Medal Prize.
May 27.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
May 27-28.—Bar Golfing Society v. Le Touquet; Compiègne v. Le Touquet.
May 29.—Ladies' Championship, at Cromer.
June 1.—Hanger Hill, Competition for Medal Winners.
June 1.—Bushey Hall, Ladies' Spring Meeting.
June 2-4.—Le Touquet v. Hythe.
June 3.—England v. Scotland (Professionals), at St. Andrews.
June 3.—Hanger Hill, Annual Meeting.
June 3.—Sundridge Park, Summer Meeting.
June 3.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
June 6.—Royal Blackheath, Summer Medal.
June 7.—Mixed Foursomes Tournament, Sundridge Park.
June 7-8.—Open Championship, at St. Andrews.
June 8.—Hanger Hill v. Wembley.
June 8-10.—Amateur Championship of France at La Boulie.
June 10.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
June 10.—New Luffness, Trayner Cup.
June 10.—Cinque Ports, Captain's Prize.
June 10.—Hythe, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Royal St. George's, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Rye, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Glasgow, Garroway Cup (at Killermont).
June 10.—Frinton, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10-13.—Tooting Bec, Foursome Tournament.
June 10-16.—Bushey Hall, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 12.—Hanger Hill, Whit-Monday Competition.
June 12.—Portmarnock, Cup Competition.
June 12.—Cinque Ports, Scratch Challenge Cup.
June 12.—Royal Isle of Wight, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12.—Royal North Devon, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12-14.—Le Touquet, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 13-15.—Royal Cromer, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 14.—Hanger Hill, Evening Fête.
June 15.—Hastings and St. Leonards, Ladies' Open Meeting.
June 15-17.—Bar Golfing Society, Annual Tournament, at Sandwich.
June 17.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
June 17.—Bushey Hall, Vice-Captain's Prize.
June 17.—Tooting Bec, Victoria Diamond Jubilee Cup.
June 17.—Royal Portrush, Midsummer Meeting.
June 17.—Wembley, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 19.—Hanger Hill, Ladies' Open Competition.
June 19.—St. George's Challenge Cup, at Sandwich.
June 19-20.—Scottish Ladies' Championship, at North Berwick.
June 19-24.—Yorkshire Union Championship Meeting, at Redcar.
June 22.—Hanger Hill v. Wembley.
June 24.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 24.—Sudbrook Park, Rube Challenge Shield.
June 24-25.—Le Touquet v. Press Golfing Society.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLIV.—Mr. Timothy Davies, L.C.C., Ex-Mayor of Fulham, and Prospective Liberal Candidate for Fulham.

ALTHOUGH the able representative of the Progressives of Fulham in the London County Council has found both fame and fortune on the banks of the Thames, he is, like his friend and compatriot, Mr. Lloyd-George, every inch a Welshman, and a Welshman who glories in the historical associations and old-world traditions of the land of his birth. He has named the pleasant house he lives in at Putney Pantycelyn, after the home of the great Cambrian hymnologist of the eighteenth century; and though a Free Churchman to the backbone, he does not think a whit the less of his old school at Llanpumpsaint (Church of the Five Saints) because it derives its name from its early connection with the pious ministrations of SS. Ceitho Gwynoro, Gwyn, Llawddog and Teilo. Mr. Timothy Davies comes from the very heart of the Country of Castles and Saints, for he was born at Pantyfedwen, some three miles from Carmarthen. As he talks to you in his modest library at Pantycelyn, he speaks with evident pride of the fact that his grandfather and namesake, Timothy Davies, was one of the sturdy pioneers of Calvinistic Methodism in Wales—a cause which from modest beginnings in the past has grown to be a great and powerful factor in the religious developments of the present. Timothy Davies did not remain long at the excellent school built by William Williams, M.P. for Coventry and Lambeth, in the village "of the five stones and five crosses." He was not yet fifteen when he put his books aside and went out into the world to buy experience and climb the ladder of success. Having learned all that there was to know of the drapery trade in Liverpool, he came South and found employment with the well-known firm of Tarn and Co. of Newington Causeway. He was then still in his teens. Exactly twenty years ago he went into business on his own account in Walham Green, Fulham. From comparatively small beginnings the enterprise then started has grown into one of the great commercial landmarks of South-West London.

Lafayette.

MRS. DAVIES

Wife of Mr. T. Davies, the Prospective Liberal Candidate for Fulham.

In 1893 he had the good fortune to marry Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, a fair compatriot from the neighbouring shire of Cardigan, a promising Associate of the Royal College of Music, whose fine contralto voice had been carefully trained by Signor Vizetti and Mr. Daniel Price. Few singers can interpret Welsh airs more effectively than Mrs. Davies, and it is obviously in the fitness of things that the home she presides over so gracefully should be named Pantycelyn. Mrs. Davies's talents are ever at the command of the cause of charity in Fulham, where her popularity as president of the Women's Liberal Association is sure to play an important part in the coming struggle, which, in all human probability, is likely to very largely extend Mr. Davies's sphere of public usefulness by giving him a seat in Parliament.

Few men have accomplished more in a short space of time than has Mr. Davies, who won his first municipal battle as recently as May, 1896, when he gained the seat in the Fulham Vestry, which he has retained ever since. At the end of four years he succeeded in giving his constituents the benefits of electric light, and twelve months later (1901) was chosen as Fulham's second Mayor. During the year of his Mayoralty he was returned to the London County Council at the head of the poll, with a majority of no less than 1,840 votes, and his success repeated itself in 1904, when the Progressives defeated Lord Lytton and Major Skinner, notwithstanding the strong influence of the Bishop of London, who, as a resident in Fulham, is one of Mr. Davies's future constituents

In the London County Council his name has been closely identified with every movement that can increase either the health or the happiness of the community. He became a member of the Parks Committee, and set himself the task of developing and maintaining the open spaces of South-West London, for he understands very well how much the "lungs" of London will do to secure the well-being of the future citizens of our great metropolis. After the usual blind opposition from those who cannot understand the necessity for these recreation grounds in order to maintain the stamina and nervous vigour of our race, he achieved his end, and added Fielder's meadow to the beautiful river-side grounds extending towards Hammersmith known as Bishop's Park, and twenty-two acres of land known as Sand's End in South Fulham, for which the County Council undertook to contribute £42,000.

Notwithstanding the multiplicity of his public and private avocations, Mr. Davies always sets aside a portion of his time for religious and social work. He was Moderator of the Welsh Presbytery in London in 1900; takes a deep interest in the cause of temperance, and has been to a great extent the mainspring of the activity which has lately given the Welsh Presbyterians in London churches at Clapham Junction, Walham and Willesden Greens, and Deptford.

Mr. Davies has travelled largely in nearly every part of the world, and seven years ago was received in private audience by Pope Leo XIII. As might be expected, Mr. Davies is a convinced Free Trader, and a vigorous opponent of the Education Act now in force. Since he became the prospective Liberal candidate for Fulham, his meetings may be fairly described as a series of signal successes. His fairness almost disarms his most relentless political foes, while his unselfish devotion to duty and his fearless denunciation of wrong have given him the rare distinction of being regarded as a prophet in the country of his adoption. He has little time nowadays for those enjoyable golfing afternoons over the Lewes links in the congenial society of Mr. Lloyd-George, and one or two other muscular Welshmen in London. Nevertheless, Wales has always the first place in his affections. His eldest son, Idris, born at Putney, is now at school at Barmouth.

Besides being a member of the Cymru Fydd Society, he belongs to the Cymmrodorion Society, which has for its object the propagation of Welsh literature and history, and the preservation of the wonderful folk-lore of the Principality, which is soon likely to find one more sturdy champion at Westminster, in the person of the future member for Fulham.

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

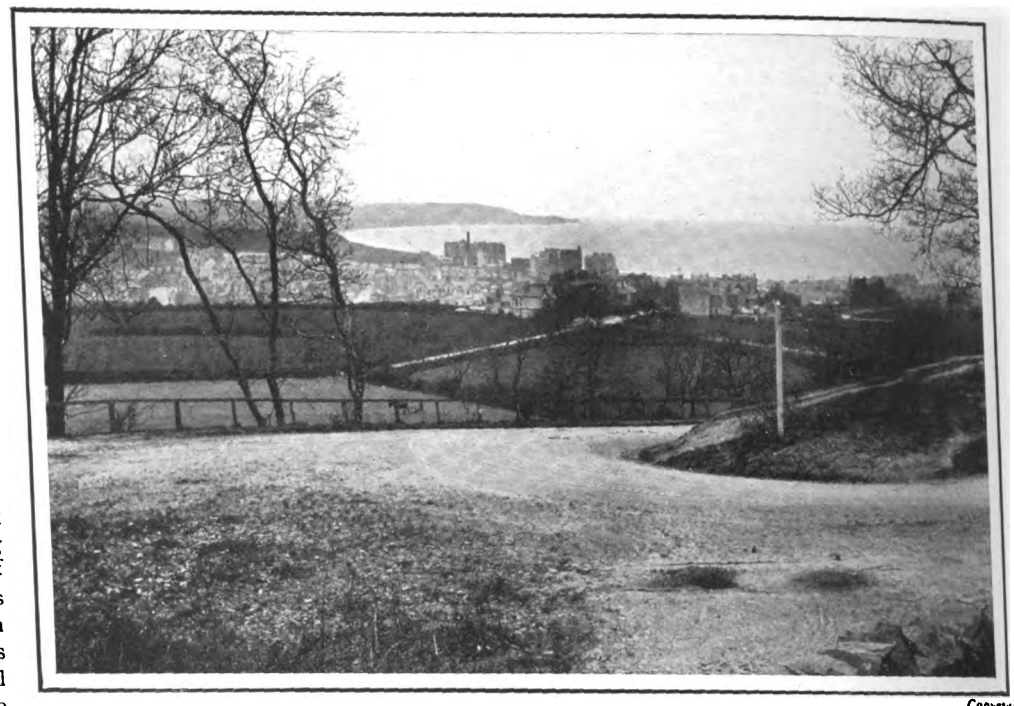
MOTORISTS, as a class, seem strangely oblivious of the fact that the automobile movement is passing through a most critical period. Mr. Scott Montagu, the leader of the motoring party in Parliament, has expressed the opinion that if the present Act were to come up for revision this session the speed limit would probably be halved and the penalties doubled; in other words, automobilism—so far as pleasure cars are concerned—would be absolutely killed in this country. The situation, as it is, is sufficiently irksome, and many motorists are beginning to hesitate to undertake tours beyond their own neighbourhood now that police traps are springing up all over the country, and magistrates are again ceasing to discriminate between the innocent and the guilty, even more entirely than in the old days before the present Act came into force. It is a fortunate thing that the Act does not expire until the end of 1906, as, perhaps, by that time the reckless and inconsiderate drivers will have been eliminated from the ranks of motorists. It is true that an amending Act might be introduced during this session, but it would have little chance of becoming law, except with the assistance of the Government.

Such assistance is hardly likely to be forthcoming in view of an answer recently given in the House by the Prime Minister, which clearly indicates the views of the Government on the subject, and incidentally sets forth the stringent nature of the present Act, which is more than sufficient to safeguard the interests of the public if administered in a common-sense manner. Mr. Balfour stated that in the opinion of the Department concerned there was no reason to think that the fines inflicted for the furious driving of motor-cars were inadequate. The Act enabled substantial fines to be exacted, viz., £20 for the first offence, £50 for the second, or imprisonment not exceeding three months. In addition to this the driver's licence might be suspended, the holder being thus disqualified for such a time as the Court thought fit.



Copyright.

THE BRITISH ELIMINATING TRIALS IN THE ISLE OF MAN.
An awkward corner near Ramsey.

He also pointed out that the motorist is further liable under the ordinary law to all civil and criminal consequences of his acts. Mr. Balfour might have added that several drivers have recently had their licences suspended for a long period, and in this effective manner the roads may be cleared of the motor hooligan. In any case, it behoves every motorist to use the utmost care and consideration, and avoid giving the slightest offence to the other users of the highway, if the present crisis is to be passed successfully.

In spite of assertions to the contrary, the Algiers-Toulon fiasco has as little bearing on the question of the utility of the internal-combustion engine for marine purposes, as the collapse of the over-powered and flimsily-constructed racers at Monaco. It is easy to be wise after the event, but anyone who has had experience of the treacherous waters of the Mediterranean will agree that it was foolhardy in the extreme to start a number of small craft, of a more or less experimental type, on a long open-sea run when the glass was falling and the weather in an obviously unsettled condition. The subsequent mistral was quite sufficient to test severely the seaworthiness of the French destroyers, and at least one of the cruisers was obliged to heave to for several hours. The loss of the motor-boats, except the "Fiat X.," which was hoisted on board her escort early in the gale, was inevitable under the circumstances, and it was a piece of marvellous good luck that all the crews were saved. Judging from my own experience of the short steep seas of the Mediterranean and its startling changes of weather, I should say that had the competing craft in the Algiers-Toulon race been ten times as large they would have had great difficulty, whatever their motive power, in making port without serious damage. The French makers, in their desire to advertise the motor-boat and to efface the recollection of their failure at Monaco, attempted a sensational defeat, and met with a disaster which quite unjustly is placed to the discredit of the new type of vessel.

Particular interest attaches to the result of the Scottish trials, as no other competition of a similar character will take place this year, the Automobile Club having decided to abandon the touring-car trials originally fixed for the coming autumn. In some respects this decision is to be regretted, as, although the Scottish Club mapped out a course which tried the competing cars more severely than any roads in the South of England could do, the duration of the competition was insufficient to afford any information on the all-important question of durability, even had the rules taken this matter into account. Nevertheless, some useful data are forthcoming in regard to the reliability of the modern car, and the comparative hill-climbing capabilities of most of the well-known makes on the market. Forty-three cars, twenty-two British and twenty-one foreign, started, and thirty-six completed the four runs within the schedule

Topical.

THE MOTOR UNION MEET AT NOTTINGHAM.
The cars leaving the Victoria Hotel for Welbeck.

Digitized by Google

time. Of the absentees at the finish, one retired voluntarily on the first day; on the third run, one car met with an accident owing to a defect in the steering gear; and two others retired owing to damage sustained by their transmission gear striking the high crowns of the small bridges over the mountain burns. This is an occurrence which could be easily prevented in the light of experience. The final stage was fatal to two more competitors, the cause of whose retirement was not stated. It should be mentioned, however, that three out of the seven failures were cars hitherto quite unknown in the motoring world. Of the thirty-six successful vehicles, eleven made absolute non-stop runs on all four days. These were the 8-h.p. De Dion, 9-h.p. Cadillac, 16-h.p. Albion, 24-h.p. Mors, 24-h.p. Germain, 24-h.p. Thornycroft, 12-h.p. Richard Brasier, 30-h.p. Belsize, 15-h.p. Brooke, 20-h.p. Vinot and Dequingand, and 12-h.p. Argyll. If one excludes delays for tyre troubles, which did not involve loss of marks, and the momentary and accidental halts recorded as "driving stops," the number of cars which got through with an unblemished record is increased to eighteen, the additions to the above list being the 8-h.p. Darracq, 6-h.p. Wolseley, 12-h.p. Clement, 16-h.p. Beeston Humber, 20-h.p. Ariel, 16-h.p. Argyll, and 12-h.p. Gladiator. In a category by itself must be placed the 14-h.p. Minerva, which only failed to obtain full marks by running out of petrol, a piece of carelessness which entailed 5-min. delay. Nineteen cars out of the thirty-six have now been accounted for. Of the remaining seventeen no fewer than ten lost, on an average, less than 5-min. per day, a matter which would hardly be noticed when on tour. These were the 12-h.p. De Dion, 10-h.p. Ford, 14-h.p. Wolseley (1-min. only), 12-h.p. Gladiator, 8—10-h.p. Humber, 18-h.p. Chenard and Walcker, 12-h.p. Sunbeam, 18-h.p. Siddeley, 16-h.p. Clement, and 12-h.p. Pipe. For some of the unlucky remainder legitimate excuses can be found.

The above results appear highly satisfactory when one considers the abnormal conditions under which the trials were run. Not a bolt or a nut could be touched without loss of marks, and as a result the mechanism of the cars did not receive a moment's attention from start to finish of the 600-miles, except in those cases where involuntary stoppages occurred on the road. The only exception to this rule was made in the interests of the competitors, 5-min. being allowed every morning for the adjustment of brakes. Moreover, the course itself was mapped out with the express purpose of testing the cars to the utmost, and hills, which the majority of English motorists would take the greatest pains to avoid, were encountered and successfully surmounted almost every few miles. In one respect the rules appear open to objection. No deductions were made for stoppages caused by tyre troubles unless the time spent in this fashion exceeded four hours in all. Of course, punctures and bursts are largely a matter of luck, but I think that some greater inducement should be offered to makers to fit tyres of suitable dimensions to their cars. Under the present rule a puncture is rather a blessing than otherwise, as it gives the engine time to cool down while repairs are being effected, and this is no mean advantage when running over mountainous roads with a full load in the tonneau.

RADIATOR.

Argent Archer.

LORD AND LADY NEWPORT
In their 22-h.p. Crossley touring car.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

PRIMA-DONNAS' HUSBANDS.

ONE night, dining at the house of an operatic star, a guest who had remained very silent over dinner came out with the startling question, addressed to the gentleman at the head of the table, "Don't you find it rather awkward to be the husband of a prima-donna?" There was a moment's silence, and then somebody promptly steered the conversation into another channel. This occurred a few years ago, but up to this day I regret that I was prevented from hearing an official opinion on a matter which always interested me. We all have our particular hobbies, and I make no secret that I have made a special study of that curious specimen of humanity, the prima-donna's husband, who lives in our midst, and about whom the world knows so little.

Tempora mutantur. The law of evolution affects every species of mankind, and there is as much difference between the prima-donna's husband of to-day and his progenitor as between a mediæval knight and a captain of dragoons. In days gone by, when circumstances impelled a French prima-donna to seek refuge in matrimony, she would select from among her entourage a gentleman—by preference a ruined nobleman—and propose to him to become her legal protector, a delicate yet simple transaction. In return for his name the lady undertook to pay off his most pressing debts, and to supply him with sufficient money to cut a figure worthy of his rank and time of life. Age was an important point to be considered, for, strange as it may seem, the older the gentleman the more money he claimed for what was called by courtesy his services. Yet, the lady would rather make pecuniary sacrifices than enlist a younger and, consequently, more exacting partner. Once married, things generally went on comfortably for a long time. Madame did as she pleased, Monsieur likewise, and no awkward questions asked on either side. This idyllic happiness ought to have lasted for ever. But it did not. The combination invariably terminated in a catastrophe, and always through the same cause. As Madame grew older she would become imprudent, and, like Elsa in "Lohengrin," would put indiscreet questions which her knight would resent. Or sometimes it would be the knight who wanted to know more than was good for him to hear. In either case the result was the same—the love-knot was cut.

A PARIS TOILETTE.

A black tulle robe, with white satin foundation: Maison Bechoff-David.

(From a photograph by Reutlinger.)

To-day the relations between husband and wife in that milieu have, like other things, undergone a transformation, and, in that fierce competition called the struggle for existence, sinecures have been abolished. This the poor prima-donna's husband has found out to his cost. The past has taught the professional lady a lesson; she has become eminently practical. No more elderly, dissolute noblemen. Their place is now taken by young, active men, not kept in idleness, but who earn their salt. It is no longer a pro-forma husband she has secured; it is a valuable assistant, whom she works like a factory hand. Do not think that youth and good looks are sufficient recommendations for that most delicate position. The qualifications are of a much higher order. For, like some men are born poets or musicians, Nature has also fitted the prima-donna's husband for the post. Try what he may, he will do no good at anything else, although his unsuspecting parents may have given him a classical education, and made him, as they thought, a barrister, a doctor, or even a clergyman.

Frenchwomen have strong business instincts, and are of a saving disposition. The up-to-date prima-donna has inherited these characteristics, and, with the view of not wasting money, she compels her partner to take over the functions formerly performed by a maid or a courier. I have several times had occasion to witness artistes start on tour, and have wondered how those ladies whose staff only consisted of a cook and a housemaid managed their affairs. One day I discovered that Paris boasts of an institution, unique in its way—"an academy for prima-donnas' husbands"! Someone had given me the address of a former actor, who, I was told, could supply me with some professional information. It was in an apartment on the second floor, a few minutes from the Conservatoire. The man was out, and I awaited his return. The office led into a spacious room, and through the open door I beheld a puzzling sight. A gentleman, faultlessly dressed, a gardenia in his buttonhole, was on his knees depositing in a basket-trunk a quantity of ladies' wearing apparel, carefully folded up and placed within his reach. Near him a cross-looking elderly woman was carefully watching him. All at once the woman called out, "Ce n'est pas cela; vous faites des plis. Recommencez!" and, with an impatient gesture, emptied the contents of the trunk on the floor. I heard something that sounded like a suppressed oath, and the victim started refolding the clothes and repacking them. At that moment my friend, the ex-actor, returned. "Who is that man in the other room," I asked, "and what on earth is he doing?" He first closed the door, and then said, "He is Madame P.'s fiancé. The lady in the other room is my assistant, and, at Madame's request, he is being taught many useful things. When he knows how to fold and pack dresses, I go into the question of contracts, and show him how to deal with tricky impresarios and theatrical managers. I have made a special study of this. Have I had many pupils? Yes, I have had a few, and they pay me exceedingly well. I am afraid, however, that Madame P. will have a little trouble with the man she is going to marry. He is intelligent, but very awkward with his fingers, and a prima-donna's husband does not require brains. He must be handy."

From a social point of view the prima-donna's husband's position is not an easy one. It is he who sees the journalists who come to interview la grande artiste, for which purpose he keeps a box of expensive Havannas of enormous size, known among Paris Pressmen as "prima-donna's husband's cigars." He is the Minister of Finance, that is to say, it is he who keeps the keys of the cash-box, having, of course, to give a careful account of all moneys spent. It is he, too, who receives the visitors on the days when Madame, in order not to tire her voice by needless talk, lies on the sofa in her bedroom reading a novel. The conversation in the drawing-room rarely varies. It is generally about Madame, and constitutes a record of that lady's latest triumphs. Etiquette demands that in these cases the husband should use the first person plural: "In Lyons we were recalled three times!" or "We are tremendous favourites in Bordeaux," or "The Queen gave us a brooch." On other questions, however, he relapses into the first person singular. The cook comes to him for orders, and the weekly bills are settled by him. Madame sings, he does the rest.

Sometimes it happens that the lady makes a mistake in the choice of her helpmate. I know one who sits all day smoking cigarettes, and that once his four-year-old boy asked his mother: "I say, Ma, what's the use of a father?"

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN PLAYERS.

Reutlinger.

MLLE. MARTHE REGNIER

Who is at present appearing at the Com die Française. Mlle. Regnier, it will be remembered, appeared in London last year with M. Tarride and Mme. Dorziat in a repertoire of French plays. It is only six years since she gained the first prize for comedy at the Conservatoire, and her début followed almost immediately at the Odéon.

Digitized by Google

The American Lawn Tennis Challengers.

By J. PARMLY PARET.

THERE was much disappointment among American lawn tennis players when the authorities of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, as our organisation is cumbrously called, decided a year ago not to challenge for the Davis Cup. Dr. Dwight, who is the leading spirit among the American legislators, has always felt that it would be unwise to send any but a representative team, and the few players who were really representative were not available last season. Ex-Champion Whitman was unable to leave his business for such a trip, and without him Larned declined to make the trip, and no satisfactory team could be made up without these two.

In selecting the American team this year, then, the U.S.N.L.T.A. committee had a materially stronger field to choose from, and it was probably quite as well that neither Wrenn nor Whitman were available. On the official rating of last season the leaders in singles were Ward, Clothier, Larned, and Wright, and there was little or no difference of opinion as to the choice from this list. As all were ready and glad to make the trip, the committee had no hesitation in selecting the four.

Larned is the oldest and most experienced of the American experts now in competition. He has been considered for many years to have the best form and to show in streaks the most brilliant play of all the players on this side of the Atlantic. He has won the American Championship twice, the second time (in 1902) beating R. F. Doherty three sets to one in the challenge round. The same year he beat Dr. Pim three straight sets in the Internationals, and won the first two sets from R. F. Doherty, only to lose the match, after a postponement for rain. He was badly beaten by H. L. Doherty the following season in the challenge round for the American Championship at Newport, and in one earlier tournament, while in the Internationals he lost to the younger Doherty only after the closest kind of a five-set match.

Ward, who now holds the national championships in both singles and doubles, is a player of the younger school, and, perhaps, the most progressive of all the Americans. He is a quiet, studious man, to whose painstaking study of the game Americans owe much of their recent advancement. Although it was Whitman who first served the "reverse twist" service, it was Ward who first perfected the straight twist service that has since proved so effective. Curiously enough, this peculiar delivery was hit upon partially by accident, since Ward developed this method of serving in order to help him get to the net quickly, and then discovered its double usefulness when he found that the ball broke so badly to the side from the remarkable twist he gave it.

Copyright.

HOLCOMBE WARD

The present U.S. Singles Champion selected for Doubles.

Ward is a fast volleyer of the most extreme type. He plays every stroke possible on the volley, and uses every method to get to the net for his favourite position for attack. His ground strokes are comparatively poor, on the back-hand side at any rate, but he is a past-master in lobbing, and very clever at killing overhead balls.

Clothier is another player of the younger school, and of a peculiar type, unlike any other American player I know. He is well-built,

Paret.

BEALS C. WRIGHT

Who will represent America in the Doubles.

Paret.

WILLIAM A. LARNED

American Ex-Champion, who will play in the Singles.

and naturally gifted for the game, but his style is far from perfect. His strokes all lack the long free swing that characterises Larned's play, and the snap that makes Ward so dangerous. His overhead volleying is very strong, despite the short swing, but his low volleying poor in comparison. He is very quick at the net, and volleys from a close position, preferring that style to back-court play. Off the ground, his passing strokes are excellent, but in driving he is not so strong, and his play often lacks length.

Wright's play promised great things at one time, but fell off two or three seasons ago, and he has never quite reached the top rank in singles. He is one of the best low volleyers in the country, and drops his passing strokes and his return of the service better than any other American. He "chops" the ball a trifle too much for the fastest kind of play, and particularly in singles his skill suffers from this drawback. Overhead he is very fast, and his service, though straight, is effective and well-placed.

Of the chances of the American team, I imagine they should beat the Belgian and French players, and meet the Australians in the finals. The Antipodeans are an unknown quantity over here, and, I predict, will prove more formidable than is generally expected. The chances of the Americans ought to be a bit the better for the finals, but with H. L. Doherty and Riseley in the singles and the Doherty brothers in the doubles, if that should prove to be the team selected to defend the Davis Cup, I fear the challengers, no matter which country plays against the English holders, will have the smaller chance for the victory.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Bassano.

MISS MABEL GREEN

One of the Two Little Michus at Daly's Theatre. Commencing her stage career less than two years ago, Miss Green has been rapidly promoted to the front rank, and though the new play is only the third in which she has had a part (the others being "The Cherry Girl" and "The Cingalee"), her fine voice and unaffected acting admirably fit her for the part she is playing.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

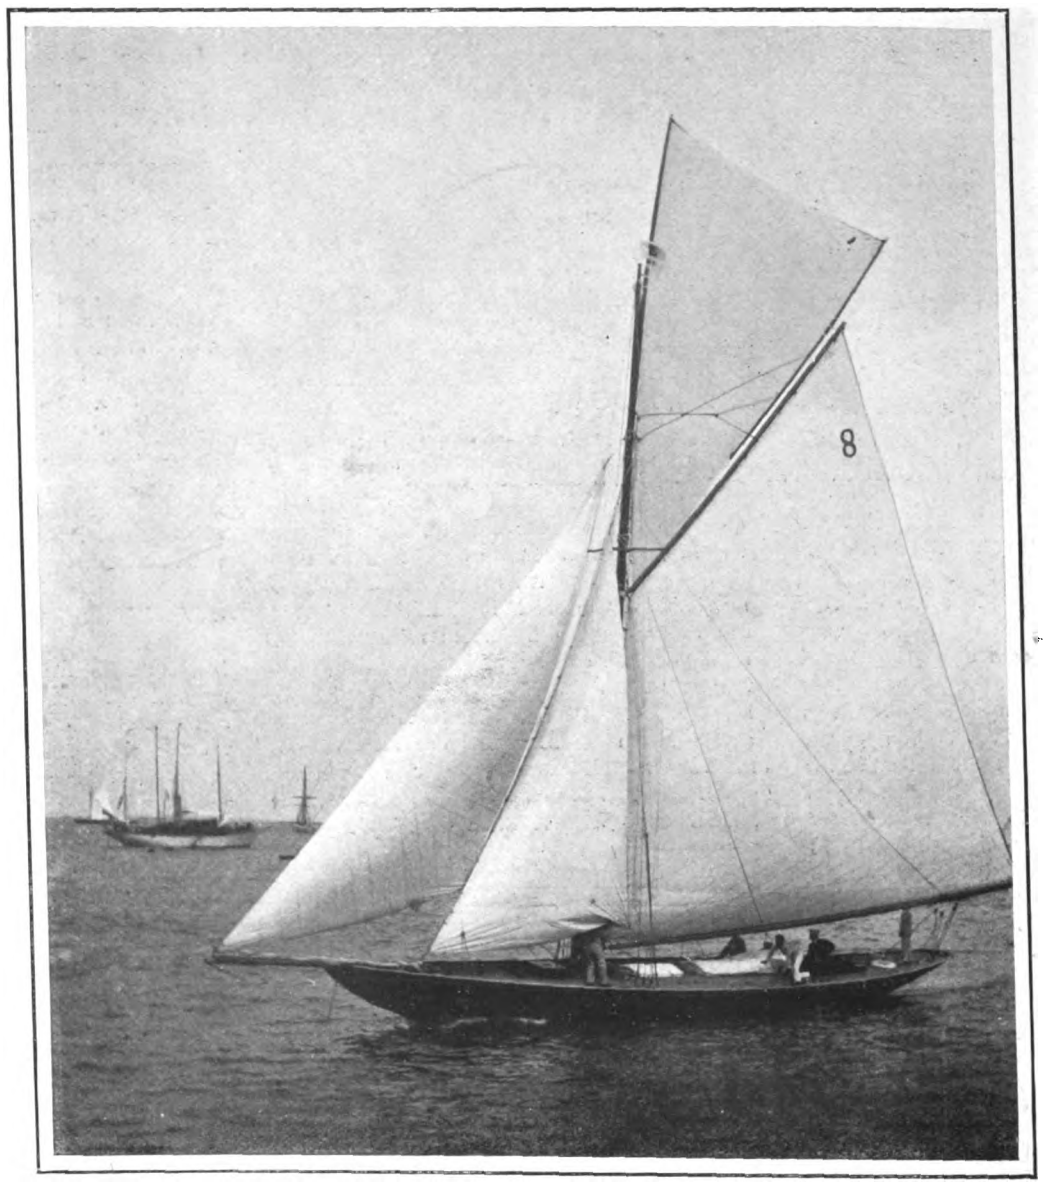
THE Solent racing season opens to-day with a series of matches under the flag of the Royal Southampton Yacht Club. The races will, in accordance with the custom of more recent years, start and finish off Hythe. The course is not entirely in favour with Solent yachtsmen generally, owing to the fact that, with a south-west wind, there is too much plain sailing, and but a very little turning to windward. It, however, provides a variation from the other and more open courses over which the majority of the club's races are sailed. A few years back, the Southampton club matches started and finished off the pier, but recent extensions to docks and quays have rendered such courses unsuitable for any but very small craft, although in the Southampton Town Regatta, held annually under the auspices of the West Quay Club, the old courses are adhered to.

The list of fixtures for the season is a fairly lengthy one, comprising, as it does, fifty-four regattas, so that there will be no lack of sport if only the classes fill well, which is, however, somewhat doubtful up to the present.

Although the season cannot be said to commence particularly early, it is seldom that all the boats are in commission for the first few matches. During more recent years, while most of the classes have been declining in numbers, the one-design class has turned out by far the strongest, and at one time they were so numerous that at many regattas they were started in two divisions. This year there does not appear to be any prospect of the class being exceptionally strong. Owners will be permitted to make certain alterations in their sail plans, so that, strictly speaking, the one-design idea will cease.

It would not be in any degree surprising if this class soon became discarded as one of the regular classes. It has served a useful purpose, and provided some excellent sport. A one-design class, while providing the keenest of racing, inasmuch as everything depends upon handling in a match, has the disadvantage that the boats, after a few seasons, become old in type. Although this may not detract from the interest of the actual racing, the class fails to attract when the boats composing it come to be regarded as old in type. Should the Solent one-design class show any definite signs of decreasing in interest, it is hardly probable that any serious attempt would be made to revive it. More probably a new one would be established.

The performances of the new Payne 36-footer will be watched with some interest, this being the first important order turned out by this young designer, who is a son of the late Arthur E. Payne, whose name will always be associated with Solent racing, notwithstanding his successes in bigger craft.



EILEEN

South Coast class, owned by Captain the Hon. A. Greville and Mr. Brinsley Fitzgerald. Eight boats were built to this class from A. Mylne's design. They are about 42-ft. rating and 24-tons.

Next Saturday the big class season will open with the annual "down-Swin" matches, under the New Thames burgee, followed on the Monday and Tuesday by the Harwich Regatta. The chief interest of the day will, of course, be the race for 52-footers. There has been ample opportunity during the fine weather of the past few weeks for sail-stretching, and all the vessels should come to the starting line for the first race of the season fairly well tuned up. Sonya, Mr. Turner Farley's Herreshoff boat, has been fitted out and done her preliminary spins at Tollesbury, and, at the time of writing, but few persons, other than those associated with the craft, have had an opportunity of judging of her under way. It is understood that Gauntlet will race occasionally in the 52-ft. class during the season. She has sailed in the class once or twice during the past two years, and made a very good show in one race against Lucida and Camellia. At some of the regattas the boats of the South Coast class may sail in company with the ex-52-footers. Their rating comes out at about 42-ft.

The ex-racers of the 52-ft. class have hitherto sailed upon handicap terms, with a limit of time allowance of one minute per mile. The inclusion of the South Coast boats in the handicaps would not be productive of much interest. The class has never been quite the success that was anticipated. It originated in a desire to establish another one-design class in the Solent, and the first proposal was for boats of about 16-tons measurement. Several alterations were subsequently made in the designs, and ultimately the existing type was decided upon, the boats being built at various yards from Mr. A. Mylne's drawings. There were eight boats constructed, and amongst the owners are several of our best-known yachtsmen. When the class took definite form, the Solent Classes Racing Association refused to admit it as a Solent class. Many enthusiastic sailing men were of opinion that it would injure the Y.R.A. classes, more particularly the 36-footers, which at one time formed a fine class in the Solent, and consequently the proposal to include it as a Solent class met with very considerable opposition.

The annual May meeting of the Royal Yacht Squadron was held last week. The business was chiefly of a routine order. The new members elected were the Earl of Cork, Mr. E. M. Mundy, Sir John Baird, Mr. A. H. G. Caulfield, Mr. C. H. Bibby Hesketh, Mr. Crosier Bailey, Colonel Philip E. Pope, and Mr. E. R. Whitwell.

CORINTHIAN.

---

OPENING REGATTA FIXTURES.

June 3.—New Thames Yacht Club, Southend to Harwich.
June 5-6.—Royal Harwich Yacht Club Regatta.
June 9.—Royal Thames Yacht Club River Matches.
June 10.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club.
June 13.—Royal London Yacht Club.
June 14.—New Thames Yacht Club River Matches.
June 17.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, Nore to Dover.
July 14.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club Regatta.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

Stuart.

GAUNTLET.

This photograph was taken in her second season, when she sailed under the flag of Mr. A. L. Pearse. She was built for Mr. W. P. Burton in 1901 from designs by the late A. E. Payne, is now painted black on the topsides, and owned by Messrs. J. R. Payne and H. Goldie. Her record last season in the handicap class was an excellent one.

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A HOLIDAY ON THE LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

THE lovely warm spring weather which all of us have been enjoying of late has not unnaturally set many people thinking about the holidays, and how and where to spend them. Probably the majority of holiday-makers have heard of such famous continental spas as Carlsbad, Marienbad, and Homburg, but how many could define exactly the locality of Llandrindod, Llangammarch, and Llanwrtyd? That these three watering-places are in Wales is pretty clearly indicated by the very first syllable of each; but beyond that fact but little is known to the majority of health seekers. As a matter of fact the neighbourhood is one that abounds in names commencing with "Llan," and for that reason has been aptly termed the land of double L's.

Llandrindod Wells, which ranks probably first in importance, boasts of a series of mineral springs whose efficacy in certain maladies has long since been proved both by analysis and actual results. The town itself is delightfully situated at an elevation of over 700-ft. above the sea level. All around are hills of various heights. To the east lie the Radnor Forest Range, while on a clear day one can discern the tops of the Black Mountains. Again to the westward lie the Brecknock Hills, behind which the sun sets, and to the north and north-west are the hills of Cardiganshire, with that giant Plinlimmon towering above all.

Llandrindod, like its neighbours Llangammarch and Llanwrtyd, is situated in the heart of wild, romantic scenery; it can be reached in comfort by the expresses of the London and North Western Railway a little over five hours from town. The distance is not far short of 200 miles, and the route is by way of Stafford, Shrewsbury, and Craven Arms. To many of the North Western trains through carriages are attached; moreover, one can dine comfortably en route if desired in the company's restaurant cars.

Copyright.

ON THE BANKS OF THE RIVER WYE.

Close by is the little town of Builth, or Llanvair-yn-Maullt, as it is locally called. In the neighbourhood of Builth, celebrated for its mineral springs and picturesque scenery, is the Cwm Llewellyn, where the unfortunate Prince Llewellyn was slain in his final struggles with the English.

Although Llandrindod is famous chiefly on account of its medicinal waters, which are rigorously consumed by those suffering from dyspepsia, liver complaints, skin diseases, and certain gouty disorders, it is, nevertheless, a most charming spot for those in search of a quiet restful holiday. The springs are divided into two classes—sulphur and saline. At the old pump-house there is one of each kind, while the Rock Park Pump-room boasts two of each kind. The latter also contains a magnesium spring, discovered a few years ago. In cases of tuberculous troubles it has proved especially efficacious. The waters of Llandrindod are held in high repute by the medical profession, such eminent physicians as Sir William Broadbent, Sir Herman Weber, Sir John Williams, Sir Lander Brunton, and a whole host of other members of the profession being strong supporters of this delightful Welsh spa. "Why," asked a recent visitor to Llandrindod, "should holiday-seekers ever risk the intolerable heat of Ems, the fashion of Homburg, or the deserted gaiety of Baden, when in a few hours they can drink the waters till they are tired of them on the hills of lovely Wales? Why not believe that there is 'no place like home,' and try the health-cure of Llandrindod Wells?"

Llangammarch Wells is also most picturesquely situated among the hills of Central Wales. It is a comparatively small village, yet holds a high place in the opinion of the medical profession on account of its fine mineral waters. The spring is the only one in this country known to contain chloride of barium, which is a most valuable agent in the treatment of heart affections, as well as cases of gout and rheumatism. Situated at an elevation of about 560-ft. above sea-level, the air is naturally very bracing and exhilarating; even in the hottest weather the atmosphere here is never oppressive. Visitors to this delightful resort are, indeed, fortunate in having so comfortable a hotel as the Lake Hotel to put up at. The hotel, standing in its own grounds of nearly 700-acres, affords every comfort and convenience to those wishing to undergo a course of the waters. The springs and pump-house are in the hotel grounds, which also contain a pretty lake, well stocked with fish. The golf links, which have been recently laid out, are also close by.

Copyright.

A PRETTY WELSH WATERWAY.

A view of the River Wye and the famous Dolphin Rock. The scenery along the banks of this winding stream, which rises in the mountain of Plinlimmon, is exceedingly varied and beautiful, and has been a source of inspiration to some of our greatest poets and artists.

Digitized by Google

Builth is also celebrated for its mineral springs, which are said to closely resemble those of Harrogate. The town is even more favourably situated as a centre for the excursionist than either Llandrindod or the surroundings are. Among the rambles that may be taken on foot we should mention those to the Lover's Leap, from the summit of which, tradition has it, two lovers' courtship was rudely interrupted by their being forms a delightful bicycle run, as also the one to Rhayader Gwy, which means "the cataract of the Wye," though no cataract exists at the present day. On the road to Rhayader is passed Doldowlod, the home

Copyright.

IN PICTURESQUE WALES.

A scene on the River Irfon, near Llangammarch Wells. The Irfon is a tributary of the Wye, and both rivers are famous for their excellent trout-fishing and wild romantic scenery.

Llangammarch, for it is at this point that the Cambrian System connects with the Central Wales line of the London and North Western Railway.

Those who make Llandrindod their centre, however, will quickly discover how delightful precipitated suddenly into the rushing waters below and drowned. Some nine miles north of the town is Abbey Cwm Hir, once the site of a Cistercian monastery; it is also declared to be the place where Llewellyn, the last of Welsh Princes, was buried. This little excursion of Watts, the inventor of the steam-engine. Many other places can be visited from Llandrindod, including Presteign, Knighton in the Teme Valley, and Llanthony Abbey with its old priory and memories of Landor.

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

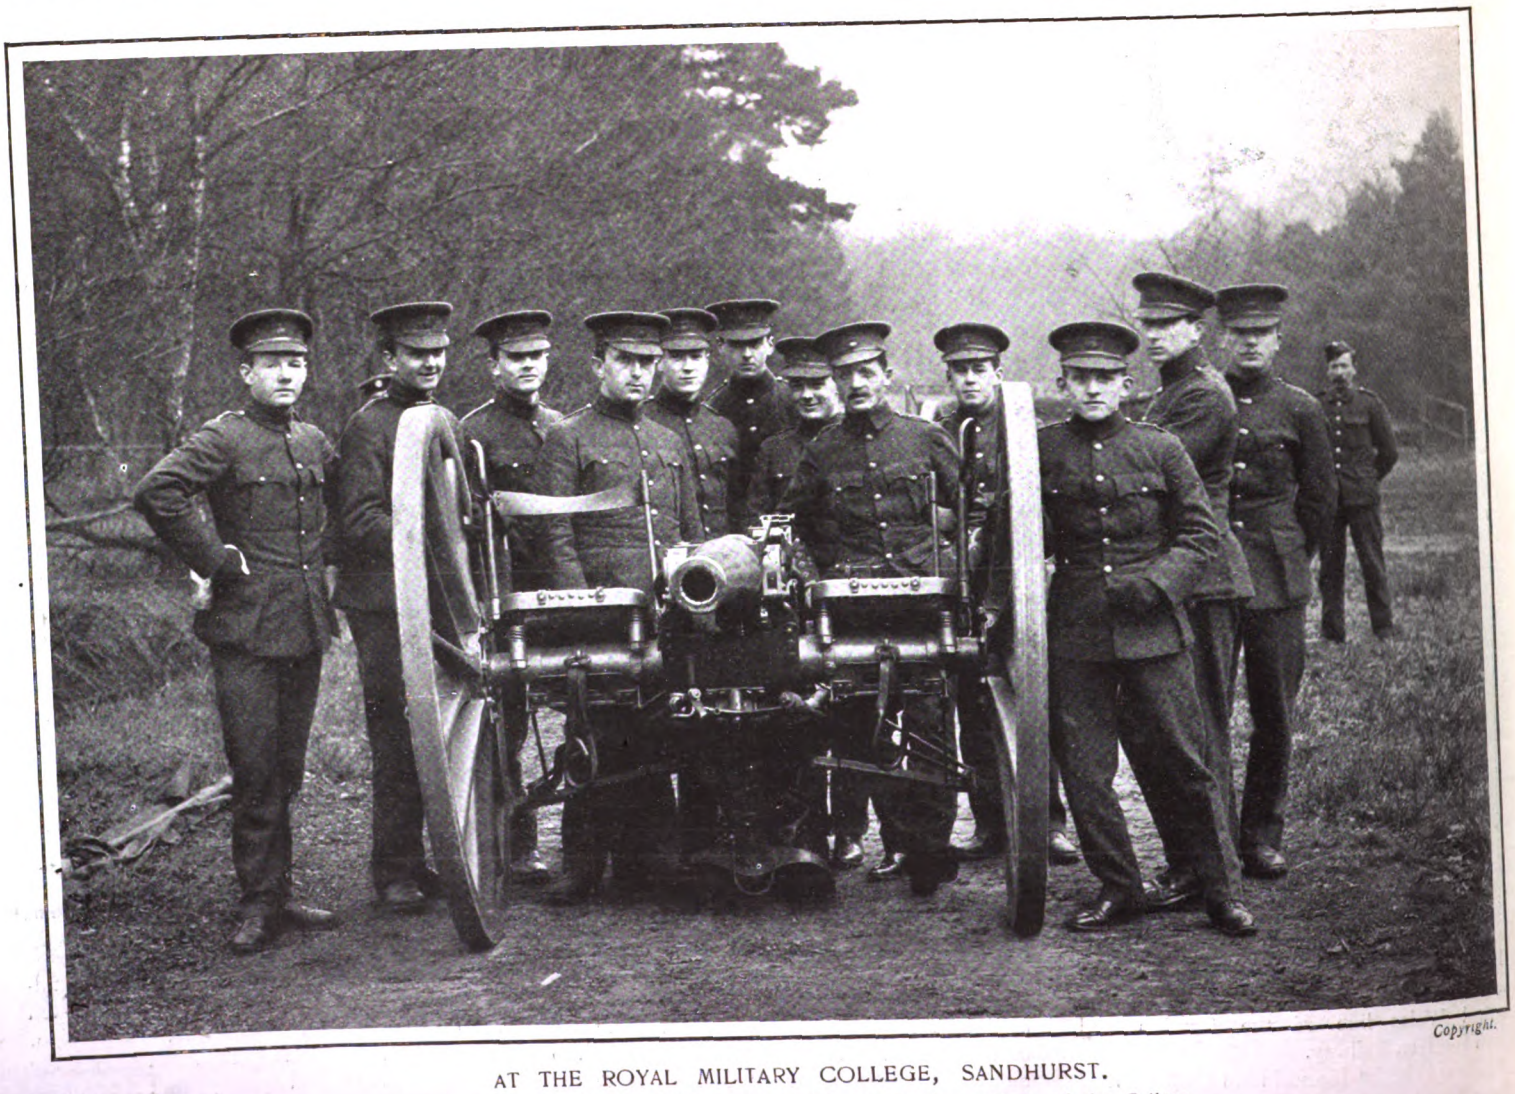
Copyright.

THE NEW GUNS FOR THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The 12-pounder pieces brought from Woolwich for the King's inspection are samples of the guns with which it is proposed to rearm the Horse and Field Artillery.



Copyright.

AT THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE, SANDHURST.

Gentlemen cadets at drill with a 15-pounder gun in the grounds of the College.

Digitized by Google

The Yearly Meeting of the Society of Friends.

LEEDS: MAY 23—JUNE 1, 1905.

THE first Yearly Meeting or General Assembly of the Society of Friends took place in London as far back as the year 1672. For more than a century Devonshire House (not in Piccadilly, but in the still more ancient thoroughfare of Bishopsgate Street Without) has been the scene of an unbroken series of these interesting and influential gatherings. The holding of the annual Synod of Quakerism away from London is a new and startling departure on the part of a body whose conservatism in matters of "ministry," "discipline," "oversight," and organisation is unimpeachable. Yorkshire has played an all-important part in the history of the Society of Friends, and is still the home of many of the great families who strictly adhere to the traditions of their forefathers. Ackworth School was established in Yorkshire in 1779; York was the scene of the labours of John Woolman, who died there in 1772, and it was in York that the "Retreat" was opened in 1796.

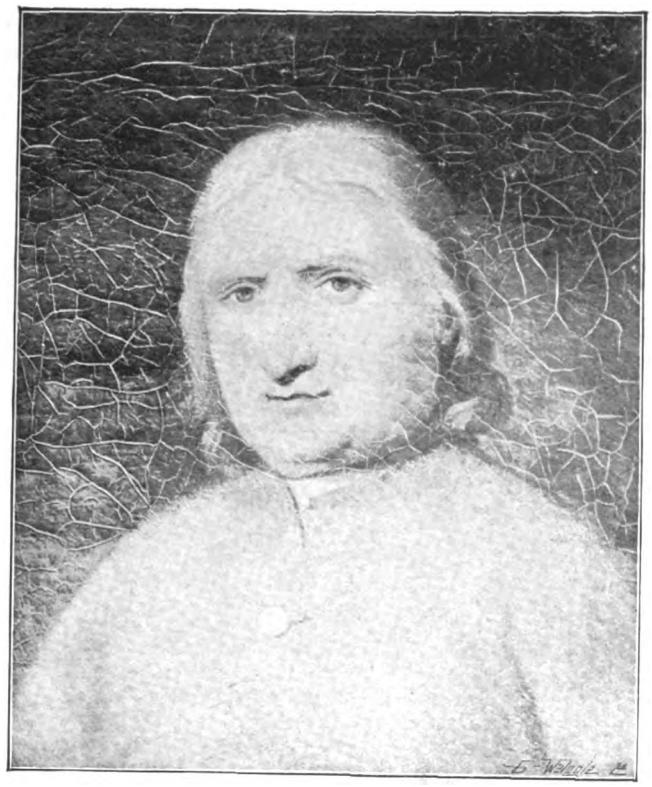
In 1829 the Boys' School, founded in York six years before, was taken over by the York Quarterly Meeting. The Clerk or President of the Leeds Meeting is Mr. Henry Lloyd Wilson of Birmingham. Mr. Isaac Sharp, B.A., the Secretary of the Society of Friends, is the "Recording Clerk." Mr. William Whiting of Leeds is the Secretary of the local organisation, which has issued an elaborate booklet giving every kind of useful information to strangers. Amongst other prominent Yorkshire "Friends" who have assisted in making the necessary arrangements for the comfort and convenience of their co-religionists while sojourning in Leeds, are Mr. William Harvey, Mr. John Stephenson Rowntree, J.P. (one of York's most popular Lord Mayors), and Mr. Joseph Rowntree. The commodious and picturesque meeting-house, or houses, in Woodhouse Lane, Leeds (of the entrance to which an illustration is given) is admirably suited for an assembly of this kind.

Excursions during the Yearly Meeting will be made to Ripon and Fountains Abbey, Scarborough (including a visit to the Guest House and Throxenby Hall), Bolton Abbey, Ackworth School, York (comprising Bootham, the Mount School, and the Retreat), and Rawdon School. On Wednesday, the 24th inst., the programme includes a reception of the members by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress. The Yearly Meeting will, of course, be in telephonic communication with the outside world, and "Friends' Meeting-house, Leeds," is declared to be a sufficient telegraphic address. On Sunday, the 28th inst. (or "First Day, 28th of Fifth Month"), solemn "meetings for worship" are to take place either in Leeds or within a radius of ten miles of the city.

The eventful history of the Society of Friends (and none of the Free Churches of England can boast of a more splendid record of trials, tribulations, and triumphs than the once-persecuted Quakers) may be said to commence in 1647, when George Fox, born three-and-twenty years previously at Fenny Drayton in Leicestershire, began his "ministry." As Carlyle wrote two centuries later, "No grander thing was ever done than when George Fox went forth determined to find truth for himself, and to battle for it against all superstition, bigotry, and intolerance." Fox himself, in all probability, never foresaw the far-reaching consequence of his teachings and his sufferings in England, America, and Holland. Having been freed by proclamation from his last term of imprisonment in Worcester Gaol, he lived till 1691, when he died within a few days of preaching "a long and wonderful sermon" at the Gracechurch Street Meeting-house. Fox, as Bunyan had been three years previously, was laid to rest in the Friends' Burial Ground at Bunhill Fields.

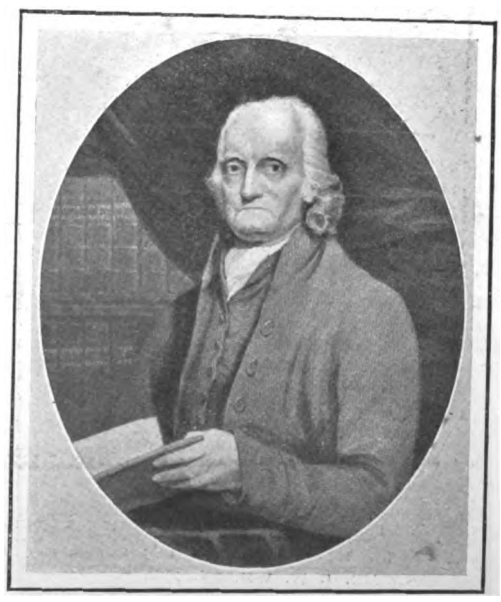
George Fox, William Penn, and John Bunyan were to the religious life of England in the seventeenth century what John Wesley, George Whitefield, and Selina, Countess of Huntingdon, were to that of the eighteenth. Few men suffered more for their convictions than George Fox. Scarborough, the objective of one of the pilgrimages from Leeds, was from 1663 to 1666 the scene of one of Fox's numerous imprisonments. His whole career was little else than a life-long martyrdom. Like the early Christians, he was "in prisons oft," and Nottingham, Derby, Carlisle, Launceston, Lancaster, Leicester, and Worcester share with Scarborough the distinction of having been at one time or another (Lancaster twice) Fox's places of bondage. In his youth his earnestness won him the nickname of "Righteous Christer." In the first years of his ministry his perpetual injunction to those who listened to him was "to tremble at the Word of the Lord." On this account one Justice Bennet appears to have stigmatised him and his followers as "Quakers."

At the time of Fox's death, in spite of bonds, fines, stripes, and even martyrdom, the Quakers formed a powerful and influential body. In 1682, William Penn, one of their ablest and most zealous members, successfully founded the State of Pennsylvania, although only twenty years before Mary Dyer and her companions had suffered a violent death in Boston. At that time the number of Friends was computed to be 40,000. In 1656 Fox averred that there were seldom less than 1,000 in prison, and it has been asserted that between 1661 and 1697 13,562 Quakers were imprisoned, 152 were transported, and 338 died in bondage or of their wounds. In 1840, when the Society of Friends surrendered their



GEORGE FOX.
From the portrait by Peter Lely, in the possession of the trustees of Swarthmoor College.

WILLIAM PENN
Founder of Pennsylvania, and one of the pioneers of the Society of Friends.



MR. RICHARD REYNOLDS
A celebrated Bristol Quaker and philanthropist of the eighteenth century.

Digitized by Google

NOTABLE MEMBERS OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. J. E. ELLIS, M.P.

Member for the Rushcliffe Division of Nottingham.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. J. E. BARLOW, M.P.

Member for the Frome Division of Somerset.

Elliott and Fry.

SIR ALFRED EDWARD PEASE, BART.

Formerly M.P., now a magistrate in the Transvaal.

Elliott and Fry.

THE RIGHT HON. LEWIS FRY

A prominent member of the Society of Friends.

Elliott and Fry.

THE RIGHT HON. SIR EDWARD FRY

Ex-judge, and a member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. JAMES RICHARDSON

A prominent Irish member of the Society of Friends.

Elliott and Fry.

MR. J. W. WILSON, M.P.

Member for North Worcestershire, and a popular member of the Society.

Prestwich.

MR. NORMAN PENNEY

Librarian of the Society of Friends, and hon. secretary of the Friends' Historical Society.

Copyright.

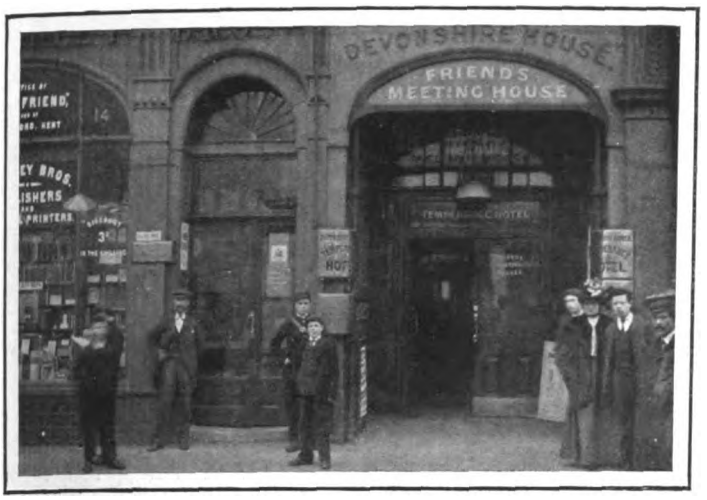
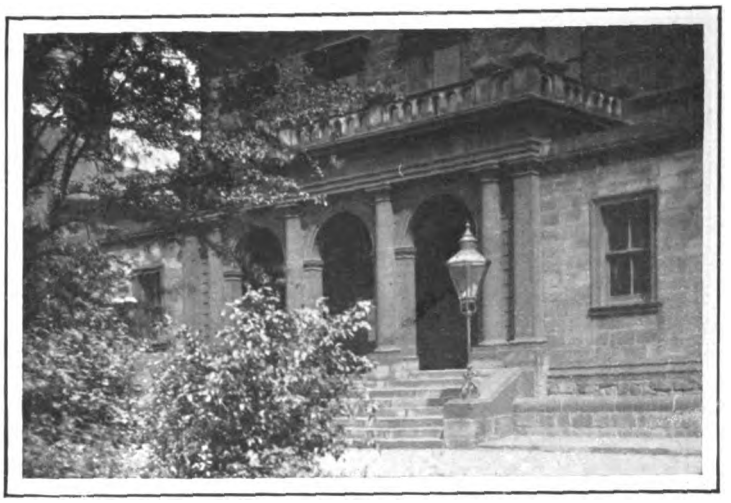
MR. BEVAN LEAN, D.Sc.

Head-master of Sidcot School, Somerset, the centre of Quaker education in the West

Digitized by Google



DEVONSHIRE HOUSE, BISHOPSGATE STREET WITHOUT.
The historic headquarters of the Society of Friends.

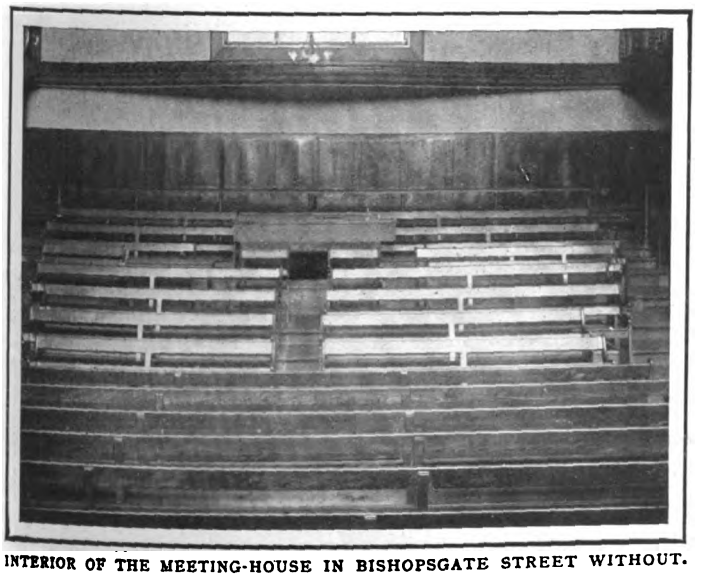


THE FRIENDS' MEETING-HOUSE, WOODHOUSE LANE, LEEDS.
The scene of the Yearly Meeting of 1905.

registers to the Government, they were found to contain entries of 134,000 births, 27,000 marriages, and 154,000 burials. When William and Mary came to the throne 50,000 Friends were said to be living in England and America. At the close of the nineteenth century the corresponding number was about 150,000. In Great Britain there are nearly 400 Friends' congregations, grouped into eighteen Quarterly Meetings. The number of Recorded Ministers is 364—men 219, women 145. The muster roll of pupils, adults, and children in the Friends' First Day (Sunday) Schools in the United Kingdom is nearly 46,000. The Friends' Foreign Mission Association has 79 Missionaries and upwards of 1,000 native helpers labouring in India, Madagascar, China, and Syria.

SIDCOT SCHOOL, SOMERSET.
The headquarters of Quaker education in the West of England.

If the Society of Friends is by far the smallest, numerically speaking, of the principal Free Churches, it has, during nearly two and a-half centuries, exercised an influence wholly out of proportion to its size. Wilberforce had no more able coadjutor in his crusade against slavery than Joseph Sturge of Birmingham. The good work done by John Howard and Elizabeth Fry in the matter of the reformation of prison life still continues to bear fruit, while the names of the Gurneys of Earlham, the Frys of Bristol, the Barclays of London, the Tangyes of Birmingham, the Palmers of Reading, the Peases, the Cadburys, the Rowntrees, the Carrs, and many others, will always be honourably connected with the history of British commerce. Richard Reynolds of Bristol was one of the most enlightened philanthropists of his time. Amongst the best-known English and American Quaker writers may be mentioned the names of William Penn, Robert Barclay, Thomas Story, Stephen Grellet, and in our own times J. S. Rowntree. The literature of Quakerism is enormous. A list of Quaker books occupies two bulky volumes, while Joseph Smith's "Bibliotheca Anti-Quakeriana" fills over 470 pages. Women have from the first played a prominent rôle in the affairs of the Society of Friends. At the last meeting of the Conference of the Free Churches Mrs. George Cadbury —herself an eloquent speaker—alluded to the ministrations of the early Quaker woman-preacher who figures in one of the quaint old caricatures now reproduced. Elizabeth Fry had no more energetic fellow-worker than Anna Forster, the wife of William Forster, the indefatigable missionary to America, whose modest residence was at Bradpole in Dorsetshire. It was there that their son, the late Right Hon. William Edward Forster, M.P., the future Chief Secretary for Ireland, was born in 1818. Bridport, like Poole, was once a great Quaker centre, and contains many landmarks of the old days of trials and tribulations, of stripes and imprisonments. The quaint old meeting-house was, in the reign of William and Mary, the barn of Daniel Tayler, a pious and prosperous Friend, who converted it into a meeting-house, to which purpose it is still devoted.



INTERIOR OF THE MEETING-HOUSE IN BISHOPSGATE STREET WITHOUT.
Showing the desks occupied by the Clerk to the Yearly Meeting and his assistants.

THE INTERIOR OF DEVONSHIRE HOUSE, LONDON, E.C.
A view of the scene of the Yearly Meeting of the Society, as seen from the Clerk's desk.

Digitized by Google

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS AT LEEDS.

ONE OF THE EARLIEST CARICATURES ON THE QUAKERS.
Showing the punishments which awaited them.

The standard history of the Society of Friends has still to be written, but much information of great interest may be obtained from the perusal of three small volumes, viz., "The Friends, who they are, what they have done," by William Beck; "Quaker Strongholds," by C. E. Stephen, a sister of the late Sir James Stephen; and last, but by no means least, "The Society of Friends, Its Faith and Practice," by Mr. J. S. Rowntree.

At the end of his little book Mr. Rowntree gives in three pages the history of both English and American Quakerism, in the form of chronological memoranda. The following are the principal events recorded during the nineteenth century: 1807, Slave Trade abolished by Great Britain; 1828, Test and Corporation Act repealed; 1833, Admission of Friends to Parliament; 1866, Qualification of Office Act repealed; 1880, Burial Acts Amendment Act passed. The first Friend to enter the House of Commons was the late Joseph Pease, and the family of Pease is still well represented at Westminster. Joseph Pease was soon followed by John Bright, and the cause of Free Trade, like that of the Slave, found its foremost champions amongst the Friends. Amongst the illustrations of this article will be found the portraits of several Quaker Members of Parliament, but it must be remembered that the following well-known politicians are also either Friends or of distinctly Quaker descent: Sir Edward Birkbeck, Jacob Bright, Sir T. F. Buxton, Sir Joseph Dimsdale, Sir R. N. Fowler, Messrs. Hudson and John Henry Gurney, Mr. F. J. Horniman, Mr. W. H. Leatham, Mr. John Ellis, Messrs. Walter and George William Palmer, Mr. Alfred Webb, Mr. J. J. Wilson, and Mr. John Whitwell. The Society of Friends has its own schools, some of which have already been named. One of the most prosperous and popular of these is Sidcot, the great Quaker seminary of the West, nestling in the heart of the Mendips near Cheddar in Somersetshire. Three years hence Sidcot will celebrate its centenary. Amongst the illustrations now given is a view of the school. The Sidcot Old Scholars' Association is a very vigorous organisation.

The Quakers have also their own booksellers and publishers in the persons of Messrs. Headley, who are located at the entrance of Devonshire House, the ancient stronghold and centre of all that concerns the Society of Friends. Here are published The Friend and the British Friend, as well as the Journal of the Friends' Historical Society, which possesses a general as well as a purely special interest, for the annals of the Quakers enter very largely into the history of Greater as well as Lesser Britain. Mr. John Stephenson Rowntree is the President of the Society, the joint Editors of the journal being Mr. Isaac Sharp and Mr. Norman Penney. Many centenarians have flourished in the ranks of the Friends. Probably their doyenne was the late Mrs. Elizabeth Hanbury, who worked side by side with Elizabeth Fry, and died three or four years ago at the patriarchal age of 107.

Devonshire House, for the best part of two centuries, has been the scene of the Yearly Meetings, transferred, as far as 1905 is concerned, to Leeds. Outside all is bustle, noise, and confusion, but within a few paces of the entrance depicted in our illustration you come on a "home of ancient peace," where all is quietude and silence. Here you find Mr. Sharp hard at work at his desk, and Mr. Penney busily engaged either in the well-filled library or the museum, where the relics vary from the rarest mezzotint portraits to the broadsides belonging to the time when the "Meeting for Sufferings" meant what the name indicates. Far down in the cellars is a bottle of port wine, sealed up long ago by some Quaker prisoner to whom it was given while in durance vile, and who desired that it should not be opened until the last trace of Quaker disability had vanished. The Great Fire of London in 1666 having destroyed the original meeting-house on the site of the General Post Office at St. Martin's-le-Grand, the Friends took some rooms in part of an earl's mansion outside Bishopsgate.

A CONTEMPORARY CARICATURE OF HANNAH TRAPNELL
One of the eloquent and fearless female Quaker preachers of the seventeenth century.

The old meeting-house was rebuilt, and another, known as the White Hart Court Meeting-house, sprang up, but the occupancy of the rooms in Devonshire House was not abandoned, and in them the London Yearly Meeting had its commencement in 1672. In 1745 the meeting-house which had been erected on the Devonshire House site was used as a guard-room by the Militia during the scare by the Young Pretender's march towards London. In 1766 Thomas Talwin (a liberal member of the Meeting) acquired the freehold for the Society of Friends. Towards the close of the eighteenth century, when the London Yearly Meeting had become an element of great power in the Society, premises were sought for that would prove adequate for a larger attendance at it than had previously been possible. The "Meeting for Sufferings," after having had various projects under its consideration, decided on the purchase of a property closely adjoining Devonshire House. This was one of the old London inns known by the sign of the Dolphin, and was entered from Bishopsgate Street, extending backward as far as Cavendish Court. Here in 1793-94 the Society built the two large meeting-houses, each capable of seating about 1,000 persons, the one for the use of the Men's, and the other for the Women's, Yearly Meeting. The former figures as an illustration.

In these days of revivalism in Wales, and the cry for "a return to a simpler life" uttered by the eminent Anglican bishop, whose diocese includes Devonshire House, as well as the Friends' meeting-houses of Peel Court, Stoke Newington, Wandsworth, Hammersmith, Westminster, Upper Holloway, and Chelsea, the homely teachings of Fox and his followers are well worth studying. The Quaker has long ceased to be an object of either caricature or religious persecution. The Society has earned the respect of all right-thinking men and law-abiding citizens. It is felt that even its form of worship somehow or other realises the ideas of Keble when he wrote the lines:

"'Twas silence in Thy temple, Lord,
When slowly through the hallow'd air,
The spreading cloud of incense soar'd
Charg'd with the breath of Israel's prayer.

'Twas silence round Thy throne on high
When the last wondrous seal unclos'd,
And in the portals of the sky
Their armies awfully repos'd.

And this deep pause, that o'er us now
Is hovering—comes it not of Thee?"

R. K. Y.

A CONTEMPORARY CARICATURE.
Showing the arrival of John Naylor, an early Quaker in Bristol.

Digitized by Google

THE CRICKET SEASON.

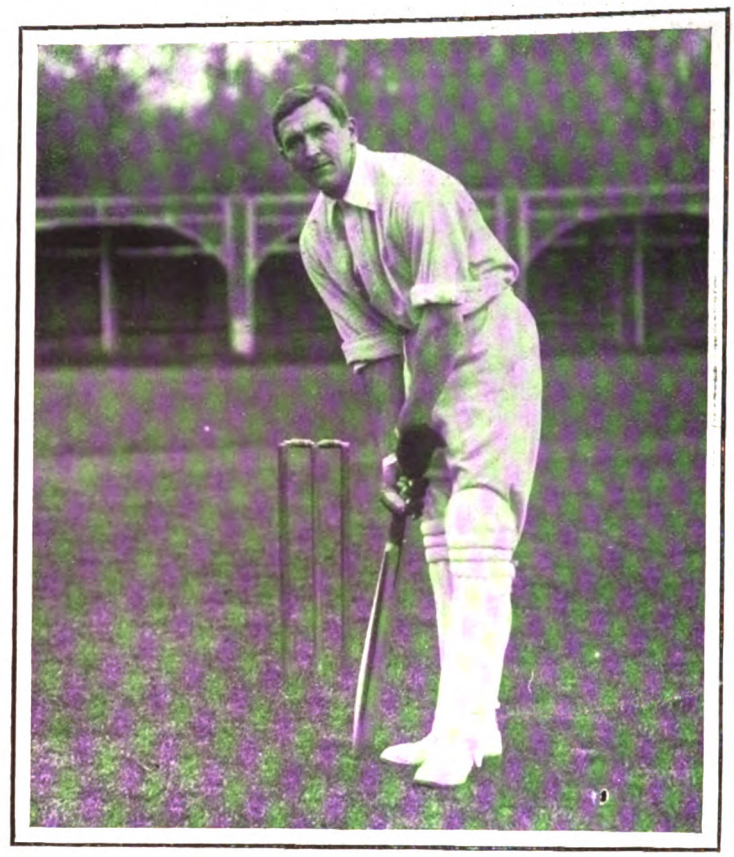
A. C. MACLAREN.

On Monday next, at the Trent Bridge Ground, Nottingham, this batsman, than whom there is none whose back the Australians would sooner see when he is playing against them, will almost certainly be playing for England, indeed, it was at one time thought that he might captain the England XI. He is one of the few men who scored 100 in their first innings in first-class county cricket, while his score of 424 for Lancashire v. Somerset at Taunton in July, 1895, is still the highest individual score on record in a first-class match. There is no better captain in the world, and his fielding at short-slip is a model for young players.

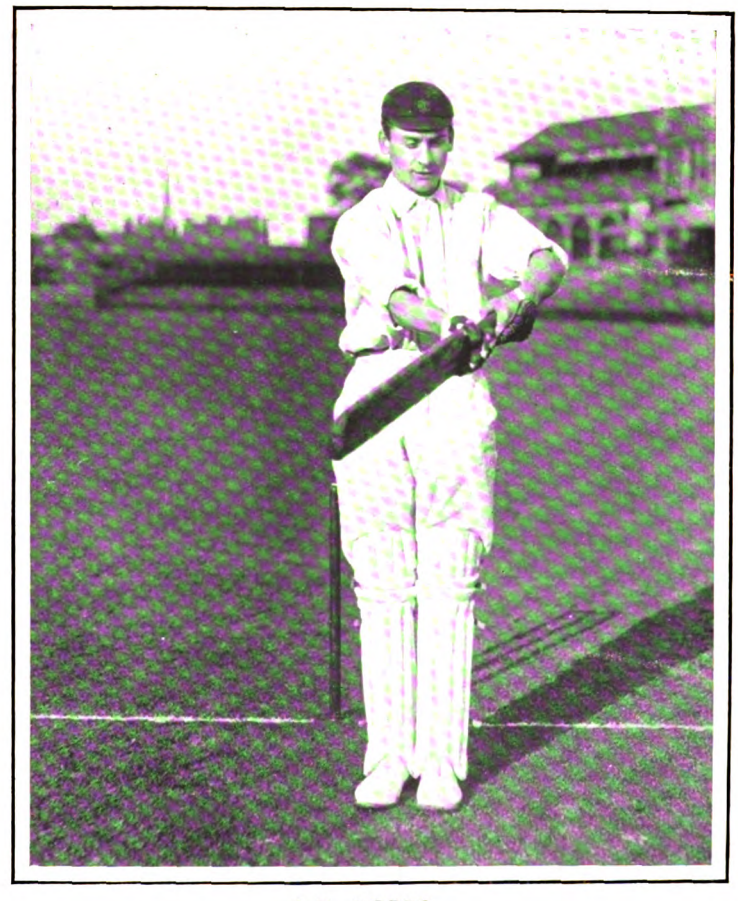


C. B. FRY.

There are very few records in cricket which are beyond the reach of this famous old Reptonian-Oxonian. He scored six consecutive centuries in first-class cricket a few seasons ago, and this year, in one week, May 8 to May 13, he scored 156, 105, 97, and 201 not out, thus missing by three runs only the wonderful feat of scoring a century in each innings of two matches in one week. He has never done himself justice against Australian bowling, but he has a magnificent chance this season, and he may begin next week at Nottingham. This year he is playing freer cricket, and is hitting almost as hard as any man who ever played.

T. HAYWARD.

Here we have another stumbling-block to a triumphant Australian march through the Test matches. In his first match this season against the Colonial team he scored 129 not out in the second innings, and on his form of last season it is very likely he will go one better than his astonishing form against the 1899 Australian XI. Hayward is the bedrock of English batting. He can occupy one end and tire the attack for hours, gradually going on building up a score which few of his fellows can beat. His fielding is smarter than it was a few seasons ago, and there are only one or two men as likely as he is to play in all five Test matches.



J. B. HOBBS.

Mention of Hayward just now at once causes cricketers and cricket-lovers to think of the young batsman who has made such a promising aéout at the Oval this season, for it was owing to Hayward that young Hobbs, who is Cambridge born, like Hayward, went to the Oval to qualify. Scores of 88, 155, and 94 in his first four first-class matches, the last figure having been recorded against the Australians, at once stamp a batsman as being out of the ordinary, but in Hobbs's case the style in which they were obtained was unequivocal. He possesses, moreover, the correct temperament for the successful cricketer.

Digitized by Google

THE RACING SEASON.

MENACED by a serious, though friendly, invasion by our friends across the Channel, the question of the moment is whether or no we have a champion worthy of defending the honour of Old England in the approaching struggle for the Derby. As far as one can see, the result of the Newmarket Stakes, which was run on the 17th inst., points clear enough to the fact that Lord Rosebery's Cicero is the best colt we can put forward to meet M. E. Blanc's two cracks, Val d'Or and Jardy, both sons of Flying Fox. Opinions differ somewhat as to the style in which Cicero won from Llangibby and Signorino, but as far as I could see, he won very easily indeed, and indeed, if "book" form is to be relied upon, he would have to do so, if he is expected to follow up the victory by a still greater one at Epsom, for one cannot forget the terrible example that Jardy made of the same two horses in the Middle Park Plate last year. He won literally in a hack canter, and at no part of the race was he going as fast as I had seen him doing two days previously in his morning's work. Llangibby has wonderfully improved, and is such a lengthy, powerful sort of colt, that there is still room for improvement, and one cannot help thinking, with all due deference to his popular owner, that Chevalier Ginistrelli's beautiful colt, Signorino, is hardly up to his best form just now. With regard to the French colts, pleased as we should be to beat them fairly and squarely, one cannot but express every sympathy with M. E. Blanc, in whose stable several horses are coughing. Every precaution has been taken, and up to the time of writing both Jardy and Val d'Or have presented a clean bill of health; but Adam was unable to meet his engagement in the Prix Lupin, and speculators would perhaps be well advised to delay their investments on the race until they know that the two French cracks are really well. At all events, M. Blanc may feel assured that all true sportsmen will wish that no untoward mishap may rob him of his chances of winning the greatest of the classic races of the year. The Newmarket Stakes is really the only item of much interest to be found on the programme of the Second Spring Meeting at Newmarket. No two year olds of much promise were to be seen, and there was really little that called for notice. D'Orsay (7-st. 9-lb.), Antonio (7-st. 12-lb.), and Pharisee (9-st. 9-lb.) finished in the order named for the Newmarket Handicap. The latter, who was only beaten by a head for second place, ran a really brilliant race, with every disadvantage in the matter of weight.

W. A. Rouch.

LORD ROSEBERY'S CICERO, BY CYLLENE—GAS.
Winner of the Newmarket Stakes.

The institution of the Newmarket Stakes has proved to be a sad blow to the old-fashioned Payne Stakes, for which such horses as Harvester and Melton are no longer seen under the starter's orders. Cape Verde, who won it this year from Shah Jehan and Carstone, is hardly up to even smart plating form, and according to the running at Sandown Park is a long way behind the form shown by Early Bird, who, by the way, won the Flying Handicap for Mr. Ruston. He started at the nice price of 6 to 1, and racing folks who are blessed with a retentive memory should certainly have profited not a little thereby.

W. A. Rouch

LORD FARQUHAR'S AIRLIE, BY AYRSHIRE—LADY ERNIE.
Winner of the Alexandra Handicap.

Two bright and cheery days' racing at Gatwick on Friday and Saturday came as a pleasant change after the more or less solemn proceedings of the Newmarket Meeting, the Ashdown Selling Handicap in particular providing a most exciting finish, in which the short head victory of Fireman was mainly due to the vigorous riding of Evans, who had all his work cut out to stall off the determined challenge of St. Moritz, ridden by J. Hare, jun. The principal race of the day was the Alexandra Handicap of 877-sovereigns. Helter Skelter was made favourite at 5 to 2, Airlie found plenty of friends at 3 to 1, and backers were forthcoming for both Laughing Gull and Melayr. Edicius, who is always a source of trouble at the post, outdid his worst performances on this occasion, and when finally the barrier went up he whipped round and put himself completely out of the race. Airlie, on the other hand, jumped off with the lead, which he never lost, and was followed home at a distance of three lengths by Melayr, who finished a head in front of Countermark. Sweet Mary once more showed a clean pair of heels to her field in the Worth Stakes, and cantered home six lengths in front of Fruitful and Fairlawn; and everyone was pleased to see "Morny" Cannon break the spell of ill luck which has clung to him so persistently by riding Jonquil to victory in the Mart Plate.

The chief items on Saturday's programme were the Prince's Handicap of 500-sovereigns, and the Marlborough Stakes of a similar value. The former proved to be the good thing foreshadowed by the betting for Long Tom, and Mr. H. J. King's nicely-bred colt Esquire, by Sir Visto out of Galanthis, had not much difficulty in beating Lady Yatesbury and Costly Lady for the Marlborough Stakes.

Longford Lad may win the Salisbury Cup on Friday, and Sweet Mary will win the Foal Stakes on the same day.

CAURIRE.

Digitized by Google

THE GATWICK SPRING MEETING.

LORD FARQUHAR'S AIRLIE WINS THE ALEXANDRA HANDICAP. W. A. Rouch.

THE MEMBERS' LAWN AT GATWICK. W. A. Rouch.

From the spectators' point of view there are few pleasanter race-courses in England than Gatwick, and the charming Surrey venue was exceedingly well patronised at last week's meeting.

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

Campbell-Gray.

MISS WINIFRED HARE AS THE TROUBADOUR, AT THE LONDON COLISEUM.

The wonderful programme at the Coliseum has been strengthened considerably recently, and a charming scena, entitled "The Princess and the Troubadour," with Miss Winifred Hare and Miss Topsy Sinden, has been attracting very favourable comment. This is by no means Miss Hare's first appearance at a variety theatre, but she and Miss Sinden are both better known in musical comedy.

Digitized by Google

Diet v. Cosmetics.

A Good Food Clears the Complexion.

The best "Beauty Doctor" in the world is a good, pure food. Rich, greasy, or poorly cooked foods will ruin the finest complexion a woman was ever blessed with, and all the cosmetics and treatments she may give it will only cover up, not remove the blemishes.

The treatment must come from the inside, for the pores of the skin must have the proper food to be healthy.

A lady living in the West of London writes as follows :—

"Grape-Nuts Food has done me a world of good. Some years ago I fell a victim to a serious illness, which did great damage to my constitution. I gave up hope of ever recovering my natural good health until last winter, when tempted to try Grape-Nuts more from a liking for that kind of food than from any hope of it doing me good.

"I found to my surprise after a week or two's trial that I was getting quite plump, my voice and chest much stronger, and my complexion beautifully clear. In fact, since taking the Grape-Nuts my friends say I look ten years younger, and I believe them, as my glass tells me it is true."

Name given by the Grape-Nuts Co., Ltd., 66 Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

Grape-Nuts

DR. J. M. BARRIE says—"What I call the 'Arcadia' in My Lady Nicotine is the CRAVEN Mixture and no other."

"CRAVEN"—acknowledged throughout the World the Mixture of Merit and Purity. The Favourite Tobacco since its invention in 1857.

Do not fail to give a trial to the "CRAVEN" Cigarette — "The Cigarette of Distinction."

CORNWALL

LONDON TO PENZANCE & BACK, 40/-

What the celebrated author, Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, says about CORNWALL:—

"I was delighted with the place and the people, and I can quite see the numerous possibilities of Cornwall as a Pleasure Resort both for Winter and Summer. Cornwall astounded and delighted me."

Thousands of delighted travellers acknowledge it to be the ideal home

SUMMER, HEALTH, & PLEASURE RESORT.

Why incur the trouble and expense of a long Foreign Journey when the

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY

can take you in a few hours to the DELIGHTFUL

Cornish Riviera?

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| PADDINGTON to | | | |
| Falmouth in | 7 HRS. | 10 MIN. | |
| St. Ives | 8 | — | |
| Penzance | 7 | 40 | |

Fast and Luxurious Trains. Cheap Fares.

G.W.R. Co.'s Tregenna Castle Hotel at St. Ives.

Write to SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LINE, PADDINGTON STATION, W., for Illustrated Booklet Free. JAMES C. INGLIS, General Manager.

"The House for Veils."

Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .

98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,

famous for

The Royal Crescent Veil,

a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS. MOTOR HATS. MOTOR VEILS.

The Latest and Largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxe ready for return no trouble after selecting.

PRICE'S CANDLES.

GOLD MEDAL PALMITINE FOR DINING & DRAWING ROOMS

GRAND PRIZE PARASTRINE FOR USE UNDER SHADES

Digitized by Google

LITERARY NOTES.

MR. HENRY W. LUCY has published with Messrs. George Newnes, Limited, another volume of "Peeps at Parliament," uniform with the first volume. The period covered by this second series is from December, 1896, to December, 1902, a period which included the death of Mr. Gladstone. That fact gives Mr. Lucy opportunity for one or two reminiscences of the great man, and Mr. F. C. Gould, who illustrates the book, the chance of making some delightful drawings of him, two of which we reproduce. Everybody knows "Toby, M.P.," and everybody who knows him likes him, which is not surprising, considering the shrewd but never unkind wit, the fairness to both sides, and the swift appreciation of a joke, which make this volume, like its predecessor, such delightful reading. We do not know which to praise most, Mr. Lucy's letterpress, or Mr. Gould's illustrations, which are scattered freely over nearly every page of the book. Neither Mr. Gould nor Mr. Lucy is, properly speaking, a caricaturist, but they both have a way of seeing the funny side of things [illegible] people; and while never overstepping the bounds of good taste and good manners, they give lifelike and deliciously funny pictures of the great men who often seem so inhuman and stodgy when we read about them in the newspapers.

Later Peeps at Parliament.

* * *

WE anticipated Mr. Norman Gale's "New Cricket Songs" (Alston Rivers) with some pleasure, and now that the book has appeared we have no reason to be disappointed. There is a fine open-air spirit about it which is thoroughly English. Mr. Norman Gale has not forgotten in his enthusiasm for cricket his old enthusiasm for poetry, and we should like to make a present of this book to half-a-dozen people or more of our acquaintance who have come to take themselves too seriously, and life too hard through overwork or overliving. Here is a verse from "Dr. Cricket":

New Cricket Songs.

"Dear Tom, I do not like your look,
Your brows are (see the poets) bent;
You're biting hard on Tedium's hook,
You're jaundiced, crumpled, footed, spent.
What's worse, so mischievous your state,
You have no pluck to try and trick it.
Here! Cram this cap upon your pate,
And come with me to Doctor Cricket!"

That is worth all the prescriptions in oz. and dwt. in the world.

* * *

WHEN we picked up Pontifex's "Book of Bridge" (Blackie) we were quite under the impression that we were handling a prayer-book. The limp red morocco of the cover, the rubrics, the gilded edges, and the general feel of the volume, make it entirely suitable as a manual of devotion for the religion of the moment. We may say, too, that its theology is not alarmingly advanced, and is, indeed, thoroughly sound. Pontifex's way is not to dogmatise, but "to exhibit to his readers the rival theories of play where the opinions of players differ, leaving it to their own judgment to decide upon the best"; and he contrives to make his advice fairly easy to understand—always a difficult task in writing about card games. One of the most valuable parts of his book is a collection of sixteen hands illustrative of interesting points in the game, the diagrams to which, printed in red and black, make it simple to master them.

Pons Pontificis.

* * *

IT is difficult to find new terms of praise for each succeeding volume of Messrs. Newnes's Art Library. One can only say, over and over again, that the illustrations are well chosen, well arranged, well reproduced, and the letterpress just and to the point. It is surprising into how small a space the "Bacchus and Ariadne" in the National Gallery can be placed, and yet retain its quality. It is worth turning to the reproduction of it in this volume to see how admirably the right hand of Ariadne, which is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful

"AN ATTRACTIVE LISTENER."

An illustration from "Later Peeps at Parliament," by H. W. Lucy.

pieces of painting in the world, has come out. In his Introduction, Mr. Malcolm Bell makes an admirable selection from the mass of things which might be said about Titian's early work; and in particular, in considering the mutual artistic relations of Titian, Giorgione and Palma Vecchio, inclines, rightly we believe, to the opinion that Giorgione's influence on Titian was not so great as is commonly supposed—that Titian, indeed, was the master spirit of the three.

The Early Work of Titian.

"A WAY OF SITTING UPON PEOPLE."

One of the illustrations by F. C. Gould in "Later Peeps at Parliament," by H. W. Lucy, published by George Newnes, Limited.

* * *

IT is something of a fall from these Titians to reproductions, however good, of Royal Academy pictures; but we have nothing but admiration for the way in which Messrs Cassell have carried out the technical work in their "Royal Academy Pictures," of which they have lately sent us the second part There is nothing, so far as we know, that can compare with this issue in London. it is certainly immeasurably superior to any of the French books of reproductions of the pictures in the Salon which have come under our notice. This second part contains as a frontispiece a photogravure of Mr. B. W. Leader's "Silvery Thames," and reproductions of pictures and statues by such well-known artists as Mr. Frampton, Mr. Tuke, Sir Edward Poynter, Mr. Alfred East, and many others. Particularly spirited is Miss Lucy Kemp-Welch's "Mixed Company at a Race Meeting."

Royal Academy Pictures.

* * *

A NEW novel which is sure to arouse great discussion, and possibly some horror, is Miss Elizabeth Robins's new book, "A Dark Lantern" (Heinemann). We imagine that Miss Robins's own sex will protest somewhat hotly against the opinion she advances as to what qualities in men induce women to fall in love with them. Miss Robins makes her heroine, a quite nice and refined girl, give up the last thing that a woman usually clings to, for the sake of a man who is the greatest brute we have ever met in fiction or out of it. It is equally probable that the average man who has not been entirely robbed of his illusion will protest as firmly against the notion that the creatures he is in the habit of making angels of, are in reality such as Miss Robins believes them. Miss Robins can write nothing that is not clever and powerful; but, much as we value courage, we believe her to have been ill-advised in getting, as well as in expressing, such opinions as she advances here.

A Dark Lantern.

* * *

A CAPITAL story of a rather wild type comes from Mr. Arrowsmith. At the beginning of "A Cheque for Three Thousand," by Arthur Henry Vesey, we find Mr. Whitehurst, senior member of a firm of bankers, frankly tired of being, as he says, a machine to turn out money for recognised and deserving charities. Determined to have a little philanthropic spree on his own, he resolves to give 3,000-dol. to the first young man, no matter what this character, who takes his fancy. That cheque goes to Mr. Norman Bridgeworth Pennington, journalist, who undertakes to report in person one year later how he has spent the money. We have no intention of robbing the story of its point by saying what happened to Mr. Pennington and his money, but we strongly advise readers to turn to the book and find out.

A Cheque for Three Thousand.

BOOKS TO READ.

Biography.

Memories of Life at Oxford, and Experiences in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Germany, Spain, and Elsewhere, by Frederick Meyrick. (Murray.)

Napoleon — The First Phase — Some Chapters on the Boyhood and Youth of Bonaparte, 1769—1793, by Oscar Browning. (Lane.)

Fiction.

Dorothy Tuke, a Story of the Sea, by Edward Downey. (Hurst and Blackett.)

Stingaree, by E. W. Hornung. (Chatto and Windus.)

The Friendships of Veronica, by Thomas Cobb. (Rivers.)

The Tyranny of the Dark, by Hamlin Garland. (Harper.)

The Three-Cornered Hat, by D. Pedro de Alarcon. (Nutt.)

Naval.

The Old Shipmates of Salem, by C. E. Trow. (Putnam.)

Poetry.

Peace, and other Poems, by Arthur Christopher Benson. (Lane.)

More Cricket Songs, by Norman Gale. (Rivers.)

Digitized by Google

The Correct Method OF Feeding

The old idea of trying to make a young infant adapt itself to an unsuitable food is wrong. Every sensible mother knows that a farinaceous food which nourishes a child of 12 months would make a baby of one month ill. Never give a starchy food to children under five or six months of age, as young infants cannot digest starch, and the giving of such foods has much to do with the illness and malnutrition amongst young children.

The only sensible and rational plan is to give suitable foods adapted to the age and growing needs of the child, and this is provided by

The 'Allenburys' Foods.

Milk Food No. 1.

For Infants from birth to three months of age. So like mother's milk that it can be given alternately with the breast with perfect comfort to the child.

The 'Allenburys'

Milk Food No. 2.

For babies between the ages of three and six months. Simply No. 1 strengthened to meet the increasing wants of the baby. It stimulates and strengthens the digestive organs.

The 'Allenburys'

Malted Food No. 3.

For children of six months and upwards. The best food for developing the digestive powers of the child. It promotes the formation of firm flesh and strong bone.

A Pamphlet on Infant Feeding and Management sent free on request.

ALLEN & HANBURYS Ltd., 37, Lombard St., LONDON, E.C.

U.S.A.: Niagara Falls. Australia: Sydney. Canada: Toronto. S. Africa: Cape Town.

HANSEN'S UNKET TABLETS.

A SEASONABLE CHANCE.

Hansen's Junket Tablets are double the value of the next best. They make Junket better than any other preparation and are always reliable. Housewives everywhere are adding this delicious dish to the day's menu. Be sure you get Hansen's.

Sold by all Grocers, Chemists, etc., in Glass Tubes, containing 24 Tablets, each sufficient to make a quart of Junket. Sample Tube and Book of over 30 Recipes, 6d. post free from Hansen's Depot 77, St. Thomas's Street, London, S.E.

CONNOISSEURS SMOKE

TEOFANI'S

HIGH-CLASS

CIGARETTES.

TEOFANI'S Cigarettes receive the Highest Awards at all International Exhibitions, and are Sold by Leading Purveyors throughout the WORLD.

TEOFANI & CO., LONDON.

SPA, BELGIUM.

(10 Hours from London.)

The Oldest Chalybeate Springs in the World.

Finest Bathing Establishment in Europe. Best cure for Anæmia, Chlorosis, and Heart Affections. Countless attractions, Steeplechases, Horse Show, Concerts, Theatre, Automobile Races, Golf, Balls. For programme write BUREAU DE PUBLICITE, SPA.

CHEAP CONTINENTAL HOLIDAYS.

BRUSSELS FOR WATERLOO, THE ARDENNES, AND Liége Universal Exhibition

VIA

HARWICH-ANTWERP

every week-day.

Dining and Breakfast Cars.

Send post-card to the Continental Manager, G.E. Ry., Liverpool Street Station, London, E.C., for descriptive illustrated pamphlet (free).

You avoid Dinginess by using a Bissell.

The Bissell Carpet Sweepers are noiseless, dustless, and more durable than brooms.

The Spring selection is now being shown by all Ironmongers, Stores and House Furnishers at 10 6 11/3, 14/-, 15/6 & 18/-

SAME PRICE EVERYWHERE.

BOOKS WANTED.—£20 each offered Lord Lilford's Birds, 36 parts; Dresser's Birds of Europe, 9 vols.; Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1st Editions, 1719-20; Vicar of Wakefield, 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766; Burns' Poems, Kilmarnock Edition, 1786; Flore et Zephyr, Ballet Mythologique par Theophile-Wagstaffe, with 8 plates, 1836; £15 each for Aldine Poets, Pickering, 53 vols.; Alpine Journal, 20 vols.; Gallery of Fashion, 8 vols., 1794-1801; Institute of Actuaries' Proceedings, a set; Shelley's Queen Mab, a Poem, boards, 1813.—BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOPS, 14 and 16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
The charmingly situated Seaside Resort on the Dorsetshire Coast.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Unequalled for its Marine and Land Excursions. Golfing and Fishing.

WEYMOUTH. WEYMOUTH.
Beautifully Illustrated Guides sent free of charge by the Town Clerk, on receipt of cost of postage, 3d.

MAGNA CIDER.

"The Sparkling Wine of Somerset."

A delicious appetising beverage. Guaranteed genuine apple juice. Declared by Lancet absolutely pure. Strongly recommended by doctors in cases of Gout, Rheumatism, and Obesity. Brut Cider a speciality. Send 22s. for specimen case, containing 1 doz. quarts of Speciality and 1 doz. quarts of a sweeter blend; or 25s. for 2 doz. pints of each quality. Carriage, bottles, and cases included.—MAGNA CIDER CO., Marston Magna, Somerset.

FOR THE RACES.

LEATHER-COVERED

WALKING STICKS & UMBRELLAS.

With Pencil Attachment In Gold or Silver Gilt.

Manufactured by—

BRIGG & SONS,

5, ST. JAMES'S STREET, S.W., or 33, Avenue de l'Opera, PARIS.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

RHEUMATISM.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS.

The only Remedy that Relieves and Cures all Rheumatic Complaints. Sure, Safe, and Effectual. All Chemists and Stores, 1/1½ & 2/9 per box.

THE CHARING CROSS BANK. ESTABLISHED 1870.
119 and 120, BISHOPSGATE ST. WITHIN, E.C.
and 28, BEDFORD ST., CHARING CROSS, London.

Assets, £694,403. Liabilities, £372,291. Surplus, £322,112.

Loans of £30 to £2,000 granted at a few hours' notice in town or country on mortgage of furniture, trade and farm stock, plant, crops, etc., without removal. Also on deeds, policies, and reversions. Distance no object. Easy terms.

2½ per cent. allowed on Current account balances.

DEPOSITS of £10 and upwards received on terms as under.
Subject to 3 months' Notice of Withdrawal, 5 per cent. per annum.
" 6 " " 6 " "
" 12 " " 7 " "

Special terms for longer periods. Interest paid quarterly. The Terminable Deposit Bonds pay nearly 9 per cent., and are a safe investment. Write or call for Prospectus.

A. WILLIAMS, H. J. TALL, } Joint Managers.

BIRKBECK BANK

ESTABLISHED 1851.

Current Accounts. 2 % Interest allowed on minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
Deposits. 2½ % Interest allowed on Deposit Accounts.
Advances made. Stocks and Shares bought and sold.

Apply C. F. RAVENSCROFT, Secretary,
Southampton Buildings, High Holborn, W.C.

Keen Cooks Know KEATING'S POWDER KILLS Beetles

The "Country Life" Library.

GARDENING FOR BEGINNERS.

THIRD EDITION.

NOW READY.

By E. T. COOK, Editor of "The Garden," Author of "Trees and Shrubs for English Gardens."

Price 12/6 Nett.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Leaves from a Collector's Note-book.

Oak-apple Day and its Associations. Medals, badges, and other relics connected with the exile of King Charles II., and specially with his flight after the battle of Worcester—September 3—October 15, 1651.

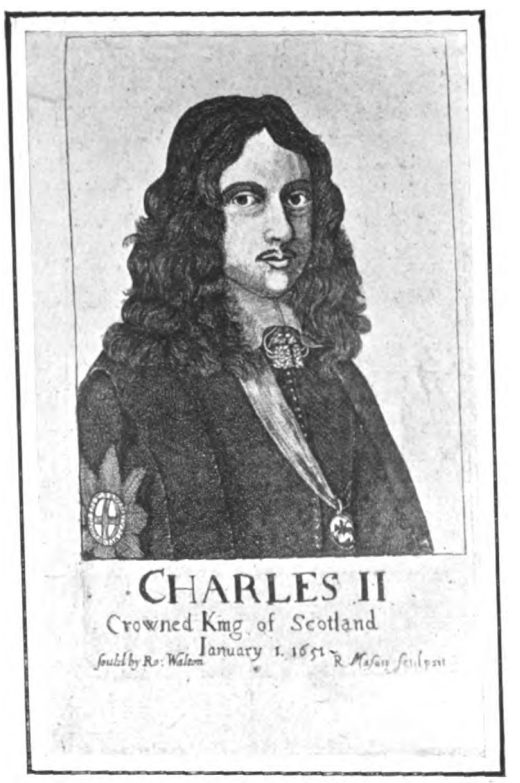
THE collectors of Stuart relics of every description—pictures, plate, autographs, medals, miniatures, engravings, broadsides, tracts, and even locks of hair—are both numerous and ardent, if silenced by the record prices lately paid for a small bundle of letters from the widowed Queen, Henrietta Maria, and others relating to the political intrigues of the years 1649-50, but unfortunately stopping short before the commencement of the still more eventful year 1651, which began with the coronation of Charles II. at Scone and ended in his discomfiture at Worcester on September 3 and his escape to France from Shoreham on the 15th of the following month. The latest, and perhaps the ablest of the many annalists of the chequered career of the Merry Monarch, Professor Osmund Airy, describes the "Flight of the King" as "the romance par excellence of British history," and certainly the most dramatic incident of the five weeks during which it lasted was the concealment of the fugitive monarch in the oak at Boscobel by the faithful Penderels or Pendrills—an occurrence destined ten years later to give a new sign to at least 3 per cent. of the wine-shops and ale-houses of England.

Although the actual anniversary of the "Miraculous Preservation" occurs in September, the name of "Oak-apple Day" has for nearly two centuries and a-half been given to May 29, a day which not only witnessed Charles's birth, but his "Happy Restoration" to the throne of these realms. The oak now shown to Boscobel pilgrims is probably a descendant of the oak of 1651, which, according to Evelyn, was hacked to pieces by relic-hunters before the end of 1660.

For years after the Restoration a royal oak invariably figured in London civic spectacles. "Going to London," says Evelyn, "my Lord Mayor's Show stopped me in Cheapside, one of the pageants representing a greate wood, with the royal oak and the history of his majesty's happy escape at Boscobel." Two rare and curious medals commemorating the oak tree incident are preserved in the British Museum. One represents the King on horseback, attended by the Penderels, outside the walls of Worcester, with the legend, "God bless my Lord Wilmot, Lady Lane, Col. Carlos, Cap. Tedersall," the other bears the royal oak containing in its branches three crowns and the words, "God did Preserve C. R. from Woster. 1651."



CHARLES II. IN 1651.
(From the contemporary portrait by Mason.)

A salver made out of the original tree was given to the University of Oxford by Mrs. Lætitia Lane, and the same "fair-spread ivy-clad thriving oak" appears to have afforded material for several tables and chairs, as well as the standards of the communion-table in the chapel at Gopsal, the frame of the portrait of Charles II. at Kiplin Hall, and a dozen other useful or ornamental objects, including numerous snuff-boxes. At least fifteen engraved portraits of Charles II. in the year 1651 are in existence. Some of them are almost unique; but not the least interesting of them is the one given in a little volume setting forth the Royal nativity, in which it will be seen that special importance was attached to the conjunction of the stars in 1651. Most of the loyal followers of the King de jure at this critical period of his career appear to have worn badges of various shapes, but all impressed with his effigy. A group of these rare and interesting mementoes formed for a private collector by Messrs. Spink is now reproduced. In the centre of them is to be seen the only known copy in gold of the medal struck in honour of the young sovereign's coronation at Scone on New Year's Day, 1651. In Hawkins's "Medallic Illustrations," Vol. I., pages 437-449, will be found a full description of thirty-two varieties of these badges, indicating, as the compiler points out, "loyalty and affection to the monarchy." Nearly the whole of them evidently belong to the earlier portion of his exile — the years 1649-50-51 — when the eyes of all Europe were directed to his efforts to regain the throne of his ancestors, and when the sterling fidelity of a few faithful subjects (some of them in very humble stations of life) saved him from the tragic fate of his father, and gave posterity "Oak-apple Day" as an anniversary for all time. B.

A GROUP OF RARE ROYALIST MEDALS AND BADGES OF THE YEAR 1651
Including the Gold Scone Coronation Medal; the King's head on the obverse, the Lion of Scotland on the reverse.

Digitized by Google

MALLETT
& SON

bold and offer for sale specimens of the

HIGHEST QUALITY

OLD · ENGLISH · FURNITURE

as well as a great collection of the simpler and less costly pieces of each successive period.

EVERY PIECE GUARANTEED.

AT THE OCTAGON, BATH.

(Two hours from Paddington.)

IMPORTANT AND INTERESTING BOOK SALE.

On the 29th, 30th and 31st of May,

Messrs. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE,

13, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.,

will dispose of the valuable library of

HIS HONOUR JUDGE PHILBRICK, K.C.

Catalogues now ready.

CATALOGUES OF

ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, VIEWS, PORTRAITS, etc.,

GRATIS.

Books and Engravings Bought.

JAMES RIMELL & SON,

DEALERS IN OLD BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS,

53, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, LONDON, W.

PENNY - HENRY III.

RARE COINS & MEDALS

(AT MODERATE PRICES)

SPINK & SON LTD.

17 & 18, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

AUTOGRAPHS—HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

The oldest Dealers in Europe. For Catalogues, issued monthly, and all information write at once to

M. NOEL CHARAVAY,

3, RUE DE FURSTENBERG, PARIS,

where the "AMATEUR DES AUTOGRAPHES," a valuable Monthly Publication, may also be obtained.

JAMES TREGASKIS,

"The Caxton Head," 232, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

RARE BOOKS,
MEDIÆVAL MANUSCRIPTS,
DOCUMENTS OF LITERARY & HISTORICAL INTEREST,
ORIGINAL DRAWINGS,
ENGRAVINGS,
AMERICANA,
CURIOSITIES,
ANTIQUITIES,
OBJECTS OF ART.

Catalogues Price Sixpence.

PORTRAITS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

ENGLISH—FOREIGN—AMERICAN.

RARE ENGRAVINGS OF ALL SORTS.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES OR VISIT THE SHOWROOMS OF

M. GODEFROY MAYER,

41, RUE BLANCHE, PARIS.

WEYMOUTH, DORSET.

CURIOSITY SHOP.

Finest collection of Genuine Curios in West of England.

Amongst other items on sale—Unique Inlaid Escritoire-Cabinet formerly property of Frederick the Great, presented by successor to Sir Evan Nepean, Secretary of Admiralty at time of Trafalgar.

BAKER, 2, Charlotte Row, Close Old Palace George III.

DESCRIBED BY MADAME D'ARBLAY.

THE KING'S COLLECTORS' REGISTER.

I.—Advertisements in this Register must refer to some specific object or objects.

II.—The charge for advertising is at the rate of twopence per word, and no advertisement can be accepted of less than twelve words. The price of an article, or group of figures, count as one word.

III.—Should advertisers wish to illustrate their advertisements, blocks will be made free of charge, provided good photographs are supplied, but the space occupied by block must be paid for at the rate of 10s. per inch.

IV.—In all cases name and address must be counted and paid for.

V.—These advertisements must always be prepaid, and cannot, under any circumstances, be inserted unless accompanied by remittance for the amount.

VI.—In the event of advertisements being too late, or being crowded out of the ensuing issue, they will be inserted in the following issue.

VII.—Advertisements must be written on one side of the paper only.

VIII.—Advertisers can have replies to their advertisements sent c/o THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, and in these cases, name and address (which must be paid for) should be written on the back of the advertisement sent for insertion.

IX.—If several objects of various kinds are included in one advertisement, it will be put under the heading of Various.

X.—Stamps will be accepted for sums up to 2s. 6d. Above that sum Postal Orders should be sent, made payable to George Newnes, Ltd., and crossed Capital and Counties Bank.

XI.—Remittances cannot be acknowledged unless a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed with the order.

XII.—In replying to "Wanted" advertisements, it is advisable to send the fullest particulars of the article mentioned, and, when possible, a rough sketch of same.

XIII.—The proprietors reserve to themselves at all times the right of refusing any advertisement, without giving the reason for so doing.

XIV.—All communications relating to the Collectors' Register must be addressed to THE EDITOR, Antique Dept., THE KING, 3, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Before sending Money or any Article on approval, Advertisers are advised to satisfy themselves as to the bona fides of Correspondents, for which the Proprietors cannot be responsible.

WANTED.

AUTOGRAPHS AND LETTERS.

Following autograph letters wanted: — Beau Brummel, Captain Gronow, Frederica, Duchess of York, Mary Anne Clarke. Good prices given.—823, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

Complete copies of Fairburn's Journal of Naval Occurrences.—154, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Naval or Nautical Jest Books.—157, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Cotton's "Voice from Waterloo," first edition, in original boards.—165, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Freemasonry. "The Book of Constitutions," first edition, with frontispiece.—166, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Catalogues, in good condition, of the Naval Exhibition at Chelsea in 1891.—167, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Guides and Histories of the Isle of Wight.—168, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

Old Earthenware decorated with subjects relating to the Navy, Napoleonic Wars, or Freemasonry.—516, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Jackfield Pottery, decorated in gold or colours.—519, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Naval Prints published by any of the following:—C. Sheppard, 74, Little Britain; C. Taylor, Holborn (date 1791); J. Fairburn, 110 and 146, Minories (1800-1838); Tabart and Co., London; E. Rushton, Paradise Street, Liverpool; W. Belch, Bridge Street, Boro'; I. Houlston, Strand; R. Sly, 41, Union Street, Somers Town; J. Marshall, Aldermary Churchyard, London.—237, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

XVIth Century Caricatures and Broadsides relating to Baptists.—246, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Caricatures illustrating the Attorney-General's Charges against Queen Caroline. Colonial copies wanted.—247, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Theatrical Prints by any of the following publishers:—Bailey, 1802-1808; West, 1811; Clark, 1821; Hodgson, 1822-1838; Dyer, 1825-1840; Fairburn, 1800-1837; Straker, 1829; Floyd, 1830; Skelt, 1832-1870; Green, 1834-1860; or Webb, Park, Reddington, and Matthews.—248, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Good Impressions with good margins of engravings of old London, especially Covent Garden, the Temple, the Strand, Lincoln's Inn.—249, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

WANTED.

TAPESTRY, FURNITURE, Etc.

A good Specimen of Rock Tapestry. Period about 1640.—410, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bath Tokens issued by Turner, coach contractor, between 1770 and 1800.—747, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

FOR SALE.

PRINTS, ETCHINGS, Etc.

Original XVIIIth Century Drawings of Bath or Brighton. Also Caricatures relating to.—221A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

BOOKS.

A fine copy of Natte's Bath, or would accept copy of Genest's British Stage, or good extra illustrated Life of Garrick.—129A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

CHINA, GLASS, EARTHENWARE.

A very fine old Staffordshire Dinner Service of 160 pieces, in perfect condition. Crown Derby pattern, marked with crown. Sample plate on approval. Deposit.—520A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A unique collection of objects relating to Coronations, English and Foreign, 1600-1902. Books, MSS., Views, Portraits, Tickets, Autographs, Medals.—742A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Palæolithic and Neolithic Flint Implements for disposal.—743A, THE KING'S EXCHANGE.

Digitized by Google

Motoring Notes.

IT will be remembered that one of the motor-boats entered for last year's International Cup Race was Lord Howard de Walden's "Fer de Lance." The petrol engines, however, did not prove satisfactory, and instructions have now been given to Messrs. Simpson, Strickland, and Co. of Dartmouth to replace them by their high-speed steam engines. The boat in her altered condition will be entered for the Monaco events next year, which will afford an opportunity of comparing the speed attained by the two methods of propulsion, petrol and steam.

* * *

The Marine Motor Club of Great Britain and Ireland, whose formation has been foreshadowed in our columns, is an accomplished fact. At the beginning of last week a largely-attended meeting was held at the Automobile Club, at which the new body was inaugurated and the flag-officers and half the committee were appointed. The Marine Motor Club will take over all the work of the Automobile Club in connection with motor-boating, including the conduct of the Reliability Trials and the holding of the selection race for the International Cup. A floating club-house will be provided on Southampton Water, which should prove a pleasant resort for week-ends during the summer. The parent body will assist the new club financially during the first three years of its existence, providing £600 this year and £300 during each of the next two years. The subscription is 3-guineas per annum, except in the case of members of the Automobile Club, who will pay 2-guineas. About eighty members have already joined. Full particulars may be obtained from the hon. secretary, 119, Piccadilly.

In view of the doubts which have been freely expresse l as to the ability of cars competing in the Tourist Trophy Race to cover the distance on the prescribed allowance of fuel, particular interest attaches to the results of the Midland Automobile Club Consumption Trial. In this competition the cars were required to run over a circular course 93-miles in length, the amount of spirit being carefully measured at the conclusion. Fifteen cars competed, most of which largely exceeded the maximum weight allowed by the Tourist Trophy rules. The winner was a 12-h.p. Lanchester, weighing 28-cwt. 7-lb. loaded, which consumed 2·5-gal., equivalent to 37·2-miles per gallon. A 10-h.p. Wolseley, which weighed 25-cwt. 63-lb., was second with 2·61-gal., equal to 36·6-miles per gallon. The formula by which the results were worked out took the weight of the cars into consideration, so that the winner was not necessarily the machine which consumed the least amount of petrol. Thus the 6-h.p. Wolseley ran 43·4-miles to the gallon, and the 8-h.p. Rover 36-miles. These two cars were the light weights, but the 15-h.p. Napier (29-cwt.) ran 30·4-miles, the 12-h.p. Wolseley (28-cwt.) 28·4-miles, and the 14-h.p. Wolseley (26½-cwt.) 25·5-miles to the gallon. The pace, needless to say, was somewhat slow, and quite insufficient to win the Tourist Trophy Race, but the results achieved by comparatively heavy cars in this very instructive competition indicate that the demand for a larger allowance of fuel in the International event is quite uncalled for.

* * *

Everything that helps to show the public that the great majority of motorists are desirous of observing the courtesies of the road, and of diminishing the dust nuisance, is of value at the present time, when persistent attempts are being made to influence the anti-motor feeling that exists in certain parts of the country. The Considerate Driving League, which has been founded by Mr. John Scott Montagu, M.P., should, therefore, meet with a large measure of support. An excellent code of "road maxims" has been drawn up, and members of the league are merely required to express their desire to drive in accordance with them. The code can be obtained mounted in a suitable manner for hanging up in the motor-house, and should serve as a timely reminder to the paid driver as to his duties to other users of the highway. Full particulars may be obtained on application to 17, Shaftesbury Avenue.

* * *

The following gentlemen were appointed stewards of the Automobile Club at a recent meeting of the council specially held for that purpose: His Grace the Duke of Sutherland, K.G., the Earl of Dudley, the Earl of Onslow, Earl Russell, Lord Stanley, M.P., the Hon. Arthur Stanley, M.P., Sir David L. Salomons, Bart., Sir J. H. A. Macdonald, K.C.B., Colonel H. C. L. Holden, R.A., F.R.S., Lieutenant-Colonel Mark Mayhew, Mr. W. G. D. Goff, and Mr. Charles Hardy. The stewards act as a final court of appeal in all matters relating to automobile competitions, the committee of the club having delegated to them their powers in this respect.

* * *

In connection with the Eliminating Trials, which take place in the Isle of Man on Tuesday next, a special train for members of the Automobile Club and their friends will leave Euston on Sunday morning about nine o'clock. This will connect with a special steamer for Douglas, leaving Liverpool early in the afternoon of the same day.

THE SCOTTISH MOTOR TRIALS. Bassano

The 24-h.p. Thornycroft which made non-stop runs on all four days, and the best times in the hill-climbing.

Digitized by Google

"FIAT" MOTORS, Ltd.

37 & 38, LONG ACRE, W.C.

Telegraphic Address: "FIATISM, LONDON."
Telephone Nos.: 3171 and 1849 GERRARD.

THE RELIABILITY of the

F.I.A.T.

IS AGAIN DEMONSTRATED.

"Nearly full of water, but with her marvellous motor still working with precision, the tiny 'Fiat X' came into harbour four hours before any of her competitors. . . . 300 kilometres in twelve hours."

Brighton Depot:

Brighton and South Coast Motor Garages, Ltd., St. James's Street, Brighton.

Sole Concessionnaires for Great Britain and Ireland:

Fiat Motors, Ltd., 37 & 38, Long Acre, W.C.

Agents for Yorkshire: H. JOHNSON & CO., 28, Montpellier Parade, Harrogate.
Agents for Northamptonshire and Warwickshire: Pytchley Autocar Co., Northampton.

SWIFT CARS.

7 h.p.,
Single Cylinder, 2-Seated,
£175.

8-10 h.p.,
Double Cylinder, 4-Seated,
£280.

The SWIFT Car won the GOLD MEDAL for Reliability in Competition with 37 Entrants.

NEW MODELS
on view at London Showrooms. Trials by Appointment.

The Swift Motor Co., Ltd.,
Works: COVENTRY.
127-130, Long Acre,
London, W.C.

Digitized by Google

Fashions of To-day & To-morrow.

THE corselet skirts are decidedly becoming popular, and if well cut are certainly most becoming to the figure; they give length, and outline the curves and waist advantageously. A good example of this is seen at Debenham and Freebody's of Wigmore Street, in the graceful white serge costume here illustrated. The skirt is trimmed with white galon and an insertion of white mull. The novel little coatee is one of the latest in style, likewise the new sleeve. The touch of amethyst velvet in the collar is charming.

Another graceful afternoon gown is in geranium voile, the skirt hanging in very full folds, and being fully trimmed at the bottom with lace insertions, flat silk pleatings outlining the voile frills in a conventional pattern. The bodice is very becoming. It has a daintily-arranged fichu, and a padded piece like a small flat bolster—which gives the desired straight-fronted appearance—trimmed with canvas embroidery. This is seen in most French models; but it does not find much favour over here. The sleeves are very fully draped and gauged, and have a pretty frill of lace originally introduced from wrist to elbow.

Another pretty dress in plain voile, strapped with glacé silk in a very pretty design, was carried out in fraise; the back of this dress was extremely original with its silk strappings.

Feather and chiffon boas in all varieties are to be seen at Messrs. Debenham and Freebody's. They have also a great quantity of the favourite petal boas and uncrushable chiffonettes. The prices also are most reasonable, and it is well worth a visit to this establishment for these articles alone, as they are absolute necessities for this season. The lace and fancy net bodices are really delightful, and look so temptingly cool. Some very handsome Irish and guipure laces were also charming. Hand embroideries are largely used for summer slips of all descriptions, and give a distingué appearance to everything.

Some handsome silk petticoats, in imitation of the so fashionable Madeira work, are also to be had at a moderate figure in the most charming tones of colour, and a specialité in double-frilled silk skirts, in all shades, at 1-guinea, are really bargains. Pompadour ribbons for sashes and blouse-bands are quite the right thing just now, and the pretty soft colourings of these ribbons just give a becoming tone to the many varieties of white bodices worn.

A CHARMING COSTUME IN WHITE SERGE.
(Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, Wigmore Street, W.)

AN AFTERNOON GOWN IN GERANIUM VOILE
(Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, Wigmore Street, W.)

The novelties in belts of all descriptions are too numerous to mention in detail, but those designed for evening gowns of lace and net are very taking. They form almost a corselet bodice in some instances, and look like snake-skins with their iridiscent sequins, and fit like a glove. These are the latest from Paris, and worn with much success by those who are lucky enough to possess a perfect figure.

Where so much white is likely to be worn, the dust-cloak in tussore and alpaca are almost a necessity at this season of the year, and for the races are an invaluable addition. These can be had so reasonably that those who wear white will find them a very great acquisition.

The laundries in the country are making all preparations for a busy season, and I know of several who have made arrangements to have household linen-baskets fetched by the carriers at the beginning of the week and returned on Saturdays in the usual course, and this without any extra expense to customers. Numbers of people are taken with this healthy and practical plan. What a much pleasanter idea it is, to know that your linen comes straight from the country instead of being washed in town, where air and space for all this are at a premium. I know of one laundry establishment in particular which has had so much success with London trade that the proprietor has had to erect larger premises to cope with the work.

The perfume of the lilac this year, for some unaccountable reason, is so extremely strong that it has caused sickness and fainting attacks in more than one instance. A whole family was strangely affected by this scent the other day, and one and all had to retire discreetly from the room. One little fellow described his symptoms rather neatly, "Mummy, I have such a funny big hole in my 'tummy!'" Wall-flowers are said to have the same peculiarity this year.

R. D.

(From photographs specially taken for this paper by Miss Mabel Lomnitz, 26, Victoria Street, S.W.)

Digitized by Google

Argyll

THE SILENT MOTOR CAR.

AWARDED THE MEDAL FOR "ELEGANCE AND COMFORT" AT THE PARIS SHOW.

In addition to the numerous other surpassing qualities,

THE FAMOUS "ARGYLL"

illustrates the principle that "Silence is Golden." The Argyll simply purrs like a cat, and gets through its work with ease, comfort, and speed.

A BETTER MOTOR CAR THAN THE ARGYLL IS NOT MADE.

It is not good merely in one feature, but in every feature. Best in Material, Best in Construction. A great record-holder and a marvellous machine.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE "M" FOR 1905.

LONDON AGENTS—

The Farman Automobile Co., Ltd., 100, Long Acre, London, W.C.

MOTORS

"ARGYLL MOTORS," Ltd., Argyll Works, BRIDGETON, GLASGOW.

HUMBER

CYCLES ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

"They make Life's Journeys easy."

Prices: £8 8s. to £18 18s.

Catalogues post free from

HUMBER, Ltd., BEESTON (Notts) and COVENTRY.

LONDON : 32, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

Depots— Manchester, Nottingham, Liverpool, Birmingham, Southampton

Agents Everywhere.

TIME

cannot impair the youthful beauty of a skin washed exclusively with Cook's Pure Toilet Soaps, such as "Riviera," or "Throne," The Royal Toilet Soap.

Six dainty samples sent, post free, for six penny stamps.

Edward Cook & Co., Ltd., The Soap Specialists, London, E.

Pure JAEGER Wool

EVERY ARTICLE OF ATTIRE FOR LADIES MEN & CHILDREN AT FIXED MODERATE PRICES

The JAEGER PURE WOOL NATURAL UNDERWEAR IS GUARANTEED AGAINST SHRINKAGE AND IS DURABLE SOFT AND COMFORTABLE.

Write for PRICE LIST (No. 24) containing Patterns and 230 Illustrations, post free.

EXCLUSIVE MATERIALS & DESIGNS.

Wool "Taffeta," "Cambric," "Lattice-Web," Fancy Flannels, etc., specially selected for wearing quality, smartness, and for their pleasant and soft handle.

The most comfortable Shirts, Pyjama Suits, and Night Shirts obtainable for gentlemen.

PURE WOOL is known and recommended by Medical Men to be the safest and best for Summer Wear.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SHIRTS | ... ... from | 8s. 9d. |
| PYJAMA SUITS | ... | 15s. 9d. |
| NIGHT SHIRTS | ... | 12s. 9d. |

LONDON—
126, Regent Street, W.
456, Strand (Charing Cross), W.C.
30, Sloane Street, S.W.
115, Victoria St., S.W.
85 & 86, Cheapside, E.C.

BATH— 10, New Bond Street.
BRIGHTON— 59, East Street.
EDINBURGH— 119a, Princes Street.
EASTBOURNE— 6, Grove Road.
GLASGOW— 16, Buchanan Street.

LEEDS— 23, Commercial Street.
LIVERPOOL— 58, Church Street, and 4, Castle Street.
MANCHESTER— 18, King Street.
NEWCASTLE— 6, Northumberland St.
PLYMOUTH— 9, George Street.

The JAEGER GOODS are sold in most towns. Address sent on application to Wholesale and Shipping Office, 95, Milton Street, London, E.C.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL! To checkmate the dishonest use of the name of JAEGER, look for the label on each article, and insist that the goods be described as "JAEGER" on invoice.

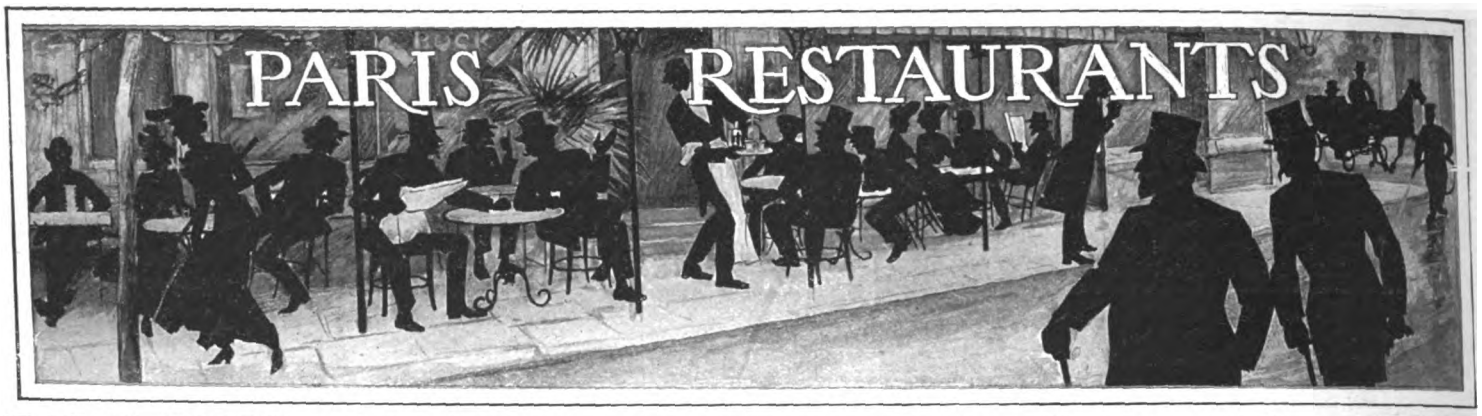
Digitized by Google



LA TOUR D'ARGENT, the simple little restaurant on the banks of the Seine in the old quarter of Paris, is known to every Englishman. Our friend from across the Channel may possibly never have heard of Robespierre, and may have but hazy notions about Pasteur; but should you mention the name Fréderic he will tell you at once that he is a virtuoso on the preparation of "Caneton à la Presse." It is indeed Fréderic, the proprietor of the Tour d'Argent, who made this dish popular by bringing into play the silver press wherein the delicate juice is extracted from the duck skeleton before the eyes of the delighted diner. Some forty years ago this operation was performed between two plates, a tedious, difficult process, and so expensive as to place it beyond the reach of the ordinary purse.

The Tour d'Argent was founded in 1582, but its early days, like De la Pluche's birth, is "wropt in mystery." In vain have Fréderic and his numerous friends ransacked the National Library and the Musée Carnavalet to bring to light some interesting facts in connection with the old house. History remains silent and refuses to divulge its secrets. An American novelist boldly introduces the Tour d'Argent in his book, and shows us good King Henri IV. revelling there with ladies not belonging to his Court; but this gentleman has drawn on his imagination, for there is nowhere any record of the merry monarch ever having visited that inn. Who knows what vicissitudes the old hostelry has undergone in the course of many centuries: what terrible treatment it underwent, and how many times it was burnt to the ground! But the plucky little inn refused to die a violent death, and from its ashes a new Tour d'Argent always rose, with a new sign-board, yet always with the old name and a smart cook to uphold the reputation of the house. In 1840 it became the rendezvous of the cattle-dealers, large men in blouses, with healthy appetites, hailing from the Marché aux Veaux held in the neighbourhood. After a while the cattle market disappeared, with it the clientèle in blouses, and then for the first time the Tour d'Argent shed its coat. From an inn it became a restaurant, and under Fréderic the Great's reign has attained a high position in the monde où l'on dine. Few people know that Fréderic's name is M. Delair, that Mme. Rejane is called Réju, and that Marthe Brandès is the pseudonym for Mlle. Brunschwig. Good M. Delair has, by this time, no doubt forgotten his family name. He is "Fréderic." Moreover he is a great monarch, with a cosmopolitan court on whom he bestows honours. Do not think for a moment that he made the mistake of creating an Order of the Tour d'Argent. Fréderic knows better than that. He understands the foibles of mankind, and the distinction he confers upon his patrons is of a different order—a stroke of genius. He immortalises them by affixing their names to the dishes of the establishment, dishes created by him. For is it not said that, like a musical composer who writes down his melodies without ever trying them on the piano, Fréderic executes his creations in his brain, without ever tasting them? I recommend you to take up the bill of fare of the house and study it carefully. You will find the House of Commons largely represented, occasionally relieved by illustrious names of Continental renown. This is what I culled from this curious document: "Œufs Claude Lowther, Filet de Sole Morny, Filet de Canard Mac-Arthur, Chaudfroid de Volaille Henniker, Filet de Sole B. Phipps, Soufflé Stanhope, Filet de Lièvre Arnold White, Œufs Rathbone, Filet de Sole Edison, Filet de Sole Duc Vladimir, Sole Victor Renault, Poulet Doctor Prendergast, etc., etc." It is a high distinction, of which the recipients are not a little proud; and, apparently, as difficult to secure as the much-coveted Legion of Honour!

The clientèle of the Tour d'Argent is essentially foreign, especially English and American; but the Parisian, an appreciator of good cooking, does not mind deserting his beloved boulevards, and undertaking the, to him, long journey to the left banks of the Seine.

On race days you will meet there many celebrities from the Turf; and if you are an attentive listener, you will hear from the private rooms the sound of clinking of glasses and the words "Altesse," and even "Majesté." Yes, crowned heads frequently dine at the old tavern; but Fréderic is as dumb and discreet as the fish he serves as regards the names of those he receives incognito beneath his hospitable roof. The literary, artistic, and scientific world is also well represented there; and, sometimes, even the grande demi-mondaine honours the place with a visit. She, however, imitates the crowned heads, and only travels incognito. The large room downstairs knows her not. The Tour d'Argent is one of the few Paris restaurants where the proprietor really takes pains to keep the cuisine up to a high standard; and the cellar, too, has acquired a well-deserved celebrity. If you have the good fortune to dine there, do not fail to ask for a bottle of Musigny, 1889. Fréderic secured the last cask of that famous vintage, and, from what I hear, there is not much of it left.

Some of the specialities of the house.

After some difficulty I succeeded in arriving at the ingredients in the celebrated dishes that compose the menu. In truth there is very little difference between the cooking in one good restaurant or another; the mixing of a sauce, the turn of an omelette, the coup de main are essential qualities, as in the making of a lady's hat. But there are little secrets in connection with the "creations" of the Tour d'Argent, and here they are.

Œufs Claude Lowther.—The aspect of the eggs à la Claude Lowther is much the same as the ordinary scrambled eggs with asparagus points, but there is a delicacy that has nothing ordinary about it. Instead of mixing the eggs with milk in the orthodox fashion, take double cream, add the points at the last moment, and season well.

Filet de Sole Bertron is simply the fillet of sole served in the shell of a crayfish; the interior of the little écrivisse in the sauce.

Escalopes de Ris de Veau Bénet.—Sweetbreads with a good creamy béchamel mixed with truffles and morils (yellow mushrooms).

Salade Roger.—A combination of six salads in mayonnaise: Celery, endive, potatoes, artichoke fonds, mushrooms.

Fonds d'Artichauts au Fondu.—This is a delightful dish and much less complicated than it sounds. Everybody knows how to make a cheese soufflé, invariably served in a shape. Here each artichoke fond serves as the shape, and the soufflé is poured into it, cooked in the oven in the usual way, and presented as the fonds d'artichauts au fondu.

Digitized by Google

INVALUABLE for the COMPLEXION.

BEETHAM'S

LAROLA

Regd

PRESERVES THE SKIN from the effects of the SUN, WINDS, and HARD WATER. Entirely removes and prevents all ROUGHNESS, REDNESS, IRRITATION, TAN, etc., and

KEEPS THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, AND WHITE

At all Seasons.

Delightfully SOOTHING and REFRESHING after Walking, Golfing, Cycling, Motoring, etc.

Bottles, 1s., 1s 9d., and 2s. 6d. each. Of all Chemists and Stores.

M. BEETHAM & SON, CHELTENHAM.

'DAREN'

BREAD.

Awarded 37 HONOURS.

One doctor writes: "'DAREN' is 20 per cent. more nourishing than white bread." Another writes: "'DAREN' Bread is delicious. If it were in more general use there would be much less indigestion and other sufferings." Most Towns have one or more bakers making 'DAREN.' It is sold in 2d., 3d., and 4d. Loaves. Each loaf is stamped 'DAREN.' Ask your baker to supply you. If any difficulty is experienced in obtaining 'DAREN' Bread, apply the 'DAREN' Flour Mills, Dartford, Kent, for name of nearest agent. A dainty Sample Loaf of 'DAREN' will be sent on receipt of four penny stamps to defray cost of postage.

THE GREAT TEMPERANCE DRINK OF THE FUTURE

Whiteway's

NON-ALCOHOLIC CYDER

("CYDRAX").

A DELICIOUS APPLE PRODUCT.

Refreshing. Invigorating. Pure.

MR. SILAS HOCKING, the great novelist, says:—
"We all pronounce "Cydrax" ex cllent. I shall make it known to my friends. It is a delightful and refreshing drink for this warm weather."

MR. STEPHEN COLLINS, L.C.C., writes:—
"We think the "Cydrax" a most delicious drink. It supplies a long felt want, not only to total abstainers, but to the public generally. It has only to be tried to be appreciated."

REV. EDWARD MURPHY writes:—
"This seems to me to be the very thing that total abstainers are looking for."

SAMPLE CASES (for cash).—1 doz. pints, 6/-; 1 doz. quarts, 10/6; or 2 doz. quarts, 20/-; cases, bottles, and carriage free; or 10 gallon cask, 12/6, carriage paid (cask returnable).

Descriptive Booklet—

WHITEWAY & CO., Ltd.,

The Orchard, WHIMPLE, DEVON.

LONDON DEPÔT: 22, Albert Embankment, S.E.

ESCOFFIER

CARLTON

DELICACIES

Table and Culinary Sauces, Pickles, and Chutney.

SAUCE DIABLE.

An unique Grill and Kitchen Sauce.

SAUCE MELBA.

For Pèches à la Melba.

SAUCE ROBERT.

A Delicate Table Sauce.

MANUFACTURED BY THE CHEF-DE-CUISINE TO THE

CARLTON HOTEL,

LONDON.

Booklet with choice Recipes may be had upon application to your own Grocer, or from

ESCOFFIER, LTD.,

6, Ridgmount St. (Off Store St.), TOTTENHAM COURT RD., W.C.

THE WHITE WINES OF ENGLAND.

BULMER'S Famous Herefordshire

CIDERS and PERRY.

For a beautifully illustrated booklet on Cider, price list, and special booklet for invalids, apply to

H. P. BULMER and CO., HEREFORD.

BUTLER'S "KEEN" RAZOR

HOLLOW GROUND.
SPECIAL STEEL.
HAND FORGED.

"I know that Razor, it comes from Sheffield."

HIGHEST AWARDS.
GUARANTEED PERFECT, AND BRITISH MADE THROUCHOUT.

"Keen as this razor's edge invisible." (Love's Labour Lost.)

Black Handles ... ... each 3/- & *5/- | Ivory Handles ... ... each 5/- & *7/6
*Per pair, in best Case, 15/-; 7-day set, 50/- | *Per pair in Russia Case, 21/-; 7-day set, 70/-
"CAVENDISH" CARVERS (Regd. brandi keep "an edge that won't come off."
Fine Ivory, 20/-; Imitation ditto or Stag, 10/6 per pair. Post Free of all Dealers.
Sole Makers, GEORGE BUTLER & CO., Trinity Works, SHEFFIELD.

РУБЛЬ КОФЕ

Price per lb. 2/4 1/10 1/6

The Coffee of the Epicure.

ASTOUNDING OFFER.

We will forward, post free 6d.,

A ¼lb. PACKET

of our famous ROUBLE COFFEE.

The ROUBLE COFFEE Co., 17B. Devonshire Square, LONDON, E.C.

Samples post free 8d. 6d. 4d.

ROUBLE COFFEE

Digitized by Google

Here, There, and Everywhere.

In these progressive days science has improved many conditions, and has been successful so long as natural laws have been followed, but has always failed when natural laws have been misunderstood or outraged. Amongst Nature's laws that touch more nearly our every-day life, there are none that concern mankind more than those which govern the health, and womankind than those which govern the skin. Try as she will, woman's skin cannot stand artificial washes, creams, unguents, or powders; a few years of their use will make the skin dead and faded. How then to counteract the effects of weather, late hours, sun, cold, smoke, or fog? Nature has given a remedy, a natural mineral water called Icilma, that has a distinct vitalising action on the skin. This water penetrates into the pores, cleanses them, corrects the acids of the skin circulation, and stimulates it to do the work that Nature intended it to do. Icilma Fluor Cream possesses the same properties, and as it contains no grease, its cleansing virtues, whilst keeping in check the growth of superfluous hair, give a lovely clear and cool skin. And for soaps, commend me to Icilma Soap, especially where the water is hard, its easy silky lather and the delightfully fresh feeling it produces make it indispensable, once the habit of it is acquired.

---

Bright sunshine and soft breezes are turning the thoughts of the jaded worker in the City towards the days when holidays begin, and guide-books and time-tables are being eagerly consulted. But there is a happy haven of rest for those who look for relaxation (in the true sense of the word) for the strenuousness of business life, if only those who seek it would look in the right direction. There are those who call Brighton "London by the Sea," and no doubt the excellent train service which connects it with town warrants the appellation in some degree. But Brighton enjoys what London does not, sea breezes, and in Brighton is Happy Haven. It calls itself so, and it is so, a haven of rest, where the paying guest may stay a week-end or a week or a month, and always come away feeling refreshed and invigorated. And for those who dislike boarding-houses, Happy Haven makes a special appeal, for it is a home for paying guests, which is a very different thing. It has a way of its own, a distinctive and homely air which is, perhaps, a great part of the secret of its success in curing cases of over-strung nerves and exhausted brain power.

---

Under the title of "Country and Seaside Holidays" the Midland Company again publish their annual guide to the numerous holiday resorts in England, Scotland, and the North of Ireland, to which access is given by their lines and connections. The principal feature of the book is the comprehensive list of apartments available in seaside and country districts which, compiled from very reliable sources, simplifies the difficulties often experienced in deciding where to take the family for the holidays. The acquisition by the Midland Company of the North of Ireland railways, and the advent of their new powerful steamers between Heysham and Douglas, Isle of Man, and Heysham and Belfast, will probably have the result of largely increasing the number of visitors to those health resorts to which considerable space is devoted in the guide. The book is furnished with an attractive cover by Lewis Baumer, and is more replete with half-tone illustrations than is usual in this class of literature. A post-card to any Midland district superintendent or station-master will ensure a free copy.

---

Travellers from King's Cross, London to Scotland, and to stations in the North of England, find the Great Northern the route, with every modern convenience for luxurious travelling. The public are capitally served to those places of historic romance and loveliness of scenery through which the Great Northern line runs. In order to increase the convenience of visitors the company have issued a beautifully compiled guide to hotels and furnished lodgings in farmhouses and seaside and country villages in Norfolk, Lincolnshire, Yorkshire, etc. The particulars are explained in a most lucid and interesting manner, the house or hotel being described as fully as possible, together, where the information is available, with its accommodation and the features of interest in the neighbourhood.

---

In Fry's Pure Concentrated Cocoa the consumer has a light refreshing beverage of most easy digestion and rapid assimilation—a beverage which retains all its original flavour and aroma. It is, in fact, the most satisfactory form of cocoa we have ever tasted. In addition to the well-known "Pure Concentrated" Cocoa and various other preparations, Messrs. Fry and Sons also manufacture chocolates and fancy confectionery. These are as much to be appreciated as are their cocoas. A very extensive trade is being done in these sweetmeats, and it affords one a great deal of satisfaction to know that an English firm can and does successfully compete with the French makers. Messrs. Fry and Sons have been the recipients of over 300 gold medals and other awards for the excellence of their productions.

---

The London and South Western Railway Company's Illustrated Guide, which has just made its seventh annual appearance, is now the largest and most comprehensive book of the kind in this country. It consists of over 260 well printed pages, accompanied by numerous illustrations of the popular resorts on the company's system. A chart, corrected to date, exhibits not only the South Western main and local lines, and the ocean mail routes from Southampton and Plymouth, but a large part of the continental coast line in detail, together with maps of Jersey and Guernsey. A complete list of golf links also appears, and the descriptive text makes reference to over 100 different inland and seaside places. Tourist and pleasure-seekers generally will find the guide exceedingly useful.

---

The Swift Cycle Company find it necessary to make an important announcement with regard to their Swift "Special." This mount, on its appearance about twelve months ago, took the cycling world by storm, being the first machine at the price to be made by a leading firm. The Swift Company, however, find it impossible to produce it at the present price, viz., £7 15s., and, as they are determined not to lower quality in one way or another, they are obliged to accept the alternative of raising the price. Therefore, on and after June 1, the price of Swift "Specials" will be £8 8s., but up to that date no change will be made in the existing amount of either cash or deferred payments. In these circumstances it will be well for cyclists to make the earliest application in order to secure the present advantage.

---

Sylvester Schaffer, who for the past six weeks has caused the Alhambra Theatre to be filled to its utmost capacity by nine o'clock each evening, has entered upon the last fortnight of his unprecedentedly successful engagement, and thousands of persons who have witnessed his performance, and pondered also the magnitude of the daily practice that is necessary in order to present his remarkable act, have been consumed with surprise that the young Austrian—a born artist in the most critical sense of the term—could so long endure the strain. To the regret of the management it is quite impossible for Herr Schaffer to extend his contract beyond the night of June 3.

---

A new three-act costume play, by Neville Doone and T. R. F. Coales, entitled "Brooke of Brazenose," will be produced at a special matinée on Thursday, June 8, at the Criterion Theatre, with the following cast: George Giddens, Leslie Faber, Wyndham Guise, Cooke Beresford, Loring Fernie, Frank Hollin, Edmund Gurney, William Cheesman, Victor Widdicombe, H. Eden, Harold West, J. M. Graham, Lennox Pawle, Maud Wynter, Janet Alexander, Maud Hoffman, and Susie Vaughan. The action passes in the reign of George III. and deals with college life at Oxford.

Amusements.

HIS MAJESTY'S. Mr. TREE.
Every Evening at 8.50.
BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.
A new play in three acts, adapted by Sydney Grundy from "Les Affaires sont les Affaires," by Octave Mirbeau.
Matinee Every Wednesday at 2.30.
Preceded every evening at 8.15 by
THE BALLAD MONGER.

CRITERION THEATRE, W.
Sole Lessee: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
To-night at 8.30.
Saturday Matinees at 3.
An entirely new and original Comedy, entitled
WHAT PAMELA WANTED.
By Fred de Gresac, Author of "The Marriage of Kitty," and Paul Veber. Adapted by Charles Brookfield. Cast includes Miss Lottie Venne, Miss Vane Featherstone, Maud Wynter, and Miss Ethel Irving; Messrs. Frank Cooper, Lennox Pawle, John Tresahar, and Leslie Faber. Box Office now open.

WYNDHAM'S THEATRE.
Proprietor: Sir Charles Wyndham.
Lessee and Manager: Mr. Frank Curzon.
To-night at 8.45.
Mr. HOPKINSON.
An original farce in three acts by R. C. Carton.
Preceded at 8.15 by Mr. Nelson Jackson.
Matinee every Saturday at 3.

APOLLO THEATRE.
Henry Lowenfeld, Sole Proprietor.
Tom B. Davis, Lessee and Manager.
Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES' SEASON.
Every Evening at 8.15.
The Comic Opera, in Three Acts,
"VERONIQUE."
Matinee every Wednesday at 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.
Managers: A. & S. Gatti & Charles Frohman.
Every Evening at 8.15,
THE CATCH OF THE SEASON,
By Seymour Hicks and Cosmo Hamilton.
Mr. Seymour Hicks and the Vaudeville Theatre Company.
Matinees every Wednesday and Saturday at 2.15.

COMEDY THEATRE.
Lessee: Mr. Wm. Greet.
Under the Management of Mr. Frank Curzon.
Every Evening at 9, Wed. and Sat. Matinees at 3.
The Times says: "Riot of high spirits, perpetual laughter."
The Daily Telegraph says: "Uproarious, bright, and mirth provoking, hard to beat."
THE GREAT SUCCESS.
CHARLES FROHMAN presents WILLIAM COLLIER and the entire American Company in the delightful Farce, in Three Acts,
"THE DICTATOR."
"THE DICTATOR."
By Richard Harding Davis.
At 8 30, "The Philosopher in the Apple Orchard."

EMPIRE THEATRE.
New Fairy Divertissement
"THE DANCING DOLL."
Special Attractions.
Doors open 7.45. Manager: Mr. H. J. Hitchins.

NAVAL, SHIPPING, AND FISHERIES EXHIBITION, EARL'S COURT.
Open 12 noon to 11 p.m. Admission 1s.
Season Tickets, 10s. 6d.
Naval Construction, Armaments, Shipping & Fisheries.
NELSON'S CENTENARY RELICS, and of all Naval Events from the 15th to 20th Century.
FISHING VILLAGE. Working Exhibits. Model of "Victory."
GRAND NAVAL AND MILITARY CONCERTS.
Go on board the full-size Cruiser.
Real Batteries of 4.7 Guns, Hotchkiss and Maxims.
The Cruiser is manned by a crew of 150 Handy-men.
Go on board and visit the Mediterranean ports.
Trafalgar 1805—Professor Fleischer's Great Work, Death of Nelson. West's "Our Navy." Maxim's Captive Flying Machine. Fairy Grotto. Indian Canoes. Great Canadian Indian Village—Chiefs, Squaws, and Papooses. Voyage in a Submarine. Vanderdecken's Haunted Cabin. Famous Sea Fights Miss de Rohan's Musical and Dramatic Sketches. Tillikum Canoe. Auto-Photographic Portraiture. Switchback. Chutes.
FISH RESTAURANT IN QUEEN'S COURT.

Digitized by Google

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. | | PAGE. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Frontispiece: Mr. R. A. Sanders, M.A. | 277 | The Evolution of Johnny Gilpin—William Cooper's Great Humorous Poem | 304 |
| The March of Events | 278 | The Racing Season | 306 |
| On the Links | 284 | The Cricket Season | vii. |
| Political Pen Pictures—In and Out of Parliament | 289 | Letters to Stage Favourites—XXIV.—To Mr. Beerbohm Tree | viii. |
| The Motor: On Highway and Seaway | 290 | Literary Notes | x. |
| The Parisians of Paris—Montmartre Up-to-date | 292 | Leaves from a Collector's Note-book—Welsh Porcelain: Swansea | xii. |
| Under the Burgee | 294 | Motoring Notes | xiv. |
| Yachts of the Year | 295 | Fashions of To-day and To-morrow—Hats at the Maison Lewis, Paris | xvi. |
| Plays and Players | 296, 297 | The King's Menu | xviii. |
| Naval Pictures at Earl's Court—Humorous and Satirical Art | 298 | Here, There, and Everywhere | xx. |
| Naval Caricature at Earl's Court | 300 | | |
| The Services | 301 | | |
| The Traveller—A Tour Through the Balkans | 302 | | |

TO LIBRARIES, CLUBS, HOTELS, ETC.

A Reading Case for THE KING can be had post free on application to the Publishers, George Newnes, Limited, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.

HOTELS, etc.

ENGLISH HOTELS.

TORQUAY (Population 33,625).—PREMIER HEALTH RESORT. Unrivalled climate. Warm in winter. Sunshine-land. Charming drives and sheltered walks. 120 acres of public gardens. Piers.

TORQUAY. Irreproachable water supply and perfect sanitation. Theatre, concerts, and other musical attractions. Medicated baths of all kinds. Express trains from all parts.

For Illustrated Descriptive Books of Torquay, apply FREDK. S. HEX, Town Clerk.

KENSINGTON HOTELS.

De Vere Hotel, from 10/6 per day. 'Phone 524.
Broadwalk Hotel, from 8/6 per day. ,, 858.
Prince of Wales' Hotel, from 10/6 per day. ,, 641. Kensington.

Electric Light. Lifts. Everything up to date. First-class cuisine.

BOURNEMOUTH HYDRO.

Sunny Site. Overlooking Sea. Every Bath. Ideal Residence.

ENGLISH HOTELS—Continued.

EASTBOURNE.

THE HYDRO HOTEL.—A select Residential Hotel on South Coast, 120ft. above sea level. Large gardens, close to the sea. Tennis. Croquet. Bowling Green. Spacious Lounges and Public Rooms. 70 Bedrooms, also Suites, luxuriously furnished, electric light throughout. High-class cuisine. Table d'Hôte or à la Carte. Separate tables. Lift. Billiards. Private 'Bus. Nearest to schools and Links. Close to Parades. Week End terms. Motor Garage with repairing Pits. Lit by Electric Light. For inclusive Tariff (Illustrated), also Programme of Amusements, address—O. F. BERGANN, Manager. Telegraphic Address: "Hydrotel, Eastbourne." Telephone, No. 143, Eastbourne.

FOREIGN HOTELS.

BIARRITZ.

GRAND HOTEL.—Winter Season.—First-class establishment. Splendid situation, facing the sea. Patronised by the elité; rendezvous of English Society. Every comfort; excellent attendance and cooking.—MONTENAT, Manager.

AXENSTEIN (Lake Lucerne; 2,350ft. above sea level; electric railway Brunnen-Axenstein).—First-class Hotel. World-renowned climatic health resort; patronised by English society. "Axenstein is the loveliest spot I met with on my journey through Switzerland."—QUEEN VICTORIA.

FOREIGN HOTELS—Continued.

TENERIFFE.

HAS THE FINEST WINTER CLIMATE IN THE WORLD.

THE First-class HOTELS there are
the QUISISANA at Santa Cruz,
the AGUERE and CONTINENTAL at La Laguna, and
the MARTIANEZ (late Grand) at Port Orotava.
All under the Management of C. H. TRENKEL. Prospectus, etc., on application.

SHIPPING.

MOROCCO, CANARY ISLANDS, and MADEIRA LINE OF STEAMERS; 24 days for 20 guineas.—For particulars write Messrs. FORWOOD BROS., 46, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

SPLENDID STRETCH OF THE RIVER COLNE, at Wraysbury, to be LET, or the Freehold would be SOLD.—Full particulars of P. and G. GEEN, Surveyors, 57, Waterloo Road, S.E.

THE "COUNTRY LIFE" LIBRARY.

ROSES FOR ENGLISH GARDENS.

By Miss GERTRUDE JEKYLL and Mr. E. MAWLEY.

Illustrated with 190 full-page Plates. 12s. 6d. Net.

Published at the Offices of "COUNTRY LIFE," LIMITED, 20, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.; and by GEORGE NEWNES, Ltd., 7-12, Southampton Street, Strand, W.C.

£100

The sum of One Hundred Pounds is being offered by Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—in addition to other valuable prizes—in connection with a unique competition, full particulars of which are given in the current number of

The STRAND MAGAZINE

Don't miss your opportunity. It is quite possible that you are the person who will eventually win these golden sovereigns.

JUNE Issue Now Ready. Price 6d. On Sale at all Booksellers & Newsagents.

FOR A PHOTOGRAPH

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

FELIXSTOWE GOLF LINKS.

Head Office: 11, SO. EXCHANGE PLACE, GLASGOW.

J. H. ROGER PROPR.

LESSEE OF

H.M. CUSTOMS (No. 15) BOND JAMES WATT STREET, GLASGOW.

Special Quotations to Golf Clubs.

"COLONEL BOGEY" WHISKY.

GUARANTEED 7 YEARS OLD.

42/- PER DOZEN. CARRIAGE PAID.

THE LINKS, BOURNEMOUTH.

BOURNEMOUTH.

HOTEL MONT DORE.

WITHIN TWO MINUTES' WALK OF GOLF LINKS.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

THE SPA HOTEL,

FOR COMFORT, CONVENIENCE, AND LUXURY.

Surrounded by its own Park of 65 acres and with splendid views over the Common. One hour from London.

BATHS of every description, including TURKISH, SWIMMING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHT. MASSEURS and MASSEUSE.

1 minute's walk from Golf Links.

Handsome Public Rooms, including 2 LOUNGES and BIJOU THEATRE.

Garage. Lift. Tennis Courts, Croquet Lawns and Bowling Greens. Warmed to a temperature of 60° in Winter. Postal Telegraph Office in Hotel. Telephone 56.

Terms from MANAGER.

TENBY (South Wales).

THE COBOURG HOTEL.

FACING THE SEA. NORTH BAY.

LADIES' SPACIOUS COFFEE AND DRAWING ROOMS. PRIVATE SITTING ROOMS.

Excellent Cuisine. Home Comforts. Moderate Charges.

TERMS EN PENSION ON APPLICATION.

Ten minutes' walk from the Golf Links. Omnibus to all trains.

J. HUGHES, Proprietress; also at the Royal Hotel, Bath.

LELANT, ST. IVES BAY, CORNWALL (close to golf links and station).—Furnished HOUSE, with plate and linen, to LET for Summer months; two large sitting rooms, six bedrooms, one dressing room, bathroom.—"I.B.H.," "Evelyns," Uxbridge.

SOUTHWOLD (best position on the Common; close to Golf Links).—To be LET, well Furnished, for June, July, and August, the pretty and artistic HOUSE known as "Link's Cottage," containing square hall, two sitting and large recreation rooms, servants' sitting room, seven bedrooms (fourteen beds), bathroom; electric light and telephone.—Apply to Mrs. ROBINSON, on Property.

THE LINKS, LLANGAMMARCH WELLS.

LLANGAMMARCH WELLS, Breconshire.

LAKE HOTEL.

The Hotel, standing about 700ft. above the sea level, is situated on the Eppynt Hills, looking down one of the most beautiful valleys in Wales. The Golf Links of the Llangammarch Wells Golf Club, the lake, two miles of river fishing, splendid scenery and picturesque woods, are within the Hotel grounds and Estate, which cover an area of about 600 acres. Shooting over thousands of acres is reserved for visitors, pheasants are reared. Visitors are welcomed by the Golf Club, a professional being constantly in attendance. The Barium Springs give relief in cases of Chronic Disease of the Heart, Gout, Rheumatism, etc. The Hotel is ten minutes from the Llangammarch Wells Station, L. & N.W. Ry., and can be reached from Shrewsbury and Swansea in two hours, Liverpool and Manchester in four-and-a-half hours, Birmingham and Potteries in five hours, and London in five-and-a-half hours. Friday to Tuesday Tickets at reduced fares.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

THE SUSSEX HOTEL.

Alight at West Marina or West St. Leonards Stations. High-class Hotel for Families and Gentlemen. Due South, facing Sea. Most select and quiet part of Promenade. Comfortable Public Rooms, consisting of Coffee Room, Reading and Drawing Room, Smoking and Billiard Room. Perfect Sanitary arrangements. Hydraulic Passenger Lift. Electric Light throughout. Warmed in Winter. Table d'Hôte, Separate Tables, at 7. Nearest Hotel to New Golf Links. Motor Car Stabling. Petrol supplied.—Under the personal supervision of PROPRIETOR.

THE LINKS, BLUNDELLSANDS.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL HOTEL.

This Old Established Family Hotel has been greatly Enlarged and entirely Re-modelled.

THE DECORATIONS, ELECTRIC FITTINGS, AND COMPLETE RE-FURNISHING, by MAPLE & Co., of London.

A Spacious New PALM GARDEN for Outdoor Luncheons and Dinners.

Golf Links within easy distance. Fishing in the Broads. Tariff extremely moderate.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

HOTEL RIPOSO.

MOTOR GARAGE. INSPECTION PIT.

Delightfully situated on Sea Front, two minutes from Golf Links.

Recognised as being one of the most perfectly appointed Private Hotels on the South Coast.

New Entrance Lounge. Billiards; Electric Light; Separate Tables. Thoroughly comfortable Smoking Room. Private Suites, with Bathroom, at moderate terms.

Week-End Tickets, including 1st Class Return Railway Fare, Hotel Accommodation, and Full Board,

Saturday to Monday, 35/-; Friday to Monday, 42/-.

To be obtained from Thos. Cook, Ludgate Circus, or any of their offices.

Resident Proprietress, Mrs. GIBSON.

Telephone, 8 Bexhill. Telegrams: "Riposo, Bexhill."

SEATON BEACH HOTEL,

SEATON, DEVON.

First-class Family Hotel, stands on the Esplanade and commands an uninterrupted view of the whole of the magnificent bay between Berry Head and the Bill of Portland; recently rebuilt, new heating arrangements, sanitation perfect; good sea and river fishing, golf, tennis, and croquet. Within five minutes' walk of the railway station, four hours and a quarter from Waterloo. Special terms for Winter visitors. Two putting greens in the Hotel Garden; Badminton played in the Hotel during the Winter.

Misses E. A. and C. C. SMITH, Proprietors.

BEXHILL.

THE SACKVILLE.

WELL-PREPARED GOLF LINKS OF 18 HOLES CLOSE TO HOTEL.

SPECIAL TERMS TO GOLFERS.

Magnificent Coast & Marine Views from Hastings to Beachy Head.

For particulars of through train service to the Midlands and the North see Great Central Company's Time Tables, which can be consulted at this Hotel.

Telegrams: "Sackville, Bexhill." Telephone: 10, Bexhill.

THE GOLF LINKS, CHERTSEY.

LEIGH-ON-SEA (Essex).

GRAND HOTEL.

Standing within its own Grounds, and facing Sea. Close to the Rochford Golf Links. Lawn Tennis Courts. Large Ball Room for Banquets and Wedding Breakfasts. Large Billiard Saloon (two of Burroughes & Watts' best tables). Bathrooms on every Floor. Under the patronage of the Earl of Onslow, and the Hon. Rupert and Lady Guinness. Within 45 minutes of London, and within easy distance of Westcliff-on-Sea and Southend-on-Sea. Healthy, Bracing Air. Good Bathing, Fishing, Shooting, and Yachting. Good Landau, 2s. 6d. per hour. Good Stabling. Board and Residence: Terms, 2 guineas per week, according to room. Week-end, 1 guinea. From 30s. Winter Months. Our Carriages will meet all trains on receipt of Wire from intending Visitors. Telegraphic Address: "Grand, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex."—W. J. PARTRIDGE (late of the principal Goldfields of the World). No expense has been spared to make the Sanitary arrangements perfect.

FARNHAM, SURREY, Within easy access of London

THE BUSH HOTEL.

Moderate Tariff. Special Week-End Terms for Golfers, inclusive of table d'hôte dinner. Saturday until Monday morning, £1 1s. The Golf Links (nine holes; eighteen will be opened very shortly) are beautifully situated, two miles from the town, are very quiet and secluded, and always playable, being on sand.

GENTS' GOLF GARTERS. NON-ELASTIC; Nickel Lever Buckle, no teeth; Fine Tan Webb, ⅞ in. wide; instantly adjusted to any TENSION; ensures comfort and smartness in appearance, 1/- per pair post free.—DAN MOODY & Co., Egyptian Works, TROWBRIDGE.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

THE GOLFERS' GUIDE.

THE GOLF LINKS, MUNDESLEY-ON-SEA.

PNEUMATIC GOLF BALL

TEN ROUNDS WITH ONE BALL.
YOU CANNOT CUT OR GASH IT.
DRIVES FURTHEST. APPROACHES SUREST.
PUTTS DEADEST.

2/- each, plus postage.

VULCAN WORKS, ST. THOMAS ST., S.E.

SUNNINGDALE GOLF LINKS.

ASCOT.

THE BERYSTEDE.

SOUTH ASCOT.

Among the Pines (Green and Warm in Winter and Cool in Summer).

"'Is it a Private House or an Hotel?' is the question I asked myself. Our rooms were not only twice the size of ordinary hotel bedrooms, but were furnished and appointed as only rooms are in the famous Country Houses of the best people—sumptuous, elegant, and in perfect taste, with fine genuine old furniture, and flowers and dainty linen. The whole house, with its grand staircase, its lovely terrace, its well-rolled croquet and tennis lawns, its beautifully kept gardens, orchards, kitchen gardens, glasshouses, and 30 acres of lovely pine woods, its model farm (perfect in its way), is an ideal home, and perfect in every detail. The cooking and service are the best I have ever met with in England. There is no charge for billiards, or baths, or lights, or attendance, and yet the charges were much less than at most of the best hotels."

The above is not exaggerated. It is the desire of the proprietors to make a new departure. "The Berystede" is quite remarkable in every way. It is a most beautiful country house, situate in most beautiful country, near the Sunningdale Golf Links, a few minutes' walk from the station, with excellent hunting, and one hour from Town.—For further particulars apply to the MANAGERESS, The Berystede Hotel, Ascot. Telephone 29, Ascot.

RE-COVERING.

Haskell and other Cored Balls re-covered equal to new, and guaranteed at

Returned in 7 days. PER 8/- DOZ. Post Free.

RE-COVERED HASKELLS, ARLINGTONS, or WIZARDS

Post Free. PER 14/- DOZ. Post Free.

We guarantee all Balls re-covered by us, and will replace any that may burst or crack in fair play.

SPECIALLY PREPARED GUTTA for Re-covering Supplied. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. SPECIAL TRADE TERMS ON APPLICATION.

A. MACKINTOSH & CO.,

Golf Ball Manufacturers,

1, BURNT ASH HILL, LEE, LONDON, S.E.

Club Houses can be efficiently and economically lighted by

ACETYLENE.

Write H. BAKER, 49, Victoria Street, S.W.

THE LINKS, WHITLEY COMMON.

CHERTSEY.

CROWN HOTEL.

Under Patronage Chertsey Golf Club, and Headquarters Chertsey Trout Re-stocking Association. "Old Times" Coach stops. Ordinary daily. Telephone No. 0196 Chertsey.

H. R. Cox, New Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE.

THE HOTEL BURLINGTON.

WINTER GARDEN, 300ft. long.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS.

Most Moderate Tariff, specially revised, on application to Manager, or to the BURLINGTON and BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTELS, LONDON.

Telephone 750.

BOURNEMOUTH CENTRAL.—Brinklea, Residential Hotel.—Beautiful Grounds. Nearest to Golf Links. Most Central, top of Richmond Hill, on now favourite East Cliff. Swimming Bath, Covered Fives Court, Tennis, Croquet, Library, Billiards. Moderate Terms en pension. Separate Tables. Tariff on application.—Mrs. C. M. CARRELL. Telephone, 01052.

DEAL, adjoining Sandwich.

SOUTH EASTERN HOTEL.

The Deal Links adjoin the Sandwich Links, which together are the finest in England. Combined Rail and Hotel Tickets are issued by the S.E. and C. Railway Co. from their London Stations to Deal as follows:—

| | First Class. |
|---|---|
| Friday to Monday ... ... | £2 12 6 |
| Friday to Sunday ... ... | £2 0 0 |
| Saturday to Monday ... ... | £2 0 0 |

These tickets are available by any train on days mentioned, from October to June inclusive, Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide excepted. Please write for Special Daily Terms to Golfers. Electric Light. Lift. Garage. Omnibus meets trains.

ON BLUNDELLSANDS LINKS.

CONWAY.

OAKWOOD PARK HOTEL.

One mile from Conway Station (main line).

The most beautifully situated and daintily equipped in the Principality. Not the conventional Hotel, but furnished as a Mansion on a large scale.

Private Sitting Rooms and Bedrooms en suite. Luxurious Drawing Room, Smoking Lounge, Promenade, Corridor, Billiard Room, Theatre and Ball Room, with spring floor.

GOLF LINKS ONE MINUTE FROM DOOR.
Tennis, Croquet, and Putting Lawns, Boating, Fishing.

Illustrated Booklet and Tariff on application to—
Mrs. C. A. BAILEY.

Telephone, 25. Telegrams: "Oakwood Conway."

ZÜRICH.—DOLDER GRAND HOTEL, First-class English frequented house in extensive well-wooded grounds, 2,000ft. above sea level. Golf links in front of the hotel; tennis; motoring centre. Electric Tram and funicular service with Zürich Central Station (25 min.). Electro-magnetic therapeutical treatment (E. K. Muller's method).—Manager, E. DIELMANN.

SHERINGHAM, NORFOLK.

THE SHERINGHAM HOTEL,

ADJOINING GOLF LINKS (18 HOLES).

LARGEST HOTEL IN SHERINGHAM. Open all the year round. Handsome Dining Hall, 67ft. long. Numerous spacious Suites of Rooms commanding beautiful Sea and Land Views. Billiard and Smoking Rooms. Excellent and Improved Sanitary Arrangements. Extensive Private Grounds. Lawn tennis, croquet. First-class Stables. Accommodation for Motors and Cycles. Through Trains from King's Cross, Peterborough, Birmingham, Leicester, etc.

Telegrams: "Sheringham Hotel, Sheringham."
National Telephone: No. 3. F. EDENS, Manager.

ALDEBURGH-ON-SEA.

WHITE LION.

THE OLDEST FAMILY HOTEL.

Facing the Sea, with a frontage of 200ft.

Two new wings added, furnished by MAPLE & Co.

Private Suites, Bed Sitting Rooms, Ladies' Drawing Room, Coffee Room (separate tables), Billiard Room.

MODERATE TARIFF.

Special Terms for Golfers and Families during the Winter months

Perfect Sanitary arrangements.

Hotel 'Bus meets Trains. Open all the year.

Mrs. E. BEATTON, Proprietress.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—"The Towers" Private Hotel.—Accommodation for over 100 guests. Large lawns for tennis, bowls, and croquet. Close to golf links. "The Towers" occupies the best position on the cliffs, facing sea, due south. All public rooms and most bedrooms overlook the sea and the private lawns.—Under the direct supervision of the proprietors, EMMERSON & HARRIS.

THE LINKS, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Is the healthiest and most invigorating watering place in the world.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC

(10 minutes' walk from Golf Links)

Is the principal and Leading Hotel. It stands in four acres of ornamental grounds directly facing the sea. It contains 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, including the most beautiful and Oriental Hall Lounge in the Kingdom. Hydraulic Lift, and every modern improvement and comfort. The Tariff is strictly moderate. Excellent Lock-up Motor House and Inspection pit.

Apply MANAGER.

Telegraphic Address—"ATLANTIC, WESTON-SUPER-MARE."
National Telephone, No. 11.

BARTON-ON-SEA, HANTS.

BARTON COURT HOTEL.

Nine-and-a-half miles from Bournemouth facing the Needles, Isle of Wight.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING HOTEL GROUNDS ON THE CLIFFS.

Three Acres of Private Lawns commanding uninterrupted Sea views. The most picturesque Hotel on the South Coast.

Moderate and Inclusive Terms; also Friday to Monday Terms.

Telegrams—"BARTON HOTEL, NEW MILTON."

FRINTON-ON-SEA.

THE GRAND HOTEL.

Charmingly situated on the picturesque cliffs of this select and healthy watering place, noted for its bracing atmosphere. Fine Sands for Bathing. Good Boating. Pleasure Steamboat Excursions, etc.

MAGNIFICENT GOLF LINKS ADJOINING THE HOTEL.

Every modern comfort. Luxuriously furnished throughout. Special cuisine. Table d'hôte. Finest wines, spirits, liqueurs, etc. Moderate Week-end Winter Terms for Golfers.

ROBERT G. SETTERFIELD.

Rates for advertising in the above can be had on application to the ADVT. MANAGER, GEO. NEWNES, LTD., 5-12, Southampton St., Strand, W.C.

Digitized by Google

FOR INFANTS CHILDREN AND INVALIDS.

BENGER'S

FOOD

is distinguished by the ease with which it can be digested and absorbed, and is quite different from any other FOOD obtainable.

Benger's Food is sold in Tins by Chemists, etc., everywhere.

TRAVEL BY WEST COAST ROUTE
BETWEEN . .
ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Ellen's Isle. Loch Katrine.

SPEED and COMFORT.

Hundreds of Pleasure Tours Daily by Rail, Coach and Steamer, on London & North Western and Caledonian systems.

FISHING, SHOOTING, GOLFING, &c., &c., &c.

ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE:
LONDON (EUSTON),
BIRMINGHAM,
LIVERPOOL, AND MANCHESTER
WITH GLASGOW (CENTRAL),
EDINBURGH (PRINCES ST.),
ABERDEEN, INVERNESS,
OBAN, AND THE NORTH.

Descriptive Guide Books of West Coast Route on application to Mr. R. TURNBULL, Euston Station, London.

For Tourist Programmes and "Summer Tours in Scotland," "Oban and the Land of the Gael," "Through Scotland" Descriptive Guides, apply to Mr. G. Calthrop, Caledonian Railway, Glasgow.

Frederick Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Ry.
R. Millar, General Manager Caledonian Ry.

"AN OLD FORMULA REVIVED"

Carlin's
'Calross'
Mixture

A Blend of the choicest tobaccos.
Exquisite flavour & delicate aroma.
Exceptionally cool smoking.
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Sold by leading tobacconists, & Sole Proprietors.

C.A. CARLIN & Co. 177 PICCADILLY

¼LB. SAMPLE TIN 2/6 POST FREE

When selecting from your Jewellers a Patent

GOLD "SELF-CLOSING" BRACELET

be SURE that you get

SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD'S.

THE ORIGINAL MAKE. UNSURPASSED FOR BEAUTY OF DESIGNS, WORKMANSHIP AND FINISH.

N.B.—These Bracelets have for some time been stamped inside with S. & S's Trade Mark "FLEXINE."

Wholesale only—SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LTD., LONDON.

VOGELER'S CURATIVE COMPOUND

PURIFIES THE BLOOD
AND
CURES INDIGESTION,
CONSTIPATION, LIVER ILLS, SKIN DISEASES.

"I must honestly say your Vogeler's Curative Compound has done me a lot of good. My face and neck are quite clear of the Eczema, and I feel so much better in every respect since taking the medicine. I used to have indigestion and wind very bad after eating, but I am now quite free from both these ailments."

(Signed) Miss S. MORRIS,
June 2nd, 1904. Ash Cottage, Court Road, Malvern.

Price 1/1½ and 2/6; of all Chemists.

LARGE FREE SAMPLE

sent on receipt of penny stamp for postage (mentioning this paper) by the Sole Proprietors,

ST. JACOBS OIL, Ltd., 45, Farringdon Road, London.

"The House for Veils."

Largest Selection in London.

CHARLES LEE & SON,

The Royal Specialists for Ladies' Wear, . .

98 & 100, Wigmore St., LONDON, W.,

famous for

The Royal Crescent Veil,

a shaped Patent adjustable Veil, at prices and quality showing a great saving over veiling purchased by the yard.

9d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, 1/9, 2/-, 2/3, 2/6, etc.

MOTOR VEILS.
MOTOR HATS.
MOTOR VEILS.

The latest and largest selection in London.

Messrs. LEE & SON continue to send a box containing a good assortment by post; boxes ready for return, no trouble after selecting.

Digitized by Google

NAVAL PICTURES AT EARL'S COURT.

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY & ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

VOL. XX. No. 435 SATURDAY, JUNE 3rd, 1905. PRICE 6d.

Midwinter.

MR. R. A. SANDERS, M.A.

Prospective Conservative Candidate for the Bridgwater Division of Somerset.

(See page 289.)

Digitized by Google

THE KING

AND HIS NAVY AND ARMY.

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL FOR SOCIETY, THE SALON AND THE SERVICES.

Vol. XX. No. 435. Saturday, June 3, 1905.

Editorial Offices—3, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.
Telegraphic Address—"INFORMALLY," LONDON.
Telephone—No. 2,748, GERRARD.
Advertisement and Publishing Offices—7-12, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

EDITORIAL.

TO CONTRIBUTORS. — The Editor will be pleased to receive for consideration photographs and literary contributions. Contributors are requested to place their names and addresses on their MSS., and on the backs of photographs, which should be carefully packed and accompanied by descriptions of their subjects. The Editor will not be responsible for the return of artistic or literary contributions which he may not be able to use, and the receipt of a proof must not be taken as evidence that an article is accepted. Publication in THE KING alone will be recognised as acceptance. Where stamps are enclosed, the Editor will do his best to return those contributions which he does not require. If it is desired that rejected photographs should be returned, a sufficiently stamped and directed label must be enclosed for the purpose.

THE KING is on sale throughout Great Britain and Ireland, and may be obtained at all railway and other Bookstalls. The Publisher would advise subscribers to THE KING to order the paper regularly from a local Bookseller or Newsagent; but should any difficulty be experienced in obtaining the paper, reference should be at once made to him at the above address.

The Editor would be much obliged if photographers and others sending groups would place the name of each person on the pictures so as to plainly indicate to which figure each name refers.

The March of Events.

PER MARE, PER TERRAM.

THE KING AND PRINCESS ENA.—The début of Princess Ena of Battenberg was a very brilliant affair, and the presence of the King and nearly all the members of the Royal family made the occasion a more than usually auspicious one. The beautiful old rooms of Kensington Palace were thronged with a brilliant concourse of distinguished guests, and the old Council Chamber and the adjoining room were set apart for dancing. The Council Chamber has been so called since that day in 1837 when Queen Victoria held her first Council in that room. She went through the whole ceremony, we are told, with perfect calmness and self-possession, that gracious dignity and impartiality which and at once won for her the love and devotion of her subjects, which she never lost. There was a peculiar appropriateness in Princess Ena's début being celebrated in that room, for the granddaughter has inherited many of the qualities of her illustrious forebear.

Portela, Madrid.

THE VISIT OF THE KING OF SPAIN.

Next week the King of Spain arrives in this country on a visit to the King and Queen. In the above illustration he is seen seated in the midst of the Officers of State who will accompany him during his tour.

THE KING AND ALFONSO OF SPAIN.—The King of Spain has passed his own frontier for the first time in his life. He is in Paris, and there has been received with cordiality and friendliness. There is much that tends to amity between the neighbours, and the attitude of Spain in all questions affecting France has always been so friendly and so correct that nothing but warmth could be expected to characterise the young King's reception in the Republican capital. Next week he will be with us, and has such a long and varied programme to get through, that it is to be feared his recollections of this country will be rather blurred and confused. Banquets at the Guildhall and Buckingham Palace, a visit to Windsor, a gala performance at the opera, a visit to the Royal Naval and Military Tournament, and dinner with the Marquess and Marchioness of Lansdowne at Lansdowne House are but a few of his appointments. At about the same time, too, the Royal visitors for the wedding of Princess Margaret of Connaught will be arriving. Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia are expected next week, and will remain in town until the day before the wedding, when they go to Windsor as the guests of the King and Queen.

THE QUEEN AND WEYMOUTH.—The lovely little Dorsetshire watering-place to which Queen Alexandra paid a call in passing, on her return from the Mediterranean, is not unacquainted with Royalty, but in these latter days has not had such occasion for loyal rejoicing as was afforded it when George III. and his Consort sojourned at Gloucester House. So wild with enthusiasm did the good people become, that when the King went to bathe, a band was sent out to play the National Anthem as he took his dip. And Queen Charlotte, taking tea in the rooms, had to have the door left open, that the loyal crowd might see its fill of the illustrious personages. The faithful Burney, in her memoirs, has left us some striking pictures of those times, when the Royal visitors were not above walking down to the little theatre to see Mrs. Siddons perform, though in London they always sent for her to recite to them at Buckingham Palace. Weymouth to-day, though outwardly changed, has just as much attraction as it had in those days, and, no doubt, it was for something more than the mails that the "Victoria and Albert" put in there for a short time last week.

THE PRINCE AND THE MARINES.—The interest which the Prince of Wales takes in everything that concerns the Naval Service made his presence at the anniversary dinner of the Royal Marines last week an almost foregone conclusion. The Sea Regiment, as at present constituted, dates back to 1755, but an earlier form of it was raised in 1664 by an Order in Council for 1,200 soldiers to be formed into a regiment for service aboard the fleet, and to be called "Our Dearest Brother James, Duke of York, His Regiment of Foot." As may be seen at Islington, the uniform of this regiment, which was subsequently absorbed into the Coldstream Guards, was yellow with scarlet facings. During the past 150 years the regiment has been a permanently constituted force. The men whom Kipling so aptly called "soldiers and sailors too" have a right to be proud of their record, "Per Mare, per Terram," for they have a wide record of service.

Digitized by Google

Montegriffo.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA IN SPAIN.

From a unique photograph taken in the Cork Wood, Almoraima, where her Majesty was recently present at a picnic.

Copyright.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE COLONIALS.

The memorial to the 4,000 Colonial officers and men who fell in the South African War was unveiled in St. Paul's Cathedral last week by the Prince of Wales. The memorial, which was designed and executed by Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, was illustrated in our last issue.

Gale and Polden

THE KING AT ALDERSHOT.

While at Aldershot on Empire Day, the King unveiled the memorial to the 300 members of the Royal Army Medical Corps who were killed in South Africa. The form of the memorial, with at the base the wounded soldier in the arms of two comrades who are binding up his wounds, may be well seen.

Digitized by Google

Copyright.

THE COACHING CLUB MEET IN HYDE PARK.

A large and distinguished crowd, gowned in very summery costumes, gathered in Hyde Park last Saturday for the first coaching meet of the season. The line from Hyde Park Corner to Hurlingham was led by Mr. Albert Brassey, who had Lady Violet Brassey with him on the box. The six coaches shown in the front rank of the above illustration, reading from left to right, belong respectively to Mr. Albert Brassey, Colonel Tournor, Mr. J. Mitchell, Mr. J. H. Horton, Mr. W. H. Grenfell, and Mr. B. S. Faudel-Phillips.

W. A. Rouch.

SIR DAVID SALOMONS

With Lady Dixon Hartland on the box, driving his team of blacks.

W. A. Rouch.

DR. GEORGE HASTINGS

And his greys. Dr. Hastings is the principal proprietor of the Ranelagh Club.

Shawcross.

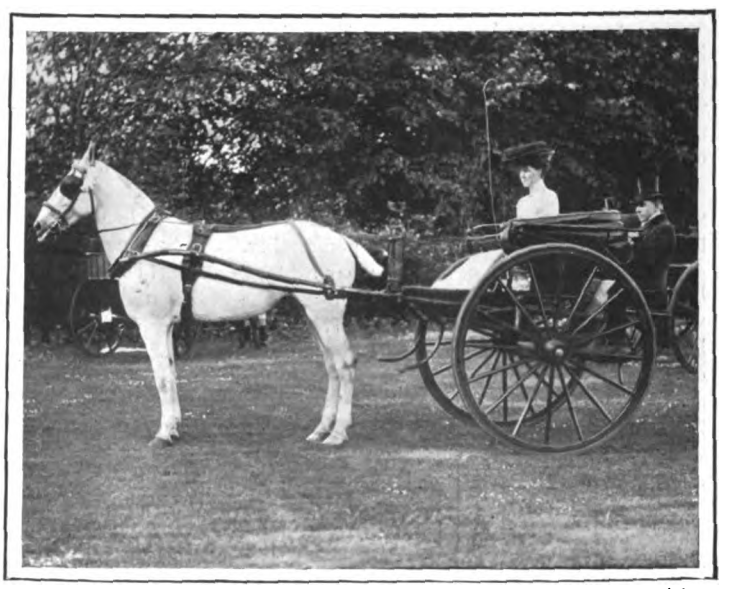
THE MEET OF THE WEST SURREY AND BERKSHIRE AUTOMOBILE CLUBS.

These clubs held a most successful gathering at Tangley Park, Guildford, the residence of Mrs. Wilson Noble, last week. About twenty cars were present, bringing a large and distinguished party together, among whom were Lord and Lady Hawarden, General and Mrs. Kincaid, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Noble.

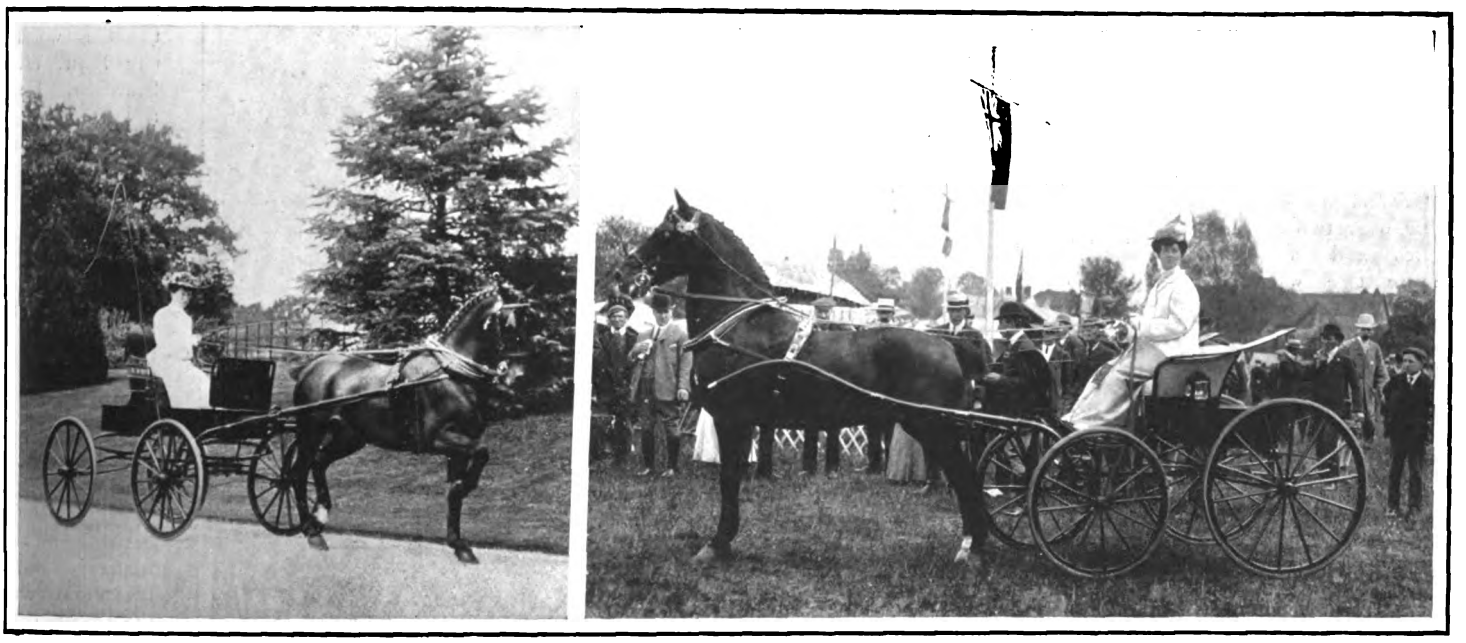
Digitized by Google



Copyright. Copyright.

THE LADIES' DRIVING COMPETITION AT HURLINGHAM.

Mrs. Hines driving Butterfly in Single Harness Class. Mrs. Mitchell Henderson. First in Single Harness Class.



W. A. Rouch.

THE REIGATE HORSE SHOW.

Miss Grace Clarke driving Berkeley Bobs. First prize, 14-hands and under. Mrs. Percy Heaton's Napoleon. First prize under 15-hands.

W. A. Rouch.

A TYPICAL SCENE AT THE DERBY.

Luncheon-time on the famous "Hill," just before the great race.

Digitized by Google

A Colonial in Italy.—The Hon. Mrs. Robert Lindsey has been having a royal time in Italy. In Rome she and her husband dined with the King and Queen, and in Florence they stayed with the Dowager Countess of Crawford, who lives in the palace in which Boccaccio wrote the "Decameron." It is full of fine pictures and art treasures, and its present owner is an interesting personality. Mrs. Lindsey was one of the "Durbar brides," having met her husband in India, whither she went in 1902 with her mother. Her half-brother is Sir Rupert Clarke of Rupertswood, one of the finest stations in Australia. In their father's will is a curious clause, which forbids the baronet and his step-mother to leave Australia at one and the same time. Evidently Sir William knew the attractions of England for rich Colonists. Captain Lindsey is a son of the Earl of Crawford, who owns "Valhalla."

The Philology of Yachting.—It is little over two centuries and a-half since the word "yacht" was first incorporated in the English language, adapted from the Dutch "jaglen," to speed. In October, 1661, took place the first yacht-race on record, between King Charles II. and the Duke of York, which the King lost, according to Evelyn. Yachts were first introduced to this country by some members of the Dutch East India Company, and, as is often the case, the new sport brought with it many new terms, which were speedily incorporated in the language. Such words as "skipper," "sloop," "boom," "taffrail," which are to-day quite English, were all derived from the Dutch crews who came over to teach the Thames watermen how to handle the new craft. "Hoy," too, is Dutch, and was used in the estuary of the Scheldt long years before the boats plied between London and Margate. And who would realise that the "companion" of a ship in Dutch was the quarter-deck, and in Italian the provisions on board. How the mediæval pantry developed into the quarter-deck in its passage from the Mediterranean to the North Sea is a question which philologists may find it worth their while to investigate.

Lafayette.

MISS MURIEL DAVIS

Who comes from New Zealand, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moss Davis of Auckland.

Sir Clements Markham.—For well-nigh sixty years the retiring President of the Royal Geographical Society has devoted himself to his country's interests, first as a seaman and then as a geographer, and there will be none but will wish him many years of blissful repose after the strenuousness of his life. A traveller of wide and varied experience, there are very few, especially of the lesser-known, parts of the world which he has not visited, and there is created by his retirement a gap in the executive of the Royal Geographical Society which it will not be easy for even so able a man as Sir George Goldie to fill. During the twelve years he has been President he has, as the King in a complimentary letter said, discharged his arduous and important duties with ability, zeal, and success. It has fallen to him to introduce many interesting people to audiences in the little theatre in Hanover Square, and under his direction the society has achieved many notable successes. Not the least was the account given by the late Prince Henri d'Orleans of his doings on the Mekong. The lecture was humorous to a degree, and to this day one remembers with relish the story of the Siamese cook who was dismissed every morning for incompetence, and who never failed to turn up in camp again every evening.

An Africander in England.—The Hon. W. P. Schreiner, who is now in England, is a member of a remarkable family. The father was a German and a missionary. The mother was an Englishwoman, who was as lovable as she was beautiful, and as intellectual as she was charming. To the day of her death she retained the friendship of Mr. Rhodes. One daughter is the most individual novelist of her sex ever produced in an English-speaking community oversea, the United States not excepted. The other is an ardent temperance reformer. Of her sons the only one known to the world is the Hon. W. P. Schreiner. He is a lawyer, and was Attorney-General in the Rhodes Ministry at the time of the Jameson Raid. It was he who carried the news to his Chief at Groote Schuur, and it was to him that the historic phrase was said, "Poor old Jameson; he's upset my apple-cart." For two years he was Prime Minister of the Cape Colony, from 1898 to 1900, that is to say, during the most critical stage of the war.

An Anglo-Canadian Engagement.—The engagement is announced of the Hon. Francis Macnaghten, second son of Lord Macnaghten, and Beatrice, daughter of the late Sir William Ritchie. In this way one of the legal families of Canada will be united to one of the legal families of this country. For Sir William was Chief Justice of the Dominion from 1879 to 1892, his father was a judge, and so was his brother. They were all natives of Nova Scotia, where their name was known and honoured for upwards of a century. One of Sir William's nieces is on the teaching staff of Wellesley, a famous girls' college in the United States. Lady Ritchie, who was her husband's second wife, lives with her daughter in Ottawa. Lord Macnaghten is a Law Lord, whose grandfather was given a baronetcy in recognition of his services to Indian Law.

Digitized by Google

THE CANADIAN HIGH COMMISSIONER.—It is again reported from Ottawa that Lord Strathcona is about to retire. Either Sir William Mulock or the Hon. Clifford Sifton is likely to be his successor. They are both wealthy men, which seems a tradition of the office, perhaps because the salary is so small. More than a generation ago Childers, the first official representative of a Colony in London, said that, to perform his social duties adequately, the Agent-General should be paid £2,000 a year. But this was a counsel of perfection. The Canadian High Commissioner, besides being rich, is always a personality. Should Mr. Sifton get the coveted post, he will be the first man in his prime to occupy it. Compared to such veterans as Lord Strathcona and Sir Charles Tupper, he is a youth; but his ability is undoubted, and he has a charming wife to aid him socially.

THE WASHINGTON EMBASSY.—The ways of the Foreign Office are curious. To add £800 a year to the salary of our Ambassador to the United States a British official in Zanzibar is sacrificed, and the Rhodesian Acting Commissioner loses £500 a year. By this means the Embassy at Washington is put on a financial level with British Embassies in European capitals. Up to now it was the poorest paid of all the ambassadorial posts, with the single exception of Madrid. But it is absurd to suppose that even out of £7,300 Sir Mortimer Durand "will do at Washington what American millionaires do." Such an idea was never entertained by the Foreign Office. In the first place, the American capital is the one city in the United States where the pace is not set by millionaires, and, in the second place, British diplomatists are not supposed to rival the entertainments of plutocrats. As a matter of fact, invitations to the British Embassy are eagerly sought after in Washington, and as a residence it ranks high.

THE SPEAKER AND HIS DEPUTIES.—The business of the Empire has lately been hanging upon the state of health of one man, and that gentleman is not the Prime Minister, but the Deputy-Assistant Speaker of the House of Commons. For both the Speaker and the Deputy-Speaker have been incapacitated through illness, and Mr. Arthur Jeffreys has been called upon to take their place. It is not generally known that until three years ago there was no Deputy-Assistant Speaker, and it is remarkable that there is no previous instance in the history of the House of Commons of a Speaker and his Deputy both falling ill at the same time. At the time when the House was discussing the advisability of having a third string to their bow, a member pointed out that they were committing a serious breach of constitutional law in doing so without having obtained the consent of the King. The discussion was accordingly dropped, and a messenger despatched in haste to Buckingham Palace to obtain the necessary consent, after which the matter was proceeded with by the House. But further than the Deputy-Assistant Speaker it is impossible to go, and in the event of the illness of Mr. Gully, Mr. J. W. Lowther, and Mr. Jeffreys, it would be impossible for the House of Commons to sit. The only solution would be the resignation of the Speaker, and the election of a temporary successor.

A POPULAR GOVERNOR.—Lord Ranfurly, who delivered a lecture on New Zealand before the Royal Colonial Institute a few days ago, was the most popular Governor the Colony ever had. Not only did he win the hearts of the settlers, but of the Maoris even in the King Country. In all he spent seven years in the Britain of the South, every part of which he visited, as well as its most distant dependencies. He is an able man, but the secret of his success was his ability to make himself one with the Colonists. In this he was aided by his gifted wife, who, by the way, is entertaining this season on behalf of her pretty young daughter, Lady Constance Knox. A curious story is told of Lord Ranfurly's departure from New Zealand. It appears there is a feud between Mr. Seddon and Sir Robert Stout, the Chief Justice. To prevent the latter from acting as Governor, which in he natural course of things he should have done, the former persuaded Lord Ranfurly to stay in Wellington until his successor, Lord Plunket, was in the harbour.

Lafayette.

MISS RUBY DAVIS

Youngest daughter of Mr. Moss Davis, who, with his family, is on a visit to this country.

THE KING OF SPAIN AND AGRICULTURE.—Since he came of age King Alphonso has thrown himself heart and soul into every scheme for benefiting his country and his subjects. One of the most profitable of his whims has been the introduction of a large quantity of agricultural machinery of the latest type. He has selected in various parts of the country plots of hitherto barren and unproductive ground, totalling in all about 1,000 acres. This ground he has had tended and worked by experienced men, and though but a short time has elapsed since the first experiments were made, there is every prospect of profitable crops being raised. The King, in a word, has been giving his subjects a badly-needed lesson in agriculture, and his energy and initiative have had the effect of heightening his popularity with the people, even if they do not lead to increased activity in the field and farms of the country of the Dons.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

EDITED BY A. J. ROBERTSON.

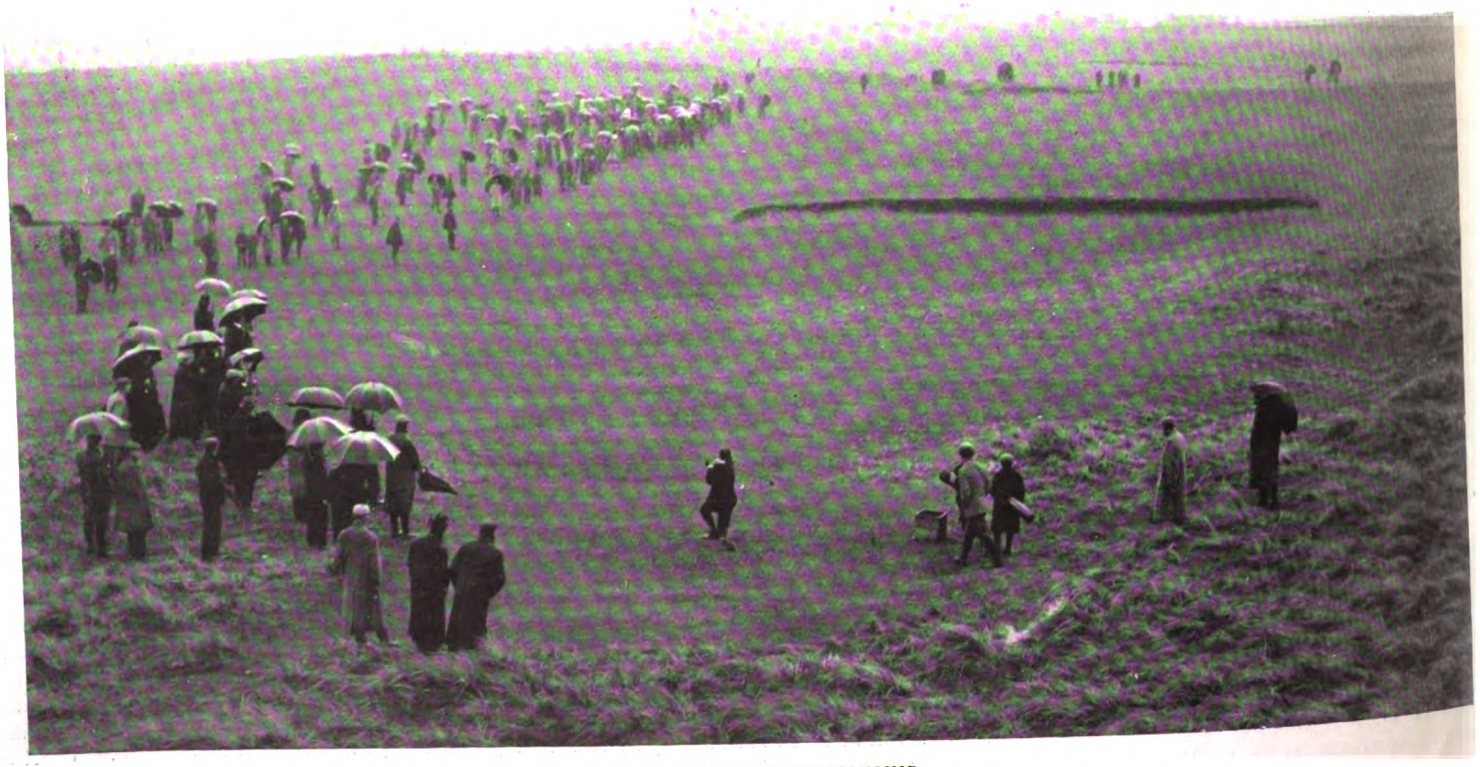
THE Amateur Championship, which was played last week at Prestwick, resulted in the victory of Mr. A. G. Barry, who entered from the St. Andrews' University Club. The result was almost as unexpected as was the victory of Mr. W. J. Travis at Sandwich last year. Mr. Barry, whom every golfer will congratulate most heartily, was little known as a player outside St. Andrews, though many keen observers of the rising generation of players there had frequently predicted before last Friday's victory that the new Amateur Champion played such a game as might, with health and strength, carry him very far to the front in the leading ranks of our best amateur play. Quite lately he had a score of 75 to his credit at St. Andrews, and the matches that he was called upon to play at Prestwick last week show that for a young man nineteen years of age he has the pluck, resource, and dash out of which all first-class players are compounded.

* * *

The number of entries for this year's Amateur Championship exceeded that of any previous year. There were 148 players, as against 142 two years ago at Muirfield. The entry was thoroughly representative of Scottish and English golf, for as Prestwick is situated within easy reach of Edinburgh and Glasgow, and is itself the nursery of some splendid golfing talent, the Scottish clubs were much more prominent than naturally is the case when the competition is played in England. Mr. Travis could not come from America to defend his title, but Mr. G. S. Lyon, three times winner of the Canadian Championship, and the winner of the "World's Championship" at the St. Louis Exhibition last autumn, added just a touch of Colonial and Imperial distinction to the competition. The weather was unfortunately broken and disagreeable during the progress of the later matches, and the closing stages of the final round between Mr. Barry and the Hon. Osmund Scott were played in a pelting downpour of rain. Alternate sunshine and shower, with the greens sometimes fiery and sometimes slow and heavy, put to a pretty severe test the faculty of observation and the capacity to judge distances and strength of shots. It may be owing to this variety of weather conditions and the state of the green that many of the most surprising results were due. On Tuesday, for example, it was cold and rainy, with a strong wind off the sea, the weather of Monday being sunny and bright, leading, of course, to faster play. In the second round Mr. J. L. Low lost his match to Mr. Laird, a local player, mainly owing to the number of stymies that were laid against him by his opponent; Mr. C. C. Wedderburn, the winner of the Bombay Medal at the St. Andrews Spring Meeting, was thrown out by Mr. Vivian Pollock; Mr. S. H. Fry lost to Mr. Graham, after a hard match, by 1 hole; Mr. Laidlay beat Mr. John Ball by 2; and Mr. George Clark, a young Edinburgh player, defeated Mr. Horace

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. A. G. Barry, St. Andrews' University, the winner of the Amateur Championship at Prestwick last week. Golfers will note the tremendous energy of his style and the abnormal length of the follow through of the swing.



THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. A. G. Barry, the Amat ur Champion, driving at the 9th tee in the final, played in a downpour of rain.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

Hutchinson. Then in the third round Mr. Angus Macdonald beat Mr. Laidlay by 1 hole after having the worst of the match, while Mr. G. S. Lyon, the Canadian Champion, lost by 1 hole to Mr. Wilkie, who was dormy one, and who holed a stymie for a half at the last hole amid a round of applause. It was not until the sixth round on Thursday that observers began to think, notwithstanding the hard matches that Mr. Maxwell had been playing, there was a chance of his coming out the victor. In this round, however, he was drawn against Mr. A. G. Barry, the eventual winner of the tournament, and after a capital ding-dong contest, in which the game fluctuated first to one side and then to the other, something like a sensation was created by the defeat of Mr. Maxwell by 1 hole. The large gathering of spectators at the home hole saw the play there result in a half in 4, while the nineteenth hole was won by Mr. Barry in a steady 4, Mr. Maxwell overrunning the hole by about 8-ft. with his approach putt, and failing

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.
Mr. A. G. Barry, the Amateur Champion, putting. Players will note the interlocked grip of the sinewy hands, and the St. Andrews stance.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.
Mr. A. G. Barry driving at the 13th tee against Mr. R. Maxwell.

to get down in the odd. Then in the semi-final round Mr. Barry had to play Mr. J. Graham, and after a tremendous struggle, in which magnificent golf was played on both sides, Mr. Barry won the last hole in 3 by holing a putt of 9-yds.

* * *

In order to reach the final, therefore, Mr. Barry had played consistently steady, and sometimes a great deal of brilliant golf. All his matches were close, the majority of his later rounds being finished with not much more than 1 hole to spare. Though a very long driver off the tee—he occasionally outstripped the long shots of Mr. Maxwell—the strength of his game in the Amateur Championship, at all events, lay in the excellent steadiness of his putting. Over and over again the prospect looked dark of his being able even to secure a half at many of the holes, and especially in the final round. But his coolness, self-control, and excellent judgment of pace and distance pulled him through many a crisis, and enabled him in the end to score an unexpected but extremely popular victory. The first eighteen holes of the final with the Hon. Osmund Scott were halved, but assuming the lead at the first hole in the afternoon, Mr. Barry never again lost his supremacy. After a good deal of give-and-take play, wherein perhaps Mr. Scott did not profit so much as he naturally would wish from the mistakes of his opponent, Mr. Barry won his first championship by 3 and 2 to play. The strong point of his play is undoubtedly his putting. His method of hitting the ball in approaching the hole, as well as in holing out, is to strike it above the centre. By this means he imparts a forward spin to the ball, causing it to "bite" the inequalities of the putting green, and to run in an absolutely straight line without any of the uncertain "wobble" which is such a general feature of everyday play near the hole side.

* * *

At the Spring Meeting of the Sunningdale Golf Club there was some very excellent scoring. For the Scratch Gold Medal Mr. H. Hambro and Mr. A. C. M. Croome tied at 79, Mr. Horace Castle was 80, and Mr. M. W. Mossop 82. In playing off the tie Mr. H. Hambro won. In the handicap prize Mr. A. Cameron and Mr. F. G. Waterer tied at 79, and

THE PRESENTATION-CEREMONY.
Mr. Neilson of the Prestwick Club presenting the Amateur Champion with the medal and cup the Hon. Osmund Scott standing on the immediate left.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

in playing off the last-named won. For the handicap prize played for on the Saturday Mr. T. A. Roberts won with a net score of 79, Messrs. Pritchett, Hugill, and Hichens tieing for second place with net scores of 80.

THE LINKS AT HAYDON BRIDGE.

HAYDON BRIDGE nestles in the picturesque valley of the South Tyne, on the North Eastern Railway, midway between Newcastle and Carlisle. It is a purely residential place, and numerous villas dot the sunny slopes of the north side of the valley. Perched on a hill overlooking the village is Haydon old church, an interesting chantry, built in 1180 on the site of a still older church dating from the seventh or eighth century.

One and a-half miles distant stands Langley Castle, built by Sir Thomas Lucy partly from the spoils of Crècy. Haydon Bridge can claim to be the birthplace of John Martin the painter, and it was the expansive views of the valley from the surrounding hills that inspired his well-known picture, "The Plains of Heaven." Bishop Ridley was also born in the neighbourhood. The little town is well known to archæologists and tourists as a convenient medium of reaching Borcoircus, the finest of the camps on the Roman Wall, and the adjoining Northumberland lakes.

The question of providing a golf course was mooted at a public meeting so recently as October last, a committee formed, and by January 1 this year six fields were rented at Chesterwood Park, a nine-hole course laid out, and a club formed under the title of the Haydon Bridge Golf Club, with the undermentioned executive: President, Alderman Thomas Carrick, J.P.; vice-president, Major Richard Hardcastle, R.A.; captain, Mr. E. M. Oubridge; hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. N. Beattie, Church Street, Haydon Bridge.

THE INTERNATIONAL MATCH AT PRESTWICK.
Mr. J. Robb (Scotland) driving to the 18th hole against Mr. H. Hilton (England).

The links are one mile distant from Haydon Bridge Station in the direction of the Roman Wall. The position is well above the valley, commanding fine views of the valley itself, the hills on either side, the more distant Cumberland Mountains, and to the north the high ridge along which runs the Roman Wall—all very Scotch-like in character. Chesterwood Grange, the headquarters of the Haydon Hunt, is close by.

To reach the course the golfer passes through Chesterwood, a hamlet of about a dozen dwellings, mostly "peel" houses, of great age and immensely thick walls, built to resist the attacks of raiders in the old days when might was right. The club is housed in one of the best preserved of these, which is quite characteristic, having massive walls of freestone, with an apartment on the ground floor, where the cattle were placed for safety, and the one above approached by an outside stone stair, where the tenant and his family barricaded themselves against intruders. The floor and roof are supported on strong roughly-hewn oak beams. Through the liberality of many of the members, it presents a very different internal appearance from what it must have done in 1710, when occupied by Frank Stokoe (mentioned in "Dorothy Foster," as a follower of the Earl of Derwentwater), a free-booter of gigantic size and fearless courage, who one night killed a marauder at his door and sent others over the parapet of the stairs. Here refreshments are now served to the peaceful golfer between rounds.

The first tee is only a few steps beyond the club-house, a well-chosen position on a knoll, the highest bit of the course, and commanding a magnificent view of the links and the surrounding country. Behind it is the ninth green with its fine turf of quite a seaside type. The course is essentially sporting in character, with numerous natural hazards and many hedges, where the unwary and the unskilful may come to grief. The "Bogey"

GOLF AT HAYDON BRIDGE.
A panoramic view of a portion of the course. Miss Coning driving from the 1st tee. Her partner is Mr. J. W. Robinson, and behind him is Major Hardcastle the vice-president.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

THE LADIES' GOLF UNION.

(1) Mrs. Jessop Hulton, hon. treasurer of the Union and hon. secretary Lancashire Ladies' Coun'y Golf Club. (2) Colonel J. M'Calmont, M.P., one of the vice-presidents. (3) Miss Issette Pearson, the popular and hard-working hon. secretary. (4) Mr. Horace Hutchinson, a vice-president. (5) Mr. Laidlaw Purves, one of the founders of the Union, the discoverer of Sandwich, and the best-informed authority now living on the history of the game. (6) Mr. T. H. Miller, a vice-president. (7) Mr. J. Talbot Fair of Lytham and St. Anne's, a vice-president. (8) Mr. Robert Whyte of Blackheath, a vice-president, and an active worker in promoting the interests of ladies' golf.

Digitized by Google

On the Links.

is 41, but Caird, the Newcastle professional, has established a fine record of 37. The charges for visitors are: Ladies 1s. and gentlemen 1s. per day; 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d. per week 3s. 6d. and 5s. per fortnight; and 5s. and 10s per month respectively. A. H. ROBINSON.

REVIEWS.

THE GOLFING ANNUAL FOR 1905 has just been issued by Mr. Horace Cox at the Field office. This is the eighteenth volume which has been published, and its growing bulk, as well as the interesting diversity of its contents, afford a striking proof not only of the widespread development of the game, but of the universal attention which is being given to all points of controversy. This year the Annual makes a welcome departure in being published before the beginning of the championships, which are now in progress. Golfers are thereby enabled, should a point of doubt need verification, to refer to the records of the championships played last year, and to settle any dispute without unnecessary delay or research. It is gratifying to find that the number of golf clubs and courses continues to increase, the number this year being 2,899, as against 2,859 last year. One feature of the volume, which is sure to be permanently useful, especially to golf club committees, is the chapter containing the recent decisions of the Rules of Golf Committee of St. Andrews. This chapter bids fair in time to grow into a formidable body of authoritative law on disputes connected with the interpretation of the rules; and it is particularly valuable to have concrete illustrations with the official reading of the rules so conveniently at hand. All the championships of last year are set out in detail, each competition being illustrated by portraits of the winners. The other features of the volume are a bright and chatty article on the career of Jack White, by the Rev. John Kerr, who, in previous years, included the Open Champion and his wife among his young parishioners. Dr. Macpherson gives some useful practical hints to golfers, and there is, of course, the indispensable club directory. (Published by Horace Cox, the Field, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, W.C.)

A. H. Robinson.

THE HAYDON BRIDGE LINKS.

Miss Coning putting on one of the greens; Mr. J. W. Robinson watching the shot.

A. H. Robinson.

GOLF AT HAYDON BRIDGE.

Mr. Bryant playing out of a "boggy" bunker going to the 6th hole.

A. H. Robinson.

THE HAYDON BRIDGE LINKS.

A view of the 7th putting green. Mrs. Oubridge playing; Miss Grey and Miss M. Henderson looking on.

A. H. Robinson.

THE HAYDON BRIDGE LINKS.

Mr. E. M. Oubridge, the captain, playing a lofting shot; Mr. N. Beattie, the hon. secretary, looking on.

FIXTURES.

June 3.—England v. Scotland (Professionals), at St. Andrews.
June 3.—Hanger Hill, Annual Meeting.
June 3.—Sundridge Park, Summer Meeting.
June 3.—Rye, Monthly Medal.
June 6.—Royal Blackheath, Summer Medal.
June 7.—Mixed Foursomes Tournament, Sundridge Park.
June 7-8.—Open Championship, at St. Andrews.
June 8.—Hanger Hill v. Wembley.
June 8-10.—Amateur Championship of France at La Boulie.
June 10.—Hanger Hill, Medal.
June 10.—New Luffness, Trayner Cup.
June 10.—Cinque Ports, Captain's Prize.
June 10.—Hythe, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Royal St. George's, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Rye, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10.—Glasgow, Garroway Cup (at Killermont).
June 10.—Frinton, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 10-13.—Tooting Bec, Foursome Tournament.
June 10-16.—Bushey Hall, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 12.—Hanger Hill, Whit-Monday Competition.
June 12.—Portmarnock, Cup Competition.
June 12.—Cinque Ports, Scratch Challenge Cup.
June 12.—Royal Isle of Wight, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12.—Royal North Devon, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 12-14.—Le Touquet, Whitsuntide Open Meeting.
June 13-15.—Royal Cromer, Whitsuntide Meeting.
June 14.—Hanger Hill, Evening Fête.
June 15.—Hastings and St. Leonards, Ladies' Open Meeting.
June 15-17.—Bar Golfing Society, Annual Tournament, at Sandwich.
June 17.—Hanger Hill, "Bogey."
June 17.—Bushey Hall, Vice-Captain's Prize.
June 17.—Tooting Bec, Victoria Diamond Jubilee Cup.
June 17.—Royal Portrush, Midsummer Meeting.
June 17.—Wembley, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 19.—Hanger Hill, Ladies' Open Competition.
June 19.—St. George's Challenge Cup, at Sandwich.
June 19-20.—Scottish Ladies' Championship, at North Berwick.
June 19-24.—Yorkshire Union Championship Meeting, at Redcar.
June 22.—Hanger Hill v. Wembley.
June 24.—Hanger Hill, Open Amateur Meeting.
June 24.—Sudbrook Park, Rube Challenge Shield.
June 24-25.—Le Touquet v. Press Golfing Society.

Digitized by Google

Political Pen Pictures.

IN AND OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

No. XLV.—Mr. R. A. Sanders, M.A., Prospective Conservative Candidate for the Bridgwater Division of Somerset, and Master of the Devon and Somerset Staghounds.

ON the shores of the Severn Sea, where the rolling tide frets the sands of West Somerset, lies that romantic and interesting country beloved by students of history for its connection with the great Alfred, with the intrepid Blake, and with the rise and final crushing-out at Sedgemoor of Monmouth's rebellion. It is idolised by romancists and tourists as the country of the Doones, of Coleridge and Southey, of Exmoor and the Quantocks, and by sportsmen as the home of the lordly red deer, where keen-scented hounds rouse him from his leafy fastness, where all day long the noble beast leads hounds and fields of eager sportsmen over moorland and coombe. Here alone in England—unlike the so-called stag-hunting elsewhere, where a tame deer is ejected from a cart and then ingloriously retaken — the quarry finally yields up its life for the health-giving sport and food of man, and the provision of dearly-prized trophies of the chase.

The stag-hunting country extends from Bridgwater, away over the Quantocks and Exmoor, to Barnstaple in North Devon; by far the greater part of it lies in Somerset, and not, as is popularly supposed, in Devon, and much of Exmoor is under the political sway of Sir Alexander Hood, the capable and popular Chief Whip of the Government, whose division of West Somerset is no less than forty-five miles long. The Quantocks have been for the past year or two hunted by Mr. Stanley, son of the present member for the Bridgwater Division, with a pack subsidiary to the Devon and Somerset, which hunt has not permanently given up the district, and so Mr. R. A. Sanders, the present Master, has been appropriately "adopted" as the prospective Conservative candidate for the Bridgwater Division. Like his predecessor, Mr. Fenwick Bissett, who was sent to Parliament by a grateful country, Mr. Sanders is very popular as the capable Master of this world-renowned hunt, which, although the oldest in existence, is, even now, in its palmy days. If any person doubts this let him go to the opening meet at Cloutsham Ball in the first week in August and see the vast crowd which revels in that charming prospect; let him remember that no less than 300 head of deer were accounted for last year by the Devon and Somerset and subsidiary packs; and let him gain knowledge of the splendid runs which are by no means of infrequent occurrence. Only this spring a deer was taken in a residence in Bridgwater town, and but last month a fine old stag, found in Mr. Sanders' probable future division, was hunted across Sir Alexander Hood's constituency, and finally found shelter in the western slope of the Blagdon Hills far away in the Tiverton Division of Devon.

Mr. R. A. Sanders was born on June 20, 1867. He is the eldest son of the late Mr. Arthur Sanders of Fernhill, Isle of Wight. He was educated at Harrow, where he became head of the school in 1885-86, and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he was known as an active member of the historic Canning Club, which has given the world so many illustrious Conservatives, Lord Curzon amongst them, and at the meetings of which, in Mr. Sanders' time, Lord Hugh Cecil, Mr. W. F. D. Smith, and the present Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs were amongst his contemporaries.

Alice Hughes.

MRS. R. A. SANDERS

Wife of the Prospective Conservative Candidate for the Bridgwater Division of Somerset.

A distinguished University career was closed by his taking a "first-class" in the Honours School of Jurisprudence in 1890. Mr. Sanders was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple in 1891, but in 1893 went down to the West Country, and where the beautiful house of Glenthorne nestles amid the great cliffs that protect the ancient forest of Exmoor from the inroad of the ocean, he carried off one of the most charming of its denizens in the person of Miss Lucy Halliday, daughter of Mr. W. H. Halliday of Glenthorne. Mr. and Mrs. Sanders went to live in the Midlands; but not for long. The "Wild West" soon had its revenge, and after hunting for two years in Leicestershire, they were again claimed by Exmoor. Mr. Sanders was offered and accepted the Mastership of the Devon and Somerset Staghounds in 1895, and has ever since hunted them with conspicuous success. Although deer are very plentiful and do much damage, Mr. Sanders is very popular with all classes, and their appreciation of him was well expressed in a few words by a supporter at Bridgwater, who described him as "a kind master, a thorough gentleman, and as straight as a die." The farmers are proud to preserve the deer for him, and although they will grumble in West Somerset language that "the nasty toads are eating them out of house and home," yet when Mr. Sanders tactfully enquires as to drawing the woods, he gets a reply like this: "The stags have been in my corn every night, but, lor' bless you, I don't mind that. I have been keeping the covert quiet. Won't you please to come in and have something?" He has just been elected President of the Somerset Agricultural Society for the ensuing year.

Mr. Sanders is a magistrate for the counties of Somerset and Devon, an Alderman of the Somerset County Council, and a Major of the North Devon Imperial Yeomanry. His clubs are White's, Arthur's, and the Garrick. Mrs. Sanders is well known in the hunting-field, but her activities are not confined to sport, for she takes a great interest in county nursing, being a member of the committee of the County Nursing Association, and having established a cottage nurse in her own district. Mr. and Mrs. Sanders reside at The Court, Exford, which is, indeed, in "the heart of the country," for the nearest railway station is Dulverton, twelves miles away.

Mr. Sanders, it is understood, favours a political career even more than sporting pursuits. He stood for Bristol East in the Unionist interest at the General Election in 1900, but was defeated. He was afterwards invited to stand for South Somerset, and went to live at Barwick House, Yeovil (formerly occupied by that popular and accomplished lawyer, Judge Philbrick, K.C.); but Mr. E. J. Stanley, M.P., having announced his intention not to stand again for the Bridgwater Division, Mr. Sanders was prevailed upon to promise to champion the Unionist cause there at the next election. He is a forceful, witty, and interesting speaker, and is particularly good at repartee. He is an advocate of temperance combined with justice; he deprecates the embittered controversy over the Education Act, and desires to see a compromise on the religious question, while he early suggested, what poorer London seeks to-day, and what all England will want to-morrow, that if the Board of Education thinks fit to make such new and expensive regulations, "the cost of them should not fall upon the localities, but upon the State."

Mr. Sanders is in favour of breaking down tariff walls against our trade, and of uniting the Colonies closer in a great British Empire; but he says in his speeches: "I belong to none of these new leagues. I belong to only one league, and that league is good enough for me. It is called the Conservative Party."

Digitized by Google

The Motor: On Highway and Seaway.

AGENTS and manufacturers appear to be enjoying a period of exceptional prosperity at the present time, for in spite of a largely-increased output, the really first-class firms seem quite unable to keep pace with the demand. Premiums are once more being asked for quick delivery of fashionable makes, and the purchaser in search of a good car for immediate use finds most of the London showrooms bare of vehicles, and that general air of indifference on the part of the principals that clearly indicates a well-filled order-book. Deliveries, of course, are weeks, and even months, behind time, for the motor manufacturer is notoriously the most unpunctual person in the business world, a fact which the agent will stoutly deny in the early spring when taking an order, and a deposit, from a trusting customer. All this, no doubt, denotes the ever-increasing popularity of the motor-car; but it seems a pity that the makers cannot devise some method of preparing in the winter for the rush that inevitably comes in the spring and summer. Of course, in a few months normal conditions will prevail once more, and the intending purchaser will have a well-stocked market from which to make his choice.

In the meantime, second-hand cars with a reputable past are in considerable demand, and a few remarks based on personal experience may not be out of place on this subject. In regard to the question of price it is as well to point out that the amount originally paid for a car has comparatively little bearing on its present value. The original purchaser may have paid a premium on the maker's list price for quick delivery, or out of pure ignorance of market values; to suit his own particular fads and fancies he may have insisted on having at an absurd price a special body which is really no better or more comfortable than a standard body costing one-half or one-third of the money; again, the maker may have reduced his prices in the interval for that particular model, or evolved a new and better type at a lower figure. Even if the old type has been continued, improvements will probably have been introduced which reduce the market value of the earlier cars, entirely irrespective of the depreciation caused by wear and tear.

Topical.

THE ELIMINATING TRIALS IN THE ISLE OF MAN.
The Hon. A. Lee-Guinness going over the course on a Darracq car.

The prospective purchaser of a second-hand car should, therefore, first ascertain the present price of the current type of the car offered for sale as a basis for his calculations. From this he should deduct in the first place a certain percentage owing to the fact that the car is more or less out of date. In the case of most first-class makers who have arrived at a certain finality of design, 10 per cent. would be a fair amount to deduct. There has then to be considered the question of depreciation for wear and tear, and the value of lamps and other accessories which have been added by the previous owner. It is impossible to lay down any hard-and-fast rule as to depreciation for wear, which really depends on the care with which the car has been used and the mileage run. On both these points it is generally very difficult to obtain direct information of a reliable character, and recourse must therefore be had to thorough examination by a practical expert. It is well recognised, however, among motorists that once a car has been used its market value is appreciably diminished, although its intrinsic value may be practically unimpaired. Moreover, the life of a car can only be computed in miles, and though after a few months of regular use it may run more smoothly and more powerfully than when it first left the maker's hands, yet it has advanced a certain distance towards its final resting-place on the scrap heap.

As a rough guide I should say that the fair value of a car which has been carefully used for a year is about 25 to 30 per cent. below that of a new car of current type similarly equipped. Much, however, depends on the mileage run and the handling that it has received, and in the case of a car more than a year old the depreciation need not necessarily be calculated on a proportionately liberal scale. I put forward these suggestions as an assistance to inexperienced purchasers of second-hand cars, for the reason that one continually sees vehicles offered for sale at prices which are on a level with or even higher than the proper market value of new cars of the same type.

It is hardly necessary to say that no second-hand car should be bought without having recourse to expert advice as to its condition. There is no reason, however, why an amateur should not make a preliminary examination, as the presence of obvious defects may save the expert's fee. The general appearance of a car is of some value as a guide to its condition, as the owner who takes a pride in having his car turned out smartly will generally use it in a reasonable manner. Cracked mudguards and dented panels betray a careless driver. Chains and chain sprockets will give some indication of the distance run, unless they have been replaced. The rollers will be

Topical.

PRACTICE FOR THE MANX ELIMINATING TRIALS.
The photograph shows Mr. Cecil Edge's car, after the accident, being towed home for repairs.

Digitized by Google

slack on the pins, and the forward side of the teeth will have begun to wear hollow after a few thousand miles. A live-axle car should certainly be rejected if the wheels run out of truth, as this betokens faulty design or excessive wear, either of which faults is difficult to make good. If the wheels have been subjected to excessive strains, or are made of inferior materials, the paintwork will show cracks at the joints.

Some indication of the condition of the engine can be obtained by trying the compression of each cylinder in turn, and examining the valve tappets to see whether the guides are much worn. A leaky radiator, or one which shows signs of frequent repairs, is to be avoided at all costs. Slackness in the steering connections is a sure sign of hard work, and is often exceedingly expensive to rectify. It can be detected in an instant by holding the steering-wheel and noticing how far it can be turned without moving the front wheels. The condition of the change-speed gears is, perhaps, the surest guide of all to the value of the car; but their examination had better be left to the expert. A short run will often afford valuable information, though it may be of a negative character. A good car may fail to climb a steep hill with a full load, owing to some temporary defect of a minor nature, but no amount of "faking" will make a worn-out car show to advantage on a really steep and prolonged climb. Silence and smoothness of running are matters of comparison, and many soundly-built vehicles have never made a name for quietness. On the other hand, a car which starts gently, is quiet at all speeds and on every gear, is pretty certain to be free from any serious defect. In any case, some repairs will probably be necessary, and an idea of their cost should be obtained before concluding the bargain, as otherwise one may find that the total expenditure of capital would have sufficed to buy a new and up-to-date car.

RADIATOR.

Campbell-Gray.

MR. AND MRS. H. E. MOSS
In their 30—40 h.p. Daimler car.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

MONTMARTRE UP-TO-DATE.

ENGLISH in Montmartre! Is it possible? Has the Entente Cordiale metamorphosed the city! You rub your eyes and look again; surely there is some mistake. But no, there it stands in flaming capitals, illuminating the Rue de Doudi, the sign of the new music hall, "Little Palace." The pronunciation will come with time, and, after all, is it not wiser to pronounce as it will be understood? If "litt-ler pallass" means little palace to the multitude, why strive to correct it? Is bluemonge anything like blanc mange (which, by the way, is a French word no Parisian can grasp), or Boolong anything like Boulogne? There is, however, nothing English inside the building, except the accent of the commère in the revue, which she wisely drops after a few moments' juggling, making her up-to-date remarks more comprehensible to natives and strangers.

For some time Montmartre seemed to have lost its following. Parisians went "down town" for amusements; there was not sufficient variety in the shows, in the songs. It was always the same thing, they said, and they sought change on the boulevards. But after a short respite the craving returned, and now, not only Fursy thrives, but Little Palace promises to keep the ball rolling.

No sensible impresario would risk opening a new show without a "figure-head." Fursy had his own. Little Palace secured Bruant.

Aristide Bruant is an ultra-Parisian figure. His strong face, black velvet suit, slouch hat, and red scarf are as familiar to the Paris public as the gargoyles on Nôtre-Dame. For many years he attracted all Paris to his cabaret, at the time when Salis and the Chat Noir were famous. The Chat Noir had an organ, the Mirlitons had theirs. Newspapers in those days were scarcer, it must be believed, for the Chat Noir and the Mirlitons were bought and read from the first page to the last, and the illustrations prized as highly as the text. Bruant started his rival show with a couple of benches and wooden tables, his caustic humour, and his voice. He sold beer in his cabaret and started the Mirlitons, with a youthful band that have since become celebrities. Camille de Sainte-Croix, the author of "Armide and Gildis," the leading spirit, was editor; Courteline—the Courteline of Boubouroche—was secretary; Steinlen, the famous draughtsman, sketched for the illustrations; and this was the staff, the complete staff. How they worked at it, how they loved it! Government clerks until four o'clock; at five minutes past four their coats were off and their hearts in their paper! The Mirlitons, like the Chat Noir, has disappeared, but the "staff" are famous.

Ten long years Aristide Bruant was lord of the manor in a peaceful spot, idling in wealth at his country house, far from the madding Montmartre crowd, the velvet suit and scarlet scarf discarded. Suddenly the old fever takes possession of him, and the Bruant of former days awakes. He is once more with us with his old songs, his old dress, and his old popularity. He sings of misery, of the outlaws, of the outcasts of society, of the homeless. His sympathies are with the "damned." Who has forgotten the sadness of "Saint-Lazare," a song in a letter from a humble Traviata to her lover; they are both worthless, but their love is the same as our love, their grief like our grief, and the pathetic story brings tears to your eyes, to mine, to everybody's.

MLLE. BERTHE NANON.
(From a photograph by Walery, Paris.)

Little Palace is a kind of "halfway house" between the traditional cabaret and the up-to-date music hall. There are no "bottle" windows, nor coloured glass doors, no plaster casts, no Willettes, no Léandres, no inscriptions on the walls, no pottery. If it were not for the looking-glasses and the refreshment bars the hall might be used for prayer meetings. But the curtain rises, and we recognise Montmartre; Montmartre in the riskiness of the operette, a Parisian trifle; Montmartre in the "rosserie" of the Revue. Yvette Guilbert is personated with her arms and hands in black stockings; the brothers Isola, the managers of so many music halls, as the Siamese twins; Gailhard, the director of the Opera, and his Toulouse favourites; a crowned head who writes plays as a relief to militarism; bald heads of the best authors; the mannerisms of well-known actors and actresses; every popular subject caricatured and ridiculed to the delight of friends and acquaintances, who come, night after night, to recognise and be amused by the latest skit on the times.

The operette is essentially Parisian. Madame makes an appointment with a gentleman, unknown, in answer to an advertisement. The gentleman happens to be Madame's husband. The meeting is arranged to take place at one of the omnibus stations, the little houses many people think were specially erected to facilitate such meetings. Monsieur arrives first and passes the time conversing with the man in charge of the tickets, and when his wife appears, whom he imagines has tracked him, he changes places with the official. Then ensues one of those improbable, yet possible scenes, when Madame says the prettiest things to the good-looking stranger, whilst her husband has to be a passive spectator to the impromptu love-making. Complications ensue, the husband is detected, and the men once more change places. But although the play has come to an end, the intrigue will continue, for the official—a broken-down young aristocrat—has made a deep impression on the lady. Those omnibus stations! What would Paris do without them? They remind me of the subways and viaducts in London, that relieve the large thoroughfares of some of the traffic. But for the stations the picture galleries would have to be enlarged; the Louvre and the Luxembourg would be congested!

FRANCES KEYZER.

Digitized by Google

The Parisians of Paris.

CORNELL

Walery, Paris.

ARISTIDE BRUANT.

Aristide Bruant took over from "le seigneur Salis" the Montmartre cabaret that had been the original "Chat Noir." He made it famous, partly by his extraordinary habit of standing at the door and heaping insults on all who entered, partly by his brilliant wit and talent. He is an exquisite poet in his own line, which is that of "Yvette Guilbert" kind of pictures of French life.

Digitized by Google

Under the Burgee.

WE are at last entering upon another season, and one which promises to be more eventful than any of its immediate predecessors. The event which has just been occupying general attention is, of course, the Ocean Race for the Kaiser's Cup. A little later in the present month there will be the annual race across the North Sea for the Heligoland Cup, and then the handicap from Cowes to the Clyde, so that we may safely assume that long-distance racing will be an outstanding feature of the season of 1905. For some unaccountable reason, contests of this description always prove attractive to the lay mind, and the daily Press devotes considerable space to these events, while in many instances ignoring the regattas in which there are races of true sporting interest.

The time-honoured "down Swin" matches with which the season opens to-day, under the flag of the New Thames Yacht Club, have been looked forward to with interest, as providing the first meeting between Sonya, Mrs. Turner Farley's Herreshoff 52-footer, and the British boats of the same class. At the time of writing there is unfortunately, however, just a doubt whether the American cutter will cross the line to the first starting gun of the season, as when under way a few days ago she had the misfortune to carry away her mast.

When giving some details of this boat a few weeks ago, I commented on the fact of her having a duplicate set of hollow spars, with the exception of a mast, and pointed out how serious would be the loss of the spar under the circumstances, not apprehending at the time that such an accident was destined to happen before she had hoisted racing colours. I have been given to understand that she may be fitted with a solid stick until such time as a new hollow spar arrives from America. Bearing in mind that Sonya's stick is a lofty one, and that Herreshoff has naturally calculated his weights to a nicety, the extra weight of the solid spar may be calculated to cripple her considerably.

The unfortunate accident once more opens up the question of the desirableness of hollow masts for boats of this size. Many instances can, of course, be cited in which they have come through the ordeal most successfully, as in the case of Magdalen, which came out for her second year with her mast and spars which had done duty throughout her first season. On the other hand, Camellia had no less than five masts in her first season. Apart from, and in addition to, the question of expense, about which so much has been talked and written during the last few years, there is the vexation caused by the inevitable delay resulting from such an accident, calculated to sicken any but the very keenest of sportsmen.

In the days of the solid spars, if a boat's mast went by the board, any well-found yard in the neighbourhood was capable of replacing it within the space of comparatively a few hours. The same can be done in the present circumstances; but the boat having been designed for a hollow spar, her chances of success in racing are greatly reduced by the substitution of a solid one.

One hesitates to advocate anything which may be construed as retrogressive, but, after all, would it be a retrograde step if an understanding were come to between owners to have solid sticks in boats of 52-ft. class and upwards?

Handicap racing will be chiefly kept alive by boats already well known. Mr. Myles B. Kennedy's yawl, White Heather, will have Charles Bevis at the helm this year, and with his known ability as a racing skipper, one may expect to see her come out at the end of the season with a good record. Colonel Bagot's cutter, Creole, has had a very thorough overhaul during the winter, and will once again be a regular competitor at the majority of the regattas. The racing flags of the yawls Brynhild and Valdora will also be seen aloft at nearly all the big regattas. Mr. Claud Cayley's schooner, Adela, will hoist racing colours occasionally during the season; but I believe it is Mr. Flett's intention not to bring out Evelyn, which is a sister ship of Adela, the two being built from the same drawings by Mr. Storey. A new Nicholson-designed schooner, smaller than either of the two referred to, has been turned out at Gosport for Mr. Milburn.

A little while back I referred to the fact that considering the number of old 90-footers that would be in commission this season, a race or two for them during Cowes Week would be hailed with satisfaction. The matter has received some little attention, but expression of opinion up to the present would seem to indicate the improbability of any such matches being arranged. Although all the craft in question have long since finished their racing careers in the ordinary sense, the fact of vessels like Britannia, Ailsa, Satanita, and possibly Navahoe—all boats of an age—being assembled at a regatta might be expected to inspire a wish to have a dust-up between them. Britannia would probably require to be got specially into trim again, in regard to new mast and spars, and that might, of course, act as a deterrent to her taking part in any such match if proposed. She, however, has undergone an extensive overhaul in regard to her hull during the past winter, and, with the King's well-known love of the sport, it may not be too much to hope that, given an opportunity and sufficient time for necessary preparations, the Royal racing colours might once again be seen at the truck of the famous old cutter.

CORINTHIAN.

Symonds.

VALHALLA

The most imposing vessel in appearance when under way of all the competitors in the Ocean Yacht Race. She is a full-rigged ship, and as such is unique amongst yachts. She is owned by the Earl of Crawford, a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron; and is one of the only two British-owned vessels in the race for the Kaiser's Cup.

OPENING REGATTA FIXTURES.

June 3.—New Thames Yacht Club, Southend to Harwich.
June 5-6.—Royal Harwich Yacht Club Regatta.
June 9.—Royal Thames Yacht Club River Matches.
June 10.—Royal Corinthian Yacht Club.
June 13.—Royal London Yacht Club.
June 14.—New Thames Yacht Club River Matches.
June 17.—Royal Thames Yacht Club, Nore to Dover.
July 14.—Royal Cinque Ports Yacht Club Regatta.

SOLENT CLASSES.

June 5.—Island Sailing Club.
June 9.—Hythe Yacht Club.
June 10.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
June 12.—Castle Yacht Club.
June 19.—Island Sailing Club.
June 20.—Southampton Corinthian Yacht Cl
June 21.—Royal London Yacht Club.
June 24.—Royal Southampton Yacht Club.
June 26.—Castle Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

YACHTS OF THE YEAR.

West, Southsea.

AILSA.

This vessel was built twelve years ago for Mr. Barclay Walker from Fife's designs, more particularly as a competitor for Britannia, against which she sailed many famous matches. She was originally rigged as a cutter, but was afterwards altered to a yawl, which rig has been retained by her American owner. She is now owned by Mr. H. C. Redmond of the New York Yacht Club.

Digitized by Google

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Ellis and Walsry.

MISS JESSIE BATEMAN.

With every part she plays, Miss Jessie Bateman strengthens her position as a favourite with London audiences. During the past few years she has been appearing principally with Mr. Arthur Bourchier at the Garrick, and with Mr. Cyril Maude at the New and Haymarket Theatres, where her best performance perhaps has been that of the young guardsman's wife in "Everybody's Secret." Miss Bateman is at present appearing in the revival of "The Cabinet Minister" at the Haymarket Theatre, a production which is to terminate the long partnership between Mr. Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.

Digitized by Google

Plays and Players.

Ellis and Walery.

MISS KATE CUTLER.

Our portrait shows Miss Kate Cutler looking through THE KING, "her favourite illustrated paper." Quite recently Miss Cutler has shown by her performance of the part of the maid in "A Man's Shadow," at His Majesty's Theatre, that her powers are not limited to the portrayal of the "dainty rogues in porcelain" which have won her great popularity in musical plays. Miss Cutler is taking a leading part in the "Spring Chicken," just produced at the Gaiety Theatre.

Digitized by Google

NAVAL PICTURES AT EARL'S COURT.

HUMOROUS AND SATIRICAL ART.

IT must be a matter for surprise that so little has been done to bring together the work of artists illustrative of Naval life in what may be described as its social aspect. This source of information, valuable, attractive, and intensely interesting, has been almost entirely neglected by the Naval historian, the antiquarian, and even by Naval men themselves. It has been left severely alone by the collectors until quite recently, although, as may be seen from the selection we have been permitted to make from the brilliant array which Mr. Joseph Grego has secured for the art galleries at the Earl's Court Exhibition, the light which these pictures throw upon the personal side of Naval life is worthy of the most serious attention. That is one aspect of the question. The other is, of course, that here we have a collection of pictures by some of the finest artists of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, who devoted their talent to humorous and satirical work. The mezzotints, water-colours, and other pictures which Mr. Grego has supplied must appeal to everyone who possesses a sense of humour, and can appreciate the real spirit of caricature.

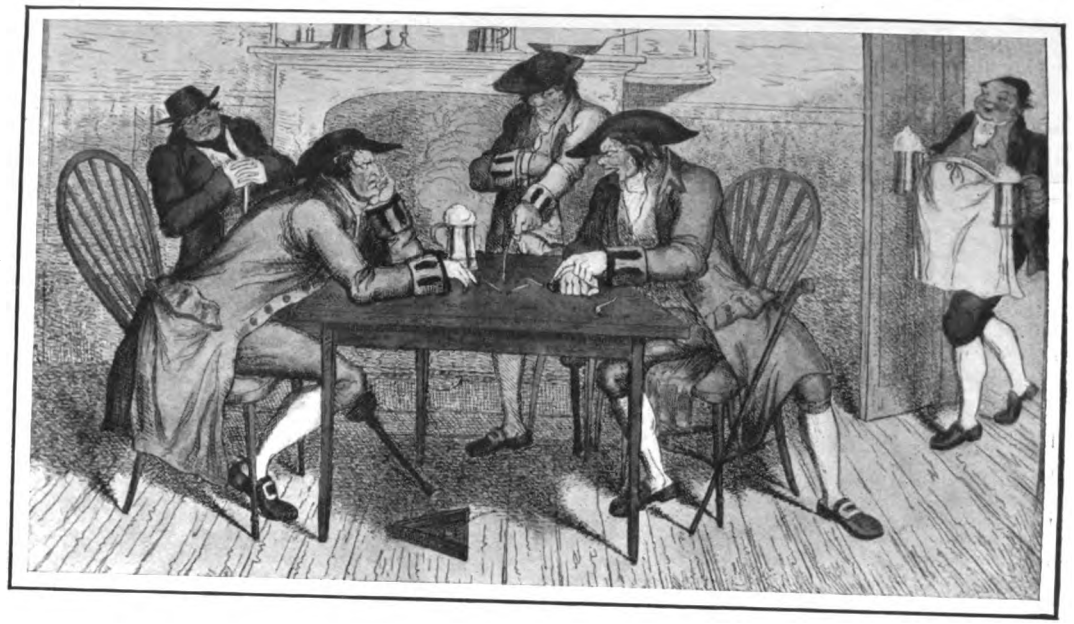
In the selection we have made, almost all the well-known caricaturists are represented, as well as those other artists, like Morland and Bunbury, who, now and again, contributed to the various series of mezzotints which were issued by the houses of Carrington Bowles, Thomas Sayer, J. Pollard, and, later on, Laurie and Whittle. The earliest dated picture was published in 1744, and shows the costume of the sailor of that period, about the time when Anson was making his famous circumnavigation of the globe in the "Centurion." The original water-colour drawing entitled "A Sandwich" lampoons the notorious "Jemmy Twitcher," who, when First Lord of the Admiralty, used the Board Room for the banquets presided over by Miss Reay, who is doubtless one of the young ladies represented in the picture. From the Carrington Bowles Series there are two, the first illustrating a well-known Naval incident, the gallant Riou on the deck of the "Guardian" frigate, and the second "The True British Tar," who, the war being over, is rejoicing in the opportunity which will be given him for spending his prize-money. "The Old Commodore," a water-colour sketch by Rowlandson, and the engraving entitled "Distress" are characteristic of his work; while "Tom Truelove's Knell" may very well have been drawn by Dighton. To a later age belong the pictures by Ibbetson, Phillips, and George Cruikshank, each inimitable in his own particular style. Another delightful specimen of Ibbetson's work is entitled "Sailors Carousing," one of the most charming examples of colour-printing of the period we have ever seen. Cruikshank, like Gillray and Rowlandson, is profusely represented in Mr. Grego's collection.

THE SAILOR'S RETURN.
(C. Mosely, Sculp., 1744.)

THE "GUARDIAN" FRIGATE.
(In the Carrington Bowles Series.)

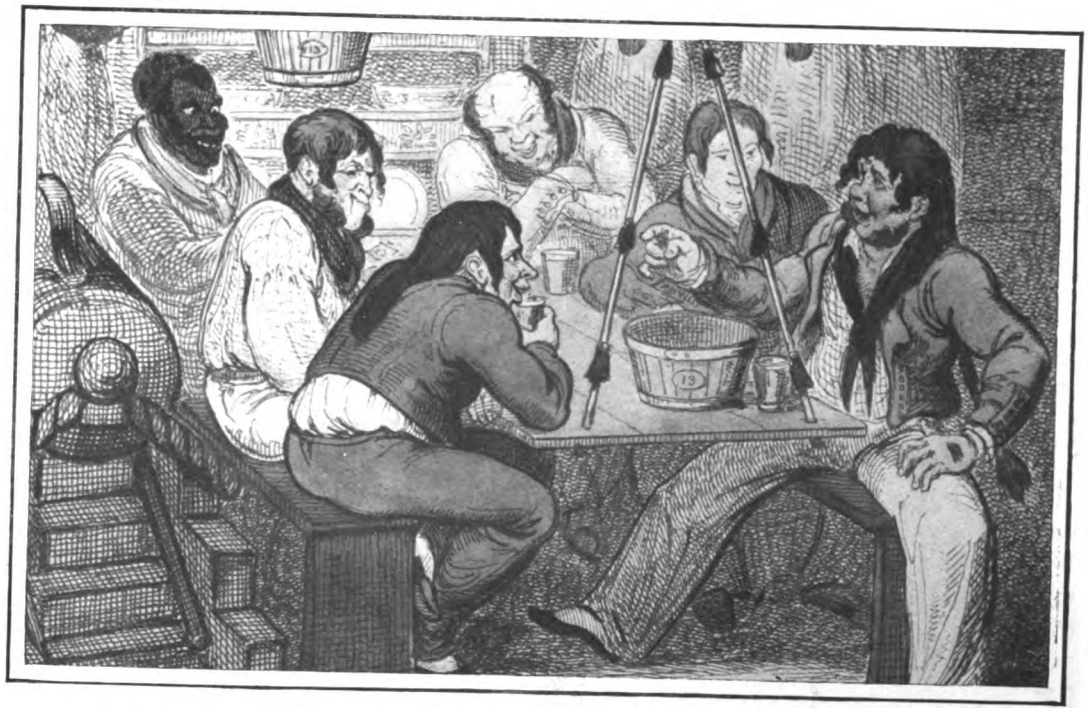
Digitized by Google

THE JOLLY TARS PAID OFF.
(By I. Playter, after I. C. Ibbetson.)



A NAUTICAL DISPUTE (1827).
(By T. Gilliard, after Phillips.)

"DISTRESS": THE SUFFERINGS OF A BOATFUL OF SHIPWRECKED PEOPLE.
(After Thomas Rowlandson. Published by Thomas Palfer.)



THE SAILOR'S DESCRIPTION OF A CHASE AND CAPTURE.
(After George Cruikshank. Published by G. Humphrey.)

Digitized by Google

NAVAL CARICATURE AT EARL'S COURT.

THE TRUE BRITISH TAR.
(Mezzotint after Collett.)

THE OLD COMMODORE.
(Water-colour sketch by Rowlandson.)

"A SANDWICH."
(Water-colour sketch by Gillray.)

"TOM TRUELOVE'S KNELL."
(Mezzotint after Dighton.)

Digitized by Google

THE SERVICES.

Bougault, Toulon.

"OUT COLLISION MATS!"

An evolution on board the French armoured cruiser "Kléber." In view of the approaching visits of British war-ships to Brest and of French vessels to Spithead, much interest is being felt in the life of the seamen in our neighbours' Fleet. The above illustration gives an idea of the precautions taken to guard against such accidents as must occasionally occur. The crew are busy getting collision mats overboard to stop an imaginary leak caused by the ram of another vessel, which, perhaps, manœuvring at night without lights, has come into collision with the "Kléber."

Digitized by Google

The Traveller.

A TOUR THROUGH THE BALKANS.

EVEN in these days of tourist agencies and cheap travel, there are parts of Europe which have not received their meed of attention from the casual traveller. Whether it be the generally disturbed nature of their internal government, or whether it be due to the reports circulated by those who have toured in the countries bordering on the Adriatic of the inhospitable nature of the lands and their inhabitants, the Balkans have been ignored by all but the daring few. The name of Mr. Harry de Windt is well known to all readers of books of travel, and the news that he has just made a tour through Bosnia, Herzegovina, Montenegro, Bulgaria, and Servia, with a view to preparing a book and a series of magazine articles on those countries which snippet journalism classes under the comprehensive title "The Balkans," will be good news. His itinerary took him from Cattaro, on the Adriatic, to Constantinople, viâ Belgrade, Sofia, Bukarest, Tiflis, and thence to the Ottoman capital.

In choosing Cattaro for his starting point, Mr. de Windt made his entry into the land of his travels under the most favourable circumstances. The Bocche di Cattaro has been compared, and not inaptly, to a Norwegian fjord. It consists of a series of wonderful havens connected by narrow straits, across which, in the olden times, it was customary to stretch chains as a protection against marauding foes who came by sea. From Montenegro through Herzegovina, stopping at Mostar, the capital, with its famous bridge of a single span, and Sarajevo with its mosque, dating from the sixteenth century, and its valuable museum, in itself an historical and scientific epitome of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mr. de Windt pursued his way to Nisch in Servia, famous for its tower of human skulls. From Nisch he went north to Belgrade, the "Darol-i-Djehad" of the Turks. The history of Belgrade is not concerned solely with the rival dynasties whose internecine strife has latterly been so much in men's mouths. It goes back to the third century B.C., and Celts and Romans, Huns and Goths, have warred for its possession. Less known, but equally historically interesting, is Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, which Mr. de Windt visited from Belgrade, and of its many vicissitudes he will, no doubt, have much to say.

It is unnecessary to follow in further detail the wanderings of the intrepid tourist. Portions of the country through which the traveller made his way are wild and desolate in the extreme, and the possible bursting of the clouds of unrest and rebellion, which hover so continually over the south-eastern corner of Europe, add to the ordinary dangers attendant upon such a journey. Mr. de Windt does not go alone, however, for an experienced bioscope operator accompanied him in order to obtain living pictures both in town and country, in a part of the world where such a thing as an animated photograph must surely still be regarded as a product of the "black art." But for those who have no wish to penetrate to the interior, and who are satisfied to be transported from town to town in a railway carriage, Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Montenegro have much to offer. The towns with wide and straggling streets, ancient towers and wonderful mosques; the country with winding roads, rivers of numerous waterfalls, and hills rising one behind the other like the steps of a colossal amphitheatre—these are some of the attractions of the countries through which, in the earlier days of his tour, Mr. de Windt passed

The inhabitants are a sturdy race, prone rather to live by themselves, as is shown by the fact that only eleven towns in Bosnia and Herzegovina have over 5,000 inhabitants. In 73 per cent. of the inhabited places, the maximum number of persons living there does not exceed 300. But it is in these little communities that the lives of the people may be best observed, and it is from the inhabitants of these little hamlets that the best impressions of the vitality of the nation are to be drawn. In the Bulgarian Army the value of every son of the soil to the Mother Country is well realised. A conscript, newly joined, was very clumsy, and lacked the intelligence to grasp the meaning of the drill he was being put through. The sergeant, getting rather irritable, was pulling the man roughly into the desired position, when an officer came on the scene. "Stop!" he shouted. "Don't pull the man about; show him how to do it." This story, told by an eye-witness, goes far to show of what stuff the governing classes in the Balkans are made.

J. Studnicke & Co., Serajevo.

THE OLD BRIDGE AT MOSTAR.

One of the most striking features of the capital of Herzegovina is its famous bridge of a single span.

Digitized by Google

THE TRAVELLER.

J. Studnicka & Co., Serajévo.

AT MAGLAJ IN BOSNIA.

The configuration of the land in the Bosnian and Herzegovinian portions of the Balkans is generally hilly, and in some districts there are rugged peaks over 6.000-ft. in height.

Digitized by Google

The Evolution of Johnny Gilpin.

WILLIAM COWPER'S GREAT HUMOROUS POEM.

"COWPER," Mr. Goldwin Smith tells us, "is the most important English poet of the period between Pope and the illustrious group headed by Wordsworth, Byron, and Shelley, which arose out of the intellectual ferment of the European Revolution." Yet to-day his works are practically unread, and there is little or no demand for the quarto biography by William Hayley, with its two fine portraits, one of which is now reproduced, or the voluminous octavos of Grimshawe and Southey. They may be had for a song. If Cowper lives at all in this twentieth century, it is as a polished and amusing letter-writer, and by virtue of the great humorous poem which, during his lifetime, he rigorously kept out of every edition of his collected works. The long life of Cowper, for it extended from 1731 till 1800, was a very melancholy one. The man who, possibly unwittingly, contributed so much to "the gaiety of nations," was subject to occasional fits of madness, and still more frequent periods of melancholy and depression. The Hayley portrait after Romney sufficiently indicates the strong and weak points of Cowper's character. There is latent insanity in the eye. As Leigh Hunt observed, "A fire fiercer than that either of intellect or fancy gleamed from the raised and protruded eye." Lady Austen, one of the women friends who did so much to soften the asperities of Cowper's dreary existence, was the widow of a baronet, "a woman of the world, who had lived much in France, gay, sparkling, and vivacious, but at the same time full of feeling even to overflowing."

WILLIAM COWPER.
(From a portrait in crayons, executed by Romney in 1792.)

The apparition of Lady Austen acted like magic on the recluse. He derived inspiration from her animated conversation. Under her auspices "The Sofa" grew into "The Task," and while winding wool at her feet some time in 1782, he listened to the "conceit" of John Gilpin from her lips. He thought over the story, and in a few hours produced the ballad which three years later was the talk of the town, and will certainly live as long as the language in which it was written.

